(42)

Valuation on wrong principle—Prescription.

In a minute of condescendence and surrender of teinds proceeding on a valuation dated in 1805 the parish minister objected to the valuation as (a) proceeding on a wrong principle; and (b) pronounced in absence of the minister of the time. It was admitted that the right to object was excluded by prescription unless the valuation was ex facie invalid, and held as to (a) that the valuation was not ex facie invalid because omnia presumuntur rite acta; and as to (b) that this was an objection excluded by prescription.

Sharp v Ewan, (O.H.) 1909, 2 S.L.T. 287.

(43)

Bishops' teinds.

Held that the decree in an action brought by a bishop in 1636 for valuation of the teinds of his mensal or patrimonial kirks was not reducible on the ground that the ministers serving the cures had not been cited, because they had no interest in the teinds in respect (1) they were dependent on the bishop for the amount of their stipends; and (2) the bishop was personally liable for their stipends, which were payable, not from the teinds of the parish, but from a third of the whole revenues of the benefice.

Ministers of Islay v The Heritors, 1863, 6 M., 1074; 40 J. 602; 5 S.L.R. 714.

4. SUB-VALUATIONS.

(1) EFFECT OF REPORT.

(44)

Sub-valuation — Approbation — Effect of decree.

A report of sub-commissioners of teinds has no effect as a valuation until it has been approved by the High Commissioners or by the Court of Teinds.

Lord Elibank's Trustees v Hope, 1891, 18 R. 445; 28 S.L.R. 295.

(2) OBJECTIONS.

(a) Objections to Sub-Commissioners' Report.

(45)

No direct finding as to value.

In an action brought in the Teind Court in 1874 for approbation of a report of sub-commissioners dated in 1629, valuing the teinds of certain lands, which merely reported that all parties being summoned and called there compeared the heritor, "and is cōtent that the auld rental of the said lands of . . . stand in tyme cūming as it is and hes bein, to wit, xij bolls meill, baith for p'sonage and viccarage teyndis in cais the titular be yrw't cōtentit." Objection to the report, to the effect that the sub-commissioners had not pronounced any direct finding as to the value of the teinds of the lands, repelled, and decree of approbation pronounced.

Observed (per Lord President Inglis) that where an old rental was produced either by the titular against the heritor, or by the heritor against the titular, the party entitled to object in either case being duly summoned, and not appearing, the sub-commissioners might report the rental as the true value of the teinds.

Duke of Montrose v Earl of Camperdown, &c., 1875, 2 R. 772.

(46)

A report by sub-commissioners on valuation of teinds in 1629, after narrating with reference to a parcel of lands held at that date by the provost, bailies, and community of a burgh, that there appeared a bishop as titular, as well as two bailies and the clerk of the burgh, bore that they "condescendit yat ye rental of ye teind scheiffis" of the parcel of lands "suld be valued to ye auld rental, viz. . . ." In an action brought in 1906 for approbation of the report of the sub-commissioners the defenders pleaded that decree of approbation should be refused, in respect that the report contained no valuation by the sub-commissioners. The Court repelled the plea.

Elgin Guildry Fund Society v Macpherson, 1906, 8 F. 550; 43 S.L.R. 399; 13 S.L.T. 860.

(47)

Valuation of consent without proof—Part of teinds in hands of heritors—Payment of teinds by rental bolls—No evidence on which vicarage teinds valued.

In an action brought in the Teind Court in 1870 for approbation of a report of the sub-commissioners in 1629 valuing the teinds of certain lands, the defenders maintained the following objections to the report:—(1) that, as it bore to proceed upon the mere consent of the titular and heritors without proof, it was not a report in terms of the commission of 2nd February, 1629, and so could not be approved of without the consent of the titular; (2) that as the teinds were paid in rental bolls, and it did not appear that they were "near-hand the just avail" for forty years, the valuation should have been of the stock and teind together, and not of the teinds separately; (3) that at its date the teinds of some of the lands belonged to the heritor himself, who could not therefore by his consent effectually fix their value; and (4) that it did not set forth the evidence on which the vicarage teinds were valued. Objections repelled, and decree of approbation pronounced.

Richmond v Officers of State, &c., 1871, 9 M. 1020; 43 J. 562; 8 S.L.R. 696.

(48)

Valuation of "stock and vicarage teinds" where no parsonage teinds.

A sub-valuation in 1632 declared the "stock and vicarage teinds conjunctim" of certain lands "haveing no parsonage teinds yrin, in regard the samen nevir was teillit or laboured, was, is, and may be worth only in all tyme comeing 20 mkis. money." Held that this valuation was in conformity with the instructions issued to the sub-commissioners in 1629, that it valued the entire rent of the subjects, and that the rule of valuation where the teind was not severally drawn was that all lands, whether grass lands or corn lands, should have their teinds, parsonage and vicarage, commuted to one-fifth of the constant rent.

Houston v Common Agent for Haddington, 1868, 6 M. 235; 40 J. 139; 5 S.L.R. 179.

(49)

Stock and teind valued together—Teinds in possession of heritors—Title to bring process of approbation.

A process of approbation and valuation was brought in the Teind Court in 1878 for approval of a report and valuation by the sub-commissioners in 1629-35, affecting certain lands in the united parishes of Little Dunkeld and Logieallochie. The report narrated that the minister "hes ane local stipend payit to him be the heretors and in-trometters with the teyndis at comand and direction of the Bishop of Dunkeld, titular," and it contained a series of findings applicable to the different lands, valuing stock and teind together, but in certain cases there was added to the finding a separate statement of the teinds as "led," "rentallit," and "payit of auld." The Bishop of Dunkeld as titular had appealed to the High Commission, and the report was never approved by the High Commission, but it was acted upon for two centuries in a series of localities. Held that the Crown as titular was entitled notwithstanding the lapse of time to insist in the bishop's appeal, but that the report and valuation should be approved in respect that, the heritors having been in possession of the teinds, the sub-commissioners had proceeded properly in valuing the lands, stock and teind, together, and that the teinds should be valued at one-fifth of the reported rent of stock and teind together.

Duke of Atholl v Lord Advocate, 1880, 7 R. 583; 17 S.L.R. 409.

(b) All Parties not Represented.

(50)

Absence of titular.

Lord Advocate v Lady Willoughby de Eresby, 1885, 12 R. 1330; 22 S.L.R. 891, No. 33, supra.

Baird v Earl of Wemyss, 1906, 8 F. 669; 43 S.L.R. 614; 14 S.L.T. 2, No. 34, supra.

(51)

Titularity only partly represented.

A parson who was titular of three-fourths of the whole teinds of his parish, and tacksman of the other fourth, called the bishop's fourth, appeared and consented to a sub-valuation according to the whole rental bolls. Held that the titularity had been sufficiently represented, and that it was not a valid objection to the valuation that the bishop had not been called.

M'Neill's Trustees v Campbell, 1872, 11 M. 211; 45 J. 131; 10 S.L.R. 138.

(52)

Valuation by rental bolls of consent—Absence of consent by one heritor—Titular only partly represented.

A sub-commission for the valuation of the teinds in a parish authorised the sub-commissioners to give effect to the practice of payments by rental bolls when the parties consented thereto. In 1629 a report by the sub-commissioners set forth that the parson, who was titular of three-fourths of the teinds of the parish, and tacksman of the remaining fourth, and all the heritors, had consented to the valuation by rental bolls, except the proprietor of the lands of A. The bishop, who was titular of the said remaining fourth, was not directly represented. In an approbation, brought after the lapse of two hundred years, by the proprietor of A, the titular objected to the valuation as having proceeded without the consent of all the titulars and heritors. Held (1) that the titularity had been sufficiently represented by the parson, as titular and tacksman; (2) that the silence of the proprietor of A was not a valid objection to the valuation.

Ainslie & Co. v The Officers of State, 1869, 11 M. 260; 6 S.L.R. 551.

5. IDENTIFICATION OF LANDS.

(53)

Prima facie evidence that whole lands in parish valued, rebutted.

Circumstances in which held that terms of a report of sub-commissioners of teinds in 1629, decree of approbation thereof in 1785 and 1786, and relative scheme of division, and the proceedings in a process of augmentation in 1800, raised the presumption that the whole lands in a parish had been valued in 1629, but that this presumption had been overcome by proof that certain lands were not included in the valuation.

Macleod v Heritors of Morvern, 1873, 11 M. (H.L.) 62; 45 J. 461; 10 S.L.R. 657.

(54)

Presumption that pertinents are included.

Opinion (per Lord Barcaple, Ordinary) that a valuation nominatim of the lands appearing in a person's titles affords "a clear and strong legal presumption" that it includes separate possessions not appearing in the decree or in the titles but held as part of the estate.

Elder v Fotheringham, 1869, 7 M. 341; 41 J. 199; 6 S.L.R. 220.

(55)

Onus of proof.

In a parish in which the teinds had been for a long period dealt with as valued and exhausted, the minister obtained an augmentation on the condition that free teinds should be found to exist. In the course of the process the Court held that certain lands in the parish were not included in an old decree of valuation founded on by the heritors, and allowed the minister a proof of his averment that certain other lands were not included in the decree of valuation. Held that under the interlocutor the onus of proving that the lands were not included in the valuation lay upon the minister. There is no presumption that a decree of valuation professing to value the whole lands of a heritor does not include lands which were moss lands at the date of the decree.

Minister of Banchory-Devenick v Heritors, 1871, 9 M. (H.L.) 121; 43 J. 428; 8 S.L.R. 716.

(56)

—A decree of valuation dated in 1634 bore to value the teinds of the lands of A, with the exception of a certain ten shilling land, which through lapse of time it had become impossible to identify. In a locality in 1874 the proprietor of a portion of the lands of A founded upon the valuation as embracing his lands. Held, in the absence of evidence as to the situation of the ten shilling land, that in the first instance the onus lay upon the minister to show that the heritor's lands fell within the exception, but that in the circumstances that onus had been discharged.

Stevenson v Magistrates of Rutherglen, 1874, 2 R. 174; 12 S.L.R. 149.

(57)

Ambiguity in sub-commissioners' report.

Held competent in a process of approbation of a sub-valuation to inquire what lands were valued by the sub-commissioners under a particular name.

Earl of Mansfield v Hamilton, 1870, 8 M. 1072; 42 J. 618; 7 S.L.R. 685.

(58)

—In a locality certain heritors objected to the lands of Nether Obney and Over Obney being localled on as valued. The proprietor, in answer, founded on a report and valuation of the lands of "Obney," by the sub-commissioners (of date 1629-35, approved by the High Commission on 3rd February, 1796), which, in localities from 1770 downwards, had been held to apply to them. Held that the terms of the findings in the report showed that the lands of Nether Obney and Over Obney were not included in the valuation, and that the title deeds supported this construction.

Earl of Mansfield v Stewart, 1880, 7 R. 552; 17 S.L.R. 359.

(59)

Lands included under general name in accordance with general understanding — Identification.

In a process of locality in 1862 the proprietor of two adjoining parcels of land described in his titles as M and B, for each of which he paid a separate feu-duty, founded on a decree of valuation in 1636 of the teinds of M, alleging that it included a valuation of the teinds of B. Held that he had proved this allegation by proving that at the date of the valuation B was understood to be included in the general description of M.

Plummer v Common Agent for Selkirk, 1867, 6 M. 124; 40 J. 70; 5 S.L.R. 100.

(60)

Ambiguity in decret of approbation—Prescription of extrinsic objections to decret.

In a report in 1629 of a valuation by sub-commissioners of lands and teinds in a parish, the lands of P were reported to be of the value of forty bolls victual. In a note appended to the report, the lands of D were declared to be "nocht valued becaus yai ar sett decimis inclusis." In 1797 an action of approbation and valuation was brought by A as proprietor of the lands of P, and by B as "infert" in part of the lands of D, "which lands of D were formerly part of the said lands of P"; and decree of approbation of the report was pronounced, and the funds of P were valued at forty bolls victual "conform to conclusions of the libel." More than forty years after the date of the decree the proprietor of the part of D which belonged to B objected to be localled on for augmentation of stipend, maintaining that his part of D had been valued under the above decree. Another heritor lodged answers in which he maintained (1) that the decree of approbation, when fairly construed along with the report, which it expressly approved, did not value the lands of D; or otherwise (2) that there was a latent ambiguity in the decree, which fell to be explained by documentary evidence. Held (1) that the decree valued the part of the lands of D which belonged to B as having formed part of the lands of P at the date of the sub-valuation; and (2) that the objections stated to it were extrinsic objections which could not be maintained after the lapse of forty years.

Spir v Lord Willoughby de Eresby, 1891, 18 R. 407; 28 S.L.R. 277.

(61)

Lands not mentioned nominatim in valuation of proprietors' lands—Subsequently not localled on—Presumption.

An action was brought in 1884 by the minister of the parish of X for declarator that the lands of D were not valued. The defenders' title to the lands was founded on a feu contract, dated in 1764, by which the proprietor of A feued to the defenders' predecessor the two merk land of D, with the teinds, parsonage and vicarage, for a feu-duty of eighteen merks for the lands, and ten merks for the teinds, the vassal and his successors being appointed heritable sub-foresters and sub-keepers of the forest of D. The defender founded on a valuation in 1629 by sub-commissioners appointed to value the teinds of the whole presbytery, in which the lands belonging to the proprietor of A were separately valued thus—the lands of A—the lands of B—the lands of C—but no mention was made of the lands of D. The defender also founded on a decree of approbation obtained by the proprietor of A in 1777 (after he had parted with the lands of D). The pursuer in that action did not conclude to have the valuation of the teinds of A divided, so as to throw part of the stipend on the lands of D, as he did in the case of other subjects belonging to him, where a portion had been alienated since the sub-valuation. It was proved that the two merk land of D was fifteen miles distant from the lands of A. It appeared that in a process of locality in 1806 the lands of D were entered in the proven rental at £300, but that they were omitted from the scheme of locality. The same course was followed in the last locality in 1817. The pursuer suggested that the lands of D had been excluded from the locality as being part of a royal forest. Held that it had not been proved that the lands of D were valued.

MacLachlan v Stuart, &c., 1885, 12 R. 1107; 22 S.L.R. 721.

(62)

Portion of lands feued out prior to valuation—Whether included—Usage.

In 1616 the proprietor of the estate of L feued part thereof under the name of the mill and mill lands of L. In 1630 the teinds of L were valued under that general name. In a question raised by the minister of a parish to which the lands of L had, under that name alone, been annexed in 1648, the minister maintained that, although the whole lands had been annexed to his parish under the name of the lands of L, the valuation did not include the teinds of the mill and mill lands of L. All subsequent usage had proceeded on the footing that the teinds of the whole had been included in the valuation. Held that the valuation must be taken to have included the whole lands of L, in respect that no clear case to the contrary had been established by the minister, and that if they did not form part of L in 1648, they had not been annexed.

Simpson v Ewing, 1882, 10 R. 313; 20 S.L.R. 228.

(63)

Whether share of common, subsequently allocated, included.

In 1636 the teinds of the lands of S were valued. In 1676, on a division of an adjoining common, a portion of land was allocated to the proprietor of S. Circumstances in which held that the valuation included the right of the proprietor in the common. Observed that to found the presumption that a valuation of principal lands includes a valuation of accessories so as to embrace land which afterwards comes to the heritor as a surrogatum for such accessories, it is necessary (1) that the valuation precede the acquisition of the separate subject as a surrogatum; and (2) that the principal lands named in the valuation be identified as the principal lands to which in the division the surrogatum is appropriated. Observed that the fact of a considerable part of teind valued being vicarage teind, is favourable to the conclusion that rights in a commonity are included in a valuation.

Plummer v Common Agent for Selkirk, 1867, 6 M. 124; 40 J. 70; 5 S.L.R. 100.

(64)

—A report of sub-commissioners in 1630 found that the lands of L were worth "of yearly rent in stock and teynd one chaldier victual, half bear half meal." The earliest extant title to the lands was dated in 1755, and expressly included a right of pasturage in an adjoining common. The common was divided in 1792, when a portion was allocated to the lands of L. Held that the proprietor of L having failed to prove that at the date of the sub-valuation the lands of L had any share in a right of commonity, the portion of the common subsequently allocated must be held to be unvalued.

Kerr v Common Agent for Kinross, 1869, 7 M. 748; 41 J. 390; 6 S.L.R. 467.

(65)

Whether teinds of burgh green included in valuation by rental bolls.

A decree of valuation in 1634 bore to value the teinds of certain lands belonging to a burgh, which had hitherto been paid in rental bolls. Held that there was no presumption that the teinds of the burgh green, which formed part of the lands, and which, though capable of cultivation, was presumably in pasture at the date of the valuation, had not been included in the conversion into rental bolls, and were not therefore included in the valuation.

Stevenson v Magistrates of Rutherglen, 1874, 2 R. 174; 12 S.L.R. 149.

(66)

Falsa demonstratio.

It was decided in a process of locality that the lands of K, "part of the Barony of Naughton," were valued. Held that this finding was res judicata to the effect that these lands were valued, whether they were "part of the Barony of Naughton" or not—these words being only descriptive, not taxative.

Stuart v Morison, 1871, 8 S.L.R. 372.

(67)

Lands erroneously described as in another parish.

A heritor raised in 1757 a process of valuation of his lands lying in the two adjoining parishes of A and R, and called the ministers of the two parishes, who appeared. In the summons one of his lands was erroneously described (though conform to his titles) as lying in the parish of A, but in the proof and in the decree the lands were named without any parochial description. In localities subsequent to the valuation the lands were localised on in the parish of A. In the locality of the parish of R, in 1868, the minister succeeded in proving that the lands lay in his parish. Held that the lands were effectually valued, repelling an objection by the minister of R that the misdescription in the summons of valuation was fatal. Remarks on the unreported case of the locality of Kilmalie (Macintyre v Duke of Gordon, 23rd Dec., 1826).

Minister of Rescobie v Carnegie, 1869, 7 M. 514; 41 J. 273; 6 S.L.R. 322.

(68)

The proprietor of an estate raised a process of valuation of lands lying in several parishes, and called the ministers, patrons, and titulars of all the parishes as defenders. Held that the valuation of part of the lands was not invalidated by the lands being erroneously described in the summons and decree as in one instead of another of the parishes, the lands having been otherwise well described, and there being no doubt of their identity.

Cameron v Lord Lovat, 1869, 7 M. 896; 41 J. 510; 6 S.L.R. 582.

v 26

6. PROVING THE TENOR.

(69)

Sub-valuation.

Circumstances in which the tenor of a report of sub-commissioners of teinds in 1629 was held, so far as regarded certain lands, to be instructed by a copy in the handwriting of the period found in the family repositories of a heritor of other lands in the same parish, although it appeared that the copy was not in all respects a precise transcript of the original.

Richmond v Officers of State, &c., 1869, 7 M. 956; 41 J. 539; 6 S.L.R. 614.

(70)

A report of the sub-commissioners appointed for the valuation of the stock and teind of the lands within the presbytery of Argyll, dated in 1629, had been repeatedly given effect to in approbations and localities. Part of the original document had become illegible, apparently from damp, and part appeared to have been worn away. A copy of the entire document, supposed to be made about 1720, was preserved in the Teind Office, but the writer was not known. From this copy, which was not in all respects a faithful transcript, the deficiencies in the original could be supplied. In an action of proving the tenor of a portion of that part of the report which had been destroyed, held that the tenor had been sufficiently instructed by the evidence produced.

Duke of Argyll v Campbell, 1873, 11 M. 611; 45 J. 383; 10 S.L.R. 407.

(71)

Of one word or figure only.

Held that a proprietor was entitled to bring a proving of the tenor of an old valuation of the teinds of the lands in his presbytery in so far as it related to his own lands, the only defect in the valuation being the want of a figure or letter said to represent the number "ten" before the word "bolls."

Duke of Atholl, 1880, 7 R. 1195; 17 S.L.R. 804.

(72)

Casus amissionis—Destruction of teind records.

In an action of proving the tenor of two decrees of valuation, pronounced in 1634, where the casus amissionis condescended on was the loss of teind records either in the shipwreck in 1660 or in the fire which took place in the Parliament Close in 1700, and the adminicles were certain documents preserved in the Teind Office and in the Lord Clerk Register's department, the Court, after a report from the teind-clerk, sustained the adminicles, and found the casus amissionis and the tenor proved.

Earl of Wemyss v Duke of Buccleuch, &c., 1883, 10 R. 1084.

(73)

Report of Teind-Clerk.

Circumstances in which the Court gave decree in a proving of the tenor of a report of sub-commissioners for the valuation of teinds without an oral proof, the adminicles being satisfactory, and the Teind-Clerk having reported favourably on these adminicles.

Duke of Atholl, 1880, 7 R. 1195; 17 S.L.R. 804.

(74)

Expenses.

In an action of proving the tenor of a sub-valuation, held that the pursuer was not entitled to expenses against a defender whose opposition had not been unreasonable.

Richmond v Officers of State, &c., 1869, 7 M. 956; 41 J. 539; 6 S.L.R. 614.

7. DERELICTION.

(75)

Sub-valuation—Payments in excess.

A sub-valuation of the teinds of lands originally in one parish, but afterwards annexed to another, held to have been derelinqushed, the heritors having constantly made payments of stipend to the ministers of both parishes, which together exceeded the amount of the sub-valuation, though the payments for each parish were within it.

Fogo v Colquhoun, 1867, 6 M. 105; 40 J. 67; 5 S.L.R. 92.

(76)

—Circumstances in which held that dereliction of a sub-valuation could not be inferred from over-payments of stipend.

Cowan v Cook, &c., 1866, 6 M. 110 (note).

(77)

—Held that although a heritor had made payments of stipend in excess of the teind of his lands as valued by a report of the sub-commissioners in 1629, dereliction of the valuation was not to be inferred, the over-payments being either of small amount or made under protest, and in presumed ignorance of the existence of the report, while there was nothing to show that he had deliberately elected to hold the teinds of his lands as unvalued.

Richmond v Officers of State, &c., 1871, 9 M. 1020; 43 J. 562; 8 S.L.R. 696.

(78)

Lapse of time as bar to approval.

Held (1) that mere lapse of time is no bar to a sub-valuation of teinds being approved, the right to obtain approbation being res meræ facultatis; (2) that a sub-valuation of teinds will not be held to be derelinqushed unless there is evidence of an intention to abandon it; (3) that over-payments of stipend will not be evidence of the abandonment of a sub-valuation if it appear that at the time of the over-payments the heritor making them was ignorant of the existence of the sub-valuation.

Lord Elibank's Trustees v Hart, 1888, 15 R. 927; 25 S.L.R. 659.

(79)

Sub-valuation in standard measure—Payment in local measure for prescriptive period.

In an action brought in the Teind Court in 1884 for approbation of a report of the sub-commissioners in 1630 valuing the teinds of certain lands, the minister showed that while the pursuer and his predecessors had been localled on for a bere stipend of 11 bolls, the amount fixed by the valuation stated in standard measure, they had for upwards of forty years paid the ministers a bere stipend of 11 bolls according to a local measure, which exceeded the standard measure, and pleaded accordingly that the heritor so paying in excess of the valuation must be held to have derelinqushed it. Held that there was no evidence of an intention on the part of the heritor to abandon the sub-valuation, and defences therefore repelled.

Smollett v Simpson, 1885, 12 R. 1150; 22 S.L.R. 768.

8. SURRENDER OF TEINDS.

(80)

Form of surrender—Letter.

One of the heritors of a parish, whose teinds had been valued, wrote a letter to the minister containing merely a statement that he "surrendered the teinds" of certain lands of which he was the proprietor.

Opinions that the letter was not a satisfactory form of surrender, in respect that it was not a specific surrender of the stated amount of the valued teinds.

Davidson v Stuart, 1919 S.C. 20; 56 S.L.R. 27; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 241.

(81)

—Surrender not unconditional.

A minute of surrender of teinds was objected to by the minister as not being unconditional in its terms, in respect that there was a dispute as to the extent of the lands embraced in the valuation on which it proceeded. As the dispute did not appear ex facie of the minute but only in the objections thereto stated by the minister, the Lord Ordinary sustained the minute but observed that this would neither determine nor affect the dispute as to boundaries.

Earl of Dalhousie v Minister of Barry, (O.H.) 1915, 1 S.L.T. 392.

(82)

Tender—Localled stipend exceeding total teinds—Right of heritor to tender teinds without surrendering them—Tender of valued teinds where teinds valued—Tender of fifth of rent where teinds unvalued.

Where a heritor has not surrendered his teinds to the minister in perpetuity, he is bound each year to pay to the minister the full amount of stipend localled upon him. Accordingly, where the teinds have been valued and the amount of stipend localled in victual exceeds in value the money value of the teinds, a heritor cannot tender, instead of the localled stipend, the full money value of his teinds; where the teinds are unvalued and the amount of stipend localled in victual exceeds in value one-fifth of the rent of the lands, he cannot tender, instead of the localled stipend, one-fifth of the rent.

So held per Lord Sands, Ordinary, and his judgment as regarded the valued teinds affirmed by the Court of Teinds and, on appeal, by the House of Lords. In view, however, of an admission by the heritor that failure on his part as regarded the valued teinds would necessarily involve failure as regarded those which were unvalued, the Court of Teinds and the House of Lords found it unnecessary to deal specifically with the question of unvalued teinds, but expressed approval of the Lord Ordinary's judgment with regard to them. Observations (per Lord Dunedin) upon the surrender of teinds (1) where the surrenderer has not a heritable right to the teinds; (2) where the teinds cannot be sold.

Galloway v Earl of Minto, 1922 S.C. (H.L.) 24; 59 S.L.R. 46; 1922 S.L.T. 9.

(83)

Surrender where final decree of locality in force—Necessity for reduction of decree of locality—No free teind.

In 1905 the Court of Teinds pronounced a final decree of modification and locality in a process of augmentation relating to a certain parish. The total value of the teinds of the parish was £353, of which £80 was localised upon lands belonging to D, whose teinds were unvalued. After the augmentation there remained £44 of free teind, of which £15 applied to D's lands. For the year 1916, owing to the increase in the value of the chalders, the stipend amounted to £621, of which £191 applied to D's lands. In 1916 D brought an action for the valuation of his teinds, and obtained a decree valuing them at £96. Thereafter he surrendered the teinds to the minister and his successors in office. The minister, however, demanded payment of £191 as the teind for 1916, contending that D's surrender was invalid, in respect that he had not reduced the existing decree of locality and obtained a rectified scheme giving effect to the proposed surrender.

Held that the reduction of an existing decree of locality and the obtaining of a rectified scheme were not conditions necessarily precedent to a surrender of teinds, and that there was no necessity in this case for such reduction and rectification, as that procedure would not, in the state of the teinds, be of any benefit to the minister; and, accordingly, that the surrender was valid, and that D's liability was limited to £96.

Davidson v Stuart, 1919 S.C. 20; 56 S.L.R. 27; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 241.

(84)

Lands localised on for forty years in excess of valuation subsequently obtained.

By a final decree of locality in 1817 the lands of a heritor were localised on for stipend to the extent of £40, being the full amount of the teinds taken at one-fifth of the proven rental. In 1863 the heritor obtained a decree of valuation of his teinds which fixed them at £32, and subsequently obtained a decree of reduction of the decree of locality, qualified by the condition that it should subsist as the interim rule of payment of stipend until a new decree of locality was obtained. In a subsequent locality, held, in a question between the heritor and the minister, that the former was not precluded by the forty years' payments of £40 from surrendering his teind at the sum fixed by the decree of valuation.

Question, whether the reduction of the former decree of locality was necessary.

Chisholm-Batten v Cameron, 1873, 11 M. 292; 45 J. 207; 10 S.L.R. 195.

(85)

Effect of forty years' over-payments.

When for more than forty years payments of stipend in excess of sub-valuations of teinds had been made under final decrees of locality, pronounced prior to decree of approbation, held that the minister had acquired right to have these payments continued.

When under a decree of locality payments of stipend in excess of the value of teinds fixed by previous sub-valuation and decree of approbation had been made for more than forty years, held that the minister had not acquired right to have these payments continued.

Where payments of stipend in excess of a sub-valuation of teinds had been made for more than forty years under a final decree of locality, and the sub-valuation had been abandoned, and a decree of valuation of the Court of Teinds obtained, held that the decree of the Court fixed the amount of the teind, and that the minister had no right to have the overpayments continued.

Colquhoun v Fogo, 1873, 11 M. 919; 45 J. 567; 10 S.L.R. 637.

(86)

Forty years' over-payments after valuation of consent approved by Court of Teinds.

In a locality the minister objected to a surrender of teinds by a heritor who held a valuation approved of by the Court of Teinds, on the ground that thereafter, under a final decree of locality, over-payment of stipend had been made for forty years, and that the heritor's right to reduce the locality and his right to surrender the teinds were both cut down by the negative prescription. Objection repelled, in respect (1) that it was not necessary for the heritor to reduce the decree of locality; and (2) that the right to surrender, being res mere facultatis, could not be affected by the negative prescription.

Earl of Minto v Pennell, 1873, 1 R. 156; 11 S.L.R. 66.

(87)

Prescriptive right to over-payments.

Where a minister has acquired a prescriptive right to over-payments of teind in excess of decrees of approbation of sub-valuation, held that the heritor could not surrender his teinds.

Colquhoun v Fogo, 1873, 11 M. 919; 45 J. 567; 10 S.L.R. 637.

(88)

Decree of approbation disconform to sub-valuation—Over-payments by heritor for prescriptive period—Surrender at value stated in decree.

A decree of approbation and valuation dated 1792 was disconform to the sub-valuation on which it proceeded. The decree had not been challenged within the prescriptive period of forty years, and was ex facie consistent and unambiguous, although the payment made since 1792 had been in excess of the valuation contained in the decree. Held that a heritor was entitled to surrender teinds at the value stated in the decree.

Duke of Fife v Lord Advocate, (O.H.) 1895, 2 S.L.T. 518.

(89)

Surrender sustained without objection by former minister—Res judicata.

Held that the fact of a surrender of valued teinds having been sustained in one locality without objection on the part of the minister to the decree of valuation, did not bar his successor in the benefice from stating objections to the validity of the decree in a subsequent locality, and pleas of res judicata and "competent and omitted," stated by a heritor, repelled.

Thomson v Earl of Zetland, 1868, 7 M. 99; 41 J. 57; 6 S.L.R. 86.

(90)

Failure to produce original decree of valuation—Valuation referred to in subsequent decree.

In a process of augmentation, modification, and locality an owner of teinds proposed a minute of surrender. He failed to produce the original decree of valuation, but produced a decree pronounced in a subsequent action of valuation finding that there could be no new valuation of the teinds in question as they had already been valued in cumulo with other teinds, and finding and declaring the proportion of that valuation effeiring to the teinds in question. Held that the production of this decree entitled the owner to surrender.

Earl of Dalhousie v Minister of Barry, (O.H.) 1915, 1 S.L.T. 392.

(91)

Effect of surrender—Vesting of stipend.

A heritor obtained a decree of valuation of his teinds on 23rd November, 1916. In March, 1917, he surrendered the teinds to the minister. The minister maintained that the surrender did not affect the stipend for 1916 in respect that that stipend had vested in him at Michaelmas, 1916, prior to the decree of valuation.

Held that, while the stipend had vested, it had vested only quantum valeret at the time when it fell to be paid, and that, as by that time the valuation and surrender had taken effect, the stipend of 1916 fell to be paid as modified by the valuation and surrender.

Davidson v Stuart, 1919 S.C. 20; 56 S.L.R. 27; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 241.

9. ACTIONS OF APPROBATION AND REDUCTION OF VALUATIONS.

(92)

Action of approbation—Title to sue.

No one except a heritor can pursue a summons of approbation of the sub-valuation.

Lord Elibank's Trustees v Hope, 1891, 18 R. 445; 28 S.L.R. 295.

(93)

Title to sue—Action at instance of proprietor of a portion only of the lands valued—Competency.

Held that the proprietor of a portion of the lands of G, the teinds of which were the subject of a valuation by sub-commissioners in 1629, could competently bring an action for the approbation of the valuation of the lands of G, with a view to have the cumulo valuation divided and apportioned, though the other persons who, at the date of the action, were proprietors of the other portions of these lands were not joined with him as pursuers in the action, these persons having been called as defenders.

Elgin Guildry Fund Society v Macpherson, 1906, 8 F. 550; 43 S.L.R. 399; 13 S.L.T. 860.

(94)

Petition for authority to record decree of valuation of teinds—Act 1707, c. 9.

In a petition for authority to record a decree of valuation of teinds, which had recently been upheld as valid by the Court of Session in a question between the Lord Advocate and the petitioner, the Court, in respect of the said judgment, dispensed with the usual remit to the Lord Ordinary on Teinds, and granted the prayer of the petition de plano.

Lady Willoughby de Eresby, 1885, 13 R. 74; 23 S.L.R. 50.

(95)

Reduction of valuation — Ministers of parishes valued in one decree suing jointly.

The teinds of several parishes had been valued by one decree. The ministers of these parishes raised an action of reduction of the decree against the heritors. Held that though each pursuer had an interest only to set aside the decree so far as it affected the teinds in his own parish, it was not incompetent for them all to sue in the same action.

Ministers of Islay v The Heritors, 1868, 6 M. 1074; 40 J. 602; 5 S.L.R. 714.

IV. STIPEND.

1. MINISTER'S RIGHT TO STIPEND.

[See CHURCH VI. 3.]

2. SUBJECTS NOT LIABLE FOR STIPEND.

(96)

Royal forest.

Evidence on which held (1) that the forest of Glenfinlas had not been from time immemorial a royal forest; and (2) that it had not been exempted from being localised on for stipend. Question (per Lord Neaves) whether lands which have been a royal forest from time immemorial are in every case free from stipend.

Earl of Moray v M'Diarmid, 1869, 8 M. 142; 42 J. 274; 7 S.L.R. 300.

(97)

Roads and streets in a city.

Held that streets in a city are not liable for stipend, the police board not being heritors, and the presumption being that the streets have been taken into consideration in valuing the adjoining lands to which they give access.

Glasgow Police Board v Common Agent for Springburn, 1878, 5 R. 718; 15 S.L.R. 510.

(98)

Bare superiority—Security right.

Held that a person who has a bare superiority over lands, or one who has a security right over lands on which no possession has followed, and who has not intromitted with the fruits, is not liable for minister's stipend.

Jackson v Cochrane, 1873, 11 M. 475; 45 J. 314; 10 S.L.R. 290.

3. ORDER OF ALLOCATION OF STIPEND.

(1) TEINDS TO WHICH HERITOR HAS HERITABLE RIGHT.

(99)

Patron's title to teinds under Acts 1690, c. 53, and 1693, c. 41—Postponed liability of teinds of patron's own lands, though no heritable right—Feudalisation of teinds.

By the Statutes 1690, c. 53, and 1693, c. 41, the teinds of all parsonages, which had not prior to the Reformation been appropriated to a prelate or religious house, were transferred from the minister to the patrons, under burden of the minister's stipend. The earlier titles of the patron of the parish of B bore to convey the patronage without mention of teinds. From 1698 to 1734 the teinds were expressly included in the titles, but from 1734 onward they were again omitted, and the titles prior to 1698 bore to transmit merely the patronage. In a locality the patron claimed, in virtue of his statutory right qua patron to the teinds of the parish so far as not conveyed to the heritors, and particularly to the teinds of his own lands, to have the teinds of his own lands postponed along with the teinds of such heritors as held heritable right to their teinds. Held (1) that the attempt to feudalise the teinds between 1698 and 1734 was inept; but (2) that even if it had had any effect, neither the temporary feudalisation of the teinds, nor the falling again into abeyance of the feudal title which had been so created, sopited the statutory title or derogated from the patron's right qua patron to the teinds, and that the patron was therefore entitled to the postponement which he claimed.

Lochore and Capledrae Cannel Coal Co. v Common Agent for Ballingry, 1878, 5 R. 763; 15 S.L.R. 440.

(100)

Prescriptive right to teinds claimed in respect of a conveyance dated 1766 a non domino—Observations on possession necessary to establish a heritable right to teinds.

Mackintosh v Lord Abinger, 1877, 4 R. 1069; 14 S.L.R. 632, No. 15, supra.

(101)

Progress of titles held not to constitute a valid decimæ inclusæ right.

Dundas v Waddell, 1878, 6 R. 345; 16 S.L.R. 340.

Reversed (on another point), 1880, 7 R. (H.L.) 19; 5 App.Cas. 249; 17 S.L.R. 433, No. 116, infra.

(2) BISHOPS' AND COLLEGE TEINDS.

(102)

Teinds alleged to be bishops' teinds—Contrary usage.

In all the localities of the parish of M, from 1579 down to 1860, teinds held by the Crown as titular were localised on primo loco, teinds held by heritors on heritable rights having been exempted from allocation. In a locality in 1860 the Crown objected to this mode of allocation, on the ground that the teinds belonging to it were bishops' teinds. Held that the onus lay upon the Crown of showing that the existence of the heritable rights, and the usage which had followed upon them, were consistent with its claim.

Lord Advocate v Gordon's Trustees, 1871, 9 M. (H.L.) 73; 43 J. 391.

(103)

Res judicata.

Bonar v Lord Advocate, 1870, 9 M. 58; 43 J. 28; 8 S.L.R. 69, No. 119, infra.

Thomson v Lord Advocate, 1872, 10 M. 849; 44 J. 551; 9 S.L.R. 542, No. 120, infra.

Cheape v Lord Advocate, 1871, 9 M. 377; 43 J. 182; 8 S.L.R. 286, No. 2, supra.

(104)

Teinds united to a bishopric for the first time in 1612.

Teinds had belonged to a priory before the Reformation, had never been erected into a temporal lordship, but after the Reformation were held in commendam by laymen until 1612, when they were regularly united to a bishopric. They were inalienable in the hands of the bishop before the submissions to King Charles I. in 1627 and 1628, and fell to the Crown on the abolition of episcopacy in 1689. Held, in a locality, that these were bishops' teinds in the hands of the Crown, and entitled to be postponed to teinds held on heritable right.

Lord Advocate v Earl of Galloway, 1873, 11 M. 896; 45 J. 547; 10 S.L.R. 629.

4. PERSONS LIABLE TO PAY STIPEND.

(105)

Liability on change of ownership of land.

Opinion (per Lord Justice-Clerk Moncreiff) that it is not necessary to enable a minister to use his decree of locality against a possessor of lands localised on that the possessor's name should appear in the locality. Opinion that a proprietor whose name appears in the decree of locality ceases to be liable for stipend when he ceases to be proprietor.

Jackson v Cochrane, 1873, 11 M. 475; 45 J. 314; 10 S.L.R. 290.

(106)

Pending application for decree of approbation of sub-commissioners' report—Clause of reservation in decree of augmentation.

In a process of augmentation certain heritors stated that they had discovered a report of the sub-commissioners of teinds and were about to take steps to obtain a decree of approbation of that report, and maintained that either the process of augmentation should be sisted or a clause reserving the rights of the heritors should be inserted in the decree of augmentation. The Court granted decree of augmentation and refused either to sist the process or to insert an express reservation of the rights of the heritors in the decree, in respect that an express clause of reservation was unnecessary, because the de plano decree of augmentation would not affect the rights of the heritors.

Clark v Grant, 1902, 39 S.L.R. 431.

(107)

Alterations on interim scheme—Final scheme—A.S., 12th November, 1825.

In a process of locality, after an interim scheme had been approved of, a number of alterations became necessary in the preparation of a final scheme, owing to deaths of heritors and changes of proprietors. The common agent accordingly prepared a rectified scheme of teinds, and, an opportunity having been given to the heritors to see this state, he asked a remit in the usual terms to the clerk to prepare a rectified scheme. The motion was opposed on the ground that it was contrary to the provisions of the Act of Sederunt of 12th November, 1825. Held that the course followed by the common agent was competent and expedient, although not in strict conformity with the provisions of the Act of Sederunt.

Duke of Hamilton v Common Agent for Linlithgow, 1874, 12 S.L.R. 99.

5. PROCESS OF AUGMENTATION AND LOCALITY.

(1) PARTIES ENTITLED TO APPEAR.

(108)

Titularity not recognised in interim locality—Title of recognised titular to object.

In a process of locality a titular objected to an interim scheme of locality, as drawn up by the common agent, that it recognised the existence of only two titularities in the parish, and omitted to recognise a third titularity existing in a person who had not claimed a right of titularity. It was admitted that the objector had no interest to state the objection in the process of locality. Held (per Lord Pearson, Ordinary, and acquiesced in) that the objection fell to be disallowed in the process of locality on the ground of want of interest, the right to raise the objection in any other competent process being reserved.

Baird v Earl of Wemyss, 1906, 8 F. 669; 43 S.L.R. 614; 14 S.L.T. 2.

(109)

Augmentation and modification—Decree in absence of heritor—Reponing—Act of Sederunt, 12th Nov., 1825, sec. 24.

Interlocutors finding a minister entitled to an augmentation, modifying the same, and appointing the only heritor having an interest to lodge a scheme of locality, were pronounced in absence of that heritor, upon whom the summons had not been served, but who did not dispute that the procedure otherwise, by advertisement and announcement in the parish church, had been regular. The Court reponed the heritor on payment of the previous expenses.

Buchanan v Gilmour, 1883, 11 R. 59; 21 S.L.R. 51.

(110)

Value fixed in previous locality—No evidence that question fairly raised and truly sub judice.

In an action brought by the minister of a parish for declarator that certain lands therein were not valued, the proprietor pleaded res judicata, founding on the proceedings in a locality in which the lands in question had been entered in the proven rental at £300, but had been omitted from the decree of locality. Held that there being no evidence that the question of liability had ever been fairly raised between the minister and heritor and a judgment pronounced, the plea of res judicata could not be sustained.

MacLachlan v Stuart, &c., 1885, 12 R. 1107; 22 S.L.R. 721.

(111)

—Falsa demonstratio.

Stuart v Morison, 1871, 8 S.L.R. 372, No. 66, supra.

(112)

—No objection by minister at the time.

Thomson v Earl of Zetland, 1868, 7 M. 99; 41 J. 57; 6 S.L.R. 86, No. 89, supra.

(113)

Question between two heritors—Subsequent question between heritor and common agent.

Held that when a question between two heritors as to whether the lands of one of them were teindable was decided and given effect to by a final locality, it was res judicata in a subsequent locality in a question between the common agent and one of these heritors.

Magistrates of Edinburgh v Montgomery, 1872, 11 M. 14; 45 J. 10; 10 S.L.R. 4.

(114)

Admission by Crown—Whether judgment founded thereon res judicata against heritor.

The Lord Advocate appeared in a locality on behalf of the Crown, and admitted that certain lands were included in a sub-valuation. The admission affected the patrimonial interest of a heritor, which interested the Lord Advocate did not in any way represent. Held that the judgment founded on the admission was not res judicata against that heritor.

Earl of Mansfield, &c. v Stewart, 1880, 7 R. 552; 17 S.L.R. 359.

(115)

Rectified scheme of locality not declared final.

An augmentation of stipend having been granted and modified, a process of locality followed in which in 1850 an interim scheme was approved. To this scheme the Lord Advocate, as having right on behalf of the Crown to the bishops' teinds, lodged objections, in which he stated that the teinds of the lands of D and certain other lands in the parish, the teinds of which were held on heritable rights, were unvalued. He objected to the scheme in so far as it laid no portion of the augmentation upon the teinds of these lands. The common agent lodged a note, in which he admitted that the teinds of certain of the lands in question, including the lands of D, were unvalued, and stated what he believed to be their rental. In 1858 the Lord Advocate lodged a note stating that he was satisfied with the extent to which the common agent had given effect to his objections as regarded the rents stated for the lands which were let unvalued, including the lands of D, and he craved the Lord Ordinary to sustain the objections, and to remit to the clerk to rectify the locality, and to allocate the augmentation primo loco on the teinds of these lands. By interlocutor of 9th July, 1858, the Lord Ordinary remitted to the clerk to rectify the locality and to report. This interlocutor was not reclaimed against. The clerk reported a rectified scheme, but it was never approved final, and no further proceedings took place in the locality until after a new augmentation was granted in 1873. In 1890 the question was raised whether the teinds of the lands of D were valued or unvalued. The party alleging that the teinds were not valued pleaded res judicata in respect of the Lord Ordinary's interlocutor of 9th July, 1858. Held that the interlocutor did not support the plea.

Speir v Lord Willoughby de Eresby, 1891, 18 R. 407; 28 S.L.R. 277.

(116)

Finding in previous locality that lands held cum decimis inclusis—Whether interlocutors founded on pronounced causa cognita.

In a process of augmentation raised in 1875 the heritor of certain lands objected to their inclusion in the scheme of locality on the ground that in a previous process of augmentation raised in 1795, to which the minister of the time and all the heritors had been parties, the Court had ordered these lands to be struck off the rental as being held cum decimis inclusis. He further averred that in a subsequent process of augmentation raised in 1807 no question as to these lands was raised, and a final decree of locality was pronounced in 1809. He pleaded that the decree of 1795 was res judicata. Held that the plea of res judicata, founded on the interlocutor of 2nd December, 1795, fell to be sustained, the question whether the lands were held cum decimis inclusis having been distinctly presented to the Court and adjudicated upon in the presence of all parties interested.

Observed that it was impossible to presume, after the lapse of seventy years, that the Court did not proceed causa cognita, but merely on an ex facie consideration, by reason of the minister of that day having no interest to object as there was sufficient free teind to satisfy his augmentation without including the lands struck out.

Dundas v Waddell, 1880, 7 R. (H.L.) 19; 5 App.Cas. 249; 17 S.L.R. 433.

(117)

Consent of common agent.

In a locality a heritor had claimed exemption from stipend on the ground that he held his lands of S under a title cum decimis inclusis. The Lord Ordinary in 1778 exempted these and lands of other heritors in an interlocutor, against which the common agent represented, praying for a recall of the interlocutor, "except in so far as respects the lands of S." The Lord Ordinary recalled the interlocutor, except as regards the lands of S, and a rectified scheme of locality was made up giving effect to the exemption claimed, and became final. Held in a subsequent locality that as in a question with an individual heritor seeking to establish an immunity of this kind, the common agent represents the whole heritors, his consent is the consent of the whole heritors, and therefore a plea of res judicata, founded on the proceedings of the previous locality, sustained.

Duke of Buccleuch v Common Agent for Inveresk, 1868, 7 M. 95; 41 J. 55; 6 S.L.R. 88.

(118)

Erroneous assumption of parties.

From a decree of locality in 1820 certain lands were omitted in consequence of their having been erroneously assumed by the parties to be held upon a title cum decimis inclusis et nunquam antea separatim; and there not being other teind in the parish to pay the full amount of the modified stipend, a part thereof was not localled. In an action raised by the minister in 1867 for reduction of the decree, held (1) that the decree and proceedings in the locality did not constitute res judicata, so as to preclude the minister from challenging the validity of the decimæ inclusæ right; but (2) that although the title cum decimis inclusis proved to be invalid, the minister was not entitled to bygone arrears of stipend, but only to have it found that the lands should not be exempted in future.

Elder v Fotheringham, 1869, 7 M. 341; 41 J. 199; 6 S.L.R. 220.

(119)

Question between heritor and Crown whether certain teinds were bishops' teinds—Effect of (1) former decree of locality, and (2) judgment in litigation between heritors' predecessor and common agent.

In 1817 final localities of a parish were approved of by the Court, the allocation having been made on the assumption that the teinds of the parish in the hands of the Crown were bishops' teinds, entitled to be postponed in the allocation for stipend to teinds held on heritable rights. In a subsequent locality in 1840 one of the heritors contended that the teinds were not bishops' teinds, and brought a reduction of the decree of 1817, which was conjoined with the process of locality. In this reduction he called all the heritors and the Crown, but a record was closed as between him and the common agent alone. The common agent pleaded res judicata in respect of the decree of 1817, and the plea was sustained in 1846. In a subsequent locality the successor of that heritor objected to the scheme of division, on the ground that the teinds in question were not bishops' teinds. The Crown pleaded res judicata in respect of the decrees (1) of 1817 and (2) of 1846. Plea sustained (per Lord Benholme and Lord Neaves on the ground of the decree of 1817, and per Lord Justice-Clerk Moncreiff and Lord Cowan on the ground of the decree of 1846).

Opinions that general questions decided in one locality regulate future localities.

Bonar v The Lord Advocate, 1870, 9 M. 58; 43 J. 28; 8 S.L.R. 69.

Cf. Lady Willoughby de Eresby v Speir, 1876, 14 S.L.R. 162. RES JUDICATA, No. 97.

Cheape v Lord Advocate, 1871, 9 M. 377; 43 J. 182; 8 S.L.R. 286, No. 2, supra.

(120)

Judgment that teinds were college teinds—Crown a party and not objecting.

An interlocutor was pronounced in a locality finding that certain teinds were college teinds. The Crown held bishops' teinds in the parish, and was a party to the process, but did not object to the finding. Held in a subsequent locality that the judgment, being on a point fairly contested in the locality, and having a practical bearing on its being worked out, was res judicata against the Crown.

Thomson v Lord Advocate, 1872, 10 M. 849; 44 J. 551; 9 S.L.R. 542.

(2) RES JUDICATA.

[See RES JUDICATA IV.]

(3) AUGMENTATION.

(121)

Modification in kind—Conversion into money.

A stipend was modified in 1812 at 660 ling fish, 1200 cans of oil, 236 lisponds of butter, and £1 12s. in money. The money value in 1869 and previous years was about £475, but the heritors denied that there were teinds in the parish beyond £254, and the minister had never drawn beyond that amount. In a new process of augmentation and locality at the minister's instance, on the allegation that there were unvalued teinds in the parish, there being no opposition, the stipend was converted into £300 in money, with £10 for communion elements.

Smith v Heritors of Unst, 1870, 9 M. 305.

(122)

Value of feu-duties from glebe not to be taken into consideration.

In an application by a minister for augmentation of stipend, held that the revenue derived from portions of the glebe feued under the Glebe Lands (Scotland) Act, 1866, was not to be taken into account in determining whether or not an augmentation should be granted.

Minister of Kilmacolm v Heritors, 1875, 3 R. 32; 13 S.L.R. 16.

(123)

Non-residence of minister.

The minister of a parish, under an agreement with the parishioners, ceased to reside in the parish, and contributed an annual sum to the salary of an ordained assistant, who occupied the manse and performed all the duties. Thereafter the minister raised a process of augmentation of the stipend. The heritors resisted the augmentation, and maintained alternatively that if any augmentation were granted, it should be made payable to the ordained assistant. The Court granted an augmentation, but directed that it should be paid to the assistant.

Minister of Carsphairn v Heritors, 1893, 20 R. 521.

(124)

Long interval since previous augmentation—Augmentation of seven chalders.

The minister of a parish applied for an augmentation of seven chalders. There had been no augmentation for fifty-nine years, and it appeared that the previous minister, who had occupied the benefice for fifty-six years, had been possessed of considerable private means. All the heritors assented to the augmentation. In the circumstances, the Court granted an augmentation of seven chalders.

Minister of Dalserv v Heritors, 1908 S.C. 1123; 45 S.L.R. 949; 16 S.L.T. 262.

(125)

Augmentation of four and a half chalders—Exhaustion of free teind.

The minister of a parish applied for an augmentation of four and a half chalders, which, if granted, would exhaust the free teind. The heritors did not oppose the application. In the circumstances, the Court granted the augmentation of four and a half chalders craved.

Minister of Maybole v Heritors, 1909 S.C. 247; 46 S.L.R. 293; 16 S.L.T. 645.

(126)

Augmentation of ten and a half chalders—Collegiate charge.

Circumstances in which, an augmentation of 14½ chalders having been asked to a stipend of 29½ chalders by each of two collegiate ministers, 10½ chalders were granted.

Ministers of St. Cuthbert's, 1882, 20 S.L.R. 35.

(4) PROCEDURE.

(127)

Existence of free teind denied—Grounds requiring investigation—Declarator—Sist.

In a process of augmentation, wherein the heritors opposed the augmentation on the ground that the teinds were exhausted, process sisted to enable the minister to bring a declarator to try the validity of a claim by certain of the heritors that they held their lands cum decimis inclusis et nunquam antea separatis, it not being clear upon the face of the documents produced whether the claim was well founded or not.

Frood v Earl of Stair, &c., 1874, 2 R. 76; 12 S.L.R. 56.

(128)

Augmentation granted pending process of locality.

In a process of augmentation, where the heritors deny the existence of free teind, but do not support their objections by the production of decrees of valuation or other writings which are ex facie conclusive, the Court will not sist process till it shall be determined whether free teind exists or not, but will award an augmentation, and leave that question to be determined in the process of locality. Form of declaration inserted in the decree of augmentation.

Minister of Bonhill v Orr Ewing, 1886, 13 R. 594; 23 S.L.R. 406.

(129)

Where one heritor opposed augmentation on ground of decimæ inclusæ title, but there was other free teind—Process of locality.

In an augmentation the minister condescended upon free teind arising from several different parcels of lands. Only one of the heritors objected to the condescendence, and on the ground that he held his lands under a title cum decimis inclusis, and craved that the process should be sisted that the minister might bring a declarator to try the validity of the objector's decimæ inclusæ right. Held that as there was free teind apart from that of the objecting heritor the minister was entitled to an augmentation, and that the objection of the individual heritor would fall to be disposed of in the locality.

Minister of Borthwick v Dundas, 1876, 3 R. 361; 13 S.L.R. 217.

(130)

Dispute as to the existence of sufficient free teind—Process of locality.

In a process of augmentation the heritors admitted the existence of free teind, but denied that it was sufficient to meet the augmentation craved, and moved for an order on the minister to lodge a condescendence of the free teind which he alleged to exist. The Court granted the augmentation craved, leaving the question whether sufficient free teind existed or not to be determined in the process of locality.

Minister of Peebles v Heritors of Peebles, 1897, 24 R. 293; 34 S.L.R. 294; 4 S.L.T. 258.

(131)

In a process of augmentation, modification, and locality, certain heritors, while admitting the existence of free teind, denied that it was sufficient to meet the augmentation craved, and they moved that a reservation should be inserted in the interlocutor, declaring that the modification should depend on its being shewn to the Lord Ordinary that there existed a fund for the purpose. The Court pronounced an interlocutor granting the augmentation craved, without inserting the reservation asked for.

Minister of Hutton and Fishwick v Lundie, 1902, 4 F. 964; 39 S.L.R. 749; 10 S.L.T. 160.

(132)

Discovery of report of sub-commissioners—Motion for sist—Motion for reservation of heritors' rights.

In a process of augmentation the heritors who had discovered a report of the sub-commissioners dated 1635, and who were about to take steps to obtain a decree of approbation of the report, moved the Court either to sist the process or reserve their rights in the decree of augmentation. The Court refused the motion on the ground that if the heritors got a decree of approbation it was in their power to surrender their teinds if it was found that there was no free teind.

Observed (by Lord President Kinross) that the decree of augmentation would not affect the rights of the heritors and that the reservation asked for was accordingly unnecessary.

Minister of Dunbarney v Heritors of Dunbarney, 1902, 9 S.L.T. 490.

(133)

Process of locality — Old locality basis of new.

Opinion (per Lord Cowan) that when an augmentation of stipend is granted, the allocation of the old stipend falls to be taken as the first step in the new locality.

Magistrates of Edinburgh v Montgomery, 1872, 11 M. 14; 45 J. 10; 10 S.L.R. 4.

(134)

Keeping open locality—New feus.

Held that it was not a sufficient reason for keeping open a locality and remitting to the common agent to prepare a rectified scheme that new feus had been given off by certain of the heritors.

Common Agent for South Leith v Smith Sligo's Trustees, 1878, 5 R. 731; 15 S.L.R. 412.

(135)

Opening up final locality—Competency.

After a process of locality had proceeded for ten years, a scheme was approved final. It was then opened up on the motion of a heritor, who stated that he desired to found on a sub-valuation. The cause then slept for five years, when it was awakened of consent, and the scheme formerly approved final was again allowed to be seen and objected to. No objections having been lodged for seven months, on the motion of the common agent the scheme was approved final, the Lord Ordinary then refusing to allow objections to be lodged. The Court refused to open up the judgment.

Magistrates of Kinghorn v Common Agent for Kinghorn, 1878, 5 R. 522; 15 S.L.R. 273.

(136)

Lands erroneously included in locality of another parish.

Minister of Rescobie v Carnegy, 1869, 7 M. 514; 41 J. 273; 6 S.L.R. 322, No. 161, infra.

(137)

Interim locality—Correction of errors—Interim locality rule of payment till date of final decree.

Objections to an interim scheme of locality, whether in the circumstances enumerated in the Act of Sederunt, 20th June, 1838, or not, are competent for the purpose of correcting errors, to which corrections effect may be given in a final scheme of locality, but the interim locality so long as it is in force will remain the rule of payment.

Baird v Earl of Wemyss, (O.H.) 1903, 11 S.L.T. 453.

(138)

Claim to recover teinds diverted to other parishes—Competition with ministers of extraneous parishes—Procedure.

In a process of augmentation, &c., in which the minister of the parish of I was awarded an augmentation of four chalders, the minister lodged objections to an interim locality prepared by the common agent (which showed an insufficiency of free teind to provide the augmentation), and maintained that he was entitled to reclaim from the ministers of certain extraneous parishes to whose stipends portions of the teinds of I had for 300 years been allocated such an amount as would supply the deficiency. The common agent having pleaded that the process was not a competent one in which to determine this question, the Lord Ordinary, after a report by the teind-clerk, ordered intimation to the ministers of the extraneous parishes, and thereafter sisted them as parties to the process of augmentation, modification, and locality.

Minister of Inverkeillor v Minister of Carmyllie, 1902, 4 F. 719; 39 S.L.R. 551; 9 S.L.T. 479.

(5) EXPENSES.

(139)

Approval of interim locality—Expenses of common agent.

An interim scheme of locality having been approved of by the Lord Ordinary on Teinds, held that the common agent was entitled thereupon to a decree for his expenses up to that date against the heritors in proportion to their liabilities as ascertained by that interim scheme, and was not bound to wait until the true liabilities of the heritors should be fixed in the final locality.

Magistrates of Glasgow v Hay, 1871, 9 M. 520; 43 J. 240; 8 S.L.R. 357.

(140)

Augmentation opposed on ground of no free teind—Search of records for heritors' titles.

A process of augmentation was resisted on the ground that there was no free teind. In the augmentation the minister got a finding of expenses against the whole heritors, but in the locality he obtained expenses only against one whose lands were held to be unvalued, and was found liable in expenses to the others. Held that he was not entitled to the expenses of the search of the records for the heritors' titles, except in so far as it was applicable to the subject found to be unvalued.

M'Leod v Heritors of Morvern, 1869, 7 M. 1103; 41 J. 618; 6 S.L.R. 713.

(141)

Objections by minister to interim locality.

A minister objected to an interim locality, and four heritors lodged answers. He was found liable in expenses to three of them. He succeeded, however, against the fourth, and was found entitled to expenses against him. Held that he was entitled to recover such expenses from him as would have been incurred had he been the sole defender.

Macleod v Heritors of Morvern, 1870, 8 M. 528; 42 J. 245.

(142)

Minister opposing surrender.

A minister who had unsuccessfully objected to a surrender of teinds was not found liable in expenses, in respect that the litigation was caused by the delay of the heritor in making his surrender.

Earl of Minto v Pennell, 1873, 1 R. 156; 11 S.L.R. 66.

(143)

Proving the tenor—Reasonable opposition.

Richmond v Officers of State, 1869, 7 M. 956; 41 J. 539; 6 S.L.R. 614, No. 74, supra.

(144)

Expense of new locality imposed on heritor as condition of reduction of existing locality.

Where a decree of locality was reduced on the condition that the locality should stand as the interim rule of payment till a new decree of locality was obtained at the heritor's expense, held that the condition was competent and binding on the heritor though it involved a temporary encroachment on the stock.

Cameron v Chisholm-Batten, 1869, 7 M. 565; 41 J. 299; 6 S.L.R. 371.

6. REDUCTION OF LOCALITY.

(145)

Effect of decree of reduction.

Duncan v Brown, 1882, 10 R. 332; 20 S.L.R. 223, No. 157, infra.

Lord Elibank's Trustees v Hope, 1891, 18 R. 445; 28 S.L.R. 295, No. 153, infra.

(146)

Lands alleged to have been wrongly included in locality of adjacent parish.

Minister of Rescobie v Carnegie, 1869, 7 M. 514; 41 J. 273; 6 S.L.R. 322, No. 161, infra.

(147)

Condition that locality stand as interim rule of payment.

A heritor having obtained a decree which valued his teind at less than the amount of stipend payable under a final decree of locality brought a reduction of the latter decree. The Teind Court in the decree of reduction inserted on the heritor's motion a condition that the locality should stand as an interim rule of payment until a new decree of locality was obtained and an extract delivered to the minister at the heritor's expense. Held that the heritor was bound by this condition, and that although it might involve a temporary encroachment on the stock, it had competently been adjoined by the Teind Court.

Cameron v Chisholm-Batten, 1869, 7 M. 565; 41 J. 299; 6 S.L.R. 371.

(148)

Heritor claiming exemption from stipend—Acquiescence by common agent in interlocutor giving effect to exemption—Res judicata.

Duke of Buccleuch v Common Agent for Inveresk, 1868, 7 M. 95; 41 J. 55; 6 S.L.R. 88, No. 117, supra.

(149)

Lands wrongly exempted—Prescription—Bona fide perception.

Elder v Fotheringham, 1869, 7 M. 341; 41 J. 199; 6 S.L.R. 220, No. 118, supra.

(150)

Locality of city parish—Personal citation of heritors dispensed with—Act of Sederunt, 5th July, 1809.

A rectified scheme of the locality of St. Cuthbert's parish, Edinburgh, having been approved as final, the Lord Ordinary approved of the Auditor's report, and decreed for expenses. After extract had been issued, it was discovered by the teind-clerk that certain lands belonging to the city of Edinburgh had been entered and localled upon twice under different classifications. The Lord Provost and magistrates, when this error was discovered, prepared a summons of reduction of the said final decree of locality, and as a preliminary to raising the action, petitioned the Court to dispense with the ordinary mode of citation of the heritors of the parish (1075 in number), on the ground of expense, and instead thereof to allow citation by means of notice given in the kirk by the precentor, written notice on the kirk door and subsequent newspaper advertisements in the manner prescribed by the Act of Sederunt, 5th July, 1809, for the raising of actions of augmentation. The expenses of citation in the ordinary way were estimated at about £250, besides agent's fees and other expenses. The Court, in the circumstances, granted the prayer of the petition.

Magistrates of Edinburgh (Locality of St. Cuthbert's), 1881, 8 R. 932; 18 S.L.R. 706.

(151)

Disconformity to sub-commissioners' report—Reduction of decree of approbation in absence by party who obtained it.

M'Neill's Trustees v Campbell, 1872, 11 M. 211; 45 J. 131; 10 S.L.R. 138, No. 35, supra.

7. OVER-ALLOCATION.

(152)

Suspension of interim decree of locality on ground of over-allocation.

A heritor who was charged for payment of his proportion of stipend, as modified by an interim decree of locality, presented a note of suspension on the ground that the amount greatly exceeded the teind of his lands as ascertained by an old sub-valuation, of which he had raised an action of approbation. He did not, however, allege that there was not in the hands of the other heritors surplus teind sufficient to meet any claim which he might have for over-payments of stipend. Note refused.

M'Neill's Trustees v Campbell, 1872, 10 M. 753; 9 S.L.R. 480.

(153)

Reduction of locality subject to qualification.

In 1888 the proprietor of the lands of B obtained decree of approbation of a report by sub-commissioners in 1630 valuing his teinds. In 1890 he brought a reduction of a locality approved final in 1868, in which a stipend in excess of the teinds as reported to be the value in the sub-valuation of 1630 had been localled upon his lands. He sought to have the locality set aside as erroneous ab initio, on the ground that the teinds were valued by the sub-commissioners in 1630, and that their report had been eventually approved by the Court of Teinds. The Court of Teinds granted decree of reduction, the decree "to have effect only from and after the date of the decree of approbation, 16th July, 1888, for the second half of the crop of 1888, and in all time coming."

Lord Elibank's Trustees v Hope, 1891, 18 R. 445; 28 S.L.R. 295.

8. ADJUSTMENT BETWEEN OVER-PAYING AND UNDER-PAYING HERITORS.

(154)

Over-allocation in former locality adjusted in new.

In two successive localities the teinds of certain lands were localled on for more than the just proportion of each augmentation, in consequence of a previous decree of valuation not being produced; and the stipend so localled was paid by the heritor. In a subsequent locality the decree of valuation was produced. Held that as under the previous decrees of locality the heritor must continue to pay more of the old stipend than was justly due, in the pending augmentation she should be localled on for so much less.

Robertson v Macknight, 1873, 11 M. 389; 45 J. 261; 10 S.L.R. 289.

(155)

Long negative prescription—Effect on claim of over-paying heritor.

The ministers of a parish obtained a series of augmentations beginning with 1797, which were paid under interim decrees of locality till 1861, when a final scheme was approved of. By interim localities in 1800, 1816, and 1826, no part of the stipend was localled on the lands of M in consequence of these being supposed to be exempt. In 1835 the exemption was challenged by some of the other heritors, who obtained a judgment in their favour; and accordingly the lands of M were localled on in an interim scheme in 1853, and in the final scheme in 1861. From 1808 to 1825 these lands had belonged to C's trustees, who, in 1825, conveyed them to F, who possessed them till 1835, when he sold them, and ceased to be a heritor in the parish. In 1875 a heritor of the parish claimed from C's trustees and F the amount of stipend which he had overpaid under interim localities during the respective periods of their possession of M, in consequence of the erroneous exemption of these lands. Held that the claims against both C's trustees and F were cut off by the long negative prescription.

Campbell's Trustees v Sinclair, &c., 1878, 5 R. (H.L.) 119; 3 App.Cas. 765; 15 S.L.R. 522.

(156)

Prescription of claim for repayment—Failure to found on valuation.

Held that although in general prescription does not begin to run against a claim for repayment by an over-paying heritor in a locality against an under-paying heritor until a final decree of locality has been pronounced, it did operate where the over-payments by the heritor were caused by his own act in failing to produce a decree of valuation, and accordingly that in such circumstances the Court would not admit the plea that the heritor was non valens agere in the sense of being unable to sue for repayment till a final decree of locality had been obtained.

Earl of Fife v Duff, 1887, 15 R. 238; 25 S.L.R. 195.

(157)

Reduction of final locality and approval of rectified final locality—Effect on previous payments.

In 1874 a final scheme of locality exempted from payment of stipend teinds of lands belonging to A, which under an interim scheme had paid stipend from 1859, and thereby A became entitled to repetition of these payments from the heritors, who had paid less than the amount fixed by the final scheme. In 1877 B and C, two of these heritors, raised a reduction of that locality and of two prior localities, on the ground that the value of their teinds had been taken to be £12 instead of £3. The Lord Ordinary in November, 1878, granted decree of reduction, "but ordains the locality of 13th March, 1874, to stand as an interim rule of payment to the minister until the pursuers furnish him with a new decree of locality, and remits to the clerk to prepare a locality accordingly"; and in March, 1879, he "approved of a rectified scheme as a final locality of the said stipend, commencing with crop and year 1878." According to this locality A remained exempt from payment of stipend, and B and C's teinds, which had been valued in the process at £3, were surrendered, and were thus relieved of an over-payment of stipend which had formerly been drawn from stock. In 1881 A raised an action against B and C concluding for payment of their proportion of the over-payments made by him from 1859 to 1874. The defenders pleaded that the rights and liabilities of over-paying and under-paying heritors were regulated by the locality of 1879, under which the pursuer had no claim for over-payments against the defenders. Held that the decree of reduction affected future payments only, and, consequently, that the defenders remained liable to the pursuers in repetition of over-payments as determined by the locality of 1874.

Duncan v Brown, &c., 1882, 10 R. 332; 20 S.L.R. 223.

(158)

Whether over-paying heritor has a claim against titular to whom under-paying heritors have paid surplus teinds.

A heritor brought an action against the Crown for repetition of over-payment of stipend during a course of years under interim decrees of locality, averring that the whole free teinds of the under-paying heritors, other than those allocated as stipend to the minister, had been paid to the Crown as titular, or to its tacksman. The Crown pleaded that the pursuer's claim was against the under-paying heritors, and not against the Crown, and that as regarded payments beyond forty years it was prescribed. Held that neither of these pleas could be satisfactorily disposed of without inquiry into the facts, and a remit to that effect made before answer.

Chapel's Factor v Lord Advocate, &c., 1872, 44 J. 532; 9 S.L.R. 602.

(159)

Defence by under-paying heritor that whole surplus teind paid to titular.

Opinion that in an action by a heritor to recover over-payments of stipend made under interim decrees of locality it is not a good defence for an under-paying heritor to state that he has paid the whole surplus teind to the titular.

Mackenzie v Lord Advocate, &c., 1878, 5 R. 589; 15 S.L.R. 321.

(160)

Claim of titular for arrears of surplus teind.

Where heritors have for a long time paid stipend in terms of interim decrees of locality proceeding on an erroneous principle, the titular has no claim for repetition of the sums so paid.

Lord Advocate v Landale, (O.H.) 1867, 40 J. 365.

9. QUESTIONS WITH MINISTERS OF ADJOINING PARISHES.

(161)

Objection by minister—Lands in one parish erroneously localised on in another.

In a process of valuation in 1757 certain lands lying in the parish of R had been erroneously described as lying in the parish of A and were included in the subsequent localities of A. In a locality of R in 1868 the minister objected to a scheme of locality which omitted the lands, and claimed that they should be included. Held that the valuation of 1757 was final, but that the minister could maintain his objections and be permitted to prove that the lands lay in his parish, without bringing a reduction of the localities of A, or calling the minister of A as a party to the process of locality.

Minister of Rescobie v Carnegie, 1869, 7 M. 514; 41 J. 273; 6 S.L.R. 322.

(162)

Disjunction and annexation quoad omnia—Payment by annexed lands of former stipend to old parish, but of augmentation to new—Prescription.

In an action raised before the High Commission in 1648 by the minister of Bonhill for the annexation of certain lands in the parishes of Luss and Kilmarnock to the parish of Bonhill, and for augmentation and locality, decrees were pronounced annexing the lands quoad omnia, and localising an augmentation upon the teinds of the annexed lands, as well as upon the other teinds in the parish of Bonhill. The annexed lands thereafter paid augmented stipend to the minister of Bonhill, and continued to make the same payments of stipend as before to the ministers of Luss and Kilmarnock, until, in a process of locality of the parish of Bonhill raised in 1813, the minister of Bonhill claimed to have the whole of these teinds localised on for payment of his stipend, as it appeared that the teinds of his parish were otherwise insufficient, and that there were free teinds in the parishes of Luss and Kilmarnock to supply the deficiency to their ministers. The heritors in these parishes pleaded prescription. Held that as the right of the minister of Bonhill to claim these teinds only arose when the other teinds in his parish proved insufficient to satisfy his stipend, the usage which had followed on the decrees for two centuries was not inconsistent with his claim, and that he was now entitled to have the whole teinds of the annexed lands localised on for his stipend.

Simpson v Ewing, &c., 1882, 10 R. 313; 20 S.L.R. 228.

(163)

Diversion of teinds to other parishes by teind commissioners—Acts 1633, c. 17 and c. 19—Prescription.

In 1634 the teind commissioners allocated teinds of the parish of I to the payment of portions of the stipends of the ministers of certain extraneous parishes. The minister of I was not a party to the proceedings in which this order was made, and at its date and down to 1900 there remained after making the payments sufficient free teind in I to make up the full amount of his stipend. In 1900, however, he obtained an augmentation of four chalders, and it then appeared that, unless the diverted teinds were available, there was not sufficient free teind in I to provide the augmented stipend. Held that the provision of a competent stipend to the minister of I was a first charge on the teinds of that parish, that the appropriation of them to other parishes was necessarily subject to that burden; that the minister of I, not having hitherto had any interest to reclaim the diverted teinds, was not barred by prescription or acquiescence; and that accordingly he was entitled to so much of the diverted teinds as was requisite to make up the amount of his augmented stipend.

Minister of Inverkeillor v Minister of Carmyllie, 1902, 4 F. 719; 39 S.L.R. 551; 9 S.L.T. 479.

(164)

Teinds of lands formerly held runrig, situated partly in one parish and partly in another.

Runrig lands were situated partly in St. Boswells and partly in Melrose parish. In a decree of division the sheriff found that the proprietors should remain liable to teind and other burdens as if no division had been made. The teinds of the whole lands had been localised on in the localities of both parishes, in the proportion of three-fourths of the teind to the minister of the one and one-fourth to the minister of the other. In a new locality of St. Boswells a singular successor objected to being localised on for part of the lands lying in Melrose. Held that the decree of the sheriff, in so far as it related to the allocation of stipend, was incompetent, and that the practice in former localities did not bind a singular successor, and the objection sustained.

Duke of Buccleuch v Milne, 1868, 6 M. 765; 40 J. 394.

10. WARRANDICE AND RELIEF.

(165)

Obligation of relief of augmentations in feu charter.

Opinions that an obligation in a feu charter by the superior binding himself, his heirs and successors, to relieve the vassal of future augmentations of stipend, is binding only on the superior's successors in the superiority, and not on his general representatives.

M'Callum v Stewart, 1870, 8 M. (H.L.) 1; 42 J. 266; 7 S.L.R. 308.

(166)

Effect of an obligation by the superior in a feu contract dated 1757, to relieve the vassal, inter alia, of all teinds and minister's stipend in all time coming.

Preston v Magistrates of Edinburgh, 1870, 8 M. 502; 42 J. 232; 7 S.L.R. 291.

(167)

King's annuity.

In 1632 the teinds of certain lands were sold by the titular to the heritor for a price, the heritor becoming bound to relieve the titular of the King's annuity of six per cent., and of all taxations to be imposed on the teinds, and of the stipend then payable, the titular becoming bound to warrant the teinds free from all future augmentations. In 1644 the heritor redeemed the King's annuity, and about 1674 these annuities were relinquished by the Crown throughout the country. In 1812 the whole teinds were exhausted by augmentations, including the portion which in 1632 was payable as King's annuity. Held that the titular's obligation extended to the whole teinds, including the portion which in 1632 was payable as King's annuity.

Murray v Countess of Rothes, 1874, 2 R. 106; 12 S.L.R. 82.

(168)

Duration of obligation of warrandice—Whether warrandice of tack or of absolute right.

In 1648 A, whose immediate author described himself as "principal tacksman, titular, and having good and undoubted right to the teind sheaves" of the parish of O, by contract of excambion conveyed his right to these teinds to G in exchange for a tack of teinds in another parish, and further bound himself and his successors to warrant G and his successors free of any augmentation of the stipend of O over and above a certain sum "in all tyme coming." In an action raised in 1832 by G's successor for implement of the obligation of warrandice against A's successor, who maintained that that obligation had come to an end, the Court assolized the defender, being of opinion (1) that as it had been proved that A's author was tacksman of the teinds of O under a tack from a parson, he could not have been titular (parsonage teinds at that date being inalienable); (2) that both tacks had expired many years before the date of the action; and (3) that the clause of warrandice and relief endured for the period of endurance of the tack of the teinds of O only.

Duff v Earl of Seafield, 1883, 11 R. 126; 21 S.L.R. 66.

(169)

Glebe designated on an excambion—Obligation to relieve glebe lands of teind—Rights of heritors inter se.

A new glebe was designed in 1776 out of land belonging to A, to whom the lands of the old glebe were given in exchange for the lands of the new glebe. In connection with this excambion A agreed that all teind payable from the whole lands of A (including the new glebe) should be a burden on A's remaining lands, and the presbytery in designing the new glebe took an obligation from A to relieve the minister and his successors from all public burdens, including teind. In an interim scheme of locality the common agent, in his statement of the teinds of A's successor in the lands, deducted the teind of the land of the glebe. Held (per Lord Pearson, Ordinary, and acquiesced in) that the transaction in 1776 had not the effect of making the new glebe teind free so as to affect the rights of the heritors inter se, but merely gave the minister a right of relief.

Baird v Earl of Wemyss, 1906, 8 F. 669; 43 S.L.R. 614; 14 S.L.T. 2.

V. COURT OF TEINDS.

(170)

Jurisdiction—Act 1707, c. 9—Judicature Act, 1825, sec. 54.

Held that from the date of the Act 1707, cap. 9, the Court of Teinds and the Court of Session are not two separate and distinct Courts, each with a peculiar and exclusive jurisdiction, but that the Court of Session is entitled to exercise its whole original jurisdiction, when sitting as the Court of Teinds, and that an action connected with teinds was competently raised in the Teind Court, although some of the conclusions might be appropriate to the judicial branch and others to the discretionary branch of that Court.

Presbytery of Stirling v Heritors of Larchbert and Dunipace, 1900, 2 F. 562; 39 S.L.R. 586; 7 S.L.T. 414.

(171)

Process—Action falling asleep.
Teind causes remitted to the Outer House fall asleep in the same way as ordinary Outer House actions.

Locality of King Edward, (O.H.) 1903, 11 S.L.T. 71.

(172)
Teind-Clerk not to be examined as haver, but remit made to him to inquire and report.

In a teind case a proof on commission of the averments of parties was granted. The pursuer called the Teind-Clerk as a haver and witness, and obtained in this way excerpts from a record in his custody, and also states prepared by him. The Court ordered the report of the commission to be withdrawn from process, and remitted to the Teind-Clerk to make the necessary investigations and to report.

Fogo v Colquhoun, 1867, 6 M. 105; 40 J. 67; 5 S.L.R. 92.

TENANT. See LANDLORD AND TENANT.

TENANT'S ERECTIONS AND IMPROVEMENTS. See VALUATION.

TENDER. See EXPENSES; PROCESS.

TENOR, PROVING OF. See PROCESS.

TERCE. See SUCCESSION.

TERMINI HABILES. See CONTRACT; PARTNERSHIP.

TESTAMENT. See SUCCESSION.

TESTING OF DEEDS. See WRIT.

THEFT. See JUSTICIARY.

THELLUSSON ACT. See SUCCESSION.

THIRLAGE. See SERVITUDE.

THOLED ASSIZE. See JUSTICIARY.

THREATS. See JUSTICIARY.

THROUGH TRAFFIC. See RAILWAY.

TIDAL RIVER. See RIVER, LOCH, AND SEA.

TIMBER. See ENTAIL; HERITABLE PROPERTY; RIGHT IN SECURITY.

TIME.

I. COMMENCEMENT OF PERIOD,	COL.	831
II. TERMINATION OF PERIOD,		833
III. MEANING OF PARTICULAR TERMS—
1. Week,		835
2. Month,		836
3. Close Time,		837
4. Sunset and Sunrise,		838
5. Whitsunday,		838
6. "Sunday or about that time,"		838
7. Punctual Payment,		839

I. COMMENCEMENT OF PERIOD.

(1)

Prescription.

The prescriptive period commences at midnight of the date of infetment.

Simpson v Marshall, 1900, 2 F. 447; 37 S.L.R. 314; 7 S.L.T. 195.

(2)

———Maxim dies inceptus pro completo habetur inapplicable.

Simpson v Melville (O.H.) 1899, 6 S.L.T. 355, No. 12, infra.

(3)

Time limit for prosecutions—Sale of Food and Drugs Act Amendment Act, 1879.

Held that the day on which the purchase took place was not to be taken into computation in calculating the statutory period under the Sale of Food and Drugs Act Amendment Act, 1879, sec. 10.

Frew v Morris, 1897, 24 R. (J.) 50; 2 Adam, 267; 34 S.L.R. 527; 4 S.L.T. 342.

(4)

Insurance "from" a certain day.

An insurance company entered into an agreement to insure a tramway company against accidents for twelve months from 24th November inclusive, subject to the condition that no insurance should be effected until the premium was paid. An accident occurred on 24th November before the policy had been issued or the premium paid. On 26th November the premium was paid, and the insurance company acknowledged receipt of it as premium for the risk "from the 24th inst."

Held (1) that the preliminary contract to grant an insurance to cover risk of accident on 24th November on payment of the premium was no longer binding after the accident had happened; and (2) that the terms of the receipt did not import liability except for accidents occurring after the lapse of that day.

Sickness and Accident Assurance Association v General Accident Assurance Corporation, 1892, 19 R. 977; 29 S.L.R. 836.

(5)

Hire of ship from a certain day.

A steam tug was hired for salvage service for "one or four weeks," from the 8th September, at which date she was to be at the disposal of the charterer. She was not ready to start till 2.30 p.m. of the 8th September.

Held that the true meaning of the contract was that the tug was to be ready to start at the earliest moment of the 8th, and accordingly that the owner was in breach of contract.

Mackenzie v Liddell, 1883, 10 R. 705; 20 S.L.R. 451.

(6)

Bankruptcy—Calculation of sixty days prior to bankruptcy—Application of rule dies inceptus—Act 1696, c. 5.

In a case under the Bankruptcy Act, 1696, c. 5, where the question was whether the bankrupt had given a security within sixty days of bankruptcy, observed (per Lord M'Laren, Ordinary) "In reckoning time negatively, if we exclude the day of bankruptcy we cannot apply the maxim dies inceptus pro completo habetur to the day of granting the security. It appears to me, however, that whether the efflux of time is reckoned positively or negatively the true principle to be applied is the principle of approximation, which necessarily leads to the rejection of one of the limiting days and to the inclusion of the other. In reckoning time de momento in momentum, the prescribed period, say, sixty days, will run from a particular hour on the first day to the same hour on the sixty-first day."

Greig v Anderson, (O.H.) 1883, 20 S.L.R. 421.

(7)

———Direction that periods of time to be reckoned "exclusive of the day from which such period is directed to run"—Bankruptcy Act, 1856, secs. 5 and 108.

Stiven v Reynolds & Co., 1891, 18 R. 422; 28 S.L.R. 271. BANKRUPTCY, No. 434.

Lipman & Co.'s Trustees, 1893, 20 R. 818; 30 S.L.R. 729; 1 S.L.T. 86. BANKRUPTCY, No. 821.

(8)
Notice of meeting to elect trustee in sequestration—Bankruptcy Act, 1856, sec. 67.

Held that in order to comply with the provisions of the 67th section of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act, 1856, there must be an interval of six days between the close of the day of the "Gazette" notice of the award of a sequestration, and the date to be fixed for the election of a trustee.

Wilson, 1891, 19 R. 219; 29 S.L.R. 176.

(9)
Notice to trustee in sequestration of meeting of creditors—Notice sent by post—Bankruptcy Act, 1856, sec. 98.

The Bankruptcy Act, 1856, sec. 98, enacts that "any commissioner, with notice to the trustee, may at any time call a meeting of the creditors." On 26th October one of the commissioners in a sequestration sent a notice to the "Gazette" calling a meeting of the creditors. The "Gazette" containing the notice was published on 27th October between 6 and 7 p.m. On the afternoon of the 27th October the commissioner sent a notice of the meeting to the trustee, but this notice was not delivered to the trustee till 10 a.m. on the 28th, in consequence of its being contained in a registered letter, which could not be delivered after business hours on the 27th, the trustee's office being then shut. In an appeal by the trustee against a resolution passed at the meeting, held that due notice had not been given to the trustee, and therefore that the meeting had not been duly called.

Lang's Trustee v Steele, 1892, 19 R. 488; 29 S.L.R. 382.

II. TERMINATION OF PERIOD.

(10)

Liberation of prisoner—Act of Grace, 1696, c. 32.

Held that the maxim in favorabilibus dies inceptus pro completo habetur applied to the ten days allowed by the Act of Grace, 1696, c. 32 (amended by 6 Geo. iv. c. 62), to the creditors within which to provide aliment for their debtors imprisoned for a civil debt, and accordingly that a debtor who was incarcerated at 6.40 p.m. on a certain day might be liberated at 8 a.m. on the tenth day following.

Thomson v Magistrates of Kirkcudbright, &c., 1878, 5 R. 561; 15 S.L.R. 299.

(11)

Poor law—Time for acquiring residential settlement—Dies inceptus.

A person began to reside in a certain parish on the afternoon of 29th May, 1900, and resided there continuously till the morning of 28th May, 1903, when he left the parish. Held that he had not resided in the parish for three years, and accordingly had not acquired a residential settlement.

Parish Council of Cavers v Parish Council of Smailholm, 1909 S.C. 195; 46 S.L.R. 170; 16 S.L.T. 627.

v 27

(12)

Prescription—Maxim dies inceptus inapplicable.

A notarial instrument was recorded at 11 a.m. on 7th May, 1868, and possession followed until between 2 and 3 p.m. on 7th May, 1898, when a summons was served on the possessor in an action raising the question of title. Held that the summons had operated as an interruption of the prescriptive period, the maxim dies inceptus pro completo habetur having no place in the law of prescription.

Simpson v Melville, (O.H.) 1899, 6 S.L.T. 355.

(13)

Sale—Offer and acceptance—"This for reply by" a day named.

An offer to buy certain goods bore, "This for reply by Monday, 6th inst." A letter accepting the offer was posted on the evening of Monday, the 6th, and did not reach the offerer until the next day. Held that the offer had been timeously accepted.

Jacobsen, Sons & Co. v Underwood & Son, 1894, 21 R. 654; 31 S.L.R. 545; 1 S.L.T. 578.

(14)

Notice given by post—Notice of appeal—Summary Prosecutions Appeals Act, 1875.

Sub-sec. (5) of sec. 3 of the Summary Prosecutions Appeals (Scotland) Act, 1875, provides that an appellant shall "within three days" of receiving the appeal case from the inferior judge "give notice of appeal in writing to the respondent." An appellant posted the statutory notice on the third day, but the respondent did not receive it until the morning of the fourth. Held that this was sufficient compliance with the statute.

Charleson v Duffes, 1881, 8 R. (J.) 34; 4 Coup. 470; 18 S.L.R. 573.

(15)

Notice of objection—Burgh Voters Act, 1856, secs. 4 and 9—Representation of the People Act, 1868, sec. 20.

A notice of objection to the entry of a person's name on the list of voters for a county, addressed to the person objected to at his residence at Shotts, was posted at Motherwell on the evening of 21st September after the last dispatch for that day. Held that the notice was not timeously given under the Burgh Voters Act, 1856, sec. 4, as amended by the Representation of the People Act, 1868, sec. 20.

Neilson v Robertson, 1891, 19 R. 301; 29 S.L.R. 242.

(16)

Notice of claim of damages—Employers' Liability Act, 1880, secs. 4 and 7.

A workman, who on 7th May sustained personal injuries when engaged in his work, sent to his employers notice of injury, which they could not receive in course of post before 19th June. Held that this notice had not been given within six weeks of the accident, in terms of the 4th and 7th sections of the Employers' Liability Act, 1880.

M'Donagh v P. & W. Maclellan, 1886, 13 R. 1000; 23 S.L.R. 717.

See also M'Govan v Tancred, Arrol & Co., 1886, 13 R. 1033; 23 S.L.R. 737. NEGLIGENCE, No. 574.

Connolly v Young's Paraffin Oil Co., 1894, 22 R. 80; 32 S.L.R. 61; 2 S.L.T. 306. NEGLIGENCE, No. 579.

(17)

Fixed number of days for actus legitimus—Period expiring on Sunday—Summary Prosecutions Appeals Act, 1875.

Held, in construing sec. 3 (1) of the Summary Prosecutions Appeals Act, 1875, that when one of the three days after the determination of the inferior judge (within which consignment is to be made) is a Sunday, it is not to be treated as a dies non, but is to be counted, unless it is the last of the three days, and consequently that an appellant who had been convicted on a Saturday, but did not offer to consign until the following Wednesday, was not entitled to have a case stated.

Hutton v Garland, 1883, 10 R. (J.) 60; 5 Coup. 275; 20 S.L.R. 658.

(18)

Period expiring on Sunday—Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, sec. 1 (a).

Under the Public Authorities Protection Act, 1893, sec. 1 (a), any action brought against a person protected by the Act must be "commenced within six months next after the act, neglect, or default complained of." Held that an action in the Sheriff Court against a public authority was not timeously commenced when the six months had expired on a Sunday and the writ had been served on the following day. Opinions reserved on the competency of obtaining a warrant of citation, and of serving a writ through the post, on Sunday.

M'Niven v Glasgow Corporation, 1920 S.C. 584; 57 S.L.R. 514; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 57.

(19)

Period expiring on public holiday—Sheriff Courts Act, 1876, sec. 16.

Mackenzie v Munro, 1894, 22 R. 45; 32 S.L.R. 43; 2 S.L.T. 290. SHERIFF, No. 166.

(20)

Process—Appeal—Timeous lodging of caution money—Summary Prosecutions Appeal (Scotland) Act, 1875, sec. 3, sub-sec. 1 (1).

Niddrie and Benhar Coal Co. v Young, 1895, 22 R. 413; 32 S.L.R. 303; 2 S.L.T. 534. JUSTICIARY, No. 2111.

III. MEANING OF PARTICULAR TERMS.

1. WEEK.

(21)

Six weeks—Advertisement—Sale by heritable creditor—Titles to Land Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1868, sec. 118.

The holder of a bond and disposition in security sold the security subjects under the power of sale in the bond on 7th March, 1894. The first of six weekly advertisements of the sale was published on 26th January. Held that the sale was invalid, in respect that only 40 days, and not six weeks, had elapsed between the first advertisement and the day of the sale.

Ferguson v Rodger, 1895, 22 R. 643; 32 S.L.R. 525; 3 S.L.T. 36.

(22)

—The holder of a bond and disposition in security exposed the subjects under the power of sale on 23rd March, 1904. The first advertisement had appeared on the morning of 10th February, 1904. Held that, as 42 days had elapsed between the morning of the first advertisement and the morning of the exposure, the provisions of the Titles to Land Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1868, sec. 119, in regard to advertisement had been complied with.

Roscoe v Mackersy, 1905, 7 F. 761; 42 S.L.R. 453; 12 S.L.T. 853.

(23)

"Two consecutive weeks."

Held that a notice which had been inserted in an Aberdeen daily newspaper on Friday in one week, and on Wednesday in the following week, was a notice which had been inserted "for two consecutive weeks" within the meaning of the Aberdeen Municipality Extension Act, 1871, sec. 145.

Magistrates of Aberdeen v Watt, 1901, 3 F. 787; 38 S.L.R. 593; 9 S.L.T. 36.

(24)

Calendar week or trade week—Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Held that in estimating "average weekly earnings" for the purpose of fixing compensation due under the Workmen's Compensation Act the "week" to be taken as the unit of division was not the calendar week, but the trade or pay week of the particular employment.

Fleming v Lochgelly Iron and Coal Co., 1902, 4 F. 890; 39 S.L.R. 684; 10 S.L.T. 114.

(25)

Broken week.

Held that where there was no trade week in the particular employment, the calendar week from Sunday to Saturday is to be taken as the week.

M'Cue v Barclay, Curle & Co., 1902, 4 F. 909; 39 S.L.R. 690; 10 S.L.T. 116.

2. MONTH.

(26)

Calendar or lunar—Construction in testamentary deed.

Opinion (per Lord Young), in construing the terms of a deed of settlement, that the words "six months" occurring therein fell to be read as meaning six lunar months.

Campbell's Trustees v Cazenove, 1880, 8 R. 21; 18 S.L.R. 4.

(27)

Interpretation Act, 1850, sec. 4.

The 4th section of the Interpretation Act is retrospective, and the word "month" is therefore to be deemed and taken to mean a calendar month in all Acts of Parliament of whatever date, unless words be added showing lunar month to be intended. Opinions that by the common law of Scotland "month" means a calendar month.

Farquharson v Whyte, 1886, 13 R. (J.) 29; 1 White, 26; 23 S.L.R. 360.

(28)

Two months for bringing action—Public-houses Acts Amendment Act, 1862, sec. 35.

Under a statute requiring all actions arising from procedure under it to be commenced within two months after the cause of action shall have arisen, held that magistrates who were sued for damages on account of a decision pronounced on 15th April were timeously cited by a summons executed on 15th June following.

Ashley v Magistrates of Rothesay, 1873, 11 M. 708; 41 J. 440; 10 S.L.R. 513.

[Appeal not taken on this point, 1874, 1 R. (H.L.) 14; L.R., 2 H.L. Sc. 352; 11 S.L.R. 487.]

3. CLOSE TIME.

(29)

Salmon fishing.

Held (per Lord Young) that where the annual close time expires during the hours of the ordinary weekly close time, it is illegal to commence fishing till the expiry of the remaining hours of the weekly close time.

Custar v Chalmers, 1878, 5 R. (J.) 36; 4 Coup. 46; 15 S.L.R. 578.

(30)

Removal of nets by certain hour on Saturday—Impossibility owing to tide of removing nets at that hour—Salmon Fisheries Act, 1862, sec. 7—Salmon Fisheries Act, 1868, sec. 24, and schedule D.

The Salmon Fisheries Act, 1868, provides for a close time for net fishing "from the hour of six o'clock on Saturday night to the hour of six o'clock on Monday morning." On certain days in the month it was impossible owing to the state of the tide for net fishermen on the Forth to throw fly nets out of fishing order so as to comply with this regulation, the alternative being to throw them out at 8 a.m. Held that the impossibility of removing the nets at the prescribed hour did not justify the nets being left beyond the statutory hour.

Osborne v Anderson, 1887, 15 R. (J.) 12; 1 White, 497; 25 S.L.R. 21.

Irving v Phyn, 1891, 19 R. (J.) 7; 3 White, 46; 29 S.L.R. 275.

4. SUNSET AND SUNRISE.

(31)

Local or Greenwich time—Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act, 1862, sec. 27.

Held that the times of sunset and sunrise in sec. 27 of the Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act, 1862, which deals with illegal fishing at night, are the times at which the sun sets and rises at the locus of the alleged offence, and not the times at which it sets and rises at Greenwich.

MacKinnon v Nicolson, 1916 S.C. (J.) 6; 7 Adam, 713; 53 S.L.R. 269; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 115.

5. WHITSUNDAY.

(32)

A stable and workshop were let for eight years and six months from Martinmas, 1900, with a break in favour of either party "at Whitsunday, 1904," on written intimation that the break was to be taken advantage of being given "six months at least before the said term of Whitsunday, 1904." Held that notice given by the lessee on 27th November, 1903, to terminate the lease at Whitsunday, 1904, was not timeously given, in respect that "Whitsunday, 1904," in the lease meant 15th, and not 28th May, and that notice fell to be given six calendar months previous to the 15th.

Fraser's Trustees v Maule & Son, 1904, 6 F. 819; 41 S.L.R. 623; 12 S.L.T. 157.

(33)

Meaning of term interpreted by actings of parties.

The tenants under an agricultural lease for nineteen years from Whitsunday, 1866, in point of fact entered into possession on 26th May, 1866, and remained in possession until 26th May, 1885.

In an action by the tenants against the landlord for compensation for improvements under the Agricultural Holdings Act, 1883, held that the term "Whitsunday" occurring in the lease was open to construction, and that the parties had by their actings interpreted it to mean, for the purpose of the lease, the 26th May, or old term, and not the 15th May, or legal term; and that therefore notice given four months before 26th May, 1885, was good notice of the claim.

Hunter v Barron's Trustees, 1886, 13 R. 883; 23 S.L.R. 615.

6. "SUNDAY OR ABOUT THAT TIME."

(34)

Breach of public-house certificate.

A person was convicted of a breach of his certificate upon a complaint which set forth that he did sell liquor "upon Sunday the 31st day of December, 1893, or about that time." In an appeal by him, held that the complaint was irrelevant in respect that the words "or about that time" must be taken as including the days immediately before and after the Sunday specified, and therefore as including hours on Saturday and Monday, when the sale would not have been an offence.

Macdonald v Patterson, 1894, 21 R. (J.) 38; 1 Adam, 366; 31 S.L.R. 517; 1 S.L.T. 565.

7. PUNCTUAL PAYMENT.

(35)

Lease.

A landlord agreed to allow the testamentary trustees of a deceased tenant an abatement of £107 on the arrears of rent due at the tenant's death, "reserving right to claim the said sum of £107 in the event of the rents falling due after Lammas, 1890, not being punctually paid." The estates of the tenant having been subsequently sequestrated, the trustees declined to pay the rent due at Candlemas, 1892, on the ground that the landlord was only entitled to a ranking therefor in the sequestration. On 20th July, 1892, the landlord obtained a decree against them personally, and they then paid the rent with interest. Held that the rent due at Candlemas had not been "punctually" paid.

Scott-Chisholme v Brown, 1893, 20 R. 575; 30 S.L.R. 558.

(36)

Bond and disposition in security—Conditions in bond operative "so long as punctual payment shall be made" of the interest—Interest tendered seven days after stipulated date.

A bond and disposition in security provided for payment of interest at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum by quarterly payments on the first days of February, May, August, and November in each year. By a back letter of even date the lenders agreed, "provided . . . the interest of the loan be punctually paid in terms of the bond and disposition in security," not to call in the loan for a period of fourteen years, and they further agreed to modify the stipulated rate of interest to 4 per cent. "provided and so long as punctual payment shall be made of interest at said lower rate." The lenders were for some time tenants of the security subjects at a rent exceeding the interest on the bond, and the interest was habitually set off against the rent due, but this arrangement came to an end at 1st November, 1917, when the lenders ceased to be tenants. No interest was paid on 1st February, 1918, and by letter of 29th April, 1918, the lenders demanded payment of the interest due at 1st February and 1st May, and intimated that, unless the interest was in future regularly and punctually paid, interest at the rate stipulated in the bond would be exacted. On 13th May payment of the interest due at 1st February and 1st May was made at 4 per cent., and was accepted by the lenders without protest. At the next ensuing term the interest at 4 per cent. was not paid until seven days after the stipulated date, when it was returned by the lenders as being neither timeous nor sufficient. Held (1) that the borrower had failed to make "punctual payment" of the interest; and (2) that the lenders were not barred by their actings from enforcing their strict rights under the bond.

Gatty v MacLaine, 1921 S.C. (H.L.) 1; [1921] 1 A.C. 376; 58 S.L.R. 63; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 51.

TITLE TO HERITAGE. See HERITABLE PROPERTY.

TITLE TO PROSECUTE. See JUSTICIARY.

TITLE TO SUE AND TO DEFEND.

I. TITLE TO SUE—

	COL.
1. Generally, - - - - -	841
2. Interest, - - - - -	846
3. In Particular Cases, - - - - -	851
(1) Adjudication, - - - - -	851
(2) Agent and Principal, - - - - -	851
See AGENT AND PRINCIPAL IV. 2, V. 2 (3), VI. 2.
(3) Aliment, - - - - -	851
See ALIMENT IV. 1.
(4) Assignees, - - - - -	851
See ASSIGNATION V. 1.
(5) Association (Voluntary), - - - - -	851
See ASSOCIATION (VOLUNTARY) V.
(6) Bankruptcy, - - - - -	851
(7) Building Restrictions, - - - - -	852
See BUILDING RESTRICTIONS III.
(8) Burgh, - - - - -	852
(9) Burying Ground, - - - - -	853
(10) Company, - - - - -	854
(11) Contract, - - - - -	856

I. TITLE TO SUE—Continued.

	COL.
(12) Corporation, - - - - -	858
See CORPORATION II. 4.
(13) Crown, - - - - -	858
(14) Education, - - - - -	858
(15) Executor, - - - - -	859
See EXECUTOR III. 4.
(16) Friendly Societies, - - - - -	859
(17) Heraldry, - - - - -	859
See HERALDRY.
(18) Heritable Rights, - - - - -	859
(19) Husband and Wife, - - - - -	862
(20) Insane, Cognition of, - - - - -	863
See INSANITY III.
(21) International Law, - - - - -	863
See INTERNATIONAL LAW XVI.
(22) Judicial Factor, - - - - -	863
See JUDICIAL FACTOR IV. 2 (5).
(23) Landlord and Tenant, - - - - -	863
(24) Law Agent, - - - - -	864
(a) Rights and Liabilities of Parties other than Client,	864
See AGENT AND CLIENT II. 2, III. 1 (3).
(b) Removal from Roll, - - - - -	864
See ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE VI. 3 (2).
(25) Licensing, - - - - -	865
(26) Minor and Pupil, - - - - -	865
See MINOR AND PUPIL V. 1.
(27) Negligence, - - - - -	865
See REPARATION I. 2.
(28) Nuisance, - - - - -	865
See NUISANCE I. 3 (1).
(29) Partnership, - - - - -	865
(30) Personal Representatives, - - - - -	867
See EXECUTOR III. 4.
(31) Public Authorities and Officials, - - - - -	867
(32) Public, Members of, - - - - -	868
(33) Pupils, - - - - -	869
See (26), supra.
(34) Railway, - - - - -	869
See RAILWAY I. 2.
(35) Reduction of Testamentary Deeds—Interest, - - - - -	869
See I. 2, supra.
(36) Reparation, - - - - -	869
See REPARATION I. 2.
(37) Ship, - - - - -	869
(38) Slander, - - - - -	869
See also REPARATION I. 2.
(39) Statutory Bodies, - - - - -	869
(40) Statutory Obligations and Remedies, - - - - -	870
See STATUTE III.
(41) Trade Union, - - - - -	870
See TRADE UNION V.
(42) Trust, - - - - -	870
See TRUST VII. 2.
(43) Miscellaneous, - - - - -	870

II. TITLE TO DEFEND, - - - - - 871

I. TITLE TO SUE.

1. GENERALLY.

(1)

Acquisition of title—Title at date of action.
A, the purchaser of a vessel from B, brought an action of damages in his own name and as assignee of B against C for injuries which had been done to the vessel prior to the date of the purchase. The summons was served on the 28th June, 1893. On the 29th June the seller of the ship assigned to A all claims competent to him against C. Held (1) that at the date of the action A had no right to damages for injury done to the vessel prior to his purchase, and had no title to sue; and (2) that the subsequent assignation did not remedy the defect.

Symington v Campbell, 1894, 21 R. 434; 31 S.L.R. 372; 1 S.L.T. 478.

(2)

—Formal completion after action raised—Amendment—Act of Sederunt, 20th March, 1907, sec. 2 (a) and (c)—C.A.S., B I. 1.

A company of shipowners brought an action against the owners of a dock for payment of a sum of money which the pursuers had paid to the charterers of one of their ships in respect of extra carriage on a cargo of coals which had been incurred through the defenders' harbour master wrongfully refusing to allow the ship to enter the dock and load the coals there. The defenders maintained that the pursuers had no title to sue, in respect that under the charter party they were not bound to pay the sum in question to the charterers. The pursuers thereupon obtained from the charterers an assignation of their claim against the defenders. Held that the pursuers, having a good title at bottom, which they only required to have formally made absolute, were entitled to amend the instance to the effect of suing for themselves and as assignees of the charterers. Opinion that in any event the amendment was competent under the Act of Sederunt, 20th March, 1907, sec. 2 (a) and (c).

The Doughty Shipping Co. v The North British Railway Co., (O.H.) 1909, 1 S.L.T. 267.

(3)

—Assignation—Rescission—Re-assignation before intimation of rescission—Action of reduction brought by first assignee pending action of reduction against him at instance of second assignee—Decree in action by second assignee before date of closing record in action by first assignee.

Westville Shipping Co. v Abram Steamship Co., 1922 S.C. 571; 59 S.L.R. 539; 1922 S.L.T. 452. CONTRACT, No. 484.

[Affirmed, 1923 S.C. (H.L.) 68; [1923] A.C. 773; 60 S.L.R. 625; 1923 S.L.T. 613.]

(4)

—Joint tenancy—Whole real interest.

One of two persons who ex facie of a lease were joint tenants of a farm raised action for compensation for the taking of part of the farm as a feu. The defenders pleaded that the defender was not in titulo to sue. The claimant answered that he had the whole real interest in the farm and lodged pendente processu an assignation in his favour by the other tenant setting forth that fact. Opinions that the claimant had a good title.

Middle Ward District Committee of Lanarkshire County Council v Marshall, 1896, 24 R. 139; 34 S.L.R. 130; 4 S.L.T. 140.

(5)

Deed constituting title not produced—Necessity to prove its tenor.

Where a pursuer was unable to recover deeds of copartnery constituting his title to sue, held that it was necessary for him to bring an action of proving the tenor before the action could proceed.

Shaw v Shaw's Trustees, 1876, 3 R. 813; 13 S.L.R. 526.

(6)

Statutory trust—Ultra vires action—Ratepayer—Private trader—Fiduciary relation.

A body of statutory harbour trustees had power to run ferry boats and levy rates. They sometimes hired one of the boats used for their ferry service for excursions beyond the ferry limits. A firm of shipowners who carried on a business of hiring out excursion steamers brought an action to have the trustees interdicted from so using the ferry steamers on the ground that such use was ultra vires. The shipowners paid harbour rates and, as ratepayers, were entitled to vote at the election of trustees and to be themselves elected. Held (1) that the pursuers had no title to sue as traders; but (2) that they had a title and interest to sue as ratepayers.

Observed (per Lord Dunedin)—“If any persons are in such a relation as to constitute them trustees, or if without being technically trustees they have a fiduciary duty to others, those persons to whom they owe a fiduciary only will have a title to sue to prevent the infringement of that duty.”

D. & J. Nicol v Dundee Harbour Trustees, 1915 S.C. (H.L.) 7; [1915] A.C. 550; 52 S.L.R. 138; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 418.

(7)

—Lord Advocate.

Observations on the right of the Lord Advocate to bring an action in the public interest.

D. & J. Nicol v Dundee Harbour Trustees, 1915 S.C. (H.L.) 7; [1915] A.C. 550; 52 S.L.R. 138; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 418.

(8)

Defective title of principal party to suit—“Consent and concurrence.”

Where the principal party to a suit has an interest or right of his own, but so qualified by or dependent upon some jus tertii or some limitation or condition that he has no title to sue separately, his defect of title may be cured by the “consent and concurrence” of the person by or on whose right his is qualified or dependent. But when the principal party to a suit has no interest or right of his own, his defect of title cannot be cured by the “consent and concurrence” of the person to whom alone the right of action truly belongs.

Hislop v MacRitchie's Trustees, 1881, 8 R. (H.L.) 95; 6 App.Cas. 560; 19 S.L.R. 571.

(9)

—Importation of new party to cure objection to title.

Observed (per Lord Watson) that the provisions of the Court of Session Act, 1868, sec. 29, did not warrant the importation of a new party into a suit for the purpose of obviating an objection to the title to sue of the original pursuer.

Hislop v MacRitchie's Trustees, 1881, 8 R. (H.L.) 95; 6 App.Cas. 560; 19 S.L.R. 571.

[See Morrison v Morrison's Executrix, 1912 S.C. 892; 49 S.L.R. 578; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 384. EXECUTOR, No. 107.]

(10)

Dominus litis.

Where a person had been sisted as dominus litis in an action, and the condescendence negatived his own title to sue, held that he was not entitled to insist in the action alone.

Ferguson, Davidson & Co. v Paterson and Dobbie, 1893, 1 F. 227; 36 S.L.R. 153; 6 S.L.T. 219.

(11)

Summons in name of two pursuers called in name of one only—Restriction of conclusions.

A summons bearing to be at the instance of A and B against C was called in name of B only, and his name alone appeared in the partibus. The summons was laid upon a letter by C, binding him to pay to A and B equally the profit made by him on certain building contracts, and concluded for count and reckoning, and for payment "to the pursuers of £1000." In the condescendence B stated that since the action was raised A had been sequestrated, and that B insisted in the action to the effect of enabling him to recover one-half of the profit, and that to this extent the conclusions were restricted. Held that B had a good title to sue, and to insist in the action.

Shaw v Gibb's Trustees, 1895, 20 R. 718; 30 S.L.R. 634; 1 S.L.T. 28.

(12)

Concurring pursuer—Title to reclaim.

Held that a person who is a party to a cause only to the extent of giving his consent and concurrence thereto has no title to present a reclaiming note against an interlocutor pronounced in the cause.

Martin v Lindsay, 1894, 21 R. 759.

(13)

Title founded on erroneous construction of statute—Reduction—Necessity for defender to satisfy production.

Held that a defender in an action of reduction was not bound to satisfy production when the pursuer's title to sue rested upon an erroneous construction of a statute, although that construction was averred.

Earl of Perth v Lady Willoughby de Eresby's Trustees, 1869, 7 M. 642; 41 J. 413; 6 S.L.R. 335.

(14)

Declarator of construction of statute—Licensing.

The magistrates of a police burgh having intimated that they claimed under the Burgh Police (Scotland) Act, 1892, to be the licensing authority for the sale of excisable liquors within the burgh, a publican holding a licence for premises in the burgh, which had been granted by the county justices, brought an action for declarator that the licensing jurisdiction within the burgh had not been transferred from the county justices to the burgh magistrates, and for interdict against the magistrates acting as the licensing authority. Held that the pursuer had a title to sue.

Tennent v Magistrates of Partick, 1894, 21 R. 735; 31 S.L.R. 619; 1 S.L.T. 594.

(15)

When objection to title should be raised.

A defender in an action of damages for infringement of copyright, having allowed an interlocutor of a Lord Ordinary repelling a plea of no title to sue, "in so far as of a preliminary nature," to become final, held precluded from objecting to the title on the closed record.

Graves & Co. v Logan, 1868, 7 M. 204; 41 J. 126; 6 S.L.R. 164.

(16)

Opening lockfast place—Action by wife of occupier of house.

The wife of a bankrupt brought an action against a person who had been appointed judicial factor on her husband's sequestrated estate under sec. 16 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1856, averring that the defender, while taking an inventory of the effects in the house tenanted by her husband, had wrongfully and without warrant forced open the door of a room which was locked and examined the effects therein, although informed that the effects in the room belonged to the pursuer. Held that the defender had not committed a legal wrong, and that, if he had, the pursuer would have had no title to sue, as the right invaded would have been not the pursuer's but her husband's.

M'Lachlan v Bell, 1895, 23 R. 126; 33 S.L.R. 102; 3 S.L.T. 160.

2. INTEREST.

(17)

General rule.

Observed (per Lord Young)—"It is a general, and just short of a universal rule, that title to sue rests upon interest."

Pyper v Christie, 1878, 6 R. 143; 16 S.L.R. 67.

(18)

Action of proving the tenor of recorded deed.

In an action of proving the tenor of a deed recorded in the register of sasines, held that, notwithstanding such recording, the pursuer had a sufficient interest to entitle him to sue, his object being to obtain a decree equivalent to the original deed, which he might record for the purpose of doing diligence if necessary.

Browne v Orr, 1872, 10 M. 397; 44 J. 225; 9 S.L.R. 232.

(19)

Reduction of settlement—Pursuer benefiting by settlement under reduction and also by prior settlement.

In an action brought for reduction of a trust disposition and settlement on the ground that the granter was at the date of execution of unsound mind, the pursuer set forth as his title to sue that he was one of three trustees nominated and appointed in and a beneficiary under a prior trust disposition and settlement executed by the grantor. The pursuer did not call as defenders the two other trustees under the earlier deed. The defender, a beneficiary under the later deed, objected to the pursuer's title to sue on the grounds (1) that he was not entitled to sue as trustee without the concurrence of the two other trustees, or without calling them as defenders; and (2) that the pursuer had no interest, as the value of his interest under the deed sought to be reduced was as large as under the earlier deed. Held that the pursuer had a title to sue as a beneficiary under what he alleged to be the only valid settlement of the testator. Question, whether he had a title to sue as a trustee.

Duncan v Duncan, 1892, 20 R. 200; 30 S.L.R. 167.

(20)

Title of next of kin to reduce a will to effect of setting up prior will.

In an action for reduction of the last will of a testator, brought by one of his next of kin, it appeared that the effect of the reduction would be to set up a prior will which excluded the next of kin. The pursuer did not maintain that the prior will was invalid, but he produced an agreement signed by the beneficiaries under the prior will binding themselves, in the event of the testator's last will being reduced, to divide the testator's whole estate equally between themselves and his whole next of kin. Held that as the pursuer, standing the prior will, had no interest as a next of kin to reduce the last will, he had no title to sue, and action dismissed.

Swanson v Manson, 1907 S.C. 426; 44 S.L.R. 312; 14 S.L.T. 737.

(21)

Title of heir at law and next of kin to sue reduction of later deed and declarator of subsistence of earlier deed.

Where the heir at law and the next of kin of a person deceased brought an action for reduction of certain testamentary deeds executed by the deceased on the ground of facility and circumvention, and for declarator that the succession of the deceased was to be regulated by a prior testamentary deed under which they were residuary legatees, the pursuers did not produce the prior deed founded on, and the defenders alleged that it had been destroyed animo revocandi. The pursuers then added an averment that they were respectively heir at law and next of kin of the deceased. Held that having the alternative title of heirs ab intestato and disponees under the deed alleged to have been revoked, they had a title to sue a reduction of later deeds granted to their prejudice, and that the validity of these deeds fell to be decided in the first place.

Gilchrist v Morrison, 1891, 18 R. 599; 28 S.L.R. 441.

(22)

Exclusion of interest by marriage contract.

Held that a daughter, whose interest in her mother's estate was excluded at the option of her father by her parents' marriage contract, had no title to pursue an action of reduction of a mutual trust disposition and settlement ex capite lecti.

Wyllie v M'Bride, 1890, 18 R. 218; 28 S.L.R. 174.

(23)

Substitution excluding heir at law.

Substitution in a general disposition held effectual to exclude the heir at law of the original institute from challenging a deed executed by the institute on deathbed.

Park's Curator v Black, 1868, 6 M. (H.L.) 147; 40 J. 642; L.R., 1 H.L. Sc. 392; 5 S.L.R. 726.

(24)

Executrix—No interest in merits—Expenses—Trade union.

A member of a trade union brought an action to interdict the union from applying its funds for political purposes. The pursuer died, and his widow, as his executrix, craved to be sisted as pursuer, in order that she might insist in the action for the purpose of recovering as expenses the sums which he had expended in the litigation. Held (1) that the executrix was entitled to be sisted, under reservation of all questions as to her right to insist in the cause; and (2), after hearing the executrix, that, as she had no interest in the merits, and as there had been no unreasonable conduct on the part of the defenders, she should not be allowed to proceed with the action merely for the purpose of recovering expenses; and action dismissed.

Martin's Executrix v M'Ghee, 1914 S.C. 628; 51 S.L.R. 499; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 365.

(25)

Claimant to baronetcy — Declarator of grandfather's legitimacy.

Held that the pursuer of an action of declarator of the legitimacy of his grandfather, who averred, after amendment, that, if successful, he intended to prosecute his claim to a baronetcy, had set forth a sufficient interest to sue.

Bosville v Lord Macdonald, 1910 S.C. 597; 47 S.L.R. 328; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 141.

(26)

Frustra petis quod mox es restitutus.

A liquidator, representing shareholders who had received their shares of certain dividends, claimed that a director of the concern in liquidation should repay to the credit of the liquidation the amount of the said dividends paid during his directorate as having been paid out of capital. Held that the maxim, frustra petis quod mox es restitutus, applied and that the liquidator had no title or legitimate interest to maintain his claim.

Liquidators of City of Glasgow Bank v Mackinnon, 1882, 9 R. 535; 19 S.L.R. 278.

(27)

Reduction—Illegal bargain—Deed in which pursuer not interested forming part of bargain.

A son sought to reduce (1) a deed of apportionment by his father, alleging that it was founded on an illegal bargain between his father and sisters for the ultimate benefit of a charitable institution, and (2) a deed by which the sisters limited their interest in the father's estate to a liferent, and transferred the fee to trustees for the said institution. Held that he had no title or interest to sue for reduction of the second deed.

Craig v Craig's Trustees, (O.H.) 1904, 12 S.L.T. 136.

Building restrictions.

[See BUILDING RESTRICTIONS III.]

(28)

Servitude—Altius non tollendi—Æmulatione vicini.

Opinion (per Lord President Inglis) that in the case of a servitude altius non tollendi, if the owner of the dominant tenement had no interest to enforce it, the Court would not be disposed to entertain it if sought to be enforced in æmulationem vicini.

Gould v M'Corquodale, 1869, 8 M. 165; 42 J. 72; 7 S.L.R. 108.

(29)

Sale—Title of vendee and sub-vendee to sue reduction of original contract.

An arrangement was made for the sale of a brewery by A to B at the price of £20,500 fixed on the basis of profits for the last two years as shown by the books. The books were examined by an accountant employed by B, and the sale was completed. B sold the brewery to C for £28,500, which was fixed without reference to profits, and A, at B's request, conveyed the brewery to C. It was afterwards discovered that A's books contained false entries largely increasing the apparent profits, which had been made by his clerk without his knowledge. C, in his own name and as B's assignee, and B raised an action against A for reduction of the contract between A and B, and of the conveyance by A to C, C offering restitution in integrum. Held (1) that as C was not privy to the contract between A and B, he had no title to reduce it; (2) that as B had no interest in the subjects after the conveyance by A to C, he had no title to reduce the said contract.

Edinburgh United Breweries v Molleson, 1894, 21 R. (H.L.) 10; [1894] A.C. 96; 31 S.L.R. 922; 1 S.L.T. 602.

(30)

Warrandice—Title of vendee and sub-vendee to enforce obligation to clear title.

A sold a piece of ground with absolute warrandice to B. B sold and disposed it with absolute warrandice to C. C having found that the ground was burdened, called upon B to have it disburdened. B raised an action against A to have it disburdened. A pleaded that B had no title to sue, as he had disposed the subjects and had assigned the obligation of warrandice to C. Held that, apart from his warrandice obligation, A as seller of the subjects was bound to clear the title, and that B had a title as well as an interest to enforce the obligation.

Christie v Cameron, 1898, 25 R. 824; 35 S.L.R. 602.

(31)

Business purchased by shareholders and transferred to company—Title as shareholders to reduce original agreement of sale.

Five individuals purchased a business with a view to transferring it to a limited company which was about to be formed. The company, having been formed, agreed to take over the business from the purchasers. Held that although the purchasers had parted with the business, they as shareholders in the company had an interest to bring an action of reduction of the minute of agreement conveying the business to them.

MacLaren v Mayberry, (O.H.) 1904, 11 S.L.T. 636.

(32)

Statutory public body—School board—Bursary—Action by school board against trustees on an educational trust.

One of the conditions laid down in a scheme, under which trustees administered a bursary fund, was that candidates must have passed the qualifying examination of the Scotch code in one of the public schools of two parishes. The school boards of these parishes brought an action against the trustees for declarator that they had acted illegally in awarding a bursary to a candidate who had not complied with the condition. The pursuers maintained that they had an interest and title to sue, in respect that the condition, if enforced, would have the effect of inducing parents to send their children to the public schools of the parishes, and that, in this way, larger grants might be obtained from the Education Department. Held that this interest was too remote, and that the pursuers had therefore no title to sue. Observed that if their interest had been sufficient the pursuers would have had a title to sue.

School Boards of Dunlop and Stewarton v Patrons of Cunninghame Graham Bursaries Endowment Fund, 1910 S.C. 945; 47 S.L.R. 811; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 95.

(33)

Obligation in restraint of trade—Medical practitioner.

A doctor of medicine agreed with a company, the employers of about 600 workmen in a remote district, to attend the workmen at a fixed salary payable by the company, he being at liberty to practise in the district, but "only during his appointment as medical officer" to the company. The company having terminated the agreement, held that they had a sufficient interest to sue for interdict against the doctor's practising in the district.

Ballachulish Slate Quarries Co. v Grant, 1903, 5 F. 1105; 40 S.L.R. 791; 11 S.L.T. 230.

(34)
Reparation—Insured claim.

A person whose property is injured by fire through the fault of another is not deprived of his title to sue by having his property fully insured.

Port-Glasgow and Newark Sailcloth Co. v Caledonian Railway Co., 1892, 19 R. 608; 29 S.L.R. 577; affirmed, 1893, 20 R. (H.L.) 35; 30 S.L.R. 587.

[See also Delaurier v Wyllie, 1889, 17 R. 167; 27 S.L.R. 148. SHIP, No. 260.]

(35)
Extent of interference with rights—Canal—Riparian owner—Railway siding on bank.

A proprietor of lands bordering on a canal complained of the making by the adjoining owner of a railway siding along the bank. Held that the complainer was not entitled to sue an interdict in general terms against the construction of the siding, not having proved that the siding would necessarily impair his rights in the canal.

Lidgerwood v Lanarkshire and Dumbartonshire Railway Co., (O.H.) 1903, 11 S.L.T. 55.

3. IN PARTICULAR CASES.

(1) ADJUDICATION.

(36)
Residuary legatee—Debtor of testator.

Hinton v Connell's Trustees, 1883, 10 R. 1110; 20 S.L.R. 731. ADJUDICATION, No. 1.

(37)
Reduction and declarator of non-entry—Title of superior to sue reduction of a decree of adjudication of his vassal's right.

Monteith v Ingels, 1869, 7 M. 523; 41 J. 282. SUPERIOR AND VASSAL, No. 79.

(2) AGENT AND PRINCIPAL.

[See AGENT AND PRINCIPAL IV. 2, V. 2 (3), VI. 2.]

(3) ALIMENT.

[See ALIMENT IV. 1.]

(4) ASSIGNEES.

[See ASSIGNATION V. 1.]

(5) ASSOCIATION (VOLUNTARY).

[See ASSOCIATION (VOLUNTARY) V.]

(6) BANKRUPTCY.

Title of bankrupt.

[See BANKRUPTCY IV. 4.]

(38)
Title of trustee—Trustee in foreign bankruptcy.

Obers v Paton's Trustees, 1897, 24 R. 719; 34 S.L.R. 538; 4 S.L.T. 350. INTERNATIONAL LAW, No. 230.

(39)
Challenge of deed of entail.

Howden v Rocheid, 1868, 6 M. 300; 40 J. 166; 5 S.L.R. 210; affirmed, 1869, 7 M. (H.L.) 110; L.R., 1 H.L. Sc. 550; 41 J. 588. BANKRUPTCY, No. 471.

(40)
Reduction of illegal preference — Title of individual creditor — Title of trustee under Bankruptcy Act, 1856, secs. 10 and 11.

Brown & Co. v McCallum, 1890, 18 R. 311; 28 S.L.R. 538. BANKRUPTCY, No. 105.

(41)
Title of individual creditor — Recovery of subject of preference.

Cook v Sinclair & Co., 1896, 23 R. 925; 33 S.L.R. 691; 4 S.L.T. 70. BANKRUPTCY, No. 107.

(42)
Title of purchaser under deed of arrangement.

Smith & Co. v Smyth, 1889, 16 R. 392; 26 S.L.R. 301. BANKRUPTCY, No. 592.

(43)
Trustee under voluntary trust deed.

Fleming's Trustees v McHardy, 1892, 19 R. 542; 29 S.L.R. 483. BANKRUPTCY, No. 121.

(44)
Non-acceding creditor to trust deed for creditors—Stipulation for discharge—Action against trustee for share of estate.

Ogilvie & Son v Taylor, 1887, 14 R. 399; 24 S.L.R. 284. BANKRUPTCY, No. 145.

(45)
Mandatory holding mandate to vote.

Ferguson, Davidson & Co. v Paterson and Dobbie, 1898, 1 F. 227; 36 S.L.R. 153; 6 S.L.T. 219. BANKRUPTCY, No. 414.

(7) BUILDING RESTRICTIONS.

[See BUILDING RESTRICTIONS III.]

(8) BURGH.

(46)
Title of magistrates—Action for payment of burgh customs founded merely on decree in absence against third parties.

Magistrates of Kilmarnock v Mather, 1869, 7 M. 543; 41 J. 290; 6 S.L.R. 355. BURGH, No. 119.

(47)
Magistrates as conservators of river — Statutory obligation on railway company to remove obstruction to navigation "to the satisfaction of the Board of Trade."

North British Railway Co. v Magistrates of Perth, 1885, 13 R. (H.L.) 37; 10 App.Cas. 579; 22 S.L.R. 593. RIVER, LOCH, AND SEA, No. 62.

(48)

Title of ratepayers—Town-clerk's duties.

A ratepayer who was also honorary treasurer of a burgh sought to have it declared that the town-clerk was bound to attend meetings of the town council and keep records of the proceedings thereat. He founded on certain statutes. Held the action was incompetent. Opinion that the pursuer had no interest to sue.

Orr v Alston, (O.H.) 1912, 1 S.L.T. 95.

———To sue magistrates.

[See BURGH I. 4.]

(49)

Dean of guild petition—Petitioner unfeitt.

Cranston & Elliot v Dobson, 1899, 2 F. 271; 37 S.L.R. 202; 7 S.L.T. 263. BURGH, No. 251.

(9) BURYING GROUND.

(50)

Action to protect family burying ground.

Held that the representatives of a family had a sufficient title and interest to raise an action to secure the protection of a family burying ground in a churchyard which had been closed, though they did not reside in the parish.

Turner v Committee for the West Church, Greenock, 1869, 7 M. 538; 41 J. 283; 6 S.L.R. 335.

(51)

"Lairholders" in a private cemetery.

Of thirteen thousand "lairholders" in a private cemetery eleven raised an action against the proprietors of the ground to compel them to divest themselves of the property in favour of trustees, to transfer the management of the cemetery to a committee of the lairholders, and for declarator that the defenders were not entitled to derive profit from the interment fees, with other conclusions regarding the mode of burial, &c. Held (1) that the pursuers as individual lairholders had a sufficient title to sue, but that they could only insist in the conclusions of the action to the extent of vindicating their own alleged rights, and not those of the whole body of lairholders; (2) that the right of the pursuers, both at common law and ex contractu, was not a right of property in the lairs allocated to them, but only a right to use the same in perpetuity for the purpose of sepulture, with a corresponding obligation on the proprietors of the cemetery to dedicate it exclusively to the same purpose; (3) that the proprietors of the ground were entitled to derive a reasonable profit from interment fees; and (4) that in these circumstances the defenders were entitled to absolvitor.

Cunningham v Edmiston, 1871, 9 M. 869; 43 J. 468; 8 S.L.R. 576.

(10) COMPANY.

(52)

Objects of company—Enforcement.

Clyde Steam Packet Co. v Glasgow and South-Western Railway Co., (O.H.) 1897, 4 S.L.T. 327. COMPANY, No. 8.

(53)

Contract by agent for intended company—Action by company.

In an action at the instance of a limited company, the pursuers averred that before the company was registered one of its agents entered into a contract with the defenders for the supply by the latter of certain machinery which, it was alleged, turned out to be defective when supplied. Held that the company had not set forth a title to sue, as no agent could act for it before it came into existence.

Tinnevelly Sugar Refining Co. v Mirrlees, Watson & Yaryan Co., 1894, 21 R. 1009; 31 S.L.R. 823; 2 S.L.T. 149.

(54)

Shareholders—Title to object to reduction of capital.

Tharsis Sulphur & Copper Co. v Hoggan, 1882, 9 R. 507; 19 S.L.R. 379. COMPANY, No. 72.

Hoggan v Tharsis Sulphur and Copper Co., 1882, 9 R. 1191; 19 S.L.R. 375. COMPANY, No. 75.

(55)

———Ultra vires act—Title of shareholder to object.

Dunn v Banknock Coal Co., (O.H.) 1901, 9 S.L.T. 51. COMPANY, No. 185.

(56)

———Ultra vires act — Preference shareholder—Member of rival company.

Smith v Glasgow and South-Western Railway Co., (O.H.) 1897, 4 S.L.T. 327. COMPANY, No. 186.

(57)

———Illegal act of director not ultra vires of company.

Lee v Crawford, 1890, 17 R. 1094; 27 S.L.R. 853. COMPANY, No. 262.

(58)

———Fraud of director — Minority of shareholders.

Hannay v Muir, 1898, 1 F. 306; 36 S.L.R. 228; 6 S.L.T. 251. COMPANY, No. 263.

(59)

———Balance sheet — Under-valuation of assets — Title of individual shareholders to object.

Young v Brownlee & Co., 1911 S.C. 677; 48 S.L.R. 462; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 303. COMPANY, No. 265.

(60)
Alleged improper allotment—Power of company to commence business when in judgment of directors sufficient shares subscribed.

Brown v Stewart, 1898, 1 F. 316; 36 S.L.R. 221; 6 S.L.T. 262. COMPANY, No. 264.

(61)
Title to reduce agreement between company and corporation.

Rixon v Edinburgh Northern Tramways Co., 1890, 18 R. 264; 28 S.L.R. 209; affirmed, 1893, 20 R. (H.L.) 53; [1893] A.C. 636; 30 S.L.R. 944; 1 S.L.T. 111. COMPANY, No. 193.

[See also Smyth v Muir, 1891, 19 R. 81; 29 S.L.R. 94. PROCESS, No. 82.]

(62)
Satisfying production.

Rixon v Edinburgh Northern Tramways Co., 1889, 16 R. 653; 26 S.L.R. 405. COMPANY, No. 194.

(63)
Acceptance by directors of company A of shares in company B in security of advance — Petition by shareholders of company A for removal of company A from list of contributories in liquidation of company B.

Fraser v City of Glasgow Bank, 1879, 6 R. 1259; 16 S.L.R. 744. COMPANY, No. 503.

(64)
Action against vendor — Fraudulent misrepresentation.

Dunnett v Mitchell, 1887, 15 R. 131; 25 S.L.R. 124. FRAUD, No. 133.

(65)
Company in liquidation—Fraudulent representations of directors inducing purchase of shares.

Houldsworth v City of Glasgow Bank, 1880, 7 R. (H.L.) 53; 5 App.Cas. 317; 17 S.L.R. 510. COMPANY, No. 298.

(66)
Trustees of deceased shareholder in company—Liquidation—Contributories but not members of company—Companies' Act, 1862, sec. 76—Ultra vires resolution.

Howling's Trustees v Smith, 1905, 7 F. 390; 42 S.L.R. 321; 12 S.L.T. 628. COMPANY, No. 381.

(67)
Executor of deceased shareholder for undivided profits—Shares disposed of by shareholder's will.

A wife bequeathed certain shares in a company to her husband. She predeceased her husband. Her executor raised an action against the company to recover the undivided profits which had accrued during her life, alleging that they had been fraudulently concealed by the company. Held that the undivided profits formed an integral part of the shares, and that the executor, having no right to the shares, had no title to sue.

Carron Co. v Hunter, 1868, 6 M. (H.L.) 106; L.R., 1 H.L. Sc. 362; 40 J. 546; 5 S.L.R. 695.

(68)
Debenture holder — Action against promoter — False and fraudulent misrepresentation.

Dunnett v Mitchell, 1885, 12 R. 400; 22 S.L.R. 298. COMPANY, No. 18.

Petition for supervision order.

[See COMPANY VI. 3 (2).]

Petition for winding up by Court.

[See COMPANY VI. 4 (2) (3) (4).]

(69)
Liquidator—Action in name of liquidator.
Munro v Hutchison, (O.H.) 1896, 3 S.L.T. 268. COMPANY, No. 498.

(70)
Title to sue director for sums unwarrantably divided as dividend.

Liquidators of City of Glasgow Bank v Mackinnon, 1882, 9 R. 535; 19 S.L.R. 278. COMPANY, No. 319.

(71)
Directors carrying on liquidation under arrangement.

London and North-West American Mortgage Co. v Steuart, (O.H.) 1900, 8 S.L.T. 98. COMPANY, No. 309.

(11) CONTRACT.

(72)
Privity of contract—Re-sale for enhanced price—Title of sub-vendee to sue reduction of original contract.

Edinburgh United Breweries v Molleson, 1894, 21 R. (H.L.) 10; [1894] A.C. 96; 31 S.L.R. 922; 1 S.L.T. 602. JUS QUÆSITUM TERTIO, No. 6.

(73)
Personal injury—Contract with A to erect gangway—Injury to B through insufficiency of gangway—Title of B to sue.

Campbell v A. & D. Morrison, 1891, 19 R. 282; 29 S.L.R. 251. NEGLIGENCE, No. 333.

(74)
Jus quæsitum* — Breach of contract — Reparation.

Blumer & Co. v Scott & Sons, 1874, 1 R. 379; 11 S.L.R. 192. JUS QUÆSITUM TERTIO, No. 1.

(75)
Public official—Resolution of public authority regarding salary.

Burr v Commissioners of Bo'ness, 1896, 24 R. 148; 34 S.L.R. 91; 4 S.L.T. 149. JUS QUÆSITUM TERTIO, No. 26.

(76)
 ————Promise of subscription to provisional committee promoting charitable society—Title of society.

Morton's Trustees v Aged Christian Friend Society of Scotland, 1899, 2 F. 82; 37 S.L.R. 67; 7 S.L.T. 220. JUS QUÆSITUM TERTIO, No. 8.

(77)
 ————Subscription to charity — Promise made to minister of chapel of ease—Title of committee of management to sue.

Cambuslang West Church Committee v Bryce, 1897, 25 R. 322; 35 S.L.R. 245; 5 S.L.T. 240. CONTRACT, No. 57.

(78)
 ————Personal or transmissible — Contract for sale of commodity of specified description not manufactured by seller—Assignment of contract—Tender of goods by assignee.

Cole v C. H. Handasyde & Co., 1910 S.C. 68; 47 S.L.R. 59; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 558. PERSONAL OR TRANSMISSIBLE, No. 5.

(79)
 ————Delectus personæ — Contract for advertisement.

Grierson, Oldham & Co. v Forbes, Maxwell & Co., 1895, 22 R. 812; 32 S.L.R. 601; 3 S.L.T. 65. PERSONAL OR TRANSMISSIBLE, No. 1.

(80)
 ————Delectus personæ — Erection and maintenance of patent machine.

International Fibre Syndicate v Dawson, 1901, 3 F. (H.L.) 32; 38 S.L.R. 578. PERSONAL OR TRANSMISSIBLE, No. 2.

(81)
 ————Sale of goodwill of medical practice — Assignment of rights under contract of sale.

Rodger v Herbertson, 1909 S.C. 256; 46 S.L.R. 208; 16 S.L.T. 646. PERSONAL OR TRANSMISSIBLE, No. 4.

(82)
 ————Imprestible obligation—Specific implement or damages.

Moore v Paterson, 1881, 9 R. 337; 19 S.L.R. 236. CONTRACT, No. 414.

(83)
 ————Joint parties to agreement — Action for implement.

One of several parties having a joint right under an agreement is not entitled to sue for implement without the concurrence of the others.

Detrick v Laing's Sewing Machine Co., 1885, 12 R. 416; 22 S.L.R. 312.

(84)
 ————Contract note—Ex facie party—Contract not signed.

Ranschoff & Wissler v Burrell, 1897, 25 R. 284; 35 S.L.R. 229. ARBITRATION, No. 50.

(85)
Double insurance—Relief.

Sickness and Accident Assurance Association v General Accident Assurance Corporation, 1892, 19 R. 977; 29 S.L.R. 836. INSURANCE, No. 127.

(86)
Auctioneer — Conditions of sale — Price of goods sold.

Macdonald & Fraser v Henderson, 1882, 10 R. 95; 20 S.L.R. 55. SALE OF MOVABLES, No. 232.

(12) CORPORATION.

[See CORPORATION II. 4.]

(13) CROWN.

(87)
Claim to peerage—Title to reduce service.
 Alexander v Officers of State, 1868, 6 M. (H.L.) 54; L.R., 1 H.L. Sc. 276; 40 J. 470; 5 S.L.R. 475. SERVICE OF HEIRS, No. 14.

(88)
Burgh property.
 Conn v Magistrates of Renfrew, 1906, 8 F. 905; 43 S.L.R. 664; 14 S.L.T. 106. BURGH, No. 52.
 Grahame v Magistrates of Kirkcaldy, 1882, 9 R. (H.L.) 91; 7 App.Cas. 547; 19 S.L.R. 893. BURGH, No. 53.

(89)
Public interest—Lord Advocate.
Observations on the right of the Lord Advocate to bring an action in the public interest.

D. & J. Nicol v Dundee Harbour Trustees, 1915 S.C. (H.L.) 7; [1915] A.C. 550; 52 S.L.R. 138; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 418.

(14) EDUCATION.

(90)
Right to compel provision of education — Pupil child—Parent—Education (Scotland) Act, 1872, sec. 1—Education (Scotland) Act, 1901, sec. 1.

Sinclair v Moulin School Board, 1908 S.C. 772; 45 S.L.R. 570; 15 S.L.T. 1032. EDUCATION, No. 48.

(91)
School board—Election—Reduction — Title of ratepayers to sue.

Duncan v Crighton, 1892, 19 R. 594; 29 S.L.R. 448. EDUCATION, No. 16.

Title of school board to sue and defend.
 [See EDUCATION I. 1 (5).]

(92)
Educational Endowments Act. 1882—Public bodies—"Directly affected."

Question as to the title of public bodies claiming to be bodies corporate "directly affected by" a scheme adjusted under the provisions of the Educational Endowments Act, 1882, and as such entitled to present a case to the Court under the 30th section of that Act.

Forrest's Trustees v Commissioners on Educational Endowments, 1884, 11 R. 719; 21 S.L.R. 503.

(93)

Right to bursary.

Martin v MacDougall's Trustees, 1885, 13 R. 274; 23 S.L.R. 190.
M'Donald v M'Coll, 1890, 17 R. 951; 27 S.L.R. 761. EDUCATION, Nos. 143 and 144.

(15) EXECUTOR.

[See EXECUTOR III. 4.]

(16) FRIENDLY SOCIETIES.

(94)

Branch order—Title to sue of friendly society where the society was itself a court or branch of a larger order or friendly society, and had been suspended by the executive council of the parent society—Friendly Societies Act, 1855, secs. 18 and 19.

Simpson, &c. v Ramsay, &c., 1874, 2 R. 129; 12 S.L.R. 92. FRIENDLY SOCIETY, No. 25.

(95)

Member of friendly society—Interdict against payment of money already paid.

In an action in which a member of a friendly society sought to interdict the board of management from paying the expenses of unsuccessful litigation out of the funds, held that the expenses having been paid before the action was raised the pursuer had no interest or title to sue.

Edgar v City of Glasgow Friendly Society, 1914, 2 S.L.T. 408.

(17) HERALDRY.

[See HERALDRY.]

(18) HERITABLE RIGHTS.

(96)

Feudal title—Reduction—Want of assignation of writs to connect with conveyance on which pursuer's notarial instrument proceeded.

Smith v Wallace, 1869, 8 M. 204; 42 J. 82; 7 S.L.R. 122. HERITABLE PROPERTY, No. 184.

(97)

Superior and vassal—Mails and duties—Ffeu-duty.

Prudential Assurance Co. v Cheyne, 1884, 11 R. 871; 21 S.L.R. 606. SUPERIOR AND VASSAL, No. 73.

Nelson's Trustees v Tod, 1896, 23 R. 1000; 33 S.L.R. 727; 4 S.L.T. 80. SUPERIOR AND VASSAL, No. 74.

(98)

Poinding of ground—Arrears of feu-duty—Superior divested of superiority.

Scottish Heritages Co. v North British Property Investment Co., 1885, 12 R. 550; 22 S.L.R. 361. POINDING OF THE GROUND, No. 6.

(99)

Casualty.

Steuart v Watt, (O.H.) 1899, 7 S.L.T. 253. SUPERIOR AND VASSAL, No. 109.

Baillies of Kirkintilloch v Marshall, 1882, 19 S.L.R. 801. SUPERIOR AND VASSAL, No. 110.

(100)

Action by superior for statutory compensation—Claim constituted when vassal was proprietor—Irritancy.

Caledonian Railway Co. v Watt, 1875, 2 R. 917; 12 S.L.R. 592. SUPERIOR AND VASSAL, No. 46.

Building restrictions.

[See BUILDING RESTRICTIONS III.]

(101)

Proprietor—Radical right—Reparation—Injury to property—Evidence that a disposition ex facie absolute was really in security.

M'Bride v Caledonian Railway Co., 1894, 21 R. 620; 31 S.L.R. 497; 1 S.L.T. 559. RIGHT IN SECURITY, No. 163.

(102)

Joint owners—Action at instance of one of several pro indiviso proprietors—Foreshore.

Laird v Reid, 1871, 9 M. 699; 43 J. 336; 8 S.L.R. 422. RIVER, LOCH, AND SEA, No. 58.

(103)

Removing—Action by two of several joint proprietors.

Grozier v Downie, 1871, 9 M. 826; 43 J. 456; 8 S.L.R. 563. LANDLORD AND TENANT, No. 433.

(104)

Pro indiviso proprietor—Mails and duties.

Schaw v Black, 1889, 16 R. 336; 26 S.L.R. 220. MAILS AND DUTIES, No. 3.

(105)

Salmon fishings—Abstraction of water from stream—Passage of salmon impeded—Action at instance of owners of salmon fishings above point of abstraction—Pursuers not riparian owners—Title to sue sustained.

Earl of Kintore v Pirie & Sons, 1902, 5 F. 818; 40 S.L.R. 210; 10 S.L.T. 485. [Affirmed 1906, 8 F. (H.L.) 16; [1906] A.C. 478; 43 S.L.R. 838; 14 S.L.T. 215. FISHINGS, No. 75.]

(106)

Public navigable and tidal river—Pollution—Title as riparian proprietor and as owner of fishings.

Moncreiffe v Perth Police Commissioners, 1886, 13 R. 921. RIVER, LOCH, AND SEA, No. 37.

(107)

Liferenter—Liferenter allenary, with consent of the fiar whose title was not made up.

A mother, who had been infeft in a property in terms of a destination in favour of herself for her liferent use allenary, and of her child nasciturus in fee, raised, along with her son, who had made up no title in his own name, an action of declarator to fix the boundary of the property. Held (per Lord Gifford, Ordinary) that the pursuers had a good title to sue.

Otto v Weir, 1871, 9 M. 660; 43 J. 574; 8 S.L.R. 411.

(108)

Heir—Apparency—Reduction of adjudgers' titles.

Dingwall v Burns, 1871, 9 M. 582; 43 J. 354; 8 S.L.R. 385. ADJUDICATION, No. 5.

(109)

General service—Declarator that ex facie absolute disposition was in security only.

M'Andrew v Reid, 1868, 6 M. 1063; 40 J. 600; 5 S.L.R. 653. SERVICE OF HEIRS, No. 10.

(110)

Substitution excluding heir at law—Challenge of ancestor's death-bed deed.

Park's Curator v Black, 1868, 6 M. (H.L.) 147; 40 J. 642; L.R., 1 H.L. Sc. 392; 5 S.L.R. 726, No. 23, supra.

(111)

Claimant to estates — Attainder — Subsequent Crown grant to alleged nearest heir-male of attainted person — Title completed in favour of "heirs and assignees" — Reduction of deeds following upon Crown grant by claimant who had served as nearest heir-male of the elder brother of the attainted heir.

Held no title to sue.

Earl of Perth v Lady Willoughby de Eresby's Trustees, 1871, 9 M. (H.L.) 83; L.R., 2 H.L. Sc. 139; 43 J. 394.

(112)

Action of exhibition ad deliberandum.

Where an action of exhibition of a Crown charter of resignation of certain lands was brought to enable the pursuer to consider whether he should enter as heir to his great-grandfather, in whom it was clear from his own statement that none of the lands embraced in the charter had ever vested, held that he had not set forth a title to require exhibition of the deeds under which these lands were held.

Fulton v Earl of Eglinton, 1878, 5 R. 752; 15 S.L.R. 433.

(113)

Heir of entail—Reduction of feu contract between prior heir and his law agent.

Cleland v Morrison, 1878, 6 R. 156; 16 S.L.R. 90. ENTAIL, No. 124.

(114)

Crofter—Cessio—Title of trustee.

Title of the trustee in the cessio of a crofter to sue an ejection and removing of the crofter where no disposition omnium bonorum had been granted.

Mackenzie v Munro, 1894, 22 R. 45; 32 S.L.R. 43; 2 S.L.T. 290.

(115)

March fence — Nature of crofter's right — Crofters' Holdings Act, 1886 — Act 1661, c. 41.

MacDonald v Dalgleish, 1894, 21 R. 900; 31 S.L.R. 751; 2 S.L.T. 67. SMALL HOLDINGS, No. 26.

(116)

Possessory question—Farm road.

Galloway v Cowden, 1885, 12 R. 578; 22 S.L.R. 371. POSSESSORY ACTION, No. 8.

(117)

Action by proprietors in respect of ground reclaimed from sea — Pursuers having no title to foreshore.

Irvine v Robertson, 1873, 11 M. 298; 45 J. 209; 10 S.L.R. 188. POSSESSORY ACTION, No. 9.

(19) HUSBAND AND WIFE.

Title of married woman to sue.

[See HUSBAND AND WIFE III. 6.]

(118)

Separation and aliment—Proof of pursuer's marriage with third party.

In 1897 A, a woman who had in 1875 gone through a regular ceremony of marriage with B, brought an action of separation and aliment against him. B pleaded in defence, inter alia, that he was not the pursuer's husband, in respect that she was the wife of C. It was proved that, in 1868, the pursuer had entered into a regular marriage with C, who was then twenty-six years of age, that C deserted her in 1871, and that she had not heard of him since. There was nothing in the evidence, apart from the lapse of time, to show that C was dead at the date of the action. The Court dismissed the action, holding that the pursuer had not instructed a title to sue, in respect that the presumption was that C was alive, and consequently that the pursuer was not the defender's wife.

Sharp v Sharp, 1898, 25 R. 1132; 35 S.L.R. 825.

(119)

Husband suing in his own name for recovery of deceased wife's estate — Action against debtor of estate—Jus relicti.

Circumstances in which held that a husband, who was not his wife's executor, had no title to sue as an individual for recovery in name of *ius relict*i of a part of his wife's estate from a debtor to the estate.

Adams v Johnson, (O.H.) 1920, 2 S.L.T. 328.

(120)

Husband after divorce—Wife's estate previously vested.

Ferguson v Jack's Executors, 1877, 4 R. 393; 14 S.L.R. 277. HUSBAND AND WIFE, No. 335.

(121)

Husband against wife—Slander.

Young v Young, 1903, 5 F. 330; 40 S.L.R. 301; 10 S.L.T. 570. SLANDER, No. 6.

(20) INSANE, COGNITION OF.

[See INSANITY III.]

(21) INTERNATIONAL LAW.

[See INTERNATIONAL LAW XVI.]

(22) JUDICIAL FACTOR.

[See JUDICIAL FACTOR IV. 2 (5).]

(23) LANDLORD AND TENANT.

(122)

Pro indiviso proprietor of estate—Action for rent.

Schaw v Black, 1889, 16 R. 336; 26 S.L.R. 220. LANDLORD AND TENANT, No. 300.

(123)

Creditor holding decree of mails and duties—Right to sequester for rent.

Robertson's Trustees v Gardner, 1899, 16 R. 705; 26 S.L.R. 547. MAILS AND DUTIES, No. 15.

(124)

Water—Pollution—Agricultural tenant.

Fleming v Gemmill, 1908 S.C. 340; 45 S.L.R. 281; 15 S.L.T. 691. RIVER, LOCH, AND SEA, No. 47.

(125)

—Pollution—Title of upper heritor.

Hope v Governors of Heriot's Hospital, 1878, 15 S.L.R. 400. RIVER, LOCH, AND SEA, No. 46.

(126)

—Question between incoming and outgoing tenant.

Mitchell v Dyker, 1912, 1 S.L.T. 461. LANDLORD AND TENANT, No. 565.

(127)

Title of tenant of mill to sue petitory action involving question of heritable right.

Tenant of a mill held to have a title to sue a petitory action in the Sheriff Court for abstracted multures, though it involved a question as to the extent of the thirl.

Stobbs v Caven, 1873, 11 M. 530; 45 J. 340; 10 S.L.R. 347.

(128)

Tenant under superior, of minerals—Declarator against vassals, raising question as to superior's right of property in the minerals.

Baird & Co. v Feuars of Kilsyth, 1878, 6 R. 116; 16 S.L.R. 53. MINES AND MINERALS, No. 19.

(129)

Granter of lease divested by ex facie absolute disposition—Title of tenant to sue on lease.

An ex facie absolute disposition of heritable subjects was qualified by a back bond declaring that it had been granted in security merely. The disposition was recorded, but not the back bond. The granter of the disposition continued to occupy the subjects, and subsequently granted a lease of part of the property to his son. The father and his disponent having been sequestered, the trustee of the latter challenged the son's right as lessee. In an action brought by the son for declarator that the lease was valid, the trustee of the disponent pleaded that the pursuer had no title to sue, because at the date of the lease the father had been absolutely divested by the disposition, the unrecorded back bond not being effectual against the trustee. Held that the lease, whether it was valid or not, afforded a sufficient title to sue.

Abbott v Mitchell, 1869, 8 M. 268; 42 J. 121; 7 S.L.R. 160.

(130)

Joint tenants—Action at instance of one—Assignment pendente processu.

Middle Ward District Committee of Lanarkshire County Council v Marshall, 1896, 24 R. 139; 34 S.L.R. 130; 4 S.L.T. 140, No. 4, supra.

(131)

Possessory question—Tenant under 999 years' lease.

McDonald v Dempster, 1871, 10 M. 94; 9 S.L.R. 83. POSSESSORY ACTION, No. 7.

(132)

Entail—Obligation by heir in possession to repay improvement expenditure undertaken by tenant of entailed subjects—Action by tenant's executors against succeeding heir in possession for repayment.

Shepherd's Executors v Mackenzie, 1913 S.C. 144; 50 S.L.R. 105; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 406. ENTAIL, No. 320.

Action of removing.

[See LANDLORD AND TENANT IV. 5 (1).]

(24) LAW AGENT.

(a) Rights and Liabilities of Parties other than Client.

[See AGENT AND CLIENT II. 2, III. 1 (3).]

(b) Removal from Roll.

[See ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE VI. 3 (2).]

(25) LICENSING.

(133)

Declaration as to who were licensing authorities—Title of publican.

Tennent v Magistrates of Partick, 1894, 21 R. 735; 31 S.L.R. 619; 1 S.L.T. 594.
LICENSING LAWS, No. 2.

(134)

Reduction of public-house certificate—Owners and occupiers of property in neighbourhood.

Bootland v M'Farlane, 1900, 2 F. 1014; 37 S.L.R. 785; 8 S.L.T. 63. LICENSING LAWS, No. 50.

Black v Tennent, 1899, 1 F. 423; 36 S.L.R. 301; 6 S.L.T. 298. LICENSING LAWS, No. 51.

(135)

Burgh prosecutor and members of burgh licensing court—Transfer of licence—Reduction of decision of licensing appeal court.

Held that (a) the burgh prosecutor who had successfully objected to the transfer of a licence in the burgh licensing court, and (b) certain members of that court had a title to sue for a reduction of a decision of the licensing appeal court reversing that of the burgh licensing court.

Sharp v Morrison, (O.H.) 1922 S.L.T. 272.

(26) MINOR AND PUPIL.

[See MINOR AND PUPIL V. 1.]

(27) NEGLIGENCE.

[See REPARATION I. 2.]

(28) NUISANCE.

[See NUISANCE I. 3 (1).]

(29) PARTNERSHIP.

(136)

Action at instance of whole partners—Partnership not disclosed in instance.

Plotzker v Lucas, 1907 S.C. 315; 44 S.L.R. 245; 14 S.L.T. 678. PARTNERSHIP, No. 150.

(137)

Right of individual partner to bring action in name of firm.

Beveridge v Beveridge, 1872, 10 M. (H.L.) 1; L.R., 2 H.L. Sc. 183; 44 J. 171; 9 S.L.R. 419. PARTNERSHIP, No. 47.

(138)

Disclaimer by other partner.

Kinnes v Adam & Sons, 1882, 9 R. 698; 19 S.L.R. 478. PARTNERSHIP, No. 48.

(139)

Instance of partner as individual—Patent affecting business of firm—Patents and Designs Act, 1907, sec. 94 (3).

In an action for revocation of a patent relating to concrete, brought with the concurrence of the Lord Advocate, the pursuer averred that he was a civil engineer, and was a member of a firm doing a large business in reinforced concrete, and that "the pursuer's business" was in danger of being affected by the enforcement of the defender's patent. The action was brought in the name of the pursuer as an individual and not of his firm. Held that the pursuer had a title and interest to sue in his own name.
v 28

Melville v Cummings, 1912 S.C. 1185; 29 R.P.C. 665; 49 S.L.R. 879; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 130.

(140)

Minority of joint adventurers.

Pyper v Christie, 1878, 6 R. 143; 16 S.L.R. 67. PARTNERSHIP, No. 172.

(141)

Dissolution—Subsequent death of partner before winding-up completed—Title of surviving partner to sue in his own name.

Nicoll v Reid, 1877, 5 R. 137; 15 S.L.R. 89. PARTNERSHIP, No. 121.

(142)

Reconstitution — Employment of agent by old firm—Title of new firm to sue agent.

Brims & Mackay v Pattullo, 1907 S.C. 1106; 44 S.L.R. 819; 15 S.L.T. 198. PARTNERSHIP, No. 151.

(143)

Sole surviving partner—Title to sue removing where partnership subjects held by creditor under disposition and back letter.

In a summons of removing in the Sheriff Court, the pursuer set forth as his title to sue a feu contract in favour of a firm, of which he was the sole surviving partner, at the same time admitting that a creditor of the firm had been infeft upon an ex facie absolute conveyance, qualified by a back-letter obliging the creditor to resell within five years. The defender set forth no title to possess. Held that the title set forth by the pursuer was not sufficient.

Opinion (per Lord Justice-Clerk Moncreiff and Lord Neaves) that if the pursuer had distinctly set forth that the substantial right of property was in him as sole surviving partner of the firm it would have been sufficient, notwithstanding the feudal divestiture.

Traill v Traill, 1873, 1 R. 61; 11 S.L.R. 8.

(144)

Trustees of deceased partner—Option in a contract of copartnership to trustees of a deceased partner to become partners in his stead—Title of one of several executors to enforce the right.

Neilson v Mossend Iron Co., 1885, 12 R. 499; 22 S.L.R. 265.

[Reversed on another point, 1886, 13 R. (H.L.) 50; 11 App.Cas. 298; 23 S.L.R. 867. PARTNERSHIP, No. 33.]

(145)
Trustee of sequestrated firm—Suing solvent partner for debts due to firm's creditors.

Laing Brothers & Co.'s Trustees v Low, 1896, 23 R. 1105; 33 S.L.R. 802; 4 S.L.T. 109. PARTNERSHIP, No. 129.

(146)
Action to enforce sale—Firm converted into limited company between sale and action.

A firm sold a steam crane on condition that it should be fitted up on board a ship and in the meantime stored by the seller until the buyer should ask delivery. The firm, after the sale but before delivery, having been converted into a limited company, the buyer refused to take delivery of the crane, and in an action for payment of the price, at the instance of the firm and the partners thereof and the limited company, pleaded no title to sue. The Lord Ordinary repelled the plea.

Brown v Carron Co., (O.H.) 1898, 6 S.L.T. 90.

(30) PERSONAL REPRESENTATIVES.

[See EXECUTOR III. 4.]

(31) PUBLIC AUTHORITIES AND OFFICIALS.

(147)

Lord Advocate.

Observations on the right of the Lord Advocate to bring an action in the public interest.

D. & J. Nicol v Dundee Harbour Trustees, 1915 S.C. (H.L.) 7; [1915] A.C. 550; 52 S.L.R. 138; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 418.

(148)
Burgh—Sanitary authority—Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920, sec. 2 (2) and (6).

Glasgow Corporation v Mickel, 1922 S.C. 228; 59 S.L.R. 153; 1922 S.L.T. 160. LANDLORD AND TENANT, No. 307.

(149)
County council—Action to decide in which of the Courts common law offences should be tried.

County Council of Dumfriesshire v Phyn, 1895, 22 R. 538; 32 S.L.R. 438; 2 S.L.T. 580. LOCAL GOVERNMENT, No. 11.

(150)
—Actio popularis—Right of way—Case sisted to allow of county council taking steps to vindicate right of way—Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894, sec. 42.

Alston v Ross, 1895, 23 R. 273; 33 S.L.R. 205; 3 S.L.T. 213. ROADS AND STREETS, No. 27.

(151)
Parish council—Medical officer of poor-house—Inspector of poor—Dismissal—Title of parish council to sue.

Kilwinning Parish Council v Board of Management of Cunninghame Combination Poorhouse, 1909 S.C. 829; 46 S.L.R. 370; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 205. POOR, No. 12.

(152)
Fishery board—Title to sue at common law.

Tay District Fishery Board v Robertson, 1887, 15 R. 40; 25 S.L.R. 54. FISHINGS, No. 64.

(153)
Road trustees—Dangers to roads—Barbed wire fences.

Elgin County Road Trustees v Innes, 1886, 14 R. 48; 24 S.L.R. 35. ROADS AND STREETS, No. 81.

(154)
Inspector of poor on behalf of combined parishes.

Chisholm v Marshall, 1874, 1 R. 388; 11 S.L.R. 207. POOR, No. 10.

(32) PUBLIC, MEMBERS OF.

(155)
Actio popularis—Market.

In an action by certain vegetable produce merchants who had been in the habit of using a fruit and vegetable market in a burgh, brought against the corporation for declarator that they had a right to the peaceable use of the market-place during market hours, and for interdict against their exclusion, held that the pursuers, as members of the public, had a good title to sue.

Magistrates of Edinburgh v Blackie, 1886, 13 R. (H.L.) 78; 11 App.Cas. 665; 23 S.L.R. 501.

(156)
—Petition for removal of obstructions from road.

Three labouring men residing near an alleged public road, who had been requested by a committee appointed at a meeting of labouring men to present a petition for the removal of obstructions from the alleged public road, they to be guaranteed against loss, held entitled to insist in the petition without finding caution for expenses.

Potter v Hamilton, 1870, 8 M. 1064; 42 J. 625; 7 S.L.R. 703.

[Cf. Jenkins v Robertson, 1869, 7 M. 739; 41 J. 326; 6 S.L.R. 465. EXPENSES, No. 501.]

Right of way.

[See ROADS AND STREETS I. 4 (1).]

(157)
Ratepayers—School board—Election—Reduction.

Duncan v Crichton, 1892, 19 R. 594; 29 S.L.R. 443. EDUCATION, No. 16.

—Right to object to illegal assessment.

[See RATES AND ASSESSMENTS I. 1.]

—Right to sue burgh magistrates.
 [See (8), supra.]

(158)
Statutory trust—Harbour—Ratepayer—Rival trader.

D. & J. Nicol v Dundee Harbour Trustees, 1915 S.C. (H.L.) 7; [1915] A.C. 550; 52 S.L.R. 138; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 418, No. 6, supra.

(33) PUPILS.

[See (26), supra.]

(34) RAILWAY.

[See RAILWAY I. 2.]

(35) REDUCTION OF TESTAMENTARY DEEDS—INTEREST.

[See I. 2, supra.]

(36) REPARATION.

[See REPARATION I. 2.]

(37) SHIP.

(159)
Title of one of several joint owners of a ship to sue ship's husband.

Manners v Raeburn & Verel, 1884, 11 R. 899; 21 S.L.R. 723. SHIP, No. 28.

(160)
Purchaser of ship suing party contracting with seller to supply engines.

Blumer & Co. v Scott & Sons, 1874, 1 R. 379; 11 S.L.R. 192. JUS QUÆSITUM TERTIO, No. 1.

(38) SLANDER.

[See also REPARATION I. 2.]

(161)
Individual members of class—Slander of a class.

Browne v Thomson & Co., 1912 S.C. 359; 49 S.L.R. 285; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 123. SLANDER, No. 63.

(162)
Police constable—Bye-law prohibiting policeman from suing without consent of chief constable.

A v B, 1907 S.C. 1154; 44 S.L.R. 870; 15 S.L.T. 327. POLICE FORCE, No. 29.

(163)
Madhouses Act, 1815.

Mackintosh v Weir, 1875, 2 R. 877. [Obsolete under Lunatics Act, 1857.]

(39) STATUTORY BODIES.

(164)
Statutory trust—Harbour—Title of private trader and ratepayer.

D. & J. Nicol v Dundee Harbour Trustees, 1915 S.C. (H.L.) 7; [1915] A.C. 550; 52 S.L.R. 138; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 418, No. 6, supra.

(165)
Statutory board—Title of board to common law remedy.

Tay District Fishery Board v Robertson, 1887, 15 R. 40; 25 S.L.R. 54. FISHINGS, No. 64.

(40) STATUTORY OBLIGATIONS AND REMEDIES.

[See STATUTE III.]

(41) TRADE UNION.

[See TRADE UNION V.]

(42) TRUST.

[See TRUST VII. 2.]

(43) MISCELLANEOUS.

(166)
Alien—Letter of naturalisation—Heritage.

Held (by Lord Ormisdale, Ordinary) that an objection taken to an alien's title to sue for implement of an alleged contract for the sale of heritage was obviated by a letter of naturalisation obtained by him after the action was raised.

Goldston v Young, 1868, 7 M. 188; 41 J. 122; 6 S.L.R. 158.

(167)
Debtor's debtor—Cessio—Trustee refusing to sue.

A creditor of a person under cessio raised an action against a person alleged to be a debtor to the estate, concluding alternatively for payment to the pursuer or to the trustee in the cessio, who, it was averred, had refused to move in the matter. Held that the pursuer had no title to sue.

Henderson v Robb, 1889, 16 R. 341; 26 S.L.R. 222.

(168)
Multiplepoining—Claim in multiplepoining.

A creditor has no title to claim in a multiplepoining funds to which his debtor has right, except by way of a riding claim upon a claim lodged by his debtor.

Gill's Trustees v Patrick, 1889, 16 R. 403; 26 S.L.R. 292.

(169)
Donee—Title to sue for recovery of gift sent in error to third party.

The pursuer in an action for payment of a sum of money averred that the money was a charitable gift intended for her which had been sent in error to the defender, and which he refused to part with, though requested to do so by the donor. Held that the pursuer had relevantly averred a title to sue for recovery of the gift.

Costin v Hume, 1914 S.C. 134; 51 S.L.R. 112; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 374.

(170)

Patent—Revocation—Patent affecting business of firm—Instance of partner as individual—Patents and Designs Act, 1907, sec. 94 (3).

Melville v Cummings, 1912 S.C. 1185; 29 R.P.C. 665; 49 S.L.R. 879; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 130, No. 139, supra.

(171)

Unregistered dentist—Dentists Act, 1878.

The estates of A, who practised dentistry, but was not registered under the Dentists Act, having been sequestrated, he brought an action for interdict against the trustee in his sequestration selling, removing, or otherwise interfering with a number of instruments which belonged to the pursuer. The pursuer on record designed himself as "dental surgeon," but in his practice he had not in any way held himself out as registered under the Dentists Act. The trustee in defence maintained, inter alia, that in any view, the pursuer, being an unregistered dental practitioner who had designed himself as a "dental surgeon," was not entitled to the protection of the Court. The Court allowed a proof.

Macpherson v Macpherson's Trustee, 1905, 8 F. 191; 43 S.L.R. 102; 13 S.L.T. 523.

II. TITLE TO DEFEND.

(172)

Right of way—Public company for the preservation of rights of way.

In an action of declarator by a proprietor to have it found that his lands were free from alleged servitudes of right of way, a limited liability company, formed, inter alia, for the preservation, defence, and acquisition of public rights of way in Scotland, applied, before defences were due, to be sisted as defenders. The Court sisted them, and allowed defences for them to be received, holding that a decree against them would be res judicata in a question with the public.

Macfie v Scottish Rights of Way Society, 1884, 11 R. 1094; 21 S.L.R. 742.

(173)

—Parish council—Action to determine position of admitted right of way—Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894, secs. 29 and 42.

A proprietor of lands brought an action of declarator for the purpose of determining the position of the boundary between his lands and an admitted right of way. He called as defenders the district committee of the county council, and the county council itself for any interest it might have; but neither the district committee nor the county council lodged defences. The landward committee of the parish council, however, sisted themselves as defenders, and lodged defences. Held that the landward committee of the parish council had no title to defend, in respect that neither parish councils nor their landward committees had authority to litigate with regard to rights of way.

Hope v Landward Committee of Parish Council of Inveresk, 1906, 8 F. 896; 43 S.L.R. 679; 14 S.L.T. 161.

(174)

Pro indiviso proprietor—Bond and disposition with assignation of rents—Defence to action of mails and duties.

One of several pro indiviso proprietors of subjects let as grass parks borrowed a sum of money, and in security thereof granted a bond and disposition over his share of the estate. The bond contained an assignation to the rents. The bondholder raised an action of mails and duties against the tenants for payment of his debtor's share of the rents, calling also as defenders his debtor and the other pro indiviso proprietors. The debtor alone defended the action, and, while admitting the debt, maintained that the pursuer had no title to sue. The Court repelled the defences, holding that the debtor had neither interest nor title to object to effect being given to his own assignation.

Schaw v Black, 1889, 16 R. 336; 26 S.L.R. 220.

(175)

Riparian proprietor—Interdict against execution of works.

In an action against the Clyde navigation trustees at the instance of a riparian proprietor, the defenders were, by judgment of the House of Lords, ordained under their Acts to lengthen certain piers in the river. In a note of suspension and interdict, presented by certain shipowners against the Clyde trustees, to have the execution of the works stopped until the sanction of the Board of Trade had been obtained—which it was then, for the first time, averred was required by statute—held that the pursuer in the original action was, on his own motion, entitled to be sisted as a respondent, on the ground that he had a material interest in the suspension.

Glasgow Shipowners' Association, &c. v Clyde Navigation Trustees, 1885, 12 R. 695; 22 S.L.R. 374.

(176)

Salmon fishings—Crown grant—Possession.

A proprietor holding a Crown grant of salmon fishings does not require to show possession of the salmon fishings to entitle him to defend an action brought by another person claiming an exclusive right to salmon fishing in the same water.

Maxwell v Lamont, 1903, 6 F. 245; 41 S.L.R. 202; 11 S.L.T. 531.

(177)

Heritable creditor — Poining of the ground.

Held that a heritable creditor has a title to defend an action of poining of the ground.

Scottish Heritages Co. v North British Property Investment Co., 1885, 12 R. 550; 22 S.L.R. 361.

(178)

Action for reduction of agreement.

A heritable bondholder has no title to insist on the performance of obligations in a contract relating to the security subjects made by the debtor with a neighbouring proprietor at a date later than that of his bond. Held, accordingly, that the bondholder had no title to defend an action raised by the neighbouring proprietor for reduction of the contract.

Heron v Martin, 1893, 20 R. 1001; 30 S.L.R. 733; 1 S.L.T. 104.

(179)

Heritable office—Title to dispute claim to office—Heir-male—Service.

The Earl of Lauderdale raised an action for declarator that he was entitled to the office of Hereditary Standard Bearer of Scotland. He averred that by the Act 1600, c. 44, the office was confirmed to "Sir James Scrymgeour and his heirs-male," and that the pursuer's predecessors had subsequently acquired right to the office. He called as defender Henry Scrymgeour Wedderburn, who denied the pursuer's right to the office, and, in support of his title to defend the action, averred that he was "heir-male of the Sir James Scrymgeour mentioned in the Act of 1600." Held that the defender had averred a sufficient title to defend the action and to dispute the pursuer's claim, and that it was not necessary for him ante omnia to prove by service that he was the person entitled to the office in the event of the pursuer's claim proving invalid.

Earl of Lauderdale v Scrymgeour Wedderburn, 1908 S.C. 1237; 45 S.L.R. 949; 16 S.L.T. 354; reversed on another point, 1910 S.C. (H.L.) 35; [1910] A.C. 342; 47 S.L.R. 532; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 347.

(180)

Petition for service by heir of entail—Disposance—Declarator of invalidity of entail.

Held that an illegitimate daughter who was the dispositive of her father, the institute of entail of certain lands, and who had expedite a notarial instrument setting forth her father's infetment and conveyance in her favour, was not entitled to oppose a petition for service by the heir under the deed of entail, until her right to do so was established by a declarator of the invalidity of the entail, on the ground that the only warrant for her notarial instrument was her father's infetment as institute of tailzie.

Mackenzie v Catton, 1870, 8 M. 457; 42 J. 202; 7 S.L.R. 250.

(181)

Title of third party to oppose interdict where his interests were affected.

Circumstances in which the Court allowed a third party, who averred that his interests were affected, to lodge answers opposing the granting of an interdict.

Gas Power and By-Products Co. v Power Gas Corporation, 1911 S.C. 27; 48 S.L.R. 38; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 241.

(182)

Patent—Claim to be sisted as defender as having the real interest.

In a suspension and interdict against infringement of a patent no appearance was made for the respondents, but a minute was lodged for a third party holding a similar patent, stating that the machine against which the interdict was really directed belonged to him, and had been, by arrangement, worked by the respondents for the purpose of exhibition to the trade, and craving to be sisted as respondent in the action. The Court refused to sist the minuter, and appointed the minute to be withdrawn from the proceedings.

Laing's Sewing Machine Co. v Norrie & Sons, 1877, 5 R. 29; 15 S.L.R. 22.

(183)

Burgh magistrates—Foresore—Title of magistrates to resist declarator of property of foresore.

Scott v Magistrates of Dundee—Keiller v Magistrates of Dundee, 1886, 14 R. 191; 24 S.L.R. 120. RIVER, LOCH, AND SEA, No. 103.

(184)

Competency of indweller in burgh pleading burgh title—Possessory action.

W, who was a pro indiviso owner along with the burgh of Inverness of salmon fishings in the Ness, raised an action against certain indwellers in the burgh to interdict them from fishing on certain days on which, as he averred, he had, by agreement between him and his co-proprietor the burgh, the exclusive right of fishing. The defenders averred that the pursuer had no such exclusive right of fishing, but that the burgh right, which they as inhabitants were entitled to exercise, was a right to fish on every day in such a manner as not to interfere with the pursuer's pro indiviso rights. The action was intimated to the burgh, but no defences were lodged by them. The defenders did not aver that the burgh right of fishing was dedicated to the public, but maintained that it was exercised by the public fishing in the burgh waters. Held that the defence was incompetent, in respect that the defenders had no title to raise the question of the extent of the pursuer's pro indiviso rights, that being a question to be determined by agreement or by litigation between the pro indiviso proprietors, and between them alone.

Warrand v Watson, 1905, 8 F. 253; 43 S.L.R. 252; 13 S.L.T. 727.

(185)

Dean of guild warrant—Title of neighbouring proprietor to object.

Maguire v Smith's Trustees, 1912 S.C. 410; 49 S.L.R. 592; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 212. BURGH, No. 162.

Summerlee Iron Co. v Lindsay, 1907 S.C. 1161; 44 S.L.R. 854; 15 S.L.T. 306. BURGH, No. 161.

Scott's Trustees v Shaw, 1892, 19 R. 895; 29 S.L.R. 767. BURGH, No. 191.
 Lawrie v Jackson, 1891, 18 R. 1154; 28 S.L.R. 866. BURGH, No. 252.
 Pitman v Burnett's Trustees, 1882, 9 R. 444; 19 S.L.R. 411. BURGH, No. 186.

(186)

School board and inhabitants—Statutory irritancy—Failure of trust purposes—School Sites Act, 1841.

In 1858, by disposition bearing to be granted under the authority of the School Sites Act, 1841, H, a fee-simple proprietor, conveyed to certain persons as trustees four acres of land "to be applied as a site for a school for the district of . . . for children of the labouring, manufacturing, and other poorer classes . . . and for a residence for the teacher or teachers, and for no other purposes whatever." A school was erected. In 1903 the trustees closed the school, and intimated that they were no longer able to maintain it. The heir of H brought an action against them, concluding for declarator that the site had reverted to him under the provisions of the School Sites Act. The trustees did not defend the action, but (1) the local school board, and (2) certain residents in the locality, parents of children of the class for which the school was intended, were allowed to lodge defences, and they maintained that the school should be conveyed to the school board. Opinions that the school board had no title to intervene in the action. Opinions that the individual residents had a title to intervene, but no interest to oppose the decree, in respect that their only interest in the matter was to secure free education for their children, and that such education was provided by statute. Opinion (per Lord Young) that they had no title to intervene. Houldsworth v School Board of Cambusnethan, 1904, 7 F. 291; 42 S.L.R. 237; 12 S.L.T. 563.

(187)

Collector of poor rates—Company—Winding up—Poor Law (Scotland) Act, 1845, sec. 88.

In a note by the liquidators of a company for authority, inter alia, to pay a preferable claim for poor rates due by the company, answers were lodged by a collector of poor rates, who maintained that the liquidators should be ordained to pay the claim for poor rates preferably to the liquidators' remuneration and their law expenses. The liquidators stated that their accounts showed a balance in their hands more than sufficient to pay in full all the preferable claims, after payment of the liquidators' remuneration and law expenses, and that the respondent had been informed of this before he lodged answers. Held that, in respect the liquidators had admitted the claim for poor rates to a preferential ranking and tendered payment thereof in full, there was no proper question presented to the Court for adjudication on the answers, and note remitted to the Lord Ordinary to proceed.

Liquidators of Scottish Drug Depot v Fraser, 1905, 7 F. 646; 42 S.L.R. 550; 13 S.L.T. 46.

(188)

Adjudication of debt—Plea that debt extinguished—Statute 1621, c. 6.

Macleod's Trustees v Murray, 1891, 18 R. 830; 28 S.L.R. 657. ADJUDICATION, No. 11.

TOLLS. See RAILWAY.

TOWAGE. See SHIP.

TOWN CLERK. See BURGH; MUNUS PUBLICUM.

TOWN COUNCIL. See BURGH.

TOWN PLANNING. See PUBLIC HEALTH.

TRADE DISPUTES. See TRADE UNION.

TRADE INCORPORATIONS. See CORPORATION.

TRADE MARK AND TRADE NAME.

For Questions as to the Copyright of Designs, see COPYRIGHT II.

I. TRADE MARK—	COL.
1. Right to Trade Mark—Register of Trade Marks, - - -	877
2. What is Trade Mark, - - - - -	879
3. Infringement, - - - - -	879
II. TRADE NAME, - - - - -	880
III. REMEDY AND DEFENCES, - - - - -	890
IV. OFFENCES UNDER THE MERCHANDISE MARKS ACTS, - - -	896
See JUSTICIARY V. 37.

STATUTES.

- Act 1883—Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks Acts, 1883—46 & 47 Vict. c. 57.
 Act 1885—Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks (Amendment) Act, 1885—48 & 49 Vict. c. 63.
 Act 1887—Merchandise Marks Act, 1887—50 & 51 Vict. c. 28.
 Act 1888—Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks Act, 1888—51 & 52 Vict. c. 50.
 Act 1905—Trade Marks Act, 1895—5 Edw. VII. c. 15.
 Act 1907—Patents and Designs Act, 1907—7 Edw. VII. c. 29, as amended by the Patents and Designs Act, 1919—9 & 10 Geo. V. c. 80.
 Act 1908—Patents and Designs Act, 1908—8 Edw. VII. c. 4.

I. TRADE MARK.

1. RIGHT TO TRADE MARK—REGISTER OF TRADE MARKS.

(1)

Petition for rectification of register of trade marks—Jurisdiction—Act 1883.

Held (by Lord Kincairney, Ordinary) that he had jurisdiction to entertain a petition for rectification of the register of trade marks by a person aggrieved.

Herbert v Cowie Brothers & Co., 1897, 24 R. 361; 14 R.P.C. 436; 34 S.L.R. 280; 4 S.L.T. 243.

(2)

Jurisdiction—Declarator—Act 1883, secs. 90, 111, and 117.

An action was raised by Dewar, a Scottish trader, against Dewar & Sons, a Scottish company, concluding for declarator (1) that the defenders' trade mark, "Dewar's Whisky," had been entered in the register of trade marks without sufficient cause, and should be expunged; (2) that the alleged trade mark was incapable of registration, and that the entry in the register should be expunged; and (3) that the defenders had no exclusive right to use the words registered as a trade mark. The defenders pleaded "no jurisdiction." Held that the action was not an application under sec. 90 of the Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks Act, 1883, for rectification of the register, and that the Court had jurisdiction to entertain it. Opinion reserved as to whether the Court had jurisdiction to entertain an application under sec. 90.

Dewar v John Dewar & Sons, 1899, 2 F. 249; 17 R.P.C. 341; 37 S.L.R. 188; 7 S.L.T. 263.

(3)

Competency of rectification after five years—Act 1883, secs. 76 and 90.

Held (by Lord Kincairney, Ordinary) that a person aggrieved by an entry in the register of trade marks is not excluded by the lapse of five years from the date of the entry from presenting a petition for rectification of the register.

Herbert v Cowie Brothers & Co., 1897, 24 R. 361; 14 R.P.C. 436; 34 S.L.R. 280; 4 S.L.T. 243.

(4)

Boord & Son, who had been for five years the registered proprietors of a trade mark, raised an action for infringement against Thom & Cameron. Thom & Cameron defended the action, and raised a counter action against Boord & Son, concluding, inter alia, for declarator that the trade mark was incapable of registration, and should be expunged from the register, in respect that it was common property before its registration by Boord & Son. Held that the lapse of five years was no bar to the removal of the entry, and that the question of Boord & Son's right to be on the register had been competently raised.

Boord & Son v Thom & Cameron, 1907 S.C. 1326; 24 R.P.C. 697; 44 S.L.R. 939; 15 S.L.T. 341.

(5)

Removal of trade mark.

Circumstances where held that a trade mark relating to whisky should be expunged from the register in respect that it had not been in use prior to 1875.

John Dewar & Sons v Dewar, (O.H.) 1900, 17 R.P.C. 341; 7 S.L.T. 461.

2. WHAT IS TRADE MARK.

(6)

Invented word — Descriptive name — “Granolithic”—Act 1883, sec. 64.

In 1880, Stuart, a manufacturer of artificial stone, registered a device bearing the words “Stuart’s granolithic” as a trade mark for artificial pavement made by him out of cement and crushed granite. This material, compounded in various proportions, had been long known to the trade, and was not protected by patent, but the name had now, for the first time, been invented by Stuart. In 1884 he registered the word “granolithic” as his trade mark for the pavement under the Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks Act of 1883, which for the first time allowed a word to be registered as a trade mark. In a petition for interdict to prevent certain persons from using the word “granolithic” in connection with the manufacture and sale of artificial stone pavements, he complained that these persons had offered to supply pavements under that name, and had issued circulars and price lists in which that name was used to describe the pavements offered for sale. Defendants assailed—Lord Justice-Clerk Moncreiff holding that there had been no infringement, in respect that the name was a descriptive name, and had not been shown to have been used by the defenders for any other reason than that it was a descriptive name; Lords Young and Craighill holding that the name was not such as could be registered under the Act, in respect it was not a distinctive word, and had been shown by the evidence in the case to have been in common use between 1880 and 1884; and Lords Young and Rutherford Clark holding that, assuming the word to be a protected trade mark, the use complained of was not an infringement.

Stuart & Co. v Scottish Val de Travers Paving Co., 1885, 13 R. 1; 23 S.L.R. 11.

3. INFRINGEMENT.

(7)

Resemblance—Risk of native purchaser in foreign market being misled — Interdict in general terms.

A firm who exported biscuits for sale in Burmah and elsewhere abroad, and whose registered trade mark was an architectural drawing showing the front elevation of Glasgow town hall, brought an action to have a merchant interdicted “from in any way using in connection with the sale of biscuits” the pursuers’ trade mark, or any mark substantially the same. It was proved that the defender exported biscuits for sale in Burmah, under a label which contained a picture, drawn in perspective, showing the front and one of the sides of Glasgow town hall. It was admitted that a purchaser at home was not likely to mistake the one design for the other, but there was evidence, however, that the similarity was such as was calculated to mislead native purchasers in the Burmese market. It was not proved that any one either at home or abroad had in fact been misled. The Court refused the interdict craved.

Cowie Brothers & Co. v Herbert, 1897, 24 R. 353; 14 R.P.C. 436; 34 S.L.R. 280; 4 S.L.T. 243.

(8)

—Effect of long association of the complainers’ goods with a certain device.

A firm of spirit merchants, who had a registered trade mark consisting of a cat standing on a barrel, proved, in an action at their instance for infringement of this mark, that their goods had been so long associated with the mark that they had come to be known as the “Cat and Barrel” brand. Held that, in considering whether certain labels amounted to infringement of the complainers’ trade mark, the effect of this long association must be taken into account; and that labels which showed a cat and a barrel placed differently from those on the complainers’ trade mark, and which did not bear a close resemblance to it, amounted to a practical infringement of the complainers’ trade mark.

Boord & Son v Thom & Cameron, 1907 S.C. 1326; 24 R.P.C. 697; 44 S.L.R. 939; 15 S.L.T. 341.

(9)

Descriptive names—Use of word as description—“Granolithic”—Artificial stone pavement—Act 1883, sec. 64.

Stuart & Co. v Scottish Val de Travers Paving Co., 1885, 13 R. 1; 23 S.L.R. 11, No. 6, supra.

II. TRADE NAME.

(10)

Nature of right—Misrepresentation.

Observed (per Lord Skerrington)—“It is trite law that, apart from statute, there can be no right of exclusive property in a name, either a name under which a trader carries on his business or a name which he chooses to apply to his goods. The remedy which the law gives to a person who has used a particular name in trade is that he is entitled to prevent others from using the same name in such a way as is likely to mislead the public into thinking that the business or the goods so described is or are the business or the goods of the pursuer.”

Williamson v Meikle, 1909 S.C. 1272; 26 R.P.C. 775; 46 S.L.R. 915; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 169.

[See also Charles P. Kinnell & Co. v A. Ballantyne & Sons, 1910 S.C. 246; 27 R.P.C. 185; 47 S.L.R. 227; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 55, No. 15, infra.

(11)

—Misrepresentation—Fraud.

Observed (per Lord McLaren)—“In all such cases the question is whether the respondent, by use of a name which has been employed to designate a particular commercial business or place of business, thereby represents that he is in right of that business or establishment to the injury of the true proprietor or trader. . . . The absence of fraudulent intention might be a good answer to an action of damages, but it will not entitle the party who has done the wrong to persist in using the trade name after it has been brought home to him that the use of the name is injurious."

Great North of Scotland Railway Co. v Mann, 1892, 19 R. 1035; 29 S.L.R. 848.

(12)

Descriptive name—Descriptive name or fancy name—"Bile Beans."

In 1899 the Bile Bean Manufacturing Co. of Leeds began to sell pills of an oviform shape in the United Kingdom under the name of "Bile Beans for Biliousness." In America, since 1887, the word "bean" had been applied to pills of an oviform shape, and appeared in American drug catalogues, but until the Bile Bean Manufacturing Co. began to make and sell their pills the word "bean" had never been used in the United Kingdom to denote pills. In an action by the Bile Bean Manufacturing Co. to have Davidson, another trader, interdicted from selling as "Bile Beans" pills not of the complainers' manufacture, opinions (per Lord Justice-Clerk Macdonald, Lord Kyllachy, Lord Stormonth-Darling, and Lord Ardwall, Ordinary) that the complainers were not entitled to the exclusive use of the name "Bile Beans," in respect that it was a descriptive name, and not a fancy name of the complainers' invention.

Bile Bean Manufacturing Co. v Davidson, 1906, 8 F. 1181; 23 R.P.C. 725; 43 S.L.R. 827; 14 S.L.T. 294.

(13)

—Natural product—Generic name not capable of appropriation as trade name.

In an action for interdict to prevent the defenders using the words "Water of Ayr Stone" to describe stones other than those from the pursuer's quarry, it was proved that the same kind of stone was to be found at various places in the same district, and that the name Water of Ayr Stone had never been used as a trade name in commerce exclusively to denote stone from the pursuer's quarry, but was the generic name of that particular kind of stone. Held that the pursuer was not entitled to the exclusive use of the name.

Montgomerie v Donald & Co., 1884, 11 R. 506; 21 S.L.R. 338.

(14)

—"Cellular" clothing—Misrepresentation.

The Cellular Clothing Co., which manufactured cloth of a particular texture, which they sold under the name of "cellular," raised an action for interdict to prevent another trader using the word "cellular" to describe cloth not manufactured by the pursuers. It appeared in a proof that the word "cellular" appropriately described the cloth sold by the defenders, and that the term "cellular" was used in the trade in two senses—(a) in its primary sense as denoting fabrics of a particular texture, of which there were several kinds in the market, including the pursuers', and (b) as a trade name for the cloth sold by the pursuers. Held that the word "cellular" being an ordinary English word, the onus lay upon the pursuers of proving that the word had been so universally recognised by the trade and the public as denoting the pursuers' goods that its application to other goods involved misrepresentation, and that the pursuers had failed to discharge that onus. Observed that if the use of the word had involved misrepresentation, the pursuers would have been entitled to interdict, although there had been no fraud in its use.

Cellular Clothing Co. v Maxton & Murray, 1899, 1 F. (H.L.) 29; [1899] A.C. 326; 16 R.P.C. 397; 36 S.L.R. 605; 7 S.L.T. 15.

(15)

—"Horse Shoe" boilers.

A firm of boilermakers, who had for many years sold boilers under the name "Horse Shoe" boilers, brought an action against another firm to restrain them from selling, under the name "Horse Shoe," boilers not manufactured by the pursuers. In a proof it appeared (1) that when the pursuers first applied the name "Horse Shoe" to their boilers, their boilers were protected by a patent (although the patent had nothing to do with the section of the boilers being of horse shoe shape); (2) that all the boilers sold by them under the name "Horse Shoe" were not of horse shoe shape, some of them being cylindrical and some U-shaped; (3) that although other firms manufactured boilers of horse shoe shape, they did not sell them as "Horse Shoe" boilers, but sold them under other names. In the circumstances of the case the Court held that the pursuers had proved that the name "Horse Shoe" had come in the trade to be identified with their boilers; and interdicted the defenders from using the words "Horse Shoe" as descriptive of or in connection with boilers (not of the pursuers' manufacture) sold or offered for sale by the defenders without clearly distinguishing such boilers from the boilers of the pursuers.

Charles P. Kinnell & Co. v A. Ballantyne & Sons, 1910 S.C. 246; 27 R.P.C. 185; 47 S.L.R. 227; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 55.

(16)

Local name.

Coal raised from the Lochgelly collieries had for many years been known as "Lochgelly coal," and was the only coal so known in the market, although there was a seam known as the "Lochgelly splint seam," which was not confined to the Lochgelly collieries, but extended under other estates as well. The Lumphinnans Iron Co., who were lessees of the minerals in the adjoining estate of Lumphinnans, under which the Lochgelly splint seam extended, having begun to advertise and sell coal wrought by them as "Lochgelly splint coal," the lessees of the Lochgelly collieries presented a note of suspension and interdict against their use of the name "Lochgelly" as applied to coal. Interdict granted against the respondents using the name "Lochgelly" to designate any coal wrought by them, excepting coal wrought from their part of the Lochgelly splint seam, and then only under the designation "Lumphinnans splint coal, Lochgelly seam."

Lochgelly Iron and Coal Co. v Lumphinnans Iron Co., 1879, 6 R. 482; 16 S.L.R. 268.

(17)

—Consisting of name of a place yielding a natural product used in a manufacture—Colourable modification.

D and H, two firms of firebrick manufacturers, were lessees of the whole fireclay on the farm of Glenboig, and the works of both were situated on that farm. Each had a separate trade mark, registered under the Trade Marks Registration Act, 1875, which was stamped on each brick made by them, that of H being "Glenboig," while D's was "Star Works, Glenboig," "J. D.," and a star. Y & Sons, another firm of firebrick makers, were lessees of a fireclay field called Heathfield, about two miles from Glenboig, and manufactured firebricks at works there. In 1874, Y & Sons sank a pit into a seam of clay, identical in character with the clay worked on Glenboig, and proceeded to advertise this fact, and in 1882 they commenced stamping their bricks "Young's, Glenboig." D and H thereupon applied for interdict against Y & Sons using this stamp, and against their issuing advertisements as makers of bricks of Glenboig clay. On a reclaiming note, the Court held (1) that Y & Sons, in making use of the word "Glenboig" on their bricks, intended their customers to believe that the bricks so stamped were manufactured at Glenboig, and that the distinction attempted by adding "Young's" was merely colourable; and (2) that they had in so acting infringed the trade marks of the complainers. Interdict was granted accordingly against stamping the words complained of, but, in deference to the opinion of the Court, interdict against the advertisements was not insisted upon.

Dunnachie v Young & Sons, 1883, 10 R. 874; 20 S.L.R. 588.

(18)

Trade name attached to premises—Exclusive right—Name—Misrepresentation—"Sun Foundry, Glasgow."

In 1857 the firm of George Smith & Co. began business as ironfounders in premises at Port-Dundas, Glasgow, of which they were tenants. They gave the name "Sun Foundry" to their premises. In 1871 they removed to Kennedy Street, where they built a foundry on their own property and transferred the name to it. In 1887 G. B. Millar acquired the whole concern, premises, goodwill, and trade name included. He shortly afterwards transferred to a new firm the business, including goodwill, and the right to use the firm name, but retained the premises, including machinery and patterns, which he let on lease to the new firm. In 1894 the new firm removed from the premises to a new foundry at Clippens, twelve miles distant, but continued to use the name "Sun Foundry, Glasgow," on their circulars and otherwise as the designation of the new foundry. Cowan, who had bought the old foundry in Kennedy Street, and intended to carry on the business there as an ironfounder, then presented a note of suspension and interdict, to prevent George Smith & Co. using the designation "Sun Foundry, Glasgow," on the ground that, as owner of the premises, he had right to the name by which they had long been known, and that the respondents' use of it would lead the public to believe that they were carrying on their work at the complainer's premises, to the injury of his business. Held that the complainer was entitled to interdict.

Cowan v Millar, 1895, 22 R. 833; 32 S.L.R. 619; 3 S.L.T. 66.

(19)

—Castle Brewery.

A firm of brewers sought to interdict another firm of brewers from using the name "Castle Brewery," by which the complainers' brewery was commonly known. Held that there was no proof that the respondents' beer had been mistaken for the complainers', or that the complainers' trade had been interfered with, and no ground for apprehending that the public would be misled or the complainers injured by what the respondents had done, and interdict refused.

Cooper & M'Leod v G. & J. MacLachlan, (O.H.) 1901, 18 R.P.C. 380; 9 S.L.T. 41.

(20)

—Hotel name—Misrepresentation.

A railway company purchased for use as a hotel certain premises to which the original proprietor had sixteen years before given the name "Palace Hotel," and by which name it had ever since been known to the public. Mann, who had under lease successfully managed the hotel as tenant for thirteen of these years, removed to another hotel in close proximity, and advertised his new hotel as the "Palace Hotel," and "Mann's Palace Hotel." In a suspension and interdict by the railway company against Mann it was proved that his use of either name led to many mistakes injurious to the complainers. The Court granted interdict against Mann's using either name, holding (1) that his use of the name "Palace Hotel" amounted to a representation injurious to the complainers' interests; and (2) that it had been proved that the prefix of his own name was not an addition sufficient to distinguish it from the complainers' hotel.

Great North of Scotland Railway Co. v Mann, 1892, 19 R. 1035; 29 S.L.R. 848.

(21)

Descriptive name—Addition to name.

Held that the proprietor of a hotel near a railway station, known as the "Station Hotel," was not entitled to object to the proprietor of a neighbouring hotel adopting the designation "The Royal Station Hotel," in respect that the term "Station Hotel" was a descriptive designation applicable to both, and the word "Royal" a sufficiently distinctive variation.

Charleson v Campbell, 1876, 4 R. 149; 14 S.L.R. 104.

(22)

Hotel sign—"Golden Lion."

In January, 1896, the proprietors of the Golden Lion Hotel, Stirling, raised an action against Lennox, the tenant of that hotel, and proprietor and occupant of the Station Hotel, Stirling, to interdict him "from using in any way upon or in connection with the Station Hotel a gilt figure or trade sign of a lion, or any painted or printed copy or facsimile thereof which has been used in connection with and recognised as the trade sign of the Golden Lion Hotel, Stirling." Held that, having regard to the fact that the words "Station Hotel" were conspicuous on that hotel, the use of a gilt lion on the roof implied no representation that the business of the Golden Lion Hotel had been transferred to it, and did not tend to mislead the public, and that as the pursuer did not aver that any members of the public had in fact been misled, he was not entitled to prove that such was the fact.

Crawford's Trustees v Lennox, 1896, 23 R. 747; 33 S.L.R. 573; 4 S.L.T. 18.

(23)

Maker's name—Identified with goods.

The manufacturer of a sewing machine of a certain construction, which was not patented, had been in use to sell it under his own name for a series of years, and the name had thus obtained an exclusive meaning in the trade as signifying a machine of his manufacture. Held that the name had become the property of the manufacturer as a trade mark, and that no one else was entitled to use it.

Singer Manufacturing Co. v Kimball & Morton, 1873, 11 M. 267; 45 J. 201; 10 S.L.R. 173.

(24)

Identified with goods—Rival trader with same initials.

A corset maker whose corsets were marked with the letters C B—the initials of his name—raised an action of interdict against a rival trader who sold corsets made by Connell Brothers & Co. which were stamped C B & Co. A proof showed that C B corsets had come to be known in the trade as corsets made by the pursuer and nobody else, and that the defenders had, by printing the letters C B in large type and the letters & Co. in very small type, so marked their corsets as to be likely to mislead purchasers into taking them for the pursuer's corsets. The Court granted interdict against the defenders selling corsets not made by the pursuer marked in such a manner as to be calculated to mislead purchasers into the belief that these corsets were C B corsets made by the pursuer.

Bayer v Baird, 1898, 25 R. 1142; 15 R.P.C. 615; 35 S.L.R. 913; 6 S.L.T. 98.

(25)

Circumstances where held that a firm of whisky merchants had not the right to the exclusive use of a certain name as applied to whisky.

John Dewar & Sons v Dewar, (O.H.) 1900, 17 R.P.C. 341; 7 S.L.T. 462.

(26)

Sale of bottled beer—Sale in bottles embossed with name of complainer.

Woolley & Son, a firm of beer bottlers, sought to have Morrison, another beer bottler, interdicted from selling beer in bottles embossed with the name "Woolley & Son." The complainers averred that the public purchasing bottles so embossed would understand that the beer had been bottled by the complainers, whereas it was in fact bottled by the respondent. Held, after a proof, that interdict fell to be refused.

Woolley & Son v Morrison, 1904, 6 F. 451; 21 R.P.C. 349; 41 S.L.R. 344; 11 S.L.T. 717.

(27)

Dunlop tyres.

In 1904 two brothers, Robert and John Fisher Dunlop, who had been since 1898 in partnership in a cycle and motor repairing business in Kilmarnock under the name of R. & J. F. Dunlop, transferred the motor branch of their business to the Dunlop Motor Co., a company which had been incorporated under the Companies Acts, with a capital of £500, held by the two Dunlops and some of their friends. By the memorandum of association the Dunlop Motor Co. had power, inter alia, to deal in and make motor cars and motoring "accessories." In 1905 the Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Co., a company registered in England in 1896, who were the makers of a well-known tyre for cycles and motors called the "Dunlop" tyre, the patent for which had recently expired, and who also manufactured cycling and motoring "accessories," presented a note of suspension and interdict against the Dunlop Motor Co., to have the respondents interdicted from carrying on their business under any name containing the name "Dunlop." The Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Co., like the Dunlop Motor Co., had power to make motor cars, but neither company had ever in fact made any motor cars. Held that the respondents had not adopted the name Dunlop Motor Co. for the purpose of passing off their goods as the goods of the complainers, and that the name Dunlop Motor Co. was not calculated to deceive the public into purchasing the goods of the respondents in the belief that such goods were goods of the complainers' manufacture; and interdict refused.

Dunlop Pneumatic Tyre Co. v Dunlop Motor Co., 1907 S.C. (H.L.) 15; [1907] A.C. 430; 24 R.P.C. 572; 44 S.L.R. 977; 15 S.L.T. 362.

(28)

Firm name—Use of previous employer's name on labels and window blinds.

A person, who had been in the employment of Boswell, a maker and retailer of portmanteaus, and had acted as cashier, and also as head of the sale department, while her master was absent from illness, left Boswell, and set up a retail shop of the same kind on the opposite side of the street. On the blinds of the shop she had printed her own name, adding, "from Boswell"; these blinds she pulled up so as to exhibit none of the inscription, except the word "Boswell." On labels, bill-heads, &c., used in her business, she styled herself "late manager to Boswell." In an action for interdict, brought by Boswell's representative to prevent her from using the name "Boswell" in the ways described, the Lord Ordinary, after a proof, interdicted her, holding (1) that the blinds had been used with the intention of misleading the public; and (2) that the defender's position in Boswell's shop had never been truly that of manager. After a hearing in the Inner House, the defender undertook to abstain from designing herself as manager to Boswell in her labels and bill-heads. The Court thereupon found it unnecessary to determine the rights of parties on that matter, and affirmed the Lord Ordinary's judgment, in so far as it dealt with the matter of the window and the blinds.

Boswell v Mathie, 1884, 11 R. 1072; 21 S.L.R. 727.

(29)

Personal name—Right of partner who had purchased goodwill of business to exclusive use of firm name.

Smith, one of the partners of Smith & M'Bride, bought the business and goodwill, and carried the business on for three years in his own name. At the end of that time his former partner, M'Bride, and a person also named Smith, who had entered into partnership with him, began to trade in the same business in the same town, under the name Smith & M'Bride. Held that Smith was entitled to interdict against their trading under that name.

Smith v M'Bride and Smith, 1888, 16 R. 36; 26 S.L.R. 22.

(30)

Personal name in conjunction with use of labels and trade marks.

The firm of J H & Co., the sole partner of which was J H, having been sequestrated, the trustee sold the goodwill of the business, with the right to use the firm's name, to another firm. In a note of suspension and interdict at the instance of the purchasers against J H, who had been discharged, and was proposing to carry on business for himself, to interdict him from using the firm-name and the trade marks, labels, &c., of his former firm of J H & Co., which he had announced his intention of doing, held that the use of the labels and trade marks of his former firm by the respondent in conjunction with his own name would be a colourable imitation of these labels and trade marks tending to mislead the public, and that the complainers were entitled to interdict against the respondent using the firm-name, or the trade marks, or labels in any form, of his former firm.

Melrose-Drover, Limited v Heddle, 1901, 4 F. 1120; 39 S.L.R. 529.

(31)

Similarity of name—"Calculated to mislead"—Absence of proof that any one misled.

A, the managing director of the "Kelvindale Chemical Co.," severed his connection with that company, and afterwards started a similar business in the same neighbourhood under the name of the "Kelvinside Chemical Co." The original company sought to interdict him from using the name "Kelvinside" to designate the new company. It was admitted that that name had not been adopted with any wrongful intention. A proof was led, at which evidence was adduced that inconvenience had arisen through the misdirection and misdelivery of correspondence, but no actual instance of any customer being misled into confusing the two companies was proved. Held that the pursuer had failed to prove that the use of the name was calculated to mislead the public into confusing the two businesses, and interdict refused.

Williamson v Meikle, 1909 S.C. 1272; 26 R.P.C. 775; 46 S.L.R. 915; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 169.

(32)

Similarity of name.

A company which had for a number of years been carrying on the business of repairing, pressing, and cleaning gentlemen's clothes under the name of the "Resartus Company," sought to interdict a new company from carrying on the same class of business under the name of the "Sartor Resartus Company," and also asked for interim interdict. The Lord Ordinary granted interim interdict, which subsequently was made final of consent.

Resartus Co. v Sartor Resartus Co., (O.H.) 1908, 25 R.P.C. 808; 16 S.L.T. 210.

(33)

A company, formed in 1878 by the amalgamation of the Scottish National Insurance Co. with another company, carried on general insurance business, but not marine insurance, although by its articles it had power to do so, under the name of the Scottish Union and National Insurance Co. In 1907 a company was formed under the name of the Scottish National Insurance Co., which carried on marine insurance only, although by its articles it had power to undertake other insurances. In an application by the Scottish Union and National Insurance Co. for interdict to prevent the Scottish National Insurance Co from carrying on business under that name, held that as the businesses of general insurance and marine insurance were very different, the similarity of the names was not likely to deceive the public, and interdict refused.

The Scottish Union and National Insurance Co. v The Scottish National Insurance Co., 1909 S.C. 318; 26 R.P.C. 105; 46 S.L.R. 267; 16 S.L.T. 671.

(34)

Company name.

Circumstances in which a company carrying on business in London under the name of B & T (London) failed to obtain interdict against a firm carrying on a similar business in Glasgow and Liverpool under the name of B & T.

Baird & Tatlock (London), Limited v Baird & Tatlock, Limited, (O.H.) 1916, 34 R.P.C. 85; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 46.

(35)

Professional designation.

The members of three societies of accountants in Edinburgh, Glasgow, and Aberdeen, which were incorporated by royal charter in 1854, 1855, and 1867 respectively, adopted the designation "chartered accountant," and used the letters "C.A." after their names as an abbreviation of that designation. In 1891 a company called "the Corporation of Accountants, Limited," was registered in Scotland under the Companies Acts. By its articles of association, the members of this company were styled "corporate accountants," and they made public professional use of the letters "C.A." In an action for interdict brought by the three incorporated societies, and certain of their individual members against the Corporation of Accountants, and two of its members, it was proved that the letters C.A. were universally recognised in Scotland by professional persons and the public generally as the designation of the members of the three incorporated societies, and that prior to 1891 no other persons had used these letters in Scotland, with the exception of one or two members of an English society incorporated by royal charter. Held that the pursuers were entitled to have the individual defenders interdicted from using for professional purposes, or as a professional designation, the letters C.A., or any other letters or words calculated to lead the public to believe that they were members of one or other of the bodies of accountants in Scotland, which were incorporated by royal charter.

Society of Accountants in Edinburgh v Corporation of Accountants, 1893, 20 R. 750; 30 S.L.R. 677; 1 S.L.T. 41.

(36)

Held that the members of the Corporation of Accountants were not entitled to use the letters M.C.A. as a professional designation, in respect that the designation would be understood by the public to mean member of one or other of the societies of chartered accountants.

Corporation of Accountants v Society of Accountants in Edinburgh, (O.H.) 1903, 11 S.L.T. 424.

III. REMEDY AND DEFENCES.

(37)

Interim interdict.

In an action of interdict against a firm of auctioneers to prevent them selling certain lots of champagne under a certain name, interim interdict refused, in respect that the complainers had long known of the sale, and the seller was acting in good faith.

Ayala & Co. v Dowell, (O.H.) 1893, 1 S.L.T. 374.

(38)

In an action of suspension and interdict to have the respondent restrained from using the words "Bernard's, Edinburgh," in a brand of beer intended for export, interim interdict refused on the respondent undertaking to keep an account of the brands and amounts of beer exported.

Bernard v Bernard, (O.H.) 1893, 1 S.L.T. 29.

(39)

Similarity of name.

Resartus Co. v Sartor Resartus Co., (O.H.) 1908, 25 R.P.C. 808; 16 S.L.T. 210, No. 32, supra.

(40)

Interdict—Apprehension of injury.

In an application for interdict against the use of a trade mark, held that it was not necessary to prove actual injury sustained, but merely reasonable ground for the apprehension of injury.

Singer Manufacturing Co. v Kimball & Morton, 1873, 11 M. 267; 45 J. 201; 10 S.L.R. 173.

(41)

Undertaking to discontinue infringement.

In an action of interdict to prevent the infringement of a trade mark, interdict granted, notwithstanding that the respondent undertook to discontinue the infringement.

Smith & Wellstood v Carron Co., (O.H.) 1896, 13 R.P.C. 108; 3 S.L.T. 223.

(42)

Sale of goods as of particular person's manufacture—Fraud.

A wine and spirit merchant labelled and sold certain beer as "Bass," whereas it was in fact the beer of another firm of brewers.

Held that to entitle Bass to interdict it was not necessary to prove fraud.

Bass, Ratcliff & Gretton v Laidlaw, (O.H.) 1908, 26 R.P.C. 211; 16 S.L.T. 660.

(43)

Sale of goods as of particular person's manufacture—Proof of sale requisite for interdict.

In order to entitle a wholesale dealer to interdict against a retail dealer selling over his counter goods on the representation that they are of the pursuers' manufacture, when in point of fact they are not, it is not sufficient to prove that in a few instances, when goods of the pursuers' manufacture were asked for, other goods were supplied.

Thomson & Co. v Robertson, 1888, 15 R. 880; 25 S.L.R. 649.

(44)

Messrs. Bass, brewers, brought an action against the lessee of the refreshment rooms at a railway station for interdict against the defender, and all others acting under him, selling as ale manufactured by the pursuers ale not manufactured by them, averring that he had fraudulently made it a practice to sell other ale as the pursuers'. It was not alleged that the pursuers' trade labels had been used by the defender, and he stated on record and in his evidence that he did not keep the pursuers' ale, and had given his barmaids special instructions to tell customers so when they asked for Bass. The barmaids confirmed this evidence, though both he and they admitted that occasionally in the hurry of business persons asking for "Bass" might have been supplied through inadvertence without being told that what they were getting was not Bass. The pursuers adduced some witnesses, who stated that on asking for "Bass" at the defender's bars they had been supplied with ale which was not of the pursuers' manufacture. It further appeared that a scale of charges was exhibited in the refreshment rooms which contained, inter alia, the entry "Bass' Burton Ale," with prices annexed. The Court refused to grant interdict.

Bass, Ratcliff & Gretton v Laidlaw, 1886, 13 R. 898; 23 S.L.R. 624.

(45)

Form of interdict.

Observations on the nature of the remedy to which persons are entitled whose goods have been identified with a particular name.

Charles P. Kinnell & Co. v Ballantyne & Sons, 1910 S.C. 246; 27 R.P.C. 185; 47 S.L.R. 227; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 55.

(46)

Competency of interdict where statute imposes a penalty.

An action at the instance of the Institute of Patent Agents and of three patent agents registered under the Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks Acts, 1883 and 1885, against a person who was not so registered, but described himself as a "patent agent" and practised as such, concluding for declarator that the defender was not entitled to describe himself as a patent agent so long as he was not registered, and for interdict against him so describing himself, dismissed as incompetent, on the ground that the Act of 1888, sec. 1, sub-sec. (4), in making the use of the designation "patent agent" by a person not registered a criminal offence, and subjecting the person so using it to a penalty, did not confer any civil right upon other persons to prevent him from using it.

Chartered Institute of Patent Agents v Lockwood, 1894, 21 R. (H.L.) 61; [1894] A.C. 347; 11 R.P.C. 374; 31 S.L.R. 942; 2 S.L.T. 106.

(47)

Damages—Measure of damages—Necessity for proving specific damage.

A firm of wholesale whisky merchants brought an action against a public-house keeper for interdict against the defender selling whisky as of the pursuers' manufacture or blending which was not of their manufacture or blending, and for £500 as damages on account of such sales. The defender admitted that the pursuers were entitled to interdict, but he maintained that he was liable in nominal damages only, in respect that the pursuers had not proved special damage. The Court held it to be proved that he had fraudulently sold whisky which was not the pursuers' under the pursuers' name in order to discourage the sale of their whisky. There was no evidence that, after the defender's tenancy of his public-house commenced, the total sale of the pursuers' whisky had diminished in the town in which the public-house was situated. Held that the fair inference was that the defender's fraudulent conduct had produced the result which it was intended to produce of substantially injuring the pursuers' trade, and that in the circumstances the damages fell to be assessed at £100.

Thomson & Co. v Dailly, 1897, 24 R. 1173; 34 S.L.R. 850; 4 S.L.T. 291.

(48)

Measure of damages—Expense of detecting fraud.

Question, whether in estimating the amount of damages caused to a wholesale manufacturer by fraudulently retailing articles as of his manufacture, which were not manufactured by him, the expenses incurred by him in detecting the fraud fell to be taken into account.

Thomson & Co. v Dailly, 1897, 24 R. 1173; 34 S.L.R. 850; 4 S.L.T. 291.

(49)

Prosecution—Private prosecutor—Statutory offence—Act 1887, sec. 2 (2).

A trader, who has registered his trade mark in terms of the statutes, has, with the consent of the procurator-fiscal, a title to prosecute a summary complaint setting forth that the accused has made use of the trade mark in contravention of sec. 2, subsec. (2), of the above Act.

Facts which were held to justify a conviction on such a complaint.

Burns v Turner, 1897, 25 R. (J.) 38; 2 Adam, 450; 35 S.L.R. 265; 5 S.L.T. 226.

(50)

Defences—Disclaimer—Right of owner of trade mark to protect the matter disclaimed.

Held that the registration of a trade mark does not preclude the holder of it from preventing rival traders from misusing another name by which his goods are known, even although in applying for the trade mark he disclaimed the exclusive use of that other name.

Bayer v Baird, 1898, 25 R. 1142; 15 R.P.C. 615; 35 S.L.R. 913; 6 S.L.T. 98.

(51)

———Action for infringement — Necessity of craving for rectification of register before pleading defences — Challenging exclusive right.

In an action for infringement of a trade mark that has been on the register for five years, if the defender desires to plead as his defence, either that the mark should not be on the register as being common property, or that he himself is entitled also to be put on the register as the owner of the same mark, he must take steps to have the register rectified by the expunging of the mark, or by the insertion of his own name, as the case may be.

Boord & Son v Thom & Cameron, 1907 S.C. 1326; 24 R.P.C. 697; 44 S.L.R. 939; 15 S.L.T. 341.

(52)

———Defence of common property—Proof of common property.

Where, in an action for infringement of a registered trade mark, the defence of common property is put forward, the onus on the defender of proving common property is increased by the length of time the mark has been on the register; and he cannot discharge that onus by proof of a few isolated sales under the mark by persons other than the pursuer, but can only discharge it by proof that such a quantity of goods had been sold by such persons under the mark that the mark had come, in a certain market, to be associated with their goods.

Boord & Son v Thom & Cameron, 1907 S.C. 1326; 24 R.P.C. 697; 44 S.L.R. 939; 15 S.L.T. 341.

(53)

———Infringement in ignorance of registration—Act 1883, sec. 58 (a).

In an action by the proprietor of a design registered under the Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks Acts, 1883 to 1902, against an infringer, held that it was no defence to a claim for the statutory penalty under sec. 58 (a) of the Patents, Designs, and Trade

Marks Act, 1883, that the defender was unaware that the design was registered.

Boustead v Dempster, Moore & Co., (O.H.) 1907, 15 S.L.T. 526.

(54)

———Ex turpi causa non oritur actio—False statements made in advertising.

The Bile Bean Manufacturing Co., by means of extensive advertising, established a large business for the sale of certain pills, of an oviform shape, called "Bile Beans for Biliousness." Many of the advertisements contained a story to the effect that bile beans were compounded of ingredients which included a vegetable substance, of wonderful curative properties, which was found in Australia and had long been known to the natives of that continent, but had only recently been discovered after thorough investigation by Charles Forde, an eminent scientist. The labels on the boxes described the bile beans as "Charles Forde's," but did not contain any specific reference to Forde's discovery of the Australian vegetable substance. The Bile Bean Manufacturing Co. raised an action against Davidson, another trader, to have the respondent interdicted from selling as "Bile Beans" pills which were not of the complainers' manufacture. It was proved that there was no such person as Charles Forde, and that the complainers' bile beans did not contain any ingredient which was peculiar to Australia. Held that the repute of "Bile Beans" had been established by fraudulent misrepresentations on the part of the complainers, and therefore that they were not entitled to interdict.

Bile Bean Manufacturing Co. v Davidson, 1906, 8 F. 1181; 23 R.P.C. 725; 43 S.L.R. 827; 14 S.L.T. 294.

(55)

Suspension on ground that articles not properly marked by complainer.

In an action of interdict for infringement of two registered designs referring to the shape and the coloured ornamentation of a teapot, reasons for suspension on the ground that the articles were not marked with the statutory registration mark, and that the complainer had not shown that he took all proper steps to ensure the marking of the articles, repelled.

Johnston v W. & J. A. Bailey, (O.H.) 1893, 1 S.L.T. 322.

(56)

Registration in good faith—Prior use—Damages—Dammum absque injuria—Statutory ground of damages—Act 1883, sec. 90 (1) and (2).

A firm of flour importers in good faith registered as a trade mark under the Trade Marks Registration Acts the word "Diamonddust." The agent for American flour millers, who had been prosecuted unsuccessfully for infringement, brought an action for declarator that the defenders were bound to have the trade mark removed from the register as having been registered without sufficient cause in respect of prior use, and for damages caused by the actings of the defenders in registering the trade mark. Held (1) that the defenders in registering the trade mark had merely exercised a statutory right, that the prosecution of the pursuer, being one of the rights secured by registration, was in the same position, and accordingly at common law any loss sustained by the pursuer was damnum absque injuria; and (2) that the Trade Marks Act, 1883, sec. 90 (1) and (2), did not create a statutory ground of damages or provide for the recovery of any other description of damages than are due at common law.

Reid v G. M. Thomson & Co., (O.H.) 1905, 22 R.P.C. 376; 13 S.L.T. 32.

TRADE, OFFENSIVE. See PUBLIC HEALTH.

TRADE UNION.

I. WHAT ASSOCIATIONS ARE TRADE UNIONS,	- - - -	COL. 895
II. QUALIFICATION FOR MEMBERSHIP, -	- - - -	898
III. EXCLUSION OF ACTIONS TO ENFORCE RULES,	- - - -	898
IV. POWERS AND LIABILITIES OF TRADE UNIONS,	- - - -	903
V. TITLE TO SUE, - - - -	- - - -	904
VI. JURISDICTION, - - - -	- - - -	904
VII. TRADE DISPUTES, - - - -	- - - -	905

STATUTES.

- Act 1871—Trade Union Act, 1871—34 & 35 Vict. c. 31.
- Act 1876—Trade Union Act Amendment Act, 1876—39 & 40 Vict. c. 22.
- Act 1906—Trade Disputes Act, 1906—6 Edw. VII. c. 47.
- Act 1913—Trade Union Act, 1913—2 & 3 Geo. V. c. 30.

I. WHAT ASSOCIATIONS ARE TRADE UNIONS.

(1)
Restraint of trade—Company—Registration
 —Act 1871, sec. 5—Act 1876, sec. 16.
 The Edinburgh and District Aerated Water Manufacturers' Defence Association was registered in 1898 under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890, for the object, as set forth in its memorandum of association, of protecting the bottles and boxes of members from being dealt with by persons not having lawful authority. By its articles and bye-laws prohibitions were imposed on members with regard to the purchase and exchange of bottles, and the employment of travellers formerly in the employment of (57)

Process—Petition—Rectification of register
 —Act 1883, secs. 90 and 111.
 A petition to the Scottish Courts under sec. 90 of the Patents, Designs, and Trade Marks Act, 1883, for rectification of the register is incompetent, the correct procedure being by summons.
 Dewar v Dewar & Sons, (O.H.) 1898, 6 S.L.T. 90.

IV. OFFENCES UNDER THE MERCHANDISE MARKS ACTS.

[See JUSTICIARY V. 37.]

other members; and provisions were made for fines for breach of the rules or bye-laws. The "Edinburgh and District Aerated Water Manufacturers' Defence Association, Limited," described as "incorporated under the Companies Acts, 1862 to 1890," brought an action against one of the members for the recovery of the amount of a fine imposed on the defender for a breach of one of the rules. Held that the association was a trade union within the meaning of the Trade Union Act Amendment Act, 1876, that consequently its registration under the Companies Acts was void, and that as an unincorporated company it had set forth no title to sue.
 Edinburgh and District Aerated Water Manufacturers' Defence Association v Jenkinson & Co., 1903, 5 F. 1159; 40 S.L.R. 825; 11 S.L.T. 240.

(2)
 ————Company—Objects—Act 1871, sec. 5—Act 1876, sec. 16.

The Aberdeen Master Masons' Incorporation was incorporated under the Companies Acts, and the memorandum of association provided that the objects of the incorporation, inter alia, were "(1) to take over the whole or any of the assets and liabilities of the incorporated association known as 'The Aberdeen Master Masons' Association'''; (13) to assist any institution with objects similar to those of the trade, "and not being a trade union"; (22) to do all lawful things conducive to the attainment of the above objects, "provided that the incorporation shall not impose on its members or support with its funds any regulation which, if an object of the incorporation, would make it a trade union." An action having been raised by the incorporation against a member for the payment of dues, the defender averred that the association, whose assets and liabilities were taken over by the pursuers, was a trade union, and pleaded that the pursuers, being a trade union, were not validly registered as a company, and had no title to sue. Held that as any act which would make the incorporation a trade union would be null and void under the above quoted clauses of the memorandum of association, the incorporation could not be a trade union, and plea of no title to sue repelled.

Aberdeen Master Masons' Incorporation v Smith, 1908 S.C. 669; 45 S.L.R. 484; 15 S.L.T. 953.

(3)

—Company — Registration — Validity — Company's objects restricting the trading of its members—Title to sue—Act 1871, sec. 5—Act 1913, secs. 1 (2) and 2 (1).

The Performing Right Society was registered in 1914 under the Companies Acts for the purpose, as set forth in its memorandum of association, of exercising and enforcing on behalf of its members, being composers, authors, or publishers, their rights and remedies under the Copyright Act, 1911, or otherwise, in respect of the public performances of their works. By its articles and rules the members who were publishers were obliged to assign, and the others might assign, to the society their interest, present and future, in the right to perform any work published or produced by them. The society then had the sole right to authorise or forbid the public performance of all or any of the works, to grant licences, and to collect fees in respect of such public performances. The balance of the moneys so obtained, after payment of expenses, was to be distributed among those entitled thereto in such proportions as the committee should determine. In an action at the instance of the society for infringement of certain performing rights, the defenders pleaded no title to sue, in respect that, as the pursuers' objects were in restraint of trade, they were a trade union, and, therefore, could not competently be registered as a company under the Companies Acts. Held that the society was not a trade union, as its principal objects were to enforce the rights of its members, not to impose restrictive conditions on the conduct of their businesses; and plea of "no title" repelled.

Performing Right Society v Magistrates of Edinburgh, 1922 S.C. 165; 59 S.L.R. 194; 1922 S.L.T. 98.

v 29

II. QUALIFICATION FOR MEMBERSHIP.

(4)

Master plumbers' association — "Master plumber."

The rules of the Aberdeen Master Plumbers' Association provided—Rule 1. "The association shall be composed of master plumbers or firms of master plumbers in Aberdeen and suburbs. . . ." Rule 3. "Upon a member . . . dissolving partnership, or ceasing to carry on business as a master plumber or firm of master plumbers in Aberdeen, such member shall thereupon cease to be a member of the Association. . . ." A member of the association, who had hitherto carried on business on his own account as a plumber, sold his business to a copartnership of which he was a partner. Held, on a construction of the rules, that he had lost his qualification for membership of the association. Observed that, in the rules in question, "master plumber" did not refer to a grade of craftsmanship, but meant a person carrying on a plumbing business, and not in the service of a master.

Johnston v Aberdeen Master Plumbers' Association, 1921 S.C. 62; 53 S.L.R. 47; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 390.

III. EXCLUSION OF ACTIONS TO ENFORCE RULES.

(5)

Enforcement of agreement as to conditions of employment—Enforcement of agreement to provide benefits—Action for declarator that expulsion of member illegal—Act 1871, sec. 4 (1) and (3) (a).

Employers posted a lock-out notice suspending all employees who were members of a certain trade union, with the exception of foremen. The union having intimated to its members that the notice must apply to all without exception, a member, who was a foreman, thereupon gave notice to his employers that he would leave their employment in a fortnight, in conformity with a rule of the union that such notice must be given by members before leaving situations. During the fortnight he remained at work. Thereafter he was expelled from the union, on the ground that he had remained at work during the lock-out; but he was ultimately reinstated, subject to a fine of £1 and the loss of all benefit to which he was entitled in respect of his former membership. In an action at his instance for declarator that the resolution expelling him was ultra vires of the union and null and void, and for interdict against the union enforcing the resolution, held that the action could not be entertained, it being excluded by sec. 4 (1) of the Trade Union Act, 1871, in respect that it was a proceeding instituted with the object of directly enforcing an agreement between members of a trade union concerning the conditions on which they should be employed. Opinion (per Lord Mackenzie) that the action was also excluded by sec. 4 (3) (a), as being a proceeding instituted with the object of directly enforcing an agreement for the application of the funds of a trade union to provide benefits to members. Opinion reserved (per Lord Skerrington).

Smith v Scottish Typographical Association, 1919 S.C. 43; 56 S.L.R. 46; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 250.

(6)

Action to enforce agreement for payment of penalty—Action to interdict enforcement of fine—Ground of action that member outside union at date of alleged breach—Act 1871, sec. 4 (2).

A trade union imposed upon a firm, which was a member of the union, a fine for a breach of the rules of the union. Thereafter the firm brought an action against the union for declarator that at the date of the alleged breach it was not a member of the union, and for interdict against the enforcement of the fine. Admittedly the firm was a member at the date of the imposition of the fine. Held that the action, in spite of its form, was in substance and effect a proceeding instituted with the object of enforcing an agreement for the payment of a penalty to a trade union within the meaning of sec. 4 of the Trade Union Act, 1871, and was accordingly excluded by that section.

G. & J. Rae v Plate Glass Merchants' Association, 1919 S.C. 426; 56 S.L.R. 315; 1919, 1 S.L.T. 228.

(7)

—Act 1871, sec. 4—Act 1876, sec. 16.

An association of manufacturers brought an action against one of the members, averring that they had prescribed the price at which members might sell their goods (as they had power to do under their constitution), and that the defenders had sold their goods at a lower price, and concluding for a sum fixed by the constitution of the association as liquidated damages. Held that the association was a trade union, and, accordingly, that the action was incompetent.

Glasgow and District Potted Meat Manufacturers' Society v Geddes, (O.H.) 1902, 10 S.L.T. 481.

(8)

Action by member for reduction of resolution imposing a fine—Fine unenforceable in Court of law—Failure to aver patrimonial loss.

The executive council of a trade union published a recommendation that May Day, 1919, should be observed by the members as a general holiday. The members in certain Glasgow workshops took no action; those in the other shops decided to vote on the recommendation, and in most of these cases the majority voted against the holiday. In one shop, where the majority had voted in favour of the holiday, certain of the minority remained at work. Having been reported for acting against the shop vote they were fined by the district committee of the trade union, whose decision was confirmed, on appeal, by the executive council. They thereupon brought an action against the trade union, concluding, inter alia (1) for declarator that there was no authority in the rules, and no agreement between the pursuers and the defenders, under which the decision of a majority in a shop as to working on any day was binding on the minority; and (2) for declarator that the resolution imposing the fine was ultra vires, and for reduction of the resolution and interdict. The pursuers' averments relative to the first conclusion were met by the defenders by a general reference to the rules. With regard to the fine resolution, the pursuers did not aver that the fine had been enforced or was enforceable, or that they had suffered any patrimonial loss. Held that the action was irrelevant in respect (1) that the declarator sought for in the first conclusion was with regard to a fact which was not disputed, and on which no substantive question depended; (2) that, the fine being admittedly unenforceable, the pursuers had not averred the violation of any civil right involving patrimonial interest which entitled them to redress from a Court of law.

Drennan v Associated Ironmoulders of Scotland, 1921 S.C. 151; 58 S.L.R. 146; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 18.

(9)

Action to enforce agreement to provide benefits—Burial allowance—"Benefits to members"—Act 1871, sec. 4 (3) (a).

In an action against a trade union by the widow of a member of the union for payment of the burial allowance provided for by the rules of the union, held that this allowance was a "benefit to members" within the meaning of sec. 4 of the Trade Union Act, 1871, and that, accordingly, the jurisdiction of the Court was excluded; and action dismissed.

M'Laren v National Union of Dock Labourers, 1918 S.C. 834; 55 S.L.R. 763; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 175.

(10)

—Right of membership—Act 1871, sec. 4 (3) (a).

An action was brought against a trade union by one of its members, concluding (1) for reduction of certain resolutions imposing a fine upon him, and depriving him of membership, and (2) for declarator that his expulsion was illegal, and that he was entitled to damages for loss of benefits attached to membership. Held (1) that the society being merely a voluntary association, no action lay at the instance of a member to enforce his right to membership unless he could show patrimonial loss, and that the only loss alleged was deprivation of right under a contract not enforceable by law; and (2) that an action against a trade union directed to enforcing or recovering damages for breach of an agreement to provide benefits was incompetent.

Aitken v Associated Carpenters and Joiners of Scotland, 1885, 12 R. 1206; 22 S.L.R. 796.

(11)

—Act 1871, sec. 4 (3) (a).

In an action against a trade union at the instance of one of its members to recover benefit money alleged to be due to him in terms of its rules, held that prior to the Trade Union Act, 1871, a trade union was an unlawful combination, whose contracts to confer benefits on members could not be enforced in Courts of law, and that as the statute in removing the illegality of such associations expressly provided that nothing in it should have the effect of making agreements to provide benefits to members enforceable in Courts of law, the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the action.

Shanks v United Operative Masons' Association, 1874, 1 R. 823; 11 S.L.R. 356.

M'Kernan v United Operative Masons' Association, 1874, 1 R. 453; 11 S.L.R. 219.

(12)

—Proposed alterations in rules—Misapplication of funds—Act 1871, sec. 4 (3) (a).

Held that an action at the instance of a member of an unregistered trade union for declarator that certain proposed alterations in the rules were ultra vires, and for interdict against misapplication of the funds of the union, was not a proceeding instituted with the object of directly enforcing an "agreement for the application of the funds of a trade union to provide benefits to members," in the sense of the Trade Union Act, 1871, sec. 4 (3) (a), and that, accordingly, the Court had jurisdiction to entertain the action.

Wilson v Scottish Typographical Association, 1912 S.C. 534; 49 S.L.R. 397; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 203.

(13)

—Obligation to refund benefits paid—Act 1871, sec. 4 (3) (a).

The rules of a trade union provided that a member permanently disabled should receive the sum of £100, but that if he should resume work he must refund the £100, and that at the time of receiving the benefit he must sign an agreement to refund it should he resume work. A member of the union received a payment of £100 in respect of permanent disablement, and signed a memorandum of agreement undertaking to refund that sum if he resumed work. The union, averring that the injured man had resumed work, brought an action for recovery of the £100 and founded on the memorandum of agreement. Held that the action was competent in respect that the agreement sued on was not one of the agreements an action on which was excluded by sec. 4 of the Act, and, in particular, was not an agreement for the application of the funds of the union to provide benefits to members.

Wilkie v King, 1911 S.C. 1310; 48 S.L.R. 1057; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 206.

(14)

—Benefit to dependant of member—Act 1871, sec. 4 (3) (a).

The rules of a trade union provided that if a member became insane his wife, family, or parent, if dependent upon him, should be eligible to receive sick benefit for one year. In an action at the instance of the wife of an insane member against the union for recovery of sick benefit, held that, as the agreement was not one for the provision of benefits to a member, but to the dependant of a member, the jurisdiction of the Court was not excluded by sec. 4 (3) (a) of the Trade Union Act, 1871.

Love v Amalgamated Society of Lithographic Printers of Great Britain and Ireland, 1912 S.C. 1078; 49 S.L.R. 788; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 50.

(15)

—Misapplication of funds—Act 1871, sec. 4 (3).

Held that an action for restoration to a trade union of funds alleged to have been illegally paid away was not an action to enforce an agreement to pay benefits, and was competent.

M'Dowall v M'Ghee, (O.H.) 1913, 2 S.L.T. 238.

(16)

—Misapplication of funds—Act 1871, sec. 4.

The general trustees of a trade union presented an application for interdict against the trustees of a branch applying funds in their hands for purposes other than those specified in the rules. Held that the application was not excluded by the provisions of sec. 4 of the Trade Union Act, 1871, and interdict granted until the rights of parties should be ascertained.

Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants for Scotland v The Motherwell Branch of the Society, 1880, 7 R. 867; 17 S.L.R. 607.

(17)

—Slander—Action for interdict against trade union—Action for interdict and damages against trustees of union—Act 1906, sec. 4—Act 1871, sec. 9.

Held that an action on the ground of slander, concluding against the trustees of a trade union for damages and against the union and all its officials for interdict against the publication of defamatory statements, was entirely excluded by the Trade Disputes Act, 1906, sec. 4.

Shinwell v National Sailors' Union, (O.H.) 1913, 2 S.L.T. 83.

(18)

—Act 1906—Action raised before Act came into operation.

Held that, notwithstanding sec. 4 (1) of the Trade Disputes Act, a firm was entitled to proceed with an action of damages against a trade union for procuring a breach of contract on the part of the firm's employees, the action having been raised prior to the date on which the Act came into operation.

Russell & Co. v United Society of Boiler-makers, (O.H.) 1907, 15 S.L.T. 118.

IV. POWERS AND LIABILITIES OF TRADE UNIONS.

(19)

Objects—Legality of objects—Promotion of parliamentary representation—Ultra vires—Act 1871—Act 1876, sec. 16.

The decision of the House of Lords in the case of Amalgamated Society of Railway Servants v Osborne, [1910] A.C. 87, to the effect that a rule which purports to confer on a trade union power to levy contributions from members for the purpose of promoting parliamentary representation is ultra vires and illegal, applies equally whether the trade union is or is not registered under the Trade Union Acts of 1871 and 1876.

Wilson v Scottish Typographical Association, 1912 S.C. 534; 49 S.L.R. 397; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 205.

(20)

—Purchase of newspaper shares.

A trade union, by a majority of its members, agreed to support a newspaper by the purchase of shares therein. To obtain the necessary funds the union agreed to impose a levy of 1s. on each member. Held that the transaction was ultra vires, as it could not be classed as an investment of the union funds, nor did it fall within the rules which provided that all questions affecting the general interests of the society not dealt with in the rules should be submitted to the votes of the society.

M'Ardle v United Society of Boiler-makers, (O.H.) 1915, 1 S.L.T. 437.

(21)

Liability of trade union for obligations undertaken by one of its branches—Interpretation of rules.

One of the local branches of a trade union guaranteed the costs of its law agent in unsuccessful litigations. Held that the funds of the union were liable, it being established on the rules and evidence that the branches were entitled to incur financial responsibility, for which the funds of the union were liable, in matters connected with the business of the branches, in so far as not contrary to the rules; and that the guarantee in question was such a matter, and was not contrary to the rules.

Mackendrick v National Union of Dock Labourers, 1911 S.C. 83; 48 S.L.R. 17; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 215.

(22)

Unregistered trade union—Power of members to alter rules.

Wilson v Scottish Typographical Association, 1912 S.C. 534; 49 S.L.R. 397; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 205. ASSOCIATION (VOLUNTARY), No. 19.

V. TITLE TO SUE.

(23)

Unregistered trade union—Charge of embezzlement brought by trade union against treasurer—Instance—Relevancy of complaint.

A complaint charged the treasurer of "a society called the Scottish Bleachfield Workers' Union" with embezzling the funds of the society. Objections were stated to the relevancy of the complaint, on the ground that it did not set forth (1) the names of the individual members of the society, and (2) the duty of the accused in regard to the funds of the society which came into his hands. The objections were repelled.

Agnew v Addison, 1892, 20 R. (J.) 19; 3 White, 368.

(24)

Trustees of union—Act 1871, sec. 9.

The rules of a trade union provided that "the general secretary for the time being shall be the person appointed to sue and be sued on behalf of the union." Held that, under sec. 9 of the Trade Union Act, 1871, the trustees of the union in question had, notwithstanding the above rule, a title to sue.

Gough v Macdonald, 1900, 2 F. 899; 37 S.L.R. 721.

(25)

Member expelled after action raised—Proof.

In an action against a trade union, the defenders pled that the pursuer had no title to sue, not being a member, as he had been expelled since the action was raised. The pursuer replied that the expulsion had been carried through in mala fide to stifle his proof. Held that he was entitled to a proof.

M'Dowall v M'Ghee, (O.H.) 1913, 2 S.L.T. 238.

VI. JURISDICTION.

(26)

Registered office of trade union in England—Rules registered in Scotland.

"The National Union of Dock Labourers in Great Britain and Ireland," a trade union which was registered in England and had its registered office there, but which had recorded a copy of its rules with the registrar for Scotland in terms of sec. 6 of the Trade Union Act Amendment Act, 1876, held to be subject to the jurisdiction of the Court of Session.

Mackendrick v National Union of Dock Labourers, 1911 S.C. 83; 48 S.L.R. 17; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 215.

(27)

Union carrying on business in Scotland—Trustees resident out of Scotland.

In an action raised against a trade union by one of its members to have the general trustees ordained to restore to the trust funds of the union a large amount of money alleged to have been illegally paid away, the trustees of the union were not resident in Scotland, but a considerable part of the union's business was carried on in Scotland, where its rules were recorded. Held that the trustees, in respect of their official position, were subject as individuals to the jurisdiction of the Court in respect of the breach of trust alleged against them.

M'Dowall v M'Ghee, (O.H.) 1913, 2 S.L.T. 238.

VII. TRADE DISPUTES.

(28)
“Act done in contemplation or furtherance of a trade dispute”—Act 1906, sec. 3.

A ship belonging to a Belfast firm, after its arrival at Ayr harbour for the purpose of loading a cargo, was detained there owing to the refusal of the harbour employees to work the ship. These employees were members of a Scottish trade union, and their refusal to do the work was due to the existence of a strike of the shipowners' workmen at Belfast. The shipowners offered to supply their own labour to load the ship, but the harbour trustees refused the offer, and would not permit outside labour to work their cranes. The local secretary of the Scottish trade union had threatened a general strike if outside labour were imported. In an action of damages for the detention of the ship, brought by the shipowners against the harbour trustees, the defenders maintained, inter alia, that, as they were acting in furtherance or contemplation of a trade dispute in Belfast or otherwise, with their own employees, they were relieved of liability under sec. 3 of the Trade Disputes Act, 1906. Held that, in the circumstances of the case, sec. 3 did not apply.

John Milligan & Co. v Ayr Harbour Trustees, 1915 S.C. 937; 52 S.L.R. 748; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 69.

TRADE WITHIN BURGH. See BURGH.

TRADING DOMICILE. See INTERNATIONAL LAW; JURISDICTION; SHERIFF.

TRADING WITH THE ENEMY. See WAR.

TRAMWAY.

I. MANAGEMENT,	COL.
	905
II. LIABILITIES OF TRAMWAY COMPANIES,	909
III. CONSTRUCTION OF UNDERTAKING,	911
See COMPULSORY POWERS VIII.
IV. TRANSFER OF EXISTING UNDERTAKING,	911
V. VALUATION,	912
See VALUATION VI.
VI. OFFENCES UNDER TRAMWAYS ACTS,	912
See JUSTICIARY V. 63.

STATUTE.

Act 1870—Tramways Act, 1870—33 & 34 Vict. c. 78.

I. MANAGEMENT.

(1)

Obligation to maintain line—Tramways taken over by road authority—Act 1870, sec. 28—Dundee Street Tramways, Turnpike Roads, and Police Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. xciv.), sec. 22.

Held that, in the absence of specific allegations of disrepair, sec. 28 of the Tramways Act, 1870, which requires tramway promoters to maintain the line to the satisfaction of the road authority, could not found a complaint against police commissioners who were themselves the road authority and who had acquired the tramways.

Ritchie v Dundee Police Commissioners, 1886, 13 R. (J.) 63; 1 White, 139; 23 S.L.R. 663.

(2)

Nuisance—Street—Snow and salt—Interdict—Actio popularis.

A tramway company, which had a statutory right to use certain streets in a town for their traffic, were in the practice, when a snowstorm occurred, of removing the snow from their tramway lines to the sides of the street by the use of a snow plough, and thereafter of scattering salt upon the lines. In a suspension and interdict brought by a member of the public to have the tramway company interdicted from continuing this practice, the tramway company pleaded that the operations complained of were within their statutory rights. It was proved that the operations of the tramway company created a nuisance to the complainer and to the public using the streets for horse traffic. Held that the statutory powers given to the tramway company to use the streets did not authorise them to create a nuisance, and that the complainer was entitled to an interdict against the company removing snow from the tramway lines in certain streets, and from scattering salt in the manner hitherto practised by them to the nuisance of the complainer and of the public using the streets for the purpose of traffic with horses.

Ogston v Aberdeen Tramways Co., 1896, 24 R. (H.L.) 8; [1897] A.C. 111; 34 S.L.R. 169; 4 S.L.T. 190.

(3)

Rule of road.

Observations on the rule of the road and the proper side on which to pass tramway cars.

Ramsay v Thomson & Sons, 1881, 9 R. 140; 19 S.L.R. 125.

(4)

Observed (per Lord President Inglis) that the rule of the road requires that a tramway car shall be passed by a following vehicle on the left-hand side.

Jardine v Stonefield Laundry Co., 1887, 14 R. 839; 24 S.L.R. 599.

(5)

Conditions of public traffic.

In a case in which a tramway car had run into a cab which was standing in a narrow street in order to take in a passenger with one of its wheels resting on the tramway rail, the tramway company was found liable in damages. Observed (per Lord Justice-Clerk Moncreiff) —“It seems clear to me that the driver of the car is bound, in the first place, to observe the rules which are laid down by the company, but besides that he is also bound to act on the rules which regulate the ordinary traffic of the streets. It is, of course, true that the tramway company have a monopoly, of a certain sort, in their line of rails, but that monopoly is subject to this important qualification, that these rails are laid down in the public thoroughfare, and the company is therefore bound to use them in a way consistent with the conditions of public traffic.”

M'Dermid v Edinburgh Street Tramways Co., 1884, 12 R. 15; 22 S.L.R. 13.

(6)

Fares—Maximum fares—Edinburgh Street Tramways Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. lxxviii.).

A tramway company were bound by an agreement, embodied in their Act of incorporation, not to charge passengers more than 1d. per mile or fraction of a mile (the minimum charge for each passenger being 2d). They afterwards obtained an Act which allowed them to charge “a sum not exceeding 2d. per mile for first-class passengers on omnibus routes and any tramway routes worked in connection therewith.” Held that the second Act did not alter the rates chargeable for tramway passengers who did not use the omnibus routes.

Edinburgh Street Tramways Co. v Torbain, 1877, 4 R. (H.L.) 87; 3 App.Cas. 58; 14 S.L.R. 729.

(7)

Refusal to pay fare—Glasgow Corporation Tramways Acts, 1870 to 1893—Breach of bye-laws of Glasgow Corporation—Complaint—Relevancy.

Bye-law No. 3, made by the Corporation of Glasgow in terms of their Tramways Acts, provides that every passenger shall pay his legal fare to the tramway conductor, but imposes no penalty for failure to do so. Bye-law No. 26 provides that any person committing a breach of the bye-laws shall be liable to a specified fine. Held that a complaint charging the accused with a breach of bye-law No. 3 was relevant, on the ground that bye-law No. 3 must be read along with bye-law No. 26, and that, so read, an offence was constituted.

M'Intyre v M'Pherson, 1913 S.C. (J.) 21; 7 Adam, 37; 50 S.L.R. 190; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 478.

(8)

Checking ticket—Forceable detention of passenger—Apprehension by police on report of conductor—Reparation.

A tramway company issued a bye-law to the effect that passengers on a journey, part of which was performed in one of their omnibuses, the latter part in a tramway car, should have the through ticket checked at the place where the change was made. A person who was aware of the bye-law took a ticket for the through journey, but did not have it checked. Thereafter he tendered his unchecked ticket to the conductor, who refused to take it, and asked him for the fare applicable to the tramway part of the journey. This the passenger refused to give, and shortly afterwards attempted to leave the car. The conductor, by force, prevented him from doing so, and called a policeman, who took the passenger to the police office (he having refused to give his name and address), where he eventually gave his name and address, and was discharged. In an action of damages at the instance of the passenger against the company for wrongful apprehension, held (1) that the bye-law of the company was a reasonable one, and that the passenger, who was admittedly aware of it, was bound to conform to it; (2) that not having conformed to it, and refusing to pay the fare, he was acting illegally, and that in these circumstances the conductor had not acted wrongfully in giving him into custody, that being the only remedy open to the company.

Apthorpe v Edinburgh Street Tramways Co., 1882, 10 R. 344; 20 S.L.R. 256.

(9)

—————Proof of fraud — Tramways Act, 1870, sec. 51.

Held that a person cannot be convicted of the statutory offence of travelling without paying the requisite fare unless it appears that he acted with fraudulent intention.

Nimmo v Lanarkshire Tramways Co., 1912 S.C. (J.) 23; 6 Adam, 571; 49 S.L.R. 549; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 305.

(10)

—————Statutory cars for workmen at reduced fares — Right to charge other passengers ordinary fares — Hamilton, Motherwell, and Wishaw Tramways Act, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. c. cxxi.), sec. 75.

A tramway company was bound by its private Act to run cars for workmen at reduced fares specified in the Act. Opinions that the Act did not warrant the company in discriminating in the matter of fares between workmen and other passengers who were allowed to travel in cars for workmen.

Nimmo v Lanarkshire Tramways Co., 1912 S.C. (J.) 23; 6 Adam, 571; 49 S.L.R. 549; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 305.

(11)

—————Overcrowding — "Stage carriage" — Glasgow Police Act, 1866 (29 & 30 Vict. c. cclxxiii.), sec. 227.

Held that a tramway was a stage carriage in the sense of the Glasgow Police Act, 1866, and that the driver of a tramway car was rightly convicted of a breach of bye-laws against overcrowding passed in accordance with the provisions of sec. 227 of that Act.

Black v Neilson, 1898, 25 R. (J.) 98; 2 Adam, 424; 35 S.L.R. 258; 5 S.L.T. 226.

II. LIABILITIES OF TRAMWAY COMPANIES.

[See also NEGLIGENCE II. 5 (4) and III. 4 (5).]

(12)

—————Master and servant — Liability for defective plant — Employers' Liability Act, 1880, secs. 1 and 2.

In an action brought under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, by a trace-boy, employed by a tramway company, against his employers, for damages on account of injuries sustained by him through the falling of a horse belonging to the defenders on which he was riding, held that the defenders were liable in damages, the Court being of opinion (1) that the horse was part of their plant in the sense of the Act, and was defective; and (2) that, in the circumstances as proved, servants of the defenders superior to the trace-boy must be held to have been aware of the horse's unfitness.

Haston v Edinburgh Street Tramways Co., 1887, 14 R. 621; 24 S.L.R. 435.

(13)

—————Conductor — "Workman" — Employers and Workmen Act, 1875, sec. 3.

Opinions that a tramway conductor is a "workman" within the meaning of the Employers and Workmen Act, 1875.

Wilson v Glasgow Tramways and Omnibus Co., 1878, 5 R. 981; 15 S.L.R. 656.

(14)

—————Assessment — Poor rates.

Tramway companies in a town are assessable for poor rates as owners and occupiers.

Craig v Edinburgh Street Tramways Co., 1874, 1 R. 947; 11 S.L.R. 541.

(15)

—————Lease — Relief — Public burdens — Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Act, 1854, sec. 6.

By a contract bearing to be a "lease" the corporation of Glasgow "let" to a tramway company the sole right to use carriages with flange wheels on the whole tramways authorised to be formed by the Glasgow Street Tramways Act, 1870, for the space of twenty-three years, on condition (1) that the company should pay interest on the sum expended by the corporation in making the tramways and certain other annual payments during the lease; and (2) that the company should pay to the corporation "the expense of borrowing, management, &c. [sic], and this provision shall be so construed as to keep the corporation free from all expenses whatever in connection with the said tramways." As the lease extended beyond twenty-one years the company were entered in the valuation roll as owners of the tramways at their annual value, and assessed accordingly. Held that the obligation to relieve the corporation "of all expenses whatever in connection with the tramway" imported an obligation to relieve the corporation of landlord's taxes.

Glasgow Corporation v Glasgow Tramways and Omnibus Co., 1898, 25 R. (H.L.) 77; [1898] A.C. 631; 35 S.L.R. 967; 6 S.L.T. 129.

(16)

—————Breach of obligation imposed by private Act — Title of private individuals to sue — Jurisdiction of Court — Reference clause — Edinburgh Tramways Act, 1871 (34 & 35 Vict. c. lxxxix.), sec. 8 — General Tramways Act, 1870, sec. 33.

By sec. 8 of the Edinburgh Tramways Act, 1871, it is enacted that where in any road, in which a double line of rail is laid there shall be less width between the footpath and the nearest rail than 9 feet 6 inches the company shall construct a passing place. Held (1) that two private individuals were entitled to complain of a breach of this obligation, and that the local authorities referred to in the Act were not the only parties entitled to do so; and (2) that the jurisdiction of the Court of Session was not excluded by the statutory clauses of reference.

Adamson v Edinburgh Street Tramways Co., 1872, 10 M. 533; 44 J. 279; 9 S.L.R. 369.

(17)

Jurisdiction—Exclusion of jurisdiction of Courts by statutory clauses of reference—Claim of damages—General Tramways Act, 1870, sec. 33.

Sec. 33 of the Tramways Act, 1870, refers to arbitration differences arising "with respect to the amount of any compensation to be made by or to the promoters." Held that the section did not apply to a claim of damages for a wrong done outwith the powers conferred by the statute.

Lanarkshire Tramways Co. v Magistrates of Motherwell, (O.H.) 1908, 16 S.L.T. 63.

III. CONSTRUCTION OF UNDERTAKING.

[See COMPULSORY POWERS VIII.]

IV. TRANSFER OF EXISTING UNDERTAKING.

(18)

Sale to local authority — Price — Rental value—Tramways Act, 1870, sec. 43.

Sec. 43 of the Tramways Act, 1870, provides that where the promoters of a tramway in any district are not the local authority, the local authority may, within six months after the expiration of a period of twenty-one years from the time when such promoters were empowered to construct such tramway, require the promoters to sell to them "their undertaking, or so much of the same as is within such district, upon terms of paying the then value (exclusive of any allowance for past or future profits of the undertaking, or any compensation for compulsory sale or other consideration whatsoever) of the tramway, and all lands, buildings, works, materials, and plant of the promoters suitable to and used by them for the purposes of their undertaking within such district," such value to be determined by a referee appointed by the Board of Trade. In an action for reduction of an award by a referee under this provision, held that, having regard to the fact that the tramway company could not assign the right to use the tramways, the "then value" of the tramway meant the then value of the tramway lines, and that in ascertaining the value the basis of the calculation should be the sum that would be required to construct the lines less a sum for depreciation.

Edinburgh Street Tramways Co. v Magistrates of Edinburgh, 1894, 21 R. (H.L.) 78; [1894] A.C. 456; 31 S.L.R. 953.

V. VALUATION.

[See VALUATION VI.]

VI. OFFENCES UNDER TRAMWAYS ACTS.

[See JUSTICIARY V. 63.]

TRESPASS. See FISHINGS; HERITABLE PROPERTY; INTERDICT; NEGLIGENCE; RAILWAY; REPARATION.

TRIENNIAL POSSESSIO. See PRESCRIPTION.

TROUT FISHING. See FISHINGS.

TRUCK ACTS. See JUSTICIARY; MASTER AND SERVANT.

TRUST.

See also CHARITABLE TRUSTS AND BEQUESTS.

I. CONSTITUTION AND REVOCABILITY—

1. Constitution, -	COL
2. Revocability, -	916
See VI. 1, infra.	925
3. Trustees ex officiis, -	925
See CHARITABLE TRUSTS AND BEQUESTS II. 3.

II. PROOF OF TRUST, -	926
Act 1696, c. 25.

III. APPOINTMENT, ASSUMPTION, RESIGNATION AND REMOVAL OF TRUSTEES—

1. Appointment, -	932
2. Assumption, -	935
3. Appointment of Trustees by Court, -	937
4. Resignation, -	940
5. Removal, -	944
6. Supersession by Appointment of Judicial Factor, -	947
See JUDICIAL FACTOR I. 5.

IV. ADMINISTRATION OF TRUST—

1. Generally, -	947
2. Factors and Law Agents, -	948
(1) Appointment and Remuneration, -	948
(2) Duty of Law Agent, -	951
(3) Responsibility of Trustees for Factors and Law Agents, -	952
(4) Law Agents' Charges, -	955
3. Recovery of Estate, -	958
4. Completion of Title, -	959
5. Payment of Trustee's Debts, -	961
6. Power to Refer, Compromise, and Discharge Claims, -	963
7. Power to carry on Trustee's business or hold his Investments, -	966
8. Investment of Trust Funds, -	969
(1) Duty to Invest, -	969
(2) Whether Investment intra vires or ultra vires, -	970
(a) Authorisation by Statute, -	970
(b) Directions in Trust Deed, -	973
(3) Personal Liability of Trustees, -	979
(a) For ultra vires Investment, -	979
(i.) Generally, -	979
(ii.) Immunity Clause, -	982
(iii.) Relief, -	984
(b) As Partner or Shareholder, -	987
(c) Under Warrandice Clause, -	988
(d) For intra vires Investment, -	988
9. Duties and Liabilities of Trustees inter se, -	989
10. Trustee as Auctor in rem suam, -	992
11. Expenses of Administration, -	997
(1) Generally, -	997
(2) Litigation, -	1001
12. Powers to Deal with Heritage, -	1006
(1) Power to Sell or Purchase, -	1006
(2) Power to Excamb, -	1014
(3) Power to Feu, -	1014
(4) Power to Grant Leases, -	1015
(5) Power to Expend Money on Repairs, -	1018
(6) Power to Manage Farm, -	1019
13. Power to Borrow, -	1019

V. DISTRIBUTION OF ESTATE—

1. Payment of Provisions, -	1022
(1) Generally, -	1022
(2) Unauthorised Payments, -	1025

V. DISTRIBUTION OF ESTATE—Continued.

	COL.
2. Discretionary Powers of Trustees, - - - - -	1030
(1) Generally, - - - - -	1030
(2) Uncertainty, - - - - -	1030
See SUCCESSION IV. 10 (2).
(3) Time, Mode, and Amount of Payments, - - - - -	1030
See also VESTING VII. 2.
(4) Apportionment between Capital and Income, - - - - -	1035
(5) Exercise of Discretionary Powers by Assumed Trustees, - - - - -	1035
3. Appropriation of Investments—Severance of Trust, - - - - -	1038
4. Power to make Advances out of Capital, - - - - -	1042
5. Power to make Allowances out of Income for Maintenance and Education, - - - - -	1046
(1) Discretion expressly given to Trustees, - - - - -	1046
(2) Failure of Trustee's directions for Maintenance, - - - - -	1048
(3) Right of Children to Interest of Fund or to a Maintenance Allowance, - - - - -	1050
(4) Applications under the Trusts Act, 1867, sec. 7, - - - - -	1052
(5) Applications to the Nobile Officium, - - - - -	1055
6. Assignment of Interest in Trust Estate, - - - - -	1059

VI. TERMINATION OF TRUST—

1. Revocation, - - - - -	1061
(1) Inter vivos Trusts, not Matrimonial, - - - - -	1061
(2) Matrimonial Trusts, - - - - -	1066
See MARRIAGE CONTRACT I. 3, II. 2.
2. Right of Beneficiary to Demand Denuding, - - - - -	1066
For Matrimonial Trusts see MARRIAGE CONTRACT I. 3, and ALIMENTARY PROVISION.
(1) Impossibility of Executing Trust, - - - - -	1066
(2) Failure of Trust Purposes or Trust Machinery, - - - - -	1069
(3) Acceleration of Payment, - - - - -	1072
(a) Trust for Accumulation or for Payment of Debt, - - - - -	1072
(b) Renunciation of Provisions, - - - - -	1074
(c) Security for Payment of Provisions, - - - - -	1078
(4) Presumption against Child-bearing, - - - - -	1082
See also PRESUMPTION I.
3. Exoneration of Trustees, - - - - -	1083

VII. ACTIONS RELATING TO TRUSTS—

1. Jurisdiction, - - - - -	1085
(1) International Law, - - - - -	1085
(2) Scottish Courts, - - - - -	1087
2. Title to Sue and Defend, and Liability to be Sued, - - - - -	1089
3. Competency, - - - - -	1095
4. Expenses of Litigation, - - - - -	1098
See EXPENSES I. 12, II. 2, and III. 13 (7).

STATUTES.

Act 1861—Trusts (Scotland) Act—24 & 25 Vict. c. 84.
Act 1867—Trusts (Scotland) Act—30 & 31 Vict. c. 97.
Act 1884—Trusts (Scotland) Amendment Act—47 & 48 Vict. c. 63.
Act 1887—Trusts (Scotland) Act, 1867, Amendment Act—50 & 51 Vict. c. 18.
Act 1891—Trusts (Scotland) Amendment Act —54 & 55 Vict. c. 44.
Act 1897—Trusts (Scotland) Act—60 & 61 Vict. c. 8.
Act 1898—Trusts (Scotland) Act—61 & 62 Vict. c. 42.
Act 1910—Trusts (Scotland) Act—10 Edw. VII. and 1 Geo. V. c. 22.
Act 1921—Trusts (Scotland) Act—11 & 12 Geo. V. c. 58.

I. CONSTITUTION AND REVOCABILITY.

1. CONSTITUTION.

(1)

Whether writing imported a declaration of trust.

In 1835 a person executed a mortis causa settlement in favour of a nephew and two nieces. In 1837 he sold by public auction, in virtue of a power of sale contained in a heritable bond, certain subjects which were purchased by the nephew to whom he granted an absolute disposition. In 1839 the nephew delivered to each of the two nieces a writing in these terms:—"This is to certify that I do renounce all claim upon that property . . . which formerly belonged to my uncle David Miller, and which was bought in my name upon 5th May, 1837." The testator died in 1842. In an action brought by one of the nieces against the representatives of the nephew, concluding for declarator that the subjects were held by him in trust for the testator, held that the writing did not import a trust for behoof of the testator, and action dismissed.

Evans v Craig, 1871, 9 M. 801; 43 J. 442; 8 S.L.R. 534.

(2)

Whether letter by son as registered owner of shares imported an acknowledgement of trust for father.

A person, having borrowed money for that purpose, acquired shares in a joint stock company, of which he was himself manager and a large shareholder, and took the transfer in the name of his son. The son's name stood on the register as owner of the shares, and the dividends were paid to him, and applied by him for his own purposes. Eight years after the transfer the son granted a letter, prepared by and addressed to an accountant, in whose hands the management of his father's affairs then was, in these terms:—"In reply to your inquiry as to the shares standing in my name, I have to explain that I paid nothing for them, and that they are held practically in trust for my father. I undertake that I shall not transfer them to any one without your knowledge." Five days afterwards the son granted a trust deed for his creditors. The father's estates were subsequently sequestrated. The trustee on the son's estate having brought an action against the father's trustee for delivery of the share certificate, a proof was allowed. The son deponed that the shares were his absolute property, and the father deponed that he, the father, was to have the control of them if he needed it in the family interest. It was explained that the son had no safe place for keeping such documents as the certificate. Held that there was no evidence of an existing trust in the son at the date of the letter, that the letter could not therefore be regarded as an acknowledgement which the son was bound or entitled to grant, and consequently could not avail his father's creditors in a question with his own creditors.

Wallace v Sharp, 1885, 12 R. 687; 22 S.L.R. 441.

(3)

Mutual settlement—Testamentary gift of power to consume—Gift over of portion unconsumed.

In a mutual settlement by spouses the wife conveyed her whole estates to her husband under the burden of maintaining her whole children, with full power to him "to consume such parts or portions of the capital during his lifetime as he may find or think necessary," and also power "to realise said estates . . . and in general to deal and intromit therewith as freely as" she could have done herself. She appointed him to be her sole executor. Upon the death of her husband, if he survived her (as he did), she conveyed her "said estate or such portion thereof as may be unconsumed" by him to trustees for certain purposes. In an action by the wife's trustees against the trustees under a will left by the husband, held that under the mutual settlement there was no implied trust imposed upon the husband rendering him liable to account for his intromissions with his wife's estate, and that consequently his trustees were not bound so to account.

Denholm's Trustees v Denholm's Trustees, 1908 S.C. 255; 45 S.L.R. 154; 15 S.L.T. 589.

(4)

Testament—Legacy or trust.

A testator, who was survived by his wife and a child, and also by pupil and minor children of a former marriage, left a will and a codicil thereto of even date. The will was in the following terms:—"I [name] do hereby leave and dispose to my wife [name] my whole estate, heritable and moveable, whom I appoint my sole executrix, under the obligation of her paying all my just and lawful debts, and bringing up and educating my children, and I appoint her sole guardian and curator of my children, and I grant her full power of sale of said estate, and I appoint [name] to be law agent on the said estate." By the codicil he appointed two persons named "to act along with my wife as executors and curators to my said children." Held, on a construction of the will and the codicil, that the widow was not entitled to have the testator's estate conveyed to her as her own property, subject only to a merely personal obligation to maintain and educate the children, but that a trust was constituted in the widow and the persons named in the codicil for behoof of her and the children.

Urquhart's Executors v Abbott, 1899, 1 F. 1149; 36 S.L.R. 896; 7 S.L.T. 114.

(5)

Direct bequest or trust—Nomination of executors but not of trustees.

A testator by his settlement disposed his whole estate to his wife in life and to his children, subject to payment of his debts and implement of the provisions in his marriage contract in their favour, and he bound his wife to educate and maintain the children until their provisions became payable. Executors were appointed, but no curators for the children were appointed. One of the children was a minor and the other a pupil. Held that the executors were not trustees.

Gow's Trustees v Gow, (O.H.) 1912, 2 S.L.T. 256.

(6)

Annuity charged upon heritage.

A testator by his will and settlement nominated and appointed certain persons "to be my trustees; to them I give full power to see my will and arrangements fulfilled for the benefit of my heir after named and designed. First, then, dwelling-house and grounds, everything moveable and heritable to remain in the hands of the heirs of T. R., my father, in perpetuity; following up this to be my desire and will, I fix on J. M. R. . . . to be my heir of Dalling House and grounds as it now stands, heritable and moveable, subject" to certain reservations, and under burden of certain annuities. J. M. R. having made up titles granted a bond and disposition over Dalling House. In an action of poinding of the ground and of mails and duties, at the instance of the bondholder, held that, whether J. M. R. or the trustees were the proper disponees of Dalling House under the foregoing will and settlement, it, at all events, imported a trust in favour of the annuitants which the bondholder was not entitled to defeat.

Hyndman v Ross, 1881, 18 S.L.R. 718.

(7)

Trust in person of residuary legatee.

A testator disposed to and in favour of the residuary legatee of his moveable estate the whole residue of his heritable estate, "always with and under the conditions and provisions hereinafter inserted." Thereafter the disponent was "directed to dispose of, either by private bargain or public sale, as may be considered most advantageous, my whole heritable estate other than that specially above conveyed, and that within three years of my death, and invest the free proceeds in Government stock" for certain persons in liferent and their representatives in fee. Held that the residuary legatee was constituted a trustee for all concerned, the period of three years being allowed for the advantageous realisation of the estate, and was therefore not entitled to the rents accruing while the estate remained unsold.

Johnston, 1880, 18 S.L.R. 60.

(8)

Appointment of executors—Bequest in liferent and fee.

A testatrix by her holograph will left a liferent of her whole estate to her sister A, and at her death to her sister B, and at the death of the survivor of the sisters the estate was to be divided equally amongst eleven persons named "or the survivors of the above mentioned at the time of succession." The testatrix nominated four persons to be "sole executors and universal intromitters with my moveable estate," and she bequeathed to each of them the sum of £50, but no words of trust were used, nor was any conveyance made to the executors.

Held that the destination of the bequest, and the number of the executors and the amount of their remuneration indicated the intention of the testatrix to constitute a continuing trust.

Bannatyne v Dunlop, (O.H.) 1894, 1 S.L.T. 484.

(9)

Trust or unlimited fee—Trust disposition and settlement inter vivos — Directions to trustees to convey lands with restrictions against burdening or selling — Docquet on trust deed by beneficiary agreeing to its terms and conditions.

The proprietor of certain heritable estates, with a view to their management during his life, and their subsequent settlement, by trust disposition and settlement inter vivos conveyed his estate to his brother F, and to his nephews A, B, and C, as trustees, and directed them on the death of the survivor of himself and his brother to convey them to his nephews and their heirs male respectively in order. He further directed his trustees to insert in the disposition a clause prohibiting the disponent from selling or burdening the estates with debt except with the consent of his two immediate younger brothers. After the trust disposition had been executed and delivered, and before the death of the truster, A and C signed a docquet thereto, whereby they accepted the office of trustees, and "individually" concurred in and agreed "to the terms and conditions of the foregoing deed." The docquet was signed by B after the truster's death. On the death of the truster and his brother it was agreed between A, B, and C that the estate should be conveyed to A in terms of the settlement, but that the insertion of the conditions should not bar A from maintaining that notwithstanding them he was a fee-simple proprietor. The estates were accordingly conveyed by the trustees to A, "under the prohibition that the disponent for the time being under the destination shall not sell or burden the said subjects hereinbefore disposed with debt . . . except with the consent of his two immediate younger brothers." In an action of declarator at the instance of A, held (1) that he was unlimited fiar of the estates; (2) that he was not barred from so maintaining by having signed the docquet to the trust deed; and (3) that averments made by the defenders to the effect that the trust disposition and the docquet were the result of and embodied a family arrangement were not relevant to be remitted to probation.

Johnston v Johnston, 1903, 5 F. 1039; 40 S.L.R. 757; 11 S.L.T. 299.

(10)

Direct disposition to A in liferent and "after his death" to trustees.

A executed a disposition of the lands of K to B, his son, in liferent, for his liferent use only, and "after his death" to "the Provost of Aberdeen" and the holders of certain other offices, "all for the time being, and their successors in their respective offices," and X, as trustees. The granter recorded this deed in the Books of Council and Session. A died, survived by his son B, who was his heir at law. B brought an action against the trustees for declarator that he was entitled to the fee of the lands of K as heir at law of his father, on the ground that the disposition of the fee to the trustees did not take effect until after his death. Held that on a sound construction of the disposition the lands of K had been effectually disposed to B in liferent and to the trustees in fee.

Edmond v Lord Provost of Aberdeen, 1898, 1 F. 154; 35 S.L.R. 193; 5 S.L.T. 230.

(11)

Inter vivos trust—Disposition defeating wife's right—Simulate trust.

A father transferred all the preference shares in a company which he controlled to trustees for behoof of his daughters. During his lifetime no dividend was paid on the shares. He died possessed of no other estate. His widow, maintaining that the trust was of a simulate character and ineffective during her husband's lifetime, claimed payment from the trustees of (1) a debt due by her husband, and (2) her legal rights in his estate. Action dismissed as irrelevant.

Rowley v Rowley, 1917, 1 S.L.T. 16.

(12)

Whether inter vivos or mortis causa.

Terms of a trust settlement which was held to be mainly an inter vivos deed and not to fall under sec. 1 of the Conveyancing Amendment Act, 1887.

Magistrates of Edinburgh v Wright, (O.H.) 1902, 9 S.L.T. 318.

(13)

Testamentary writing and verbal directions.

Question, whether a testamentary writing made the executor universal legatee, or imported a trust to carry out the testator's wishes verbally expressed.

Wilson v Lindsay, 1878, 5 R. 539; 15 S.L.R. 289.

(14)

Separate deeds constituting one trust.

A person executed on the same day (1) a deed assigning stock and moveables to trustees, the income to be paid to him during life, but the capital to be held for beneficiaries, and (2) a mortis causa trust deed in favour of the same trustees, conveying heritage in Scotland. Held that the two deeds created one trust, and that the trustees, though not resident in Scotland, were, in respect of the Scottish heritage conveyed by the second deed, subject to the jurisdiction of the Court in an action of reduction of the first.

Charles v Charles' Trustees, 1868, 6 M. 772; 40 J. 397; 5 S.L.R. 502.

(15)

Obligation to test—Deeds alleged to be in fraudem of obligation.

Murray v Macfarlane's Trustees, 1895, 22 R. 927; 32 S.L.R. 715; 3 S.L.T. 63. Succession, No. 335.

(16)

Validity of trust deed—Spouses a majority of trustees—Power to trustees to advance trust funds to spouses.

An antenuptial marriage contract appointed the spouses and the wife's father the sole trustees, and the trustees were empowered at the joint request of the spouses to advance such portion of the trust estate to the husband as the trustees might think right. Under the marriage contract the wife had a liferent allanarly, which was declared not to be affectable by her own or her husband's debts or deeds or the diligence of their creditors. Held that as the spouses were a majority of the trustees, and might consequently lend any part of the trust funds to the husband, the marriage contract was not effectual to protect the wife's liferent.

McCallum v McCulloch's Trustees, 1904, 7 F. 337; 42 S.L.R. 256; 12 S.L.T. 630.

(17)

Delivery—Disposition to heritage taken by father in favour of self and children nominatim—Subsequent testamentary disposition—Repugnancy.

The purchaser of a piece of land took the disposition to himself for behoof of three of his children nominatim, and to their heirs, with power to him, so long as the youngest of the children was in minority (but not afterwards, except with their consent), to raise money for building by granting a bond and disposition in security. The deed remained in his possession until his death, when it was found that he had executed a settlement conveying the property to a nephew. In an action to reduce this conveyance, raised by one of the children named in the original disposition, held that the conveyance challenged was inoperative and invalid, the granter not being in titulo to dispose of the property.

Gilpin v Martin, 1869, 7 M. 807; 41 J. 430; 6 S.L.R. 518.

(18)

Bond and disposition in security taken by father in favour of himself as trustee for his daughter—Recording in Register of Sasines—Bond undelivered.

A father lent money belonging to himself upon a bond and disposition in security, taking the bond in favour of himself as trustee for his daughter nominatim, and recorded the bond in the Register of Sasines for behoof of himself as trustee for his daughter. The bond bore that the money had been lent by him from funds held by him in trust for his daughter. He retained the bond in his own custody till his death, and his daughter did not know of its existence until afterwards. Held (by a court of seven judges) that the recording of the bond in the Register of Sasines did not operate delivery to the daughter so as to create an effectual trust in her favour.

Cameron's Trustees v Cameron, 1907 S.C. 407; 44 S.L.R. 354; 14 S.L.T. 719.

(19)

Precatory trust.

A testator bequeathed his moveable estate to his widow, and stated in his will his "desire" that at her death some part of the estate should go to his brother's and sisters' families—"In particular, I should like not less than £50 sterling left to" his brother's widow, "and I desire that my wife may make a settlement providing for this." The testator's widow having died intestate, held that her executor was not bound to give effect to the testator's request.

Garden's Executor v More, 1913 S.C. 285; 50 S.L.R. 249; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 482.

(20)

Executory trust—Liferent and fee—Gift to parent in liferent and to his children in fee.

A testator, by his holograph will, directed his trustees "to make over" certain heritable properties to his eldest son "with the burden upon them of thirty pounds stg. to his two oldest children by his first marriage during his lifetime and at his death so as to be equally divided amongst his other children." Held that the testator had expressed his intention that his son should have a liferent only, and had directed his trustees to take the necessary steps to carry this into effect; and, accordingly, that the trustees were bound to execute a conveyance of the property in favour of the son for his liferent only, and in favour of his children (other than the two eldest) in fee.

Brash's Trustees v Phillipson, 1916 S.C. 271; 53 S.L.R. 205; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 16.

(21)

Constructive trust.

Observed (per Lord Westbury)—"An obligation to do an act with respect to property creates a trust; and if a fiar, bound to fulfil an obligation, acquires or retains, by means of his neglect of that duty, a greater estate than he would otherwise have had, he is a trustee of such excess of interest for the benefit of the persons who would have been entitled to it if the obligation had been duly fulfilled."

Fleeming v Howden, 1868, 6 M. (H.L.) 113; 40 J. 616; L.R., 1 Sc.App. 372; 5 S.L.R. 698.

(22)

Observed (per Lord Shaw)—"A contractual obligation with regard to property, which has not effectually and actually brought about either a security upon it or a conveyance of it, is not per se the foundation of a trust or of a declarator of trust."

Bank of Scotland v Liquidators of Hutchison, Main & Co., 1914 S.C. (H.L.) 1; 51 S.L.R. 229; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 111.

(23)

Held that the purchase by a mother, who had a power of apportionment of a fund, of the interest of one of her children in the fund, was made in trust for the child.

McDonald v McGrigor, 1874, 1 R. 817.

(24)

Partnership.

Where a partner on the expiry of a contract of copartnership and of a lease of the partnership premises, without notice to his copartner, takes a new lease in his own name and carries on the same business on his own account, he is bound to communicate a share of the profits to his former copartner.

McNiven v Peffers, 1868, 7 M. 181; 41 J. 104; 6 S.L.R. 151.

(25)

Conveyance to company of assets of firm—Lease held by sole partner as trustee for firm—Partner holding lease as trustee for company.

A limited company entered into an agreement whereby it took over the whole assets of a firm. These consisted, inter alia, of the lease of a brickwork which was in the name of R. Y., the sole partner of the firm as trustee therefor. Circumstances in which held that R. Y. had come to hold the lease as trustee for the company.

Liquidator of James Young & Sons v James Young & Sons' Trustee, (O.H.) 1902, 10 S.L.T. 85.

(26)

Director.

A person who allows his name to be set forth in the prospectus of a proposed company as a director, from the time that he agrees to become a director stands in a fiduciary relation to the company, and cannot enter into a contract with a vendor to the company for his own benefit.

Henderson v Huntington Copper and Sulphur Co., 1877, 5 R. (H.L.) 1; 15 S.L.R. 217.

(27)

Trustees.

Trustees held to have acquired salmon fishings in the character of holders of trust property, and bound to communicate the benefit to the trust.

Magistrates of Aberdeen v University of Aberdeen, 1877, 4 R. (H.L.) 48; 2 App.Cas. 544; 14 S.L.R. 490.

(28)

Trustees as individuals taking shares in limited company formed to acquire part of trust estate.

An ironmongery business formed part of a trust estate. The business was converted into a limited liability company. The trustees as individuals subscribed for some of the ordinary shares of the company. Thereafter the beneficiaries under the trust brought an action for declarator that the shares held by the trustees as individuals were truly subscribed for by them as trustees, and that they were bound to execute transfers of the shares to the trustees of the trust on payment out of the trust estate of the sums which they had subscribed. Decree granted as craved.

Taylor v Hillhouse's Trustees, (O.H.) 1901, 9 S.L.T. 31.

(29)

Latent trust—Adjudication.

Opinion (per Lord Watson) that a creditor adjudging heritage held by his debtor subject to a latent trust can be in no better position in a question with the cestui qui trust than if he had obtained a conveyance without value from his debtor.

Heritable Reversionary Co. v Millar, 1892, 19 R. (H.L.) 43; [1892] A.C. 598; 30 S.L.R. 13.

(30)

Implied trust—Mortgage over ship—Agreement for repayments out of profits—Specific appropriation—Breach of trust.

A offered to advance to a shipping company £15,000 on a mortgage over a steam vessel, on "condition that all profits earned by the steamer to be paid to us towards reducing the loan till the loan shall have been reduced to £10,000." The managing committee of the company agreed to accept the offer, subject to the modification "that instead of all the profits being paid to A till the mortgage was reduced to £10,000, they should be paid at the rate of £2000 per annum until then." A agreed to the modification, and the arrangement was approved by the company. Subsequently the advance was made, and the mortgage granted. The company went into liquidation. Held that the agreement imported merely a personal obligation by the company to pay to A £2000 per annum from profits, and that A had no preference over the profits.

Graham & Co. v Raeburn & Verel, 1895, 23 R. 84; 33 S.L.R. 61; 3 S.L.T. 146.

Uncertainty.

[See SUCCESSION IV. 10.]

(31)

Trust unworkable—Constitution of new trust with modified purposes—Authority of Court.

Gray v Gray's Trustees, 1877, 4 R. 378, No. 540, infra.

(32)

Extent of estate conveyed—De presenti conveyance—Proof—Extraneous declarations of intention.

Gellatly's Trustees v Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh, (O.H.) 1905, 13 S.L.T. 38, No. 55, infra.

(33)

Contract—Subject inconsistent with trust purposes.

Held that, in the construction of a trust deed, if the vesting in the trustees of a particular subject is not necessary, or is antagonistic to the purposes of a trust, then the presumption is against such vesting. The purposes of the trust being for the preservation of capital, leaving the enjoyment of the income to the trustor, the presumption was against an annuity due to the trustor falling within the trust conveyance.

Culcreuch's Trustees v Home, (O.H.) 1894, 2 S.L.T. 170.

2. REVOCABILITY.

[See VI. 1, infra.]

3. TRUSTEES EX OFFICIO.

[See CHARITABLE TRUSTS AND BEQUESTS II. 3.]

II. PROOF OF TRUST.

Act 1696, c. 25.

(34)

Writ or oath—Patent taken in name of patentees in trust.

Letters patent were taken out in name of two persons, one of whom was a partner of a firm. In an action against the two patentees at the instance of the firm, concluding for declarator that the patent was held for the pursuers' behoof and was their sole property, the pursuers stated that the patent had really been taken out by them and at their expense, and that the insertion of the defenders' names as the patentees had only been for the purpose of compliance with the Patent Acts. Held that proof of the pursuers' averments, even against the patentee who was a partner of the pursuers' firm, must be limited under the Act 1696, c. 25, to the defenders' writ or oath.

Laird & Co. v Laird, 1884, 12 R. 294; 22 S.L.R. 200.

(35)

Shares registered in name of law agent.

In an action of declarator that certain shares registered in the name of the defender were in reality the pursuer's property, the pursuer averred that the shares were a portion of those received by him in payment of the price of his business, which had been taken over by the company, that he had agreed, for reasons given, that the shares should be registered in the defender's name, but that he had instructed the defender, who was his law agent, to see that provision was made for the property in the shares remaining with him notwithstanding the registration. He admitted that a written agreement had been executed to which he and the company were parties, whereby the shares in question were allotted to the defender. Held that a case of mandate relevant to exclude the operation of the Act 1696, c. 25, had not been averred, and that proof of the pursuer's averments must accordingly be limited to writ or oath of the defender.

Anderson v Yorston, (O.H.) 1906, 14 S.L.T. 54.

(36)

Allegation that assignment in satisfaction of debt truly in security merely.

A debtor assigned to his creditor all his "right, title, and interest" in an extract decree which he held against a third person, "with full power" to the creditor "to use said decree in any manner of way whatever, in the same way as I could have done before granting thereof, in satisfaction of his claim against me." In an action at the instance of the assignor against the assignee for declarator that the assignment was merely in security, held that an allegation of an understanding that the assignment was merely in security was an averment of trust, which could only be proved by the writ or oath of the assignee.

Purnell v Shannon, 1894, 22 R. 74; 32 S.L.R. 47; 2 S.L.T. 288.

(37)

—Trust deed for creditors — Sale of assets by trustee to creditor — Proof that creditor purchased in trust for the debtor.

The trustee under a trust deed for creditors sold the whole assets of the debtor to a creditor. Thereafter the grantor of the trust deed brought an action against the creditor for declarator that the creditor purchased the assets on behalf of and in trust for the pursuer, and that the pursuer was entitled to obtain possession of the assets on repaying him the price. Held that a plea of the defender that the pursuer's averments could only be proved by the defender's writ or oath fell to be repelled on the ground that no "deed of trust" was averred to which the provisions of the Act 1696, c. 25, could apply.

Gardiner v Cowie, (O.H.) 1897, 4 S.L.T. 256.

(38)

—“Deed of trust”—Missives of sale—Mandate—Agent and principal.

A agreed to sell to B certain heritable subjects. The transaction was completed by a letter signed by A offering to sell the subjects to B at a certain price, and an acceptance by B written below, C becoming bound along with B for payment of the price. C raised an action against B for declarator that the missives of sale were entered into by the defender on behalf of the pursuer, and for decree ordaining the defender to denude of the subjects and convey the same to the pursuer. The pursuer averred that it was agreed between him and the defender, who was a clothier occupying a shop in the premises, that the pursuer should buy the property in question and let the shop to the defender; that the pursuer's name should not be divulged as purchaser to the seller's agent, and that the pursuer gave the defender authority to conclude the bargain in his own name "on the understanding and agreement that the disposition by the seller would be granted and taken in the pursuer's name." The action was raised before a disposition of the subjects was executed. Held (1) that the missives of sale constituted a deed of trust in the sense of the Act 1696, c. 25, and (2) that as the defender was authorised to complete the purchase in his own name, the pursuer's averments could only be proved by the defender's writ or oath.

Dunn v Pratt, 1898, 25 R. 461; 35 S.L.R. 365; 5 S.L.T. 285.

(39)

—Agreement relative to heritage.

In 1867 the proprietor of a plot of ground conveyed the same for a price to A and B, in trust for behoof of themselves and twenty other persons, to the extent of one twenty-second share pro indiviso each. In 1897 the Govan Bowling Club raised an action against these twenty-two persons, who were all members of the club, for declarator that the club was entitled to a conveyance on repayment of the price paid, or otherwise, that the conveyance to A and B was a trust in their persons for the use of the members of the club. The pursuers averred that in 1867 an arrangement, which was embodied in an undated document delivered to the club, had been entered into, whereby it was agreed that the necessary funds should be advanced by twenty-two members of the club, that the club should have the right at any time to repay the sums so advanced, with interest at 5 per cent., and upon doing so, should have a right to demand a conveyance from the persons feudally vested therein; and that in pursuance of this agreement the necessary funds had been contributed by the twenty-two members, and the title taken in favour of A and B for behoof of themselves and the other twenty contributors. Held (1) that there was no relevant averment of a trust vested in the twenty-two members for behoof of the club; (2) that there was a relevant averment of an agreement that the club should have the right, upon repaying the twenty-two members the sums advanced by them, to a conveyance of the ground; and (3) that this, being an agreement relative to heritage, could only be proved by writ or oath.

Govan New Bowling Green Club v Geddes, 1898, 25 R. 485; 35 S.L.R. 391; 5 S.L.T. 323.

(40)

Transaction between husband and wife.

The Act 1696, c. 25, does not apply to the case where the trustor is a person who is under a legal disability, and where the trustee already stands in a fiduciary relation to the trustor. So held in an action by a widow against her deceased husband's trustees for conveyance to her of certain stocks standing in her husband's name which she averred had been purchased with money belonging to her.

Anderson v Anderson's Trustee, (O.H.) 1898, 6 S.L.T. 204.

(41)

Whether entries in books and letters delivered to deceased equivalent to his writ.

In an action against the executor of a person deceased for recovery of a deposit alleged to have been made by the pursuer with the deceased to secure him against loss from a cautionary obligation, held that the trust could be competently proved by entries in the deceased's books in his own hand, showing that he had received the money, coupled with letters from the pursuer to the deceased, found in his repositories, and proved to have been delivered to him at the time of the entries, explaining the transaction.

Thomson v Lindsay, 1873, 1 R. 65; 11 S.L.R. 12.

(42)

Proof prout de jure—Question with third parties—Trust in fraud of creditors.

In an action of reduction and declarator of trust brought by the trustee on A's sequestrated estate to establish his right to lands vested in B by an absolute title, held that the pursuer was not limited to proof by writ or oath of his averment, and that (at a date when A was solvent, and when the creditors represented by the pursuer had no claims against him) A and B had arranged to have the title to A's property taken in name of B, for the fraudulent purpose of defeating the rights of A's creditors in the event of his bankruptcy.

Opinion (per Lord Benholme) that the operation of the Act 1696, c. 25, restricting the method of proof, is limited to questions arising between trusters and trustees and their respective representatives, and does not apply to questions arising with creditors.

Wink v Speirs, 1867, 6 M. 77; 40 J. 47; 5 S.L.R. 76.

(43)

Question with third parties.

In an action of damages the jurisdiction of the Court depended on whether the defender was proprietor of certain heritage in Scotland or held the heritage as trustee merely. Held that as the question was not one between trustor and trustee, proof was not limited to writ or oath, and that the documentary evidence taken in connection with the parole proof established that when the summons was served the defender had in reality no patrimonial interest in the property, which, ex facie of the title, was at that date feudally vested in him, and therefore that the Court had no jurisdiction to entertain the action against him.

Hastie v Steel, 1886, 13 R. 843; 23 S.L.R. 559.

(44)

Right to policy of insurance on life of a partner in a company.

Held that it was competent to prove prout de jure that a policy of insurance on the life of a partner of a company belonged to the company.

Forrester, &c. v Robson's Trustees, 1875, 2 R. 755; 12 S.L.R. 464.

(45)

Averment that lease in name of director was in trust for company.

Terms of writ held sufficient to instruct a trust in an action at the instance of a joint stock company against one of their directors, to have it declared that the lease of a quarry had been granted to the defender and two other directors in trust for the company.

Opinions that the case alleged was one in which an agent had taken a title in his own name contrary to his mandate, and that, therefore, proof prout de jure would have been competent.

Pant-Mawr Quarry Co. v Fleming, 1883, 10 R. 457; 20 S.L.R. 307.

(46)

Mandate—Right to heritage standing in name of a joint adventurer.

Where one of two joint adventurers took the title to heritage belonging to the adventure in his own name, held, in an action at the instance of the other, that as he alleged he had not trusted his co-adventurer to take the title in his own name he was entitled to a proof prout de jure, the question being one of mandate and not of trust.

Horne v Morrison, 1877, 4 R. 977; 14 S.L.R. 584.

(47)

Trust or mandate—Agreement to purchase for another—Missive of sale.

In an action concluding for an order for the transference (on payment of the purchase price) by the defender to the pursuer of certain shares in a ship purchased by the defender and registered in the defender's name, the pursuer averred that the defender had agreed with her to purchase these shares on her behalf, and that he had registered them in his own name without her authority. The defender denied the pursuer's averments, and also pleaded that, as they sought to establish a trust, they could only, in terms of the Act 1696, c. 25, be proved by writ or oath. Held that the Act did not apply, in respect that the pursuer was not seeking the establishment of a trust but the implement of a contract of mandate, which could be proved by parole.

M'Connachie v Geddes, 1918 S.C. 391; 55 S.L.R. 437; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 346.

(48)

Trust disclosed—Purpose not declared—Joint adventure—Assignment.

A feudal title to lands was taken to A and B as trustees for themselves, each to the extent of one-half pro indiviso. By ex facie absolute disposition, B conveyed to an onerous assignee his one-half pro indiviso of the lands. This disposition was recorded. In a competition between B's disponee and A, held (1) that the disponee's right was qualified by the trust disclosed in his disponer's title; (2) that the purposes of the trust, not being set forth in the title, might be proved by parole; and (3) that, accordingly, as it was established by such proof that the purpose was a joint adventure by A and B with reference to the lands in question, the disposition by B was only effectual to the extent of his interest in the joint adventure, viz., to the extent of one-half of the free balance on an accounting with A.

Livingstone v Allan, 1900, 3 F. 233; 38 S.L.R. 241; 8 S.L.T. 287.

(49)

Deposit receipt—Writ of depositor—Trust purposes—Competency of parole.

A deposit receipt was taken in the names of two persons "in trust." Held that the deposit receipt must be viewed as the writ of the depositors, and that the objects of the trust could be proved by parole notwithstanding the trustees in their evidence differed as to the trust purposes.

National Bank of Scotland v Mackie's Trustees, (O.H.) 1905, 13 S.L.T. 383.

(50)

"Deed of trust."

A deposit receipt is not a "deed of trust" within the meaning of the Act 1696, c. 25; and accordingly parole proof allowed in an action by a party for declarator that the sum contained in a deposit receipt in the names of others truly belonged to him.

Cairns v Davidson, 1913 S.C. 1054; 50 S.L.R. 850; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 118.

(51)

Whether document simulate.

Question, whether an averment by a son, that a deed resigning partnership with his father and brother was executed merely for the purpose of being shown to his creditors, and to prevent them from interfering with the firm, amounted to an allegation of trust, proveable only by writ or oath under the Statute 1696, c. 25. Opinions in the affirmative per Lords Deas and Barcapple—in the negative per Lord President Inglis and Lord Ardmillan.

Tennent v Tennent's Trustees, 1868, 6 M. 840; 40 J. 408; 5 S.L.R. 514.

(52)

Trust for purposes to be specified in separate writing—Nomination of trustees—Sealed letter with indorsation enjoining letter not to be opened until specified date—Opening of letter on allegation by trustees that it contained trust purposes.

By holograph disposition dated in 1888, A disposed the lands of K to his son B "in liferent, but for his liferent use only, and after his death" to trustees "for the uses, ends, and purposes specified, or to be specified by me, in any writing under my hand." The disposition reserved A's own liferent and dispensed with delivery. A died, leaving a trust disposition and settlement, in which he disposed of his whole means and estate, except the lands of K. In his repositories was found a sealed envelope with an indorsation setting forth that "the enclosed deed is not to take effect nor come into operation until after the death of my son B"; and that, as it would not have been for the interest of his son and others, "I therefore enjoin my trustees and executors not to open the envelope, but to secure the deed to be strictly private in all its parts until my son's death." The persons named as trustees in the disposition of 1888 (who had not accepted office) admitted that if the sealed envelope did not contain the purposes for which they were to hold the lands of K, the deceased had left no deed specifying these purposes, but averred that the sealed envelope contained such a deed, and moved for an order to have the envelope opened in order to prove that averment. The pursuer, and also the testamentary trustees, opposed the motion. Held that the persons named as trustees in the deed of 1888 were entitled to have the envelope opened.

Edmond v Lord Provost of Aberdeen, 1898, 1 F. 154; 35 S.L.R. 193; 5 S.L.T. 230.

(53)

Declarator of trust.

Terms of nomination of trustees in a holograph writing held sufficient to entitle the trustees named to sue a declarator of trust, &c.

Robb's Trustees v Robb, 1872, 10 M. 692; 44 J. 383; 9 S.L.R. 454.

(54)

Delivery — Ambiguity — Proof of circumstances.

Where a writing founded on as a declaration of trust is ambiguous it is competent to inquire into the circumstances in which it was executed and delivered.

Opinion (per Lord Benholme) that the declaration of trust contemplated by the Statute 1696, c. 25, is a writing in some way delivered to the party interested as trustee.

Evans v Craig, 1871, 9 M. 801; 43 J. 442; 8 S.L.R. 534.

(55)

Extent of trust—De presenti conveyance—Question as to estate conveyed—Declarations of intention outside deed.

In a case where a sum of money had been conveyed to trustees inter vivos and, there being doubt as to the amount intended to be conveyed, declarations of intention by the granter outside the deed of trust itself were averred, observed (by Lord Stormonth-Darling), after pointing out that the question was as to the meaning and extent, not of a testamentary gift, but of a de presenti conveyance perfected by delivery of the deed to trustees of an existing beneficiary: "The terms of the deed itself are in that case conclusive, and if these terms, on their just construction, cover more than the subjects actually transferred, a right of action would then arise to the trustees as against the granter himself, no less than against his representatives, to demand full implement of his obligation. This rule applies in our law, although the obligation itself be gratuitous if only it is distinct and irrevocable, and the granter could not escape performance by pleading that he never intended to give so much."

Gellatly's Trustees v Royal Infirmary of Edinburgh, (O.H.) 1905, 13 S.L.T. 38.

III. APPOINTMENT, ASSUMPTION, RESIGNATION AND REMOVAL OF TRUSTEES.

1. APPOINTMENT.

(56)

Nomination of executors—Directions for continuous management of estate—Nomination including appointment as trustees.

A testator in his will nominated certain persons as "executors," and directed them "to make and continue" certain annual payments to certain persons "till death or marriage," and on the expiry of two liferents to divide the proceeds of the estate among specified persons. The executors were further directed to retain, or to realise for reinvestment, in their discretion, various securities held by him. There was no clause conveying any part of the estate to them.

Held that though called "executors" in the deed, they were truly gratuitous trustees with the powers conferred upon such trustees by the Trusts Act, 1861.

Ainslie v Ainslie, 1886, 14 R. 209; 24 S.L.R. 164.

(57)

Implied devolution on survivors.

Observed that in a mortis causa disposition to trustees the condition of survivorship is implied.

Oswald's Trustees v City of Glasgow Bank, 1879, 6 R. 461; 16 S.L.R. 221.

(58)

Conveyance to trustee, whom failing, his heir—Title of heir of deceased trustee to act.

A testator disposed his whole estate to J. H., "whom failing, the nearest heir male who may be resident in Great Britain and sui juris at the time" of J. H., "as trustee for the ends, uses, and purposes aftermentioned." The trust purposes included payment of certain annuities and of a liferent. J. H. survived the testator and accepted office as sole trustee, but died before all the trust purposes were fulfilled. Held that the trust did not lapse by the death of J. H., but that his heir male was entitled to act as trustee and to administer the trust.

Brown v Hastie, 1912 S.C. 304; 49 S.L.R. 250; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 40.

(59)

Heir of last surviving trustee—Whether nomination carried right to office of trustee or only bare trust.

Terms of a trust disposition and settlement on which held that the heir of the last accepting and surviving trustee succeeded only to the bare trust title and not to the office of trustee, and the trust having accordingly lapsed the Lord Ordinary appointed a judicial factor.

White v Anderson, (O.H.) 1904, 12 S.L.T. 493.

(60)

Nomination as tutors and curators—Joint appointment.

Opinions that an appointment of testamentary trustees as tutors and curators to a legatee was a joint appointment of the whole accepting trustees, and that one could not hold the office of tutor if the other accepting trustees declined to do so.

Johnston v Johnston's Trustees, 1892, 20 R. 46; 30 S.L.R. 97.

(61)

Marriage contract—Power of spouses to appoint.

Held that when the whole trustees under a marriage contract have died, the spouses are entitled to appoint new trustees, without applying to the Court.

Newlands v Miller, 1882, 9 R. 1104; 19 S.L.R. 819.

(62)

Mutual settlement—Appointment of new trustee by surviving testator—Competency of appointment by one spouse to affect the other spouse's estate.

A husband and wife executed a mutual settlement. By a codicil the husband after his wife's death, on the narrative that he was "desirous of making additions to the mutual settlement executed by me and my late wife," appointed, "so far as I can competently do so," a new trustee, "as trustee along with the trustees already acting under the foresaid mutual settlement." Held in a question between the original trustees and the new trustee, who admitted that the truster had no power to appoint a new trustee over his wife's estate, that the appointment was invalid, on the ground that it was clear from the terms of the codicil that the truster intended to appoint a new trustee not only upon his own but upon both estates.

Malcolm v Goldie, 1895, 22 R. 968; 32 S.L.R. 711; 3 S.L.T. 101.

(63)

Power of trustee to appoint a successor by will—Appointment of two persons—Validity.

A testator by his will nominated B as his executor and trustee and on his death or resignation or removal he appointed C, his brother, to take his place and after C's death he appointed such person as C should by his last will and testament nominate. C acted, but died before the entire execution of the trust, leaving a deed under which he nominated two persons as trustees. Held that C had not validly exercised the power of appointment conferred on him by A's will, because C was only entitled thereunder to appoint one person.

Bowman v Bowman, (O.H.) 1910, 1 S.L.T. 381.

(64)

Legacy of residue to trustees—Whether acceptance of office a condition of the gift.

A testator by trust disposition and settlement conveyed his whole means and estate to A, B, C, and D, "and to the acceptors or acceptor, survivor or survivors of them, to be my trustees for executing the trust hereby created." He then directed "my said trustees" to pay the income of the trust estate to his sister in liferent, and on her death "I direct my said trustees, the said" A, B, C, and D "to divide the free residue or remainder of my said means and estate equally amongst themselves, . . . declaring that if any of my said trustees shall die before the said residue shall become payable as aforesaid, then such share or respective shares to which they would have been entitled if they were alive shall vest in and be payable to their several heirs, executors, and successors, and I appoint my said trustees to pay and deliver the same to them accordingly." A predeceased the testator. The three other trustees survived the testator, accepted office as trustees, and were acting as such at the death of the life-rentrix. Held (1) that the representatives of A were not entitled to take under the gift of residue, in respect that he had never been a trustee; and (2) that the whole residue fell to be paid to the three accepting and acting trustees, equally—rejecting a claim by the testator's heirs ab intestato to the share which would have fallen to A had he survived and accepted office as trustee.

Mellis's Trustees v Legge's Executrix, 1898, 25 R. 954; 35 S.L.R. 763.

2. ASSUMPTION.

(65) Act 1861, sec. 1—Executors impliedly appointed trustees—Power of assumption.

Terms of a nomination of certain persons as "executors," upon a construction of which it was held that though called "executors" the nominees were truly "gratuitous trustees nominated in a deed" and therefore were entitled to exercise the powers of assumption conferred on such trustees by sec. 1 of the Trusts Act, 1861.

Ainslie v Ainslie, 1886, 14 R. 209; 24 S.L.R. 164.

(66) ———Implied power to assume.

In a trust deed executed prior to 1861 the truster conferred upon her trustees the power to assume new trustees "in place of such of their number as shall die or resign or become incapacitated." In 1864 the original trustees, though none of them had either died, resigned, or become incapacitated, assumed two additional trustees. Held that the assumption was valid under the Trusts Act, 1861, sec. 1, the deed, though not directly conferring the power, containing nothing expressly to the contrary.

Allan's Trustees v Hairstens, 1878, 5 R. 576; 15 S.L.R. 301.

(67) ———Implied power to assume—Marriage contract with power to spouses, or the survivor, to appoint new trustees—Assumption by trustees—Power contrary to provisions of deed.

By an antenuptial contract of marriage, dated in October, 1860, the spouses provided that, in the case of the death, or resignation, or legal incapacity of the trustees named in the deed, it should be competent to them, the spouses, or to the survivor, to appoint new trustees, and also that the trustees should have power after the death of the survivor to assume new trustees. Held that this trust could not be held, during the lifetime of the survivor of the spouses, to include a power of assumption by the trustees nominated, the provisions of the deed being to the contrary.

Munro's Trustees v Young, 1887, 14 R. 574; 24 S.L.R. 392.

(68) Appointment by Court—Power of assumption granted to trustee so appointed.

A petition by a testamentary trustee for leave to resign and for the appointment of new trustees did not contain a crave that the new trustees should have power to assume other trustees. The Lord Ordinary appointed a new trustee and thereafter on the motion of the beneficiaries gave the new trustee power to assume other trustees.

Lennox, (O.H.) 1901, 9 S.L.T. 271.

(69) Two trustees to be a quorum—Assumption by sole survivor.

Terms of a trust disposition and settlement on which held that the words "two a quorum" contained in it with reference to the trustees did not prevent a sole surviving trustee from assuming new trustees, and that accordingly the Court could not appoint trustees under sec. 12 of the Trusts Act, 1867.

Scott v Lunn, (O.H.) 1908, 15 S.L.T. 1045.

(70) Assumption by quorum—No notice to co-trustees.

In a trust which consisted of three trustees, two of them, as a quorum, executed a deed of assumption of two additional trustees without giving any notice to their co-trustee. Held that the deed of assumption was invalid.

Wyse v Abbott, 1881, 8 R. 983; 19 S.L.R. 77.

(71) Act 1867, sec. 11—Assumption of new trustee without consulting trustee absent abroad—Validity.

Under a trust deed trustees had a power to assume new trustees, the majority of the trustees, original or assumed, being a quorum. The trustees, two months after one of their number had gone to reside permanently in Australia, assumed new trustees, without consulting the absent trustee. Held that the assumption was valid (1) at common law; and also (2) under the Trust Acts, 1867, although at the date of the assumption the absent trustee had not, in terms of sec. 11 of the Act, been absent continuously for six months, the purpose of the Act being to enlarge, and not restrict, the powers of trustees.

Malcolm v Goldie, 1895, 22 R. 968; 32 S.L.R. 711; 3 S.L.T. 101.

(72) Deed of assumption by sole acting trustee—Preparation of petition for consent of Court—Death of sole trustee before petition presented—Petition for consent presented by residuary legatee.

The sole surviving and acting trustee under a trust deed executed a deed of assumption of new trustees on the narrative that the only other surviving trustee was resident in Canton, China. A petition for the consent of the Court, under sec. 11 of the Trusts (Scotland) Act, 1867, was drafted, but before it could be presented the acting trustee died. Thereafter a residuary legatee presented a petition for consent to the deed of assumption. Petition granted.

Lewis, (O.H.) 1895, 3 S.L.T. 29.

(73) Grounds on which Court will interfere.

The Court will not interfere with the exercise by a body of testamentary trustees of their statutory power to assume new trustees unless upon allegations of corruption or impropriety, or such like, upon their part.

Averments by one of a body of testamentary trustees which were held insufficient to support a suspension and interdict against the assumption by the others of a new trustee, who, it was alleged, was to support the action of the respondents in opposition to the interest of the complainer in the administration of the trust.

Neilson v Neilson's Trustees, 1885, 12 R. 670; 22 S.L.R. 420.

(74)

Nobile officium—Marriage contract providing for assumption of new trustees with consent of spouses—Insanity of spouse—Dispensing with consent.

A marriage contract contained a clause empowering the trustees to appoint new trustees with the consent of the spouses. The wife having become insane, the Court, in the exercise of its nobile officium, authorised the trustees to assume new trustees without her consent.

Adamson's Trustees, 1917 S.C. 440; 54 S.L.R. 513; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 300.

3. APPOINTMENT OF TRUSTEES BY COURT.

(75)

Lapsed trust—Act 1867, sec. 12.

The Court has power, under the 12th section of the Trusts Act, 1867, to appoint new trustees in a lapsed trust.

Zoller, 1868, 6 M. 577; 40 J. 304; 5 S.L.R. 371.

(76)

Appointment of trustees or judicial factor—Appointment of trustee under supervision of Accountant of Court.

Circumstances in which the Lord Ordinary refused to appoint a single trustee, the nominee of the petitioners, upon a lapsed trust, and made it a condition of appointing two trustees instead of a judicial factor that the trust should be placed under the supervision of the Accountant of Court, under sec. 18 of the Judicial Factors Act, 1889.

Milroy v Tawse, (O.H.) 1905, 12 S.L.T. 777.

(77)

Trustees predeceasing trustee.

Held competent for the Lord Ordinary to appoint new trustees under sec. 12 of the Trusts Act, 1867, where a trust had lapsed by all the trustees having predeceased the trustee.

Graham, 1868, 6 M. 958; sub nom. Maxwell, 5 S.L.R. 615.

(78)

Failure of testator to appoint trustees.

A testatrix by will bequeathed her whole estate to certain beneficiaries, under burden of a liferent to certain other beneficiaries, but she nominated no trustees for carrying her directions into effect. In a petition under sec. 12 of the 1867 Act for the appointment of trustees to act under the will, no answers having been lodged, the Lord Ordinary granted the prayer of the petition, but directed that the trust should be placed under the supervision of the Accountant of Court.

Pattullo, (O.H.) 1908, 46 S.L.R. 712; 16 S.L.T. 637.

(79)

English trust—Scottish heritage.

The Court will not appoint new trustees under an English trust, even where part of the trust estate consists of heritable property in Scotland.

Brockie, 1875, 2 R. 923; 12 S.L.R. 604.

(80)

Trustees appointed by Court of Chancery.

Trustees under an English trust, who were empowered to acquire and had acquired heritage in Scotland, having all died, an application was made to the Court of Chancery for the appointment of new trustees, and new trustees were appointed. Held that an application to the Court of Session under the 12th section of the Trusts (Scotland) Act, 1867, to have trustees appointed to administer the Scottish heritage was incompetent.

Hall, 1869, 7 M. 667; 41 J. 357; 6 S.L.R. 428.

(81)

Scottish trust with English beneficiaries—Reversionary interest assigned to English trustees—Appointment of English trustees to be trustees on lapsed trust.

A trust was created in Scotland, the trustor and all the original trustees being Scottish. Owing to the death of the last surviving trustee, the trust lapsed. All the persons interested in the trust were now resident in England, and the trust funds consisted of debenture stock of an English railway. The reversionary interest in the trust estate had been assigned by the beneficiary entitled thereto to a body of English trustees. In a petition for the appointment of new trustees, the petitioners craved that the English trustees should be appointed trustees in the lapsed trust. The Lord Ordinary granted the prayer of the petition, holding the appointment to be competent.

Allardice, (O.H.) 1900, 8 S.L.T. 6.

(82)

Nobile officium—Disagreement among surviving trustees under marriage contract.

The two surviving trustees under an antenuptial contract of marriage, having failed to agree either as to the investment of the funds or as to the nomination and assumption of new trustees, the Court, on an application by the beneficiaries, appointed three new trustees suggested by them, and not objected to by the surviving trustees.

Aikman, 1881, 9 R. 213; 19 S.L.R. 160.

(83)

Disagreement among trustees.

The administration of a trust having come to a stand owing to the refusal of A, one of the two trustees, to co-operate with B, the other trustee, B, along with the beneficiaries, presented a petition for the removal of A, or otherwise for the appointment of C as a trustee to act along with A and B. At the hearing the respondent A stated that he was willing to join with B in assuming C as a trustee. The Court appointed C to be a trustee.

Dick, 1899, 2 F. 316; 37 S.L.R. 232; 7 S.L.T. 276.

(84)

Appointment of new trustees to replace removed trustee.

It is within the power of the Court, in the exercise of its nobile officium, to appoint new trustees in room of a sole trustee removed from office.

Lamont v Lamont, 1908 S.C. 1033; 45 S.L.R. 811; 16 S.L.T. 220.

(85)

Proposed new trustees resident abroad—Undertaking to submit to jurisdiction of Court.

At the request of a husband and wife, who had left Scotland and had settled in Canada, their antenuptial marriage contract trustees presented a petition to the Court to appoint A and B, residing in Canada, to be trustees in room of the petitioners, and to authorise the petitioners to transfer the trust funds to them, and to resign office. The Court, after A and B had granted a written obligation to submit to the jurisdiction of the Court in all matters relating to the trust, and to obey all orders of the Court thereanent, granted the prayer of the petition.

Simpson's Trustees, 1907 S.C. 87; 44 S.L.R. 62; 14 S.L.T. 447.

(86)

Appointment of Canadian trust company as trustees.

The trustees acting under a Scottish antenuptial contract of marriage and an English marriage settlement, made on the marriage of a Scotsman to an Englishwoman, were the same parties, viz., the spouses themselves, who had left Scotland and settled in Canada, and two other persons who resided in England. The trustees presented a petition to the Court to appoint as trustees, in place of the petitioners, a Canadian trust company incorporated by special Act of Parliament of the Dominion, and having power, inter alia, to undertake the office of trustee; and to authorise the petitioners to transfer the trust funds to the company and to resign. The company entered into a formal obligation, in the event of their appointment, to submit to the jurisdiction of the Court of Session in all matters relating to the trust and to obey all orders of the Court thereanent, and assigned the chambers of a firm of Glasgow writers as their domicile of citation. The Court refused the prayer of the petition.

Stewart's Trustees, 1913 S.C. 647; 50 S.L.R. 430; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 243.

(87)

Non-gratuitous trusts—Trusts for behoof of creditors—Act 1867, sec. 12.

The provisions of the Trusts Act, 1867, apply only to trusts in which the trustees act gratuitously. The Court will not under the 12th section of the Act appoint new trustees in trusts for behoof of creditors.

Mackenzie, &c., 1872, 10 M. 749; 44 J. 428; 9 S.L.R. 478.

(88)

Act 1884, secs. 1 and 2—New appointment when trustees do not act gratuitously.

The trustee appointed under a trust deed for behoof of creditors, which provided for reasonable remuneration being paid to the trustee, having died, the principal creditors presented a petition for the appointment of a new trustee. The Court granted the petition, holding that the operation of the Trusts Act, 1867, is extended by the Trusts Amendment Act, 1884, to trusts in which the trustees do not act gratuitously.

Royal Bank of Scotland, 1893, 20 R. 741; 30 S.L.R. 675; 1 S.L.T. 40.

(89)

Dispensing with reading in minute book.

In a petition under sec. 12 of the Trusts Act, 1867, by the members of an association for holding heritage for appointment of new trustees, the former trustees having all resigned or died, the Lord Ordinary granted the petition on 13th March, and on the motion of the petitioners, who pointed out that sales of a considerable part of their properties had been arranged for settlement at Whitsunday, and that immediate extract was accordingly necessary, dispensed with the reading in the minute book.

Edinburgh Property Association, (O.H.) 1920, 1 S.L.T. 243.

(90)

Powers of trustees appointed by court.

Held that trustees appointed by the Court under sec. 12 of the Trusts Act, 1867, have the same duties and powers as the trustees nominated by the testator, except the power of assuming new trustees unless that is specially conferred by the Court, and accordingly that they had power to appoint and remunerate one of their number as law agent and factor.

Allan's Trustee v. M'Dougall, (O.H.) 1899, 7 S.L.T. 26.

(91)

Assumption.

Lennox, (O.H.) 1901, 9 S.L.T. 271, No. 68, supra.

4. RESIGNATION.

(92)

Trusts Act, 1867, sec. 10—Resignation of whole body of trustees.

A marriage contract executed prior to the Trusts Act, 1861, provided that if any trustee tee desired to resign, it should be in the power of the other trustees to discharge him. The whole trustees, being desirous to resign, presented a petition, founded on the Trusts Act, 1867, for the appointment of a judicial factor, and for authority to resign. It was opposed by the beneficiaries. Held that the trustees had power to resign under the Trusts Acts, 1861 and 1867, and that the power was not excluded by the terms of the marriage contract, and a judicial factor appointed.

Maxwell's Trustees v Maxwell, 1874, 2 R. 71; 12 S.L.R. 39.

(93)

Intimation of resignation to co-trustee—Effect of failure to intimate.

Question, whether a resignation by minute executed and recorded in the form authorised by the Trusts Act, 1867, but not intimated to co-trustees, is effectual in a question with them.

Sinclair v City of Glasgow Bank, 1879, 6 R. 571; 16 S.L.R. 235.

(94)

Effect of intimation—Company.

Held that when one of several persons entered in the register of shareholders of a public company as trustees has divested himself of the office of trustee in terms of sec. 10 of the Act 1867, he has, on intimation thereof to the company (the company not being in liquidation), an absolute right to have his name removed from the register.

Dalglish v Land Feuing Co., 1885, 13 R. 223; 23 S.L.R. 138.

(95)

Acceptance of investment by trustee—Subsequent letter "declining" office of trustee—Resignation not intimated to company.

Ker v City of Glasgow Bank, 1879, 6 R. (H.L.) 52; 4 App.Cas. 549, 598; 16 S.L.R. 285, 507, No. 266, infra.

(96)

Revocation of intimated minute of resignation.

Held that a minute of resignation by a trustee, in the form of the Trusts Act, 1867, sec. 10, sched. A, could not be revoked after intimation to the co-trustees, although it did not take effect in terms of the statute till a subsequent date.

Fullarton's Trustees v James, 1895, 23 R. 105; 33 S.L.R. 126; 3 S.L.T. 159.

(97)

Trustees vested with discretionary powers—Application for judicial factor—Possible limitation of factor's powers.

A testator directed his trustees to hold the residue of his trust estate for behoof of his children in alimentary liferent and their issue in fee, with a declaration that the share in the fee should not vest in the grandchildren till they attained the age of twenty-one, and conferred a discretionary power on the trustees to make advances out of capital to his grandchildren before the fee became vested in them. The trustees, who were gratuitous trustees, having presented a petition for the appointment of a judicial factor and for authority to resign, a curator ad litem appointed to the grandchildren objected to the petition being granted on the ground that it was doubtful whether the Court would authorise a judicial factor to exercise the discretionary power. The Court, while refusing to say ab ante what power the Court might confer on the factor, held that the trustees, being gratuitous trustees, had an absolute right to resign, which was not affected by the possibility of the judicial factor appointed in their room having a more limited power of administration.

McConnell's Trustees, 1897, 25 R. 330; 35 S.L.R. 254; 5 S.L.T. 241.

(98)

Resignation of non-gratuitous trustee—Conflict of trustee's private and trust interests.

One of the trustees under a testamentary trust who had accepted office in 1879, and thereby become entitled to a legacy of £50, presented a petition in 1895 for authority to resign. He stated that part of the trust estate consisted of two bonds and dispositions in security, granted by the petitioner and two other persons; that owing to the death of one of his co-obligants, leaving very little estate, and to the sequestration of the estates of the other, the petitioner had come to be practically the sole obligant under the bonds, and that he was unable to fulfil his obligation; that the trustees had resolved in 1892 to enter into possession of the security subjects, and had raised an action against the petitioner and the executor of the deceased co-obligant for payment of the principal and interest under the bonds; that decree in absence had followed; that thereafter negotiations for a compromise had been entered into; and that a direct conflict of interests had thus arisen between the petitioner as an individual and the trust. The petition was not opposed. The Court granted the petition.

Guthrie, 1895, 22 R. 879.

(99)

Alleged inability to devote time to trust affairs.

One of the trustees under a testamentary trust, who had accepted office, becoming thereby entitled to a legacy of £100 under the trust deed, presented a petition for authority to resign, averring that he had accepted office under a misapprehension as to the duties involved; that, owing to the magnitude of the trust estate, the affairs of the trust, if properly attended to by him, were likely to occupy more of his time and attention than, as a man with heavy cares and business responsibilities of his own, he could afford to bestow; that he deemed it prudent and for the best interests of the trust that he should resign; that the trust deed gave no power to resign; and that he was willing to renounce his legacy provided he was relieved of office. The Court, in respect that no sufficient reason had been stated entitling the petitioner to resign, refused the petition.

Scott v Muir's Trustees, 1894, 22 R. 78; 32 S.L.R. 63; 2 S.L.T. 305.

(100)

Circumstances in which the Court, ex nobili officio, allowed the resignation of two non-gratuitous testamentary trustees who could not resign under the Trusts Acts, and who had not power to resign under the settlement, one of the trustees being of advanced years, and the other being occupied with a public appointment which prevented him attending meetings of trustees.

Alison, 1896, 23 S.L.R. 362.

(101)

Repayment of legacy.

Circumstances in which the Court authorised a testamentary trustee to resign office on repayment of a legacy he had received.

Orphoot, 1897, 24 R. 871; 34 S.L.R. 651; 5 S.L.T. 33.

(102)

Petition for confirmation of resignation—Competency.

One of the trustees under a testamentary trust, who had accepted office in June, 1879, becoming thereby entitled to a legacy of £50 under the trust deed, resigned office in November, 1879, on the ground that a conflict of interests had emerged between him as an individual and the trust, and the resignation was accepted by his co-trustees. The trust deed conferred no power to resign. In 1895, in consequence of a doubt having arisen as to the validity of his resignation, in respect that he was a non-gratuitous trustee, he presented a petition to the Court to authorise and confirm his resignation as at November, 1879. The petition was not opposed. The Court dismissed the petition as incompetent. Opinions as to the validity of the resignation reserved.

Maclean, 1895, 22 R. 872; 32 S.L.R. 661; 3 S.L.T. 74.

(103)

Powers of gratuitous trustees conferred by trust deed—Act 1867, sec. 1.

A trustee accepted a legacy under a trust deed, which bequeathed legacies to all the trustees, "but without prejudice to their powers as gratuitous trustees." He was desirous of resigning after an action had been raised against the trustees. Held that the trustee was entitled to resign under reservation of all liabilities already incurred by him in respect of the subject-matter of the action.

Assets Co. v Shiress, (O.H.) 1896, 4 S.L.T. 120.

(104)

Implied power to resign conferred in trust deed.

A trust disposition and settlement, which conferred no express power on the trustees to resign, contained a clause declaring that, upon any of the trustees resigning office and accounting for their intromissions, the remaining trustees should be bound to discharge them of their office. The truster left legacies to each of his accepting trustees. In a petition presented by two trustees who had acted for some years for authority to resign, held that the trustees had power to resign under the deed, and petition refused as unnecessary.

Bunten v Muir, 1894, 21 R. 370; 31 S.L.R. 305; 1 S.L.T. 460.

(105)

Insanity of trustee—Resignation by curator bonis.

Where a trustee became insane, and was placed under curatory, the Court granted authority to his curator bonis to resign his ward's trusts.

Laidlaw, 1882, 10 R. 130; 20 S.L.R. 86.

5. REMOVAL.

(106)

General rule.

Observed (per Lord President Inglis)—"In order to justify us in adopting so extreme a measure as the removal of a trustee, there must be something more than mere irregularity or illegality. We are not in the habit of removing a trustee unless there has been a decided malversation of office."

Gilchrist's Trustees v Dick, 1883, 11 R. 22; 21 S.L.R. 17.

(107)

Disagreement between trustees.

The mere fact that trustees cannot act harmoniously will not justify their removal and the appointment of a judicial factor.

Hope v Hope, 1884, 12 R. 27; 22 S.L.R. 33.

(108)

—A, one of two trustees, who were law agents, wrote to B, his co-trustee, who was law agent in the trust, making a claim for half-fees on all business to be done by B for the trust, and added that on this condition being agreed to he would consider the question of investing the trust funds. B refused to agree to this arrangement. A thereafter refused to approve of an investment suggested by B, assigning no reason for his refusal. He also refused to assume new trustees or to resign. On a petition by the beneficiaries, the Court removed A from the office of trustee, but continued the petition until B had lodged a minute of assumption of two new trustees.

Stewart v Chalmers, 1904, 7 F. 163; 42 S.L.R. 135; 12 S.L.T. 486.

(109)

Absconding trustee—Warrant issued for arrest for embezzlement—Proof.

In a petition for the removal of a sole trustee it was stated that the trustee was believed to have left the country, that a warrant for his apprehension on various charges of embezzlement had been issued, and that proceedings had been raised to have his estate sequestrated. On a remit by the Division the Junior Lord Ordinary on production of affidavits by the trustee on the sequestrated estate and the procurator-fiscal as to the embezzlement and disappearance of the absconding trustee, removed him from office.

Wishart, (O.H.) 1910, 2 S.L.T. 229.

(110)

Absent trustees—Neglect of trust business.

Four trustees accepted a trust, a majority being a quorum. Two of them, A and B, were sequestrated in 1855, and ceased to reside in Scotland, and thereafter made no answer to communications regarding the management of the trust. On a petition presented by the other two trustees, and concurred in by the beneficiaries, alleging that a beneficial act of management could not be performed owing to the absence and silence of these trustees, and praying for the removal of A and B from the office of trustees, the Court ordered intimation through the Post Office to A and B, and also intimation to their last known agents, with certification; and no appearance having been made, they removed the two absent trustees.

Walker, 1868, 6 M. 973; 5 S.L.R. 543.

(111)

Proof of absence.

In a petition under the Trusts Amendment (Scotland) Act, 1891, sec. 8, for the removal of a trustee on the ground of continuous absence from the United Kingdom the Lord Ordinary refused to accept the extract appointment of a factor loco absentis as sufficient evidence, but allowed the petitioners to lodge affidavits, holding that the statute left it in the discretion of the Court to say what evidence should be sufficient.

Dickson's Trustees, (O.H.) 1894, 2 S.L.T. 61.

(112)

Mental incapacity—Medical certificates—Act 1891, sec. 8.

Held (by Lord Stormonth - Darling, after consultation with the other judges) that in a petition for removal of a trustee under sec. 8 of the Trusts (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1891, on the ground of insanity, the Court would be satisfied with such evidence of incapacity as is required in a petition for the appointment of a curator bonis.

Lees, (O.H.) 1893, 1 S.L.T. 42.

(113)

Wilful misconduct.

Where a sole trustee had wilfully failed to carry out the directions of the trust deed, a petition for his removal at the instance of all the parties beneficially interested in the trust was granted.

Whyte, 1891, 28 S.L.R. 901.

(114)

Maladministration.

Circumstances in which held that the administration of a trust estate, though in some respects disclosing mistakes and irregularities, did not afford ground for the removal of the trustee.

Taylor v Adam's Trustees, 1876, 13 S.L.R. 268.

(115)

Mismanagement of trust estate—Bona fides of trustee—No loss to estate.

Where a trustee had invested the trust funds in business, and had kept no sederunt book or trust accounts, but had acted in good faith, and with the result of producing a benefit to the trust estate, the Court, notwithstanding the illegal conduct of the trustee, in the circumstances refused a petition for his removal and the appointment of a judicial factor.

Gilchrist's Trustees v Dick, 1883, 11 R. 22; 21 S.L.R. 17.

(116)

Adverse interest to trust estate.

A trustee, who had brought an action against the trust estate concluding for payment to himself of a certain sum on grounds which involved a charge of fraud against the deceased truster, refused to resign office. The Court, on the petition of two out of his three co-trustees, removed him from the office of trustee.

Cherry v Patrick, 1910 S.C. 32; 47 S.L.R. 17; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 276.

(117)

Sequestration of trustee—Claim by trust on his estate.

A petition at the instance of one of two testamentary trustees and executors, who were also tutors to the truster's pupil children, for the removal of the other trustee from these offices on the ground that his estates had been sequestrated, and that the trust had a claim against his estate, granted.

Whittle v Carruthers, 1896, 23 R. 775; 33 S.L.R. 591; 4 S.L.T. 27.

(118)

Averments of danger to trust funds.

Circumstances in which the Court refused to remove trustees, holding that the averments of danger to the trust funds were insufficient and irrelevant.

Dryburgh v Walker's Trustees, 1873, 1 R. 31.

(119)

Petition for removal—Process—Act 1891, sec. 8.

Held that a petition for the removal of a trustee, under sec. 8 of the Trusts Act, 1891, may be presented to a Lord Ordinary.

Johnston v Johnston, 1900, 2 F. 467; 37 S.L.R. 344; 7 S.L.T. 343.

Reid, (O.H.) 1897, 5 S.L.T. 124.

(120)

Non-gratuitous trustee—Incapacity—Appeal to nobile officium—Trusts (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1891, sec. 8.

In a petition to the Inner House for the removal of a trustee on the ground of incapacity, which was presented at common law, and made no reference to the Trusts Act of 1891, held that the Court, having jurisdiction to deal with the question of removal, was not entitled to treat the application as an appeal to its discretion for the exercise of its nobile officium, but was bound to apply the provisions of sec. 8 of the Trusts Act, 1891, and to remove the trustee on proof of his incapacity.

Tod v Marshall, 1895, 23 R. 36; 33 S.L.R. 18; 3 S.L.T. 121.

(121)

Charitable trust—Sequestration of estate—Interim appointment of judicial factor.

Carmont v Mitchell's Trustees, 1883, 10 R. 829; 20 S.L.R. 563. CHARITABLE TRUSTS AND BEQUESTS, No. 60.

6. SUPERSESSON BY APPOINTMENT OF JUDICIAL FACTOR.

[See JUDICIAL FACTOR I. 5.]

IV. ADMINISTRATION OF TRUST.

1. GENERALLY.

(122)

Policy of Scots courts with respect to judicial administration of trusts.

Per Lord Chancellor Selborne—"There is a difference between the course of the courts in England and Scotland respectively as to the grounds which are held sufficient for a general judicial administration at the instance either of fiduciaries or beneficiaries. The Court of Session will not in either case interfere with the administration extra curiam except for some special cause shown. The English court, on the other hand, regards the mere exoneration of fiduciaries from the risks and responsibilities of an administration extra curiam, and the better security for the interests of beneficiaries afforded by a judicial administration as sufficient reasons (generally) for its intervention."

Orr Ewing's Trustees v Orr Ewing, 1885, 13 R. (H.L.) 1; 10 App.Cas. 453; 22 S.L.R. 911.

(123)

Application by trustees for superintendence order—Application by minority—Competency—Judicial Factors (Scotland) Act, 1889, sec. 18.

An application to the Court by trustees under the Judicial Factors Act, 1889, sec. 18, for a superintendence order with regard to the investment and distribution of the trust estate is competent only at the instance of the trustees as a corporate body or of a majority of them. It cannot be made by a minority, or by a single trustee, who disagree with the administration of the majority.

Coulson v Murison's Trustees, 1920 S.C. 322; 57 S.L.R. 293; 1920, 1 S.L.T. 208.

(124)

Trustees also entitled to act as executors.

Terms of a mutual settlement by a husband and wife nominating certain persons to be trustees along with the surviving spouse who had been appointed "sole trustee and executor of the predeceaser, held to import their nomination also as executors. Opinions that a testamentary conveyance to certain persons as trustees or with a direction to manage does not necessarily imply their appointment as executors.

Martin v Ferguson's Trustees, 1892, 19 R. 474; 29 S.L.R. 401.

(125)

Accountant in Bankruptcy — Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act, 1856, sec. 166.

Question, whether private trusts can be brought under the superintendence of the Accountant in Bankruptcy, in terms of the 166th section of the Bankruptcy (Scotland) Act, 1856.

Raeburn's Trustees, 1888, 15 R. 740.

(126)

Aggregation of separate trust funds — Right to participate in appreciation in value.

Circumstances in which held, in regard to a hospital which had been in existence since prior to 1695, that a special fund, known as the Alexander fund, which had been constituted in that year had since the year 1700 been immixed with and dealt with as part of the funds of the hospital, and must be held to have participated proportionally with the hospital funds in the increase of value of the aggregate funds and property between the years 1700 and 1873; and that a purchase of lands in 1734 was to be regarded as a purchase on account of the joint funds, although the original Alexander bonds were not paid until a subsequent date.

Magistrates of Edinburgh v McLaren, 1879, 8 R. (H.L.) 140; 4 App.Cas. 823; 16 S.L.R. 828.

(127)

Making up trust accounts—"Free annual proceeds"—Income becoming due in one year but not received by trustee until following year.

Held that in making up trust accounts and dealing with the "free annual proceeds" of a trust estate, sums of income becoming due and payable during one financial year, but not actually received by the trustees until the following year, must be treated as part of the revenue of the first year, and not of the second.

Martin's Trustees v Martin, 1904, 41 S.L.R. 588; 12 S.L.T. 95.

2. FACTORS AND LAW AGENTS.

(1) APPOINTMENT AND REMUNERATION.

(128)

Appointment of law agent by trustee—Power of trustees to appoint another agent—Interdict.

A testator gave his trustees a general power of appointing law agents and factors to the trust, and then appointed A to be law agent to the trustees. Held that no permanent right to the law agency was conferred on A, and that he was not entitled to have other agents employed by the trustees interdicted from acting.

Cormack v Keith & Murray, 1893, 20 R. 977; 30 S.L.R. 852; 1 S.L.T. 152.

(129)

Nomination by trustee of trustee to be factor and law agent—Power of other trustees to terminate appointment.

Terms of a trust settlement under which opinion (per Lord Skerrington, Ordinary) that the appointment of a trustee as factor and law agent to the trust was not so expressed as to make the performance of the duties of factor and law agent part of his duty as a trustee, and thus to prevent the other trustees from dismissing him except for some fault or failure of duty.

Nairn's Trustees v R. Stewart & Sons, (O.H.) 1910, 2 S.L.T. 432.

(130)

Appointment of factor by trustee—Powers of trustees to terminate appointment.

A testator by his trust settlement provided that "all business matters in connection with the trust hereby created, including the administration and distribution of my means and estate and the final winding up of the trust, shall be, and the same are hereby entrusted to the said A B, and, failing him, to his firm of A B & Sons, as factors and law agents." Opinion (per Lord Skerrington, Ordinary) that the appointment was terminable at the will of the trustees, because the words quoted above did not create an office which A B & Sons were entitled to hold ad vitam aut culpam, or confer on A B & Sons a jus quæsitum which the trustees could not defeat except on payment of damages.

Nairn's Trustees v R. Stewart & Sons, (O.H.) 1910, 2 S.L.T. 432.

(131)

Appointment of firm by trustee as factors and law agents—Dissolution of firm.

A testator by his trust settlement appointed A B, "and, failing him, his firm of A B & Sons," as factors and law agents of the trust. At the date of the will A B was carrying on business in partnership with his two sons. The testator was predeceased by A B, but survived by the two sons, who carried on the business under the old name. Thereafter one of the sons retired, and the other son continued to carry on the business under the old name. Held that the appointment did not lapse by the death of A B, but lapsed on the retirement of the son.

Nairn's Trustees v R. Stewart & Sons, (O.H.) 1910, 2 S.L.T. 432.

(132)

Power to appoint and pay trustee as "factor or cashier"—Whether manager of manufacturing business included under power.

A testator empowered his trustees "to appoint one of their own number to be their factor or cashier, and to allow him a reasonable remuneration for his trouble." Held that this power did not authorise the trustees to appoint and pay one of their own number (he continuing a trustee) as a salaried manager of a manufacturing business which the testator had empowered the trustees to continue.

Mills v Brown's Trustees, 1900, 2 F. 1035; 37 S.L.R. 810; 8 S.L.T. 94.

(133)

Trustees giving one of their number an increased share of trustee's business as manager.

Held that the trustees of a deceased partner, who had become entitled under the contract of copartnership to his share in the business, could not transact with the surviving partner, who was also one of the trustees, to the effect of giving him an increased share of profit, with a view of securing the continuance of his services as managing partner, on the ground that he could not as a trustee be auctor in rem suam.

Mackie's Trustees v Mackie, 1875, 2 R. 312; 12 S.L.R. 222.

(134)

Trustee acting as law agent to trust—Informal appointment—Right to remuneration.

A law agent, being one of a body of testamentary trustees who had authority under the testament to appoint a law agent from among their own number, rendered professional services to the trust with the knowledge of his co-trustees, but without having been formally appointed to be law agent to the trust. Circumstances in which the law agent was held to have been validly employed, and to be entitled to remuneration for his services. Observed that when trustees intend to exercise a power to appoint one of their number to be law agent to the trust, the only proper procedure is to make the appointment and to record it in the minutes of the trust.

Lewis's Trustees v Pirie, 1912 S.C. 574; 49 S.L.R. 439; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 208.

(135)

Business charges — Objections by beneficiary—Personal bar.

Where a beneficiary knew that a trustee acted as law agent to the trust, held that he was not entitled ex post facto to object to his business charges.

Scott v Handyside's Trustees, 1868, 6 M. 753; 40 J. 387; 5 S.L.R. 195.

(136)

Appointment by trustees appointed by the Court.

Held that trustees appointed by the Court under sec. 12 of the Trusts Act, 1867, have the same duties and powers as the trustees nominated by the testator, except the power of assuming new trustees, and accordingly that they had power to appoint and remunerate one of their number as law agent and factor.

Allan's Trustee v M'Dougall, (O.H.) 1899, 7 S.L.T. 26.

(137)

Sole trustee—Remuneration.

Held that a sole trustee was not entitled to make charges for professional work performed for the trust, although incurred prior to the case of Home v Pringle, (H.L.) 1841, 2 Rob.App. 384.

Question, whether the same rule would apply to a trustee appointed agent by his co-trustees.

Aitken v Hunter, 1871, 9 M. 756; 43 J. 413; 8 S.L.R. 510.

(138)

Illegal payment of salary to trustee as manager of manufacturing business—Salary received repaid to trust—Interest.

A body of trustees having improperly appointed one of their number to be a salaried manager, and he having been ordained to repay the salary, held that, having regard to the bona fides of the trustees, and to the fact that the trust had got the benefit of the trustee's services as manager without payment, it was not equitable that the said trustee should be called upon to pay interest.

Mills v Brown's Trustees, 1901, 3 F. 1012; 38 S.L.R. 741; 9 S.L.T. 121.

(139)

Accounting—Accumulation of interest on advances by factor.

In an accounting for trust funds under a family settlement for the 14 years following the truster's death the factor had accumulated interest on his advances, with the principal, at the end of 11 years. Circumstances in which the accumulation was sustained.

Scott v Handyside's Trustees, 1868, 6 M. 753; 40 J. 387; 5 S.L.R. 195.

(2) DUTY OF LAW AGENT.

(140)

Advice as to investments.

Held that it was no part of the duty of a law agent appointed to be factor and law agent to the trustees under a trust disposition and settlement to volunteer his advice to the trustees that a loan made by the testator on personal security was not such an investment of the trust funds as they were entitled to retain, and that therefore he was not liable for loss resulting from their retaining the investment.

Curro v Walker's Trustees, 1889, 16 R. 355; 26 S.L.R. 245.

(141)

—Trustees having been held liable to the beneficiaries on the ground that a trust investment, though falling within the general class authorised by the trust deed, was imprudent and had resulted in loss to the trust, one of the trustees brought an action against the law agent to the trust for relief, on the ground that he had failed in his duty to advise the trustees as to the expediency of the investment. Held (after a proof) that in making the investment the trustees had not relied on the agent's recommendation, but on their own independent inquiries, and that the agent was not liable in relief. Opinion per curiam that it was not the duty of the law agent merely in respect of his appointment as law agent of the trust to make inquiries as to the financial sufficiency of the investment.

Johnstone v Thorburn, 1901, 3 F. 497; 38 S.L.R. 343; 8 S.L.T. 422.

(142)

Duty to beneficiaries.

Beneficiaries under a marriage contract trust held to have no title to sue the law agent to the trust on account of alleged improper investments, because he had not been employed by the pursuers.

Raes v Meek, 1889, 16 R. (H.L.) 31; 14 App.Cas. 558; 27 S.L.R. 8.

(3) RESPONSIBILITY OF TRUSTEES FOR FACTORS AND LAW AGENTS.

(143)

Funds allowed to remain in agent's control.

It is the duty of trustees to keep the trust funds invested or placed in their own names so that they cannot be uplifted without their authority. In an action of damages brought by a beneficiary against trustees, evidence on a consideration of which held that the trustees were personally liable for the loss occasioned by the defalcations of the law agent to the trust, as the trustees had committed a breach of trust in allowing the trust funds to remain in the agent's control.

Ferguson v Paterson, 1900, 2 F. (H.L.) 37; [1900] A.C. 271; 37 S.L.R. 635; 7 S.L.T. 472.

(144)

Failure to supervise law agent—Investment of funds.

Kennedy v Kennedy, 1884, 12 R. 275; 22 S.L.R. 181, No. 282, infra.

(145)

Failure to call for accounts—Embezzlement by law agent.

Testamentary trustees, having appointed one of their own number a factor, and carefully superintended his proceedings for a number of years until the major part of the purposes of the trust were fulfilled, instructed him to bring an action of multiplicity for their exoneration and discharge. This process remained in Court for a number of years, during which time the factor rendered his accounts, not to the trustees, who ceased to take any active part in the management of the trust, but to the agent for the beneficiaries. During this period the factor began and continued a practice of keeping in his hands, uninvested, and mixed up with his own funds, a large balance of trust funds. This sum he regularly stated in his accounts, and the beneficiaries received interest on it at 4 per cent. After some years he became bankrupt. Held that the trustees had been guilty of culpa lata by their omission to superintend the actings of the factor, and that they were therefore liable to make good to the beneficiaries the sum which had been lost by his insolvency.

Gordon's Trustees v Scott, 1882, 19 S.L.R. 549.

(146)

—Extravagant compromise of threatened action—Failure to secure payment of annuities.

The whole funds of a trust, out of which certain annuities were payable, were lost, and the annuitants thereupon brought an action against the trustees, seeking to make them personally liable for payment of the annuities. They alleged gross negligence against the trustees, and in particular, that they had failed to supervise the actings of their law agent, who eventually turned out to be fraudulent; that they had negligently compromised a threatened action for an extravagant sum; that they had borrowed on the heritable property of the estate to obtain this sum without seeing that the annuities were made prior burdens on that property; and that they had allowed the residuary legatee to obtain possession of the estate without giving security for payment of the annuities. Circumstances in which held that the pursuers had not proved that the trustees had failed to exercise that degree of diligence which a man of ordinary prudence would exercise in the management of his own affairs; and defenders assolized. Observed (per Lord Atkinson)—“I fail to see how entrusting a law agent of good repute with money to pay estate duty is an act of negligence on the part of a trustee.”

Buchanan v Eaton, 1911 S.C. (H.L.) 40; [1911] A.C. 253; 48 S.L.R. 481; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 422.

(147)

—Factor withholding payments due to beneficiary.

A body of trustees under powers contained in the trust deed appointed one of their number their factor. In an action of accounting brought against the trustees, the pursuer alleged that the factor had withheld payments from a beneficiary and had produced receipts “without any money or other consideration being received by her therefor. He procured the said vouchers by abusing the trust and confidence which she reposed in him, and by the exercise of undue influence and dominion over her.” Held that the statements of the pursuer quoad hoc were irrelevant and lacking in specification and could not go to proof. Opinion reserved as to whether the receipts could be challenged ope exceptionis or must be the subject of a reduction.

Guthrie v Paterson, (O.H.) 1895, 3 S.L.T. 43.

(148)

—Failure to fulfil trust directions as to audit of factor's accounts.

A trustor empowered his trustees to appoint a factor, who might be one of their own number, and directed them “annually, within one month after the 31st day of December in each year during their administration, to cause their factor to make up an account of the intromissions had by him in virtue hereof in the course of the year ending on that date, and to lay the same, with the whole vouchers thereof, before them, to be by them examined and audited.” The trustees did not obey the trustor's direction as to an annual account and audit, but the factor's accounts were occasionally rendered and examined. The factor's account for the period from 1st March, 1888, to 1st June, 1890, which was correct, and was examined by the trustees, showed that the trust estate was due to the factor a balance of £61, and that one and a half year's interest, amounting to £130, was due to heritable creditors. There was no subsequent examination of the factor's accounts by the trustees. In December, 1891, the factor absconded and became bankrupt, leaving unaccounted for a balance of £382 of trust funds, of which £165 had come into his hands between June and December, 1890, and the remainder in 1891. In an action brought by a beneficiary under the trust to have the trustees ordained to replace the balance due by the factor, on the ground of contravention of the trust deed, and separatim, of “gross breach of trust and neglect of duty, whereby a portion of the trust estate had been lost,” it was proved that if the trustees had in January, 1891, called for the factor's account it would have shown that he had in hand £165 of trust funds, subject to his own claim for £61, and to claims by heritable creditors for £130 of arrears of interest. It was proved that prior to December, 1891, the trustees had no cause to doubt the honesty or solvency of the factor. Held (1) that there was culpa lata on the part of the trustees in failing to call for the factor's account in January, 1891; (2) that the onus lay upon the trustees to show that if they had called for the account in January, 1891, the balance of £104 then in the hands of the trustee would have been lost notwithstanding, and that the trustees having failed to discharge the onus, they were liable for said sum; (3) that the trustees were not in fault in regard to sums received by the factor after 31st December, 1890, and were not liable therefor.

Carruthers v Carruthers, 1896, 23 R. (H.L.) 55; [1896] A.C. 659; 33 S.L.R. 809; 4 S.L.T. 98.

(149)

—Trustee acting as law agent—Law agent previously law agent of trustor.

Trustees held liable for the defalcations of the agent of the trust, who was also their co-trustee and had been agent of the trustor and to whom they had handed over the whole control of the trust estate.

Mustard v Mortimer's Trustees, (O.H.) 1899, 7 S.L.T. 71.

(150)

Bank agent also factor for trustees, customers of bank—Fraud—Liability for loss.

Couper's Trustees v National Bank of Scotland, 1889, 16 R. 412; 26 S.L.R. 320. BANK, No. 15.

(4) LAW AGENTS' CHARGES.

(151)

Trustee acting as law agent to trust.

Circumstances in which a law agent was held to have been validly employed by a body of testamentary trustees, and to be entitled to remuneration for his services. Observed that when trustees intend to exercise a power to appoint one of their number to be law agent to the trust, the only proper procedure is to make the appointment and to record it in the minutes of the trust, although, as matter of law, the appointment may competently be proved in other ways.

Lewis's Trustees v Pirie, 1912 S.C. 574; 49 S.L.R. 439; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 208.

(152)

Refusal of creditor to pay law agent's charges on heritable bond granted to trustees—Trust deed allowing trustee to act as law agent.

Testamentary trustees made certain advances to a proprietor of heritable property, who conveyed the property to the trustees in security of the advances. The trustees having entered into possession incurred a debt to one of their number, who was a law agent, for professional charges in connection with the management of the property. The advances having been repaid and the property reconveyed to him, the proprietor refused to pay to the trustees the amount of the law agent's account, on the ground that being himself a trustee the law agent had no right to charge for his services, notwithstanding that the trustees were empowered by the will to employ one of their own number as factor and law agent with the usual remuneration. Held that the proprietor was bound to pay the amount of the account.

Brown's Trustees v Horne, (O.H.) 1904, 12 S.L.T. 614.

(153)

Member of firm.

Where the business of a trust was conducted by a firm of which one of the trustees was a member, held that the rule that agents acting as trustees are not entitled to professional remuneration, but only to reimbursement of actual outlay, was not waived by an indefinite payment by one of the trustees to credit of the account.

Munro's Trustees v Murray & Ferrier, 1871, 9 S.L.R. 174.

(154)

Knowledge of beneficiary.

A beneficiary, who was throughout aware that one of the trustees acted as law agent under the trust, and that the only funds available for payment of the accounts so incurred would be funds falling mainly to the beneficiary himself, held, in the circumstances, not entitled to object ex post facto that the business charges were illegal.

Scott v Handyside's Trustees, 1868, 6 M. 753; 40 J. 387; 5 S.L.R. 195.

(155)

Co-trustee claiming share of business charges—Removal.

Stewart v Chalmers, 1904, 7 F. 163; 42 S.L.R. 135; 12 S.L.T. 486, No. 108, supra.

(156)

Scale of charges.

There is a distinction between the scale of charges for attending meetings of trustees when the law agent himself is a trustee, and when he is not, this distinction varying with the circumstances of each case and in particular the subject-matter of the business before the meeting.

Turner v Fraser's Trustees, 1897, 24 R. 673; 34 S.L.R. 495; 4 S.L.T. 344.

(157)

Judicial factor's firm acting as law agents—Fees paid by borrowers of trust funds.

A partner in a firm of law agents was appointed judicial factor on a trust estate. He lent part of the factory funds on heritable security to clients of the firm. The usual fees were paid to the firm by the borrowers in accordance with the table of fees. Held that the factor was not bound to communicate to the factory estate the fees paid by the borrowers to his firm.

Sleigh v Sleigh's Judicial Factor, 1908 S.C. 1112; 45 S.L.R. 826; 16 S.L.T. 244.

(158)

Fees paid by beneficiaries.

A partner in a firm of law agents was appointed judicial factor on a trust estate. The firm did legal work on the employment of the beneficiaries' guardians, and of the beneficiaries themselves after they had attained majority. The work was done in connection with the disbursement of the factory income to the beneficiaries, and also in connection with the preparation of deeds rendered necessary in consequence of certain beneficiaries having applied for an advance of capital. For these services the firm charged fees and commission against the beneficiaries. Held that the factor was not bound to communicate to the factory estate fees and commission recovered from the beneficiaries.

Sleigh v Sleigh's Judicial Factor, 1908 S.C. 1112; 45 S.L.R. 826; 16 S.L.T. 244.

(159)

Liability of trust estate to law agents for expense of unsuccessfully defending an action.

In an action against the sole trustee under a testamentary trust, the final interlocutor decerned against the trustee for payment of a sum of money, and found "that in all questions with the pursuer in this action the defender is not entitled to deduct the expenses which he has incurred in the action from the trust estate." The trust estate having subsequently been sequestrated on the petition of the successful pursuer of the action, the law agents who had acted for the testamentary trustee claimed to be ranked on the sequestrated estate for their expenses. Held that as the law agents for the trustee were presumably acquainted with the whole circumstances of the trust, they were not entitled to rank for their account.

Ferme, Ferme & Williamson v Stephen-son's Trustee, 1905, 7 F. 902; 42 S.L.R. 703; 13 S.L.T. 236.

(160)

Taxation—Beneficiary's right to taxation of law agent's business account after payment of bequest.

A beneficiary having right to a share of residue under a trust settlement granted a discharge to the trustees and their law agent, and afterwards raised an action of accounting against the trustees for the purpose of having the law agent's account taxed, and any overcharge restored to the estate—alleging that he had subsequently discovered that certain of the charges were excessive. Held that the pursuer was not precluded by the discharge from raising the action.

M'Farlane v M'Farlane's Trustees, 1897, 24 R. 574; 34 S.L.R. 408; 4 S.L.T. 311.

(161)

Right of trustees to have law agent's accounts taxed by local auditor.

In an action of accounting brought by a beneficiary against testamentary trustees, the pursuer objected to the account of the law agent of the trust. The trust estate was situated in Glasgow, and the law agent was a Glasgow solicitor. The account had been taxed ex parte at the instance of the law agent by the auditor of the Faculty of Procurators in Glasgow, without notice to the pursuer, and the defenders offered to have it remitted back to him. The Lord Ordinary remitted the account to the Auditor of the Court of Session to tax and to report. The defenders reclaimed, and maintained that, in any view, the account should be remitted to a Glasgow accountant to audit, and not to the Auditor of the Court of Session. The Court refused the reclaiming note.

Turner v Fraser's Trustees, 1897, 24 R. 673; 34 S.L.R. 495; 4 S.L.T. 344.

(162)

Payment of charges without taxation—Remit by Court for taxation—Reduction in some items of account and increase in others—Set-off.

Certain beneficiaries under a trust brought an action against the trustees for payment of a sum of money representing part of the trust estate which the pursuers averred the defenders had paid away unwarrantably, in respect that they had paid certain business accounts to the agents of the trust which had not been audited, and were overcharged, and also commission in connection with investments. The business accounts and charges for commission having been remitted to the Auditor for taxation, he taxed £100 off the business accounts, but stated that he would have allowed £93 more than had been charged in respect of commission. The Lord Ordinary held that the defenders were entitled to set off the £93 against the £100.

King v King's Trustees, (O.H.) 1906, 14 S.L.T. 332.

3. RECOVERY OF ESTATE.

(163)

Whether goodwill of business carried on by trustor a trust asset—Personal liability of trustees.

An engineer, who had been many years in India, on his return to this country continued to supply native and other traders in India with cotton presses, which he bought from makers in this country. At the time of his death his average income from this source was about £300 per annum. In an action of accounting brought some years after his death by the beneficiaries under his settlement against his trustees, the pursuers contended that the trustees were bound to account for the value of the goodwill of the testator's business, which they had not sold. The trustees pleaded that, as the deceased's transactions were conducted by him personally, without business premises or clerks, there was no business to which a goodwill could attach. After a proof, held that the goodwill was an asset of the deceased's estate which should have been sold by the trustees, and that they fell to be debited with £300 as the value thereof.

Donald v Hodgart's Trustees, 1893, 21 R. 246; 31 S.L.R. 181; 1 S.L.T. 366.

Compare Philp's Executor v Philp's Executor, 1894, 21 R. 482; 31 S.L.R. 384; 1 S.L.T. 495. GOODWILL, No. 9.

(164)

Neglect to recover debts due to trust.

The tenant of a farm under a current lease died in 1881, leaving a trust settlement, which specially provided that the trustees were not to be "liable singuli in solidum, or for any omissions or neglects of their agents, factors, or managers, . . . but they shall be liable for wilful default, and no further." The trust was accepted by two of the trustees, one of whom had been the trustor's law agent and continued to act as agent and factor on the trust estate. The trustees renounced the lease, and the incoming tenant took over the waygoing crop, manure, &c., on the farm at a valuation, and also made purchases at the displeasing sale, the articles of roup requiring payment either in ready money or by secured bills. His liability to the trust, after paying part of the price, amounted to about £900. The trustees took no steps to recover this debt beyond taking a personal bond from the debtor, and an assignation to an insurance policy on his life for £500, and eventually in the beginning of 1887 the debtor became bankrupt. The beneficiaries thereafter brought a personal action against the trustees to have them found liable to the trust estate for the loss thereby incurred. One of the defenders founded on the fact that he had left the management of the estate in the hands of his co-trustee, the law agent for the trust, and on the clause of immunity in the trust deed. Held, after a proof, that there had been gross neglect of duty on the part of both trustees, amounting to "wilful default," for which they were liable.

Carruthers v Cairns, 1890, 17 R. 769; 27 S.L.R. 640.

(165)

Income tax paid in error.

Circumstances in which held that private trustees were not personally liable for failure to recover income tax paid in error in respect of income applied for religious purposes.

Free Church of Scotland v Macknight's Trustees, 1916 S.C. 349; 53 S.L.R. 260; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 84.

(166)

Neglect while trustee—Whether a defence to claim as creditor after resignation from trust.

Circumstances in which held that the claim of a creditor against a trust estate on which he had formerly been a trustee could not be defeated by allegations of negligence and default on his part when acting as trustee in compelling payment from others, alleged to be debtors to the estate.

Sproat's Factor v M'Lellan, (H.L.) 1877, 14 S.L.R. 454.

4. COMPLETION OF TITLE.

(167)

Title conferred upon trustees by Court of Chancery—Recognition by Scottish courts.

In a trust where the trust estate was situated in England and Ireland as well as Scotland, an application was made in 1870 to the Court of Chancery in England, with a view to cure a defect in the trustees' title, and an order was thereon made which presumably validated the title of the trustees, so far as it was in the power of the Court of Chancery to do so. Held that as the trust was as much an English as a Scottish trust, the title conferred on the trustees by the Court of Chancery in 1870 must be recognised as valid, at least until set aside in a competent process.

Rossmore's Trustees v Brownlie, &c., 1877, 5 R. 201; 15 S.L.R. 129.

(168)

Domiciled Englishman owning heritage in Scotland and England—Will executed in England—No express conveyance to trustees—Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 46.

A testator domiciled in England died possessed of both English and Scottish heritage. In his will, which was executed in England, there were no words of conveyance of the Scottish heritage in favour of the trustees.

Held that the trustees could make up a title under sec. 46 of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874.

Phipps v Phipps' Trustee, (O.H.) 1914, 1 S.L.T. 239.

(169)

Adverse title made up by accepting trustee—Deathbed.

Held that an accepting trustee under a settlement executed on deathbed did not commit a breach of trust in completing his own title as heir-at-law to the heritage conveyed, and in disregarding the deathbed conveyance in favour of a stranger.

Opinion (per Lord Kinnear) that if there had been a breach of trust, prescription would have been of no avail to cure the defect in title.

Thain v Thain, 1891, 18 R. 1196; 28 S.L.R. 902.

(170)

Making up of title to heritage by new trustees in whose favour there is no conveyance—Service by heir of last survivor of former trustees—Conveyancing Act, 1874, sec. 43.

Trustees under a marriage contract acquired right to a heritable bond by assignation to themselves nominatim as trustees, "and the survivor of them, and their or his foresaids and assignees whomsoever." There was no antecedent in the deed to which the expression "their or his foresaids" could refer. All the trustees having died, the survivor of the spouses, by virtue of a power in the marriage contract, appointed new trustees. This deed of appointment contained no conveyance. The heir of the last survivor of the trustees named presented a petition for service as nearest and lawful heir in special to the last survivor in the lands contained in the heritable bond under the provisions of sec. 43 of the Conveyancing Act of 1874. Held that this was a competent way of making up the title.

M'Lean, 1892, 19 R. 1043.

(171)

Investment in English company—Authority to curator bonis to register stock in his own name—Acknowledgment of trust by indorsation on stock certificate.

A curator bonis to a lunatic purchased debenture stock of an English railway company as an investment for funds under his charge, and accepted transfers thereof in the name of his ward, per himself. The company, however, intimated that it was contrary to their practice to recognise trusts or limited titles on their register, and declined to register the stock in the ward's name.

In an application by the curator bonis for special power to register the stock in his own name, the Court, in view of the fact that the transfer had already been taken in the name of the ward, granted the authority craved, but held that, in investing in the stock of such English companies, it had already been recognised that the appropriate course for a curator bonis was to register in his own name, and to indorse on the share certificate a statement to the effect that he held the stock for behoof of his ward.

Brodie v London and North-Western Railway Co., (O.H.) 1912, 50 S.L.R. 162; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 447.

See also Accountant of Court v Crumpton's Curator Bonis, 1886, 14 R. 55; 24 S.L.R. 38, No. 207, infra.

For Intimation of Assignment and Conveyance of Moveables, see MARRIAGE CONTRACT I. 5 (1) and ASSIGNATION IV. 1.

5. PAYMENT OF TRUSTER'S DEBTS.

(172)

Payment after expiry of six months—Provision for contingent debts.

Circumstances in which held that testamentary trustees, as they were not trustees for creditors, were entitled after six months to pay the testator's debts primo venienti without making provision for a contingent claim arising out of a letter of guarantee granted by the testator. Observations on the duties of trustees and executors with regard to payment of debts.

Taylor & Ferguson v Glass's Trustees, 1912 S.C. 165; 49 S.L.R. 78; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 413.

(173)

Payment of trust funds to debtors of trust —Payments to beneficiaries when debts due by trust are unpaid—Personal liability of trustees to creditors of the trust.

A creditor holding personal bonds, granted by a person deceased, for £75,000, and holding also in security thereof an absolute disposition to heritable subjects belonging to the debtor, agreed with the debtor's testamentary trustees to disburden part of the heritable subjects, which had been sold for £75,000, on receiving payment of £25,000, the remaining subjects being considered sufficient to cover the balance of the debt. Some years afterwards, the subjects retained in security having greatly diminished in value, and having, along with the remainder of the trust estate, proved insufficient to cover the debt, the creditor raised an action against the trustees as individuals for payment of trust funds alleged to have been improperly paid while the pursuer's debt remained unpaid (1) to a debtor of the trust, and (2) to the truster's widow and family from the income of the trust as beneficiaries under the trust. After a proof, held that the trustees were personally liable for the sums sued for, as they had failed to show that the pursuer had consented to the payments to the trust debtors and to the beneficiaries being made.

Heritable Securities Investment Association v Miller's Trustees, 1892, 20 R. 675; 30 S.L.R. 354.

(174)

Payment of ordinary debts — Failure to provide for preferential debt.

Liability of trustees who paid a truster's ordinary debts without retaining enough to pay a preferential debt.

Lamond's Trustees v Croom, 1871, 9 M. 662; 43 J. 321; 8 S.L.R. 412.

Beith v Mackenzie, 1875, 3 R. 185; 13 S.L.R. 113.

(175)

Discharge of claims by a joint stock company, and estate divided—Discharge reduced —Claim in respect of shares held by truster.

A testator died in 1849, having directed his trustees to divide his means among certain beneficiaries. He had been a partner of a joint stock company, and the trustees in 1850, on payment of a certain sum, received a discharge from the secretary of the company of all claims which might be made in respect of the shares which were declared forfeited. The trustees subsequently divided the estate among the beneficiaries. In 1861 the company was wound up under the Companies Acts, and in 1866 it was decided that the discharge to the trustees was invalid, and they were placed on the list of contributories to the company. Held that the trustees had paid away the estate in bona fide to the legatees, and that, the estate being exhausted, the trustees were not personally liable for a call made on the shares.

Observed (per Lord Justice-Clerk Moncreiff) that if trustees and executors after six months pay away the funds, even to legatees, in the reasonable belief that all debts have been satisfied, they cannot be made personally responsible, although if there were from the first a deficiency of funds the legatees may be obliged to pay back what they have got to the unpaid creditor.

Stewart's Trustees v Evans, 1871, 9 M. 810; 8 S.L.R. 549.

(176)

Proof of debt — Writ of executor and trustee — Writ of beneficiaries — Res inter alios.

In an action of multiplepinding brought by a testamentary trustee, a claim was lodged by A, who averred that "from time to time she made loans of money" to the truster amounting in all to £390. In support of her claim A referred to a probative minute of agreement entered into between the truster's widow, since deceased, who was at the time his executrix and sole trustee, and his eldest son, appended to which was a state of the trust funds, and among the "outstanding debts" was entered "sum on debt due to" A "£390." The state was signed by the widow and eldest son, and appended to it was a docquet signed by the truster's other children, who, with the widow and eldest son, were the beneficiaries under his will, approving of the minute of agreement, and also "approving of and holding as correct, and duly vouched," the state of trust funds. A, to whom the document had not been delivered or exhibited at any time, maintained that the debt of £390 was proved by it, or alternatively that it raised a prima facie case of loan which she was entitled to supplement by parole proof. Held that the entry of the sum of £390 was ineffectual to prove a debt due by the trust estate, in respect (a) that the writ in which it occurred was not delivered to A as an acknowledgment by the trustee that the debt was due, and (b) that such an acknowledgment, if delivered to A, would not have been binding on the trust estate.

Dunn's Trustee v Hardy, 1896, 23 R. 621; 33 S.L.R. 438; 3 S.L.T. 329.

(177)

Reference to oath—Discharge.

In an action of multiplepoinding raised by testamentary trustees and executors for their exoneration, they were, in respect of a minute lodged by the defenders approving of the condescendence of the fund in medio, exonerated and discharged. Thereafter claims were lodged by the residuary legatee under the trust settlement, and by one alleging himself to be a creditor and claiming upon a debt which had undergone the triennial prescription. This claimant having been allowed by interlocutor of the Court to prove the constitution and existence of his debt "by the oath of party" proposed to make a reference to the oath of the trustees and executors. Held that the reference must be to the oath of the competing claimant, the trustees having been exonerated and discharged.

Opinion (per Lord Shand) that even if there had been no such exoneration the reference could only have been made to the oath of the other claimant, who was the only party opposing or having any interest to oppose.

Farquhar v Farquhar, 1886, 13 R. 596; 23 S.L.R. 407.

6. POWER TO REFER, COMPROMISE, AND DISCHARGE CLAIMS.

(178)

Reference—Prior to Trusts Act, 1867.

Held that prior to the Trusts Act, 1867, testamentary trustees under a deed which contained no power to refer were not entitled to refer important claims of the trust to arbitration.

Thomson's Trustees v Muir, 1867, 6 M. 145; 40 J. 83; 5 S.L.R. 115.

(179)

Curator bonis—Trusts Act, 1867, sec. 2—Trusts (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1884, sec. 2—Retrospective effect.

Opinion (per Lord Kincairney) that sec. 2 of the Trusts (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1884, was declaratory, and therefore retrospective in its effects.

Scott v Craig's Representatives, 1897, 24 R. 462; 34 S.L.R. 304; 4 S.L.T. 264.

(180)

Compromise.

Circumstances in which held that trustees, creditors of a company in liquidation, were entitled to enter into an arrangement by way of compromise of their debt with the liquidators.

Observed that in a petition by a liquidator for direction of the Court under the Companies Act, 1862, trustees, who were creditors of the company, had no right to obtain the advice of the Court as to the propriety of a compromise.

City of Glasgow Bank v Geddes's Trustees, 1880, 7 R. 731; 17 S.L.R. 494.

(181)

Alleged extravagant compromise of threatened action—Breach of trust—Personal liability of trustees.

Buchanan v Eaton, 1911 S.C. (H.L.) 40; [1911] A.C. 253; 48 S.L.R. 481; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 422, No. 146, supra.

(182)

Compromise by trustee of debt due to trust estate—Subsequent action by beneficiary against debtor—Title to sue.

Hannah v Sharp, (O.H.) 1901, 9 S.L.T. 333, No. 631, infra.

(183)

Claims to policy held by trustees—Reasonable compromise.

A policy of insurance bearing to be effected by a lad eighteen years of age on his own life in favour of his heirs, executors, or assigns, passed at once into the possession of the lad's father, who paid all the premiums and retained the policy until his own death twenty-five years afterwards. By his trust disposition and settlement, the father directed his trustees to pay the premium necessary to keep in force the policy, which he described as "belonging to me." After the testator's death, the trustees obtained an assignation from the son of the son's whole interest in the policy upon condition that they should pay the annual premium, and upon the son's death should pay the proceeds to his daughter, after deducting therefrom the total amount of the premiums paid on the policy and the expense of realisation. In a competition between the son's daughter and the residuary legatees of the father, held (1) that the policy was the property of the father; but (2) that the question of property was one of difficulty, and that the assignation embodied a reasonable compromise of the son's claims, and was binding on the trustees, and that the son's daughter was entitled to the proceeds of the policy, subject to the deductions specified in the assignation.

Hadden v Bryden, 1899, 1 F. 710; 36 S.L.R. 524; 6 S.L.T. 362.

(184)

Claim by trustee against trust estate.

Question, whether trustees had power to compromise a claim by one of their number against the trust estate.

Lawrie v Lawrie's Trustees, 1892, 19 R. 675; 29 S.L.R. 525.

(185)

Compromise of action to reduce trust deed—Trustee having personal interest—Distribution of agreed-on sum among beneficiaries—Beneficiaries not consenting to action being defended.

Circumstances under which held that a trustee, whose children had an interest under a will, was entitled to settle an action for reduction of the will on the ground of impecuniation brought by the testator's next of kin and to apportion the outlay on the settlement amongst all the beneficiaries, although two of them did not consent to his defending the action and stood aside.

Russell v Stevenson's Trustee, (O.H.) 1902, 10 S.L.T. 454.

(186)

Discharge of partner of the trustees—Reduction of discharge as gratuitous and sine causa.

In December, 1893, a partner in a large engineering business died, leaving a settlement in which he authorised his trustees to allow his share of the capital in the business "to remain as a loan" to the firm, so long as his trustees considered it reasonably safe to do so. The deceased's capital, ascertained to amount to £19,000, was allowed to remain in the business, which was carried on by the surviving partners, A, B and C, A and B being the surviving trustees. On 23rd December, 1895, C retired from the firm, in terms of an agreement by which he received £9000, the other two partners, A and B, taking over the whole assets of the firm, and binding themselves to "pay and so relieve C of all the obligations due by the firm," and to exhibit to him discharges thereof. The trustees were not parties to this agreement, and no payment was made to the trust. On 3rd November, 1896, A and B, as the surviving trustees of the testator, executed a deed, which, after narrating the agreement, set forth that the granters as trustees foresaid had accepted the new firm and its partners in lieu of the dissolved firm, and discharged the dissolved firm, and C as a partner thereof and as an individual, of all sums due to the trust. On 3rd December, 1896, the new firm and the individual partners granted a trust deed for behoof of their creditors. A and B thereafter assumed D and E as trustees of the testator, and subsequently resigned office. D and E as trustees acceded to the trust for creditors and drew a dividend. D and E as trustees then raised an action against C concluding for payment of the balance of the debt, the summons containing also a conclusion for reduction of the discharge. Held that the discharge granted by A and B as trustees in favour of the defender was entirely gratuitous and sine causa, and was granted by A and B, and obtained by the defender, without any consideration having been received or given therefor, and was invalid and ineffectual to discharge the defender of his liability for the loan, and that the pursuers were entitled to payment from him of the balance of said loan. Held, further, that the pursuers, by acceding to the trust for the creditors of the new firm, were not barred from claiming payment of the debt from the defender as a partner of the old firm.

Smith v Patrick, 1901, 3 F. (H.L.) 14; [1901] A.C. 282; 38 S.L.R. 613.

7. POWER TO CARRY ON TRUSTER'S BUSINESS OR HOLD HIS INVESTMENTS.

(187)

Executor.

Observations on the difference in position between an executor and a trustee in relation to stock in a joint stock company forming part of the estate to be administered.

Buchan v City of Glasgow Bank, 1879, 6 R. (H.L.) 44; 4 App.Cas. 549 and 583; 16 S.L.R. 512.

(188)

Investments in public companies—Duty to exercise discretion.

A trustee gave a general power to his trustees to continue to hold the investments which he might have at the time of his death in any public companies, "and power to invest the funds . . . which shall devolve upon my daughter in heritage and preference stocks of railways in Scotland or England, and in the stock of Scotch banks." Held that it was competent for the trustees to hold the funds liferented by the daughter in the shape of shares in public trading companies, which were held by the testator at the time of his death, they being bound, however, to exercise their discretion from time to time as to the expediency of retaining them.

Thomson's Trustees v Henderson, 1890, 18 R. 24; 28 S.L.R. 2.

(189)

Company shares—Uncalled liability.

A power given by a testator to his trustees to "hold any investments" he "may die possessed of for such time as they may think fit," entitles the trustees to retain shares in public companies upon which there is an uncalled liability, but only so long as they are satisfied of the safety of the shares as a trust investment, and in the exercise of the power the trustees must act with prudence.

Boyd's Trustees v Boyd, 1908 S.C. 1147; 45 S.L.R. 835; 16 S.L.T. 264.

(190)

Undue delay in realising truster's business—Liability of trustees.

Circumstances in which held that testamentary trustees were not liable for damages on the ground of alleged undue delay in realising the heritable property and licensed businesses, which formed part of a trust estate.

Murray's Trustees v Murray, (O.H.) 1905, 13 S.L.T. 274.

(191)

Shares of unlimited company not realised by trustees—Liability for calls.

Trustees in a testamentary trust continued to hold stock belonging to the truster in a joint stock banking company with unlimited liability for 13 years after his death. The company having gone into liquidation, held that it was the duty of the trustees to have sold the stock within a reasonable time after the trustor's death, and that they were not entitled to apply the trust funds in payment of calls.

Brownlie v Brownlie's Trustees, 1879, 6 R. 1233; 16 S.L.R. 731.

(192)

Direction to hold specific investment in life-rent and fee—Power to sell during life-rent.

A testator, inter alia, directed her trustees "to hold in their own name my shares of the G. C. Railway Co., and pay the dividends or annual income thereof to" her nephew George "during his lifetime, and immediately after the decease of the said" George "I direct my said trustees to realise the said shares and to pay the price or value thereof" to George's children, whom failing to his heirs, executors, or successors whomsoever. The trustor empowered her trustees "to sell and realise . . . the whole or any part of my estate, heritable or moveable, in so far as may be necessary or proper in their discretion." In 1905, as the shares were yielding no income, George requested the trustees to sell them and to reinvest the proceeds. In a special case presented by the trustees held that the trustees had power to sell the shares.

Galloway v Campbell's Trustees, 1905, 7 F. 931; 42 S.L.R. 712; 13 S.L.T. 256.

(193)

Authority to hold trustor's investments—Formation of new company to replace old company—Right to take new shares.

Held that authority given by a testator to his trustees to continue investments made by him did not authorise them, on the reconstruction of an undertaking by the winding-up of an old company and the formation of a new one, to take up shares in the new company in lieu of shares belonging to the testator in the old one.

Thomson's Trustees v Thomson, 1889, 16 R. 517; 26 S.L.R. 368.

(194)

Power to lend to trustor's firm—Retirement of a partner.

Held that a power given by a testator to lend part of his funds to a firm of which he was a partner applied only to the firm as existing at the date of his death, and did not authorise the trustees to continue the loan to the firm after a partner had retired.

Smith v Patrick, 1901, 3 F. (H.L.) 14; [1901] A.C. 282; 38 S.L.R. 613.

(195)

Money directed to be left invested in a firm for twenty years—Death of partner of firm.

J L, who, with three of his sons, constituted the firm of J L & Son, directed his testamentary trustees "to allow the whole funds belonging to me which may at the date of my death be lent or invested in the business of J L & Son to remain and continue invested in the hands of and on loan to the firm on their personal security for the period of twenty years from and after my death, they paying interest half-yearly at the rate of 4 per cent." After the trustor's death, the three sons continued to carry on the firm. One of the sons having died, two of the beneficiaries claimed immediate payment of their shares of the estate on the ground that the firm had ceased to exist. Held that, although by the ordinary rule of law the death of a partner dissolved a partnership, yet it was the trustor's intention that the trust funds should remain invested in the business for twenty years, or so long as it remained substantially the same firm and business as it was at his death.

Alexander v Lowson's Trustees, 1890, 17 R. 571; 27 S.L.R. 448.

(196)

Power to continue business—Conversion of business into private limited company.

A testator by his will directed his trustees to realise the business owned and carried on by him, or, alternatively, to "continue" the business if they considered it "desirable to retain the same and conduct it for behoof of" his estate. In the event of realisation the trustees were directed to invest the proceeds in trust investments. The trustees, after carrying on the business for some years, proposed to form it into, and conduct it as, a private limited liability company, with substantially the same capital and under the same control as before. Held that, in the circumstances, the trustees' proposal did not amount to a realisation of the old business (which would require the proceeds to be invested in trust investments), or to the starting of a new business, but was in substance a continuation of the old business.

MacKechnie's Trustees v Macadam, 1912 S.C. 1059; 49 S.L.R. 766; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 44.

(197)

Testamentary trustees becoming partners in a firm—Trustees collectively acting as a partner.

A business was carried on under a deed of copartnership by a body of testamentary trustees, whose interest extended to three-fourths of the capital and profits, and by a surviving partner, whose interest amounted to one-fourth. Held that the trustees collectively constituted one partner, and that they could not act in name of the copartnership without the concurrence of the other partner.

Beveridge v Beveridge, 1872, 10 M. (H.L.) 1; 44 J. 171; L.R., 2 Sc.App. 183; 9 S.L.R. 419.

(198)

Trustees receiving profits of trustor's business carried on by beneficiary for behoof of self and trust—Bankruptcy of firm and beneficiary—Liability of trustees.

A trustor directed his son to carry on his business for behoof of himself and the truster's family, an annual balance sheet to be made up at the sight of the trustees (who had a discretionary power to wind up the business), and the profits to be divided equally between the son and the truster's widow. This was done for some years. The son became bankrupt both as a firm and an individual. Held that the trustees were not partners in the firm.

Paterson's Trustee v Learmont & Co., 1870, 8 M. 500; 42 J. 232.

(199)

Licences bequeathed to beneficiaries—Beneficiaries allowed to conduct licensed businesses for their own behoof—Licences transferred to one of the trustees—Liability of trustees to account for drawings.

A testatrix directed her trustees to make over to her daughters gratuitously licences belonging to her at the date of her death, and to hold her heritable property and pay the income to her daughters. The licences were transferred to one of the trustees, and for upwards of a year after the testatrix's death the trustees allowed the daughters to carry on the licensed businesses, which were conducted in properties belonging to the trust, for their own behoof and rent free. The trust estate having turned out to be insolvent, held that the trustees were bound to account to the creditors of the trust for the drawings of the licensed businesses during the period in question.

Murray's Trustees v Murray, (O.H.) 1905, 13 S.L.T. 274.

8. INVESTMENT OF TRUST FUNDS.

(1) DUTY TO INVEST.

(200)

Deposit receipt—Term of payment—Guarantee of indemnity.

A testator empowered his trustees to retain securities upon which his estate might be invested at his death. The trustees accordingly retained certain deposit receipts with a foreign bank which were not yet payable, under a guarantee from two of their number to indemnify them from all loss which they or the trust estate might incur by continuing to hold the said deposit receipts. Before the deposit receipts matured the bank suspended payment. Held that neither the trustees nor the guarantors were liable to make good the loss sustained by the bank suspending payment, as it did not appear that the deposit receipts could have been realised before they matured.

Scott's Trustees v Scott, 1895, 23 R. 52; 33 S.L.R. 65; 3 S.L.T. 136.

(201)

Liability of trustees for higher interest—Indemnity clause.

In an action of accounting by beneficiaries against trustees it was proved that, without deliberately considering the question of investment, the defenders had allowed the trust funds to remain in bank on deposit receipt for a period of nineteen years from April, 1875, during which they yielded interest at the average rate of 2½ per cent. It was proved that during this period safe investments affording over 3 per cent. might have been obtained; but that the expense of investment was saved, that for five years the defenders required to keep money in hand to meet advances to beneficiaries, and that deposit in bank would have been necessary while investments or renewals of investments were being considered. The trust deed provided that the trustees "shall no ways be liable for any omissions in management." Held (1) that the trustees had failed to make a proper investment of the trust funds; and (2) that they were bound in their trust accounts to debit themselves with interest at 3 per cent. on the whole funds for the whole period.

Melville v Noble's Trustees, 1896, 24 R. 243; 34 S.L.R. 210; 4 S.L.T. 198.

(202)

Deliberate act of judicial factor in interest of trust estate.

A judicial factor on a trust estate, during the whole course of his administration, kept large sums of money belonging to the trust in bank upon deposit receipt. In answer to a petition for the discharge of the factor (who had died) certain of the beneficiaries maintained that the factor ought to be held liable for the loss of interest caused by keeping the trust funds on deposit receipt. Held, after a proof, that the factor was not liable, in respect that it was proved that, having applied his mind to the question, he had deliberately kept the money on deposit receipt because he believed that course to be necessary in the circumstances of the trust; and that while it was probably unnecessary for the factor to keep so much money on deposit receipt, the course adopted by him was not, in the circumstances, unreasonable and imprudent so as to amount to a breach of duty on his part.

Manners v Strong's Judicial Factor, 1902, 4 F. 829; 39 S.L.R. 709; 10 S.L.T. 66.

(2) WHETHER INVESTMENT INTRA VIRES OR ULTRA VIRES.

(a) Authorisation by Statute.

(203)

Act 1884, sec. 3—Investments "approved by Court of Session."

Observations on the expression "approved by the Court of Session" with reference to the investments authorised as trust investments by the Trusts Act, 1884.

Observed (per Lord Adam) that stocks approved of in a particular application for approval were not thereby pronounced to be eligible in all cases or in any other case than that before the Court.

Accountant of Court v Crumpton's Curator Bonis, 1886, 14 R. 55; 24 S.L.R. 38.

(204)

Colonial government stocks.

Selected colonial government stocks approved as an investment for certain trust funds.

Maclean's Trustee, 1884, 12 R. 529; 22 S.L.R. 295.

(205)

Lists of trust investments approved of—Trusts Act, 1884, sec. 3.

Shand, (O.H.) 1893, 1 S.L.T. 145.

Brotherston, (O.H.) 1893, 1 S.L.T. 174.

Cunliffe's Trustees, (O.H.) 1893, 1 S.L.T. 371.

Blackwood's Trustees, (O.H.) 1894, 2 S.L.T. 169.

Milson v Musgrave's Trustees, (O.H.) 1898, 6 S.L.T. 117.

(206)

Railway debentures.

Held that the debentures of railway companies are securities which the Accountant of Court may sanction as investments for funds in the hands of a curator bonis, provided he is satisfied that the special investment is a good and safe one of its class.

Lloyd's Curator, 1877, 5 R. 289.

(207)

Investments in which trust title cannot be registered.

A curator bonis, being a trustee in the meaning of the Trusts Amendment Act, 1884, is entitled to invest the funds in his hands as curator in the purchase of the stocks and in the loans authorised as trust investments by that Act, notwithstanding that the registration of his name as holder of these stocks cannot by the practice of the Bank of England, where a large number of these stocks are transferable, be qualified by any entry to show the character in which he holds them, the Bank of England declining to take cognisance of trusts.

Accountant of Court v Crumpton's Curator Bonis, 1886, 14 R. 55; 24 S.L.R. 38.

See also Brodie v London and North-Western Railway Co., (O.H.) 1912, 50 S.L.R. 162; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 447, No. 171, supra.

(208)

Investment on security of harbour rates—Real or heritable security.

The Trusts Amendment Act, 1884, authorised trustees (including judicial factors) to invest in loans (10) "on real or heritable securities," (12) "on debentures secured on rates or taxes levied" under statutory powers by "municipal corporations." A curator bonis lent a sum to Greenock Harbour Trustees, a corporation consisting of the magistrates and council, and nine elected trustees, on a debenture, in which they assigned to the creditor "the rates, duties, and other revenues of the trust." Held that the investment was not on real security nor on a debenture granted by a municipal corporation in the sense of the Act.

Held, further, that it was not a proper investment, in respect that the revenue of the trust from dues, &c., was precarious.

Hutton v Annan, 1898, 25 R. (H.L.) 23; [1898] A.C. 289; 35 S.L.R. 416.

(209)

A curator bonis lent a sum to Greenock Harbour Trustees, a corporation consisting of the magistrates and council, and nine elected trustees, on a debenture, in which they assigned to the creditor "the rates, duties, and other revenues of the trust." Held that the investment was not on real security nor on a debenture granted by a municipal corporation in the sense of the Act. Held further that it was not a proper investment at common law in respect that the revenue of the trust from dues, &c., was precarious.

Cowan's Trustees v Ferrie's Curator Bonis, 1897, 24 R. 590; 34 S.L.R. 449; 4 S.L.T. 317.

(210)

Investment on security of local rates.

Investments by a curator bonis, secured respectively (1) on rates leviable under the Aberdeen County and Municipal Buildings Act, 1866, and the Sheriff Court Houses Act, 1860, or (2) on rates leviable under the Aberdeenshire Road Act, 1865, approved of. Grainger's Curator, 1876, 3 R. 479; 13 S.L.R. 308.

(211)

Town council lending trust funds to themselves as trustees of statutory undertaking—Security of statutory undertaking.

A town council held a fund in trust for the purpose of rebuilding a bridge. By statute the town council was empowered to borrow money for drainage and tramway purposes, and as trustees of the bridge rebuilding trust the town council lent to themselves as trustees of the statutory undertaking part of the bridge rebuilding trust funds. The loan was duly and well secured and of a class which the law permits to trustees, and the interest was at a rate which is usual in the case of proper trust investments. Held that the loan was not ultra vires.

Templeton v Magistrates of Ayr, (O.H.) 1912, 1 S.L.T. 421.

(212)

Local Authorities Loans stock—Purchase at premium—Local Authorities Loans (Scotland) Act, 1891, sec. 44 (2)—Liability of trustees for loss on redemption.

Testamentary trustees, who held funds for behoof of different persons as liferenter and fiar respectively, in 1897 invested part of these funds in a redeemable stock issued under the Local Authorities Loans (Scotland) Act, 1891, at the price of £102 per cent., being £2 per cent. more than the redemption value. They at the same time entered into an arrangement with the liferenter whereby he undertook to repay to the trust this £2 per cent. of excess cost. On the death of the liferenter this £2 per cent. of excess cost had been paid back to the trustees, but at that time the stock stood in the market at 10 per cent. below its redemption value. Held that as the stock had been purchased at a price beyond its redemption value, contrary to sec. 44 (2) of the Local Authorities Loans Act, 1891, the investment was ultra vires of the trustees, and that the arrangement whereby the excess cost was to be repaid to the trust by the liferenter did not make the investment lawful. Held, further, that as the investment was ultra vires the trustees were personally liable to restore to the trust the difference between the redemption value of the stock and the amount which it might yield on being realised.

Beveridge's Trustee v Beveridge, 1908 S.C. 791; 45 S.L.R. 585; 15 S.L.T. 1008.

(b) Directions in Trust Deed.

(213)

Power of investment limited by trust deed—Application to nobile officium of the Court for enlarged power.

A testator, by his trust settlement, after directing that a hospital should be endowed with the residue of his estate, stated it to be his "particular desire" that the money devoted to this purpose should be, and remain, invested in landed property, and provided that if any portion of such property should be sold, the proceeds should be invested in the purchase of other land. The trustees presented a petition to the nobile officium of the Court for power to sell a portion of the estate, and to invest the proceeds in "approved trust securities," by which method of investment they stated that a considerably larger income would be obtained than by the purchase of land. The Court refused the petition, holding that they had no power to grant a relaxation of the specific restrictions on investment contained in the trust deed.

Scott's Hospital Trustees, 1913 S.C. 289; 50 S.L.R. 199; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 443.

(214)

Wide general powers conferred later in deed—Repugnancy.

A testator by his will provided, inter alia, "in addition to the usual powers . . . conferred by law on gratuitous trustees in Scotland, all of which are conferred on my said trustees, I confer upon them full power . . . to invest the trust funds only in the purchase of feu-duties, ground annuals, consols or the preference stock of any dividend paying railway company in the United Kingdom." By the same clause he conferred a number of other powers, some of which were wider than those which gratuitous trustees enjoy either at common law or under statute. Held that there was no repugnancy between the part of the clause dealing with investment and the part conferring all powers conferred by law, and that accordingly the trustees had no power of investment beyond that expressed in the deed.

McMillan's Trustees v Children's Catholic Refuge, Glasgow, (O.H.) 1908, 16 S.L.T. 236.

(215)

Power to invest in such securities as the trustees might think proper—Investment in heritable security company and in fully paid-up shares of a limited trading company.

Testamentary trustees who had power to invest the trust funds "in any of the Government securities, or upon heritable security in Scotland, or in such other way, or on such other securities as my trustees shall think proper," and who were declared not to be liable "for loss or depreciation in the investments of the trust funds," (1) lent part of the trust funds on deposit receipt to a heritable security company; and (2) with another portion purchased fully paid-up stock of a limited company. There was a loss on both transactions. Held that the first was an investment within the powers of the trustees, and that they were not liable for loss upon it, but that the second was not an investment but the employment of the trust funds in a trading company of which the trustees thereby became partners, and that they were liable for the loss of funds so employed.

Ritchie v Ritchie's Trustees, 1888, 15 R. 1086; 25 S.L.R. 514.

(216)

Loan on heritable security—Buildings in occupation of owner—Investment of funds for alimentary provision—Personal liability of trustees.

Circumstances in which a gratuitous trustee was found personally liable for trust funds lent by him on the security of heritable subjects.

Observed that where trust moneys are lent on the security of heritable subjects, if any part thereof is in the occupation of the owner, the trustee ought to take that fact into consideration in estimating the amount of the rental available for payment of interest on the loan.

Observed that where the primary purpose of a trust is to secure an alimentary provision, the trustee is bound to be specially careful that the security is sufficient to ensure payment of the interest on the loan.

Maclean v Soady's Trustee, 1888, 15 R. 966; 25 S.L.R. 696.

(217)

Buildings in course of erection.

A marriage contract empowered the trustees acting under it (two of whom were the spouses) to lend on, inter alia, heritable securities, or personal securities or obligations, and declared that the trustees should not be answerable "for errors, omissions, or neglect of diligence, nor for the insufficiency of securities, insolvency of debtors, or depreciation in the value of purchases." The greater part of the trust funds was lent by the trustees on the security of buildings in the course of erection, the rents of which, after their completion, turned out to be insufficient to meet the interest on the loan, and the borrower became bankrupt. While both spouses were alive the children of the marriage, whose interest under the contract was during the marriage contingent merely, brought an action against the trustees and the law agent to the trust, concluding to have them ordained, "conjunctly and severally, or severally," to restore the money to the trust. The law agent and one of the trustees lodged defences. It appeared from a proof that the buildings were of the nature of a speculation in the particular locality, and that the trustees obtained no separate valuation, nor did their law agent suggest the propriety of obtaining one. Held (1) that the trustee, in making the investment, had failed to show the reasonable care that a man of ordinary prudence would exercise in the management of his own business, and therefore (2) that he was personally liable for the trust funds so invested. Held, further, that the pursuers had no title to sue the law agent, because he had not been employed by them.

Raes v Meek, 1889, 16 R. (H.L.) 31; 14 App.Cas. 558; 27 S.L.R. 8.

(218)

—Buildings in course of erection are not a security on which a judicial factor is entitled to lend trust funds.

Guild v Glasgow Educational Endowments Board, 1887, 14 R. 944; 24 S.L.R. 676.

(219)

A curator bonis lent funds belonging to his ward on the security of a tenement of houses and shops in a new street which was then in the course of formation in Dundee. When the loan was arranged the buildings were not nearly completed, but when the money was advanced the houses and shops were finished, and were for the most part let, but some workshops, of which the tenement also consisted, were unlet. The loan was made on a valuation by an architect of professional standing in Dundee, employed by the borrower. The valuation was made from plans, the buildings themselves not being examined. The security proved wholly inadequate to meet the loan. In an action by the executor of the ward against the curator bonis, held that the security was not such as a trustee ought to have accepted, and that the defender was personally bound to replace the sum lent.

Crabbe v Whyte, 1891, 18 R. 1065; 28 S.L.R. 806.

(220)

"Real security"—Railway mortgage.

Held that an English will authorising investments on "real security" authorised investment on a railway mortgage.

Breatcliff v Bransby's Trustees, 1887, 14 R. 307; 24 S.L.R. 233.

(221)

"Stocks."

By a trust constituted in 1855, the trustees were empowered to invest the trust funds in heritable or moveable securities "or in Government funds, debentures, or purchases of stocks." In March and July, 1881, they invested certain of the funds in fully paid shares of the British Canadian Lumbering and Timber Co., a company incorporated in August, 1880, in Scotland under the Companies Acts to acquire and work timber rights over large tracts of country in different parts of Canada. Evidence on a consideration of which held that even if the investment was not ultra vires it was imprudent and hazardous, and that the trustees were liable for the loss.

Henderson v Henderson's Trustees, 1900, 2 F. 1295; 37 S.L.R. 976; 8 S.L.T. 222.

(222)

"Bank stock"—What Scottish banks included.

Trustees under a Scottish marriage contract were empowered to invest the trust funds "on such heritable security, or in such public and Government stock of Great Britain, in bank stock, railway debentures, or in such other security as they may consider eligible and expedient." Held (1) that the words "bank stock" must be held to include stock in any of the Scottish banks in good repute at the time of investment, and (2) that the trustees, having purchased stock of the City of Glasgow Bank, were entitled upon the failure of that bank to full and immediate relief from the trust estate from all payments and liabilities arising from the stock so acquired without reference to their own actual payments or ability to pay.

Cuninghame, &c. v Montgomerie, 1879, 6 R. 1333; 16 S.L.R. 801.

(223)

"Any chartered bank"—Registered joint stock bank.

Trustees were empowered by the trust deed to invest the trust funds in the stock of "any chartered bank." Held that they were not entitled to invest in the purchase of stock of a joint stock bank with unlimited liability registered under the Companies Act, 1862, and so incorporated by force of that statute.

Sanders v Sanders' Trustees, 1879, 7 R. 157; 17 S.L.R. 75.

(224)

Whether "heritable or good personal security" covers bank stock—Profit on unauthorised investment.

Under a marriage contract a sum of money was conveyed to trustees, who were directed to invest it on "heritable or good personal security." The trustees invested a portion of the sum in the purchase of bank stock, which afterwards rose greatly in value. The husband and wife then raised an action of declarator that the increased value belonged to them. Held (1) that the investment was contrary to the provisions of the contract; (2) that any increase in the value of the trust estate in consequence of the investment fell to be added to the capital sum; (3) that the trustees were bound immediately to realise the bank stock and to invest the money according to the provisions of the marriage contract.

Grant v Baillie, 1869, 8 M. 77; 42 J. 38; 7 S.L.R. 37.

(225)

"Debentures granted by any responsible joint stock company"—Deposit receipt.

Terms of a trust settlement which held not to authorise investment in a deposit receipt with the City of Melbourne Bank, Limited.

Roy v Roy's Trustees, (O.H.) 1895, 3 S.L.T. 209.

(226)

Personal security—Loan to persons reputed solvent.

Held that trustees authorised to lend on "personal security" are entitled to lend on personal bond to a person reputed solvent at the time of the transaction.

Lamb v Cochran, (O.H.) 1883, 20 S.L.R. 575.

(227)

—Deposit receipt.

The trustees under an antenuptial contract had power "to invest the trust funds on heritable or good personal security." Held that "personal security" included bonds, &c., depending only on personal obligation, and consequently that investments by the trustees of part of the trust funds on bank deposit receipts were intra vires.

Sim v Muir's Trustees, 1906, 8 F. 1091; 43 S.L.R. 795; 14 S.L.T. 291.

(228)

—Loan to member of truster's family on personal security and postponed bonds—Personal liability of trustees.

Circumstances in which testamentary trustees, with the fullest powers of investment on such securities, heritable or personal, as they should think proper, were made personally liable for the loss of a sum lent on insufficient security to a son of the truster, one of the beneficiaries, to enable him to carry on the truster's late business.

Per Lord Watson:—"The power to lend trust money on personal credit may prove very useful to trustees who are in search of a permanent investment, but trustees who make a permanent loan on that footing must, in my opinion, if any loss results from it, justify their action by showing that no safer investment was open to them."

Knox v Mackinnon, 1888, 15 R. (H.L.) 83; 13 App.Cas. 753; 25 S.L.R. 752.

(229)

"Good heritable, moveable, or personal security"—Investment in debentures of a securities company.

A truster authorised his trustees to invest "in good heritable, moveable, or personal security in the government or parliamentary funds in the stock of any chartered or incorporated bank or on debentures or mortgages by railway or other joint stock companies or trusts or corporations of a public nature." The trustees invested in debenture stock of the Mexican Central Railways Securities Co. Held that the words "good heritable, moveable, or personal security" were separable and defined by themselves a class of authorised investment, and that the investment was therefore within the powers of the trustees.

Cathcart v Baxter's Trustees, 1920, 58 S.L.R. 233; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 150.

(230)

Purchase of heritage—Power not given in trust deed—Power conferred by Court.

Where a trust deed did not give the trustees power to purchase heritage, the Lord Ordinary, after a remit to a man of skill, granted the power.

Wardlaw's Trustees, (O.H.) 1902, 10 S.L.T. 349.

(231)

Foreign investments—Deposit of security writs in foreign country.

By her trust disposition and settlement a testatrix directed her trustees, on the death of a liferenter, to convey her whole estate to A, an American citizen, and gave them special powers of investment in American securities, desiring them to act in this matter under the advice of a New York trust company. The trust funds were invested by the trustees in American securities, which were deposited with this company.

In an action against the trustees by an American creditor of the fiar who had obtained a decree in the Scottish courts adjudging to her the whole interest in the fee, the pursuer sought to interdict the defenders from returning the security writs to America, whence they had been brought. The Court assailed the defenders, holding that the trustees were entitled, under the trust deed, to deposit the securities in New York.

Brower's Executor v Ramsay's Trustees, 1912 S.C. 1374; 49 S.L.R. 962; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 215.

(232)

Prohibited investment—Stocks or shares involving unlimited liability—Implied authority to invest in shares with limited liability.

By the investment clause in a trust disposition and settlement trustees were given power to invest the trust funds "in the guaranteed or preference railway stock or shares, or on mortgages or bonds of any company, commissioners, or corporation in Great Britain, established by or under Act of Parliament; it being my express wish and direction that no part of my trust funds shall be applied in the purchase of stocks or shares of any company or corporation involving unlimited liability on the part of the shareholders." The trustees continued to hold shares in a limited liability oil company which depreciated in value. Held that (1) the word "shares" in the first branch of the investment clause referred to railway shares only and not to shares in any company incorporated by Act of Parliament, and (2) that the express prohibition in the second branch of the clause of investment in stock or shares of an unlimited company did not imply authority to invest in the stock or shares of limited companies, and (3) accordingly that the trustees were liable to rein-

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

THE

deed, might have held the investment to be ultra vires.

Warren's Judicial Factor v Warren's Executrix, 1903, 5 F. 890; 40 S.L.R. 653; 11 S.L.T. 93.

(242)

Liability of representatives of deceased trustee—Surviving trustees continuing to hold unauthorised investment.

Testamentary trustees retained and increased without special authority the investments of the truster in a bank which afterwards became insolvent and stopped payment. Three years before the stoppage of the bank one of the trustees died, and the surviving trustee retained the investments which had been made by the trustees jointly. Held that the representative of the predeceasing trustee was liable for the loss to the estate by the illegal investment, notwithstanding it had been retained by the surviving trustee during that period.

Hay's Factor v Newlands's Executrix, (O.H.) 1882, 20 S.L.R. 8.

(243)

Illegal investment—Liability for interest—Town council as trustees lending trust funds to themselves as council without security.

A town council held a fund in trust for the purpose of rebuilding a bridge. As trustees of the bridge rebuilding fund the town council lent, by way of temporary loan, part of the trust funds to themselves as a corporation at common law and as owner of the common good. The loan, which was made without security, was repayable at a week's notice with interest at 3 per cent. Held that the loan was absolutely illegal, and that the town council must account for interest at 5 per cent.

Templeton v Magistrates of Ayr, (O.H.) 1912, 1 S.L.T. 421.

(244)

Liability for interest.

Circumstances in which the representatives of a trustee, who were found liable to refund to the trust estate a sum of money which had been lost through his negligence, were ordained to pay interest thereon at the rate of 3½ per cent.

Lee's Trustees v Dun, 1913 S.C. (H.L.) 12; [1913] A.C. 213; 50 S.L.R. 520; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 259.

Liability for interest—Rate.

[See also INTEREST IX.]

(245)

Profits on illegal investment.

Trustees who had guaranteed an issue of debenture stock in a colonial bank received as commission a bonus of £80, with which they credited the trust. Under this guarantee they ultimately became liable to take up debenture stock to the value of £1285. They paid for this stock with trust funds, thereby committing a breach of trust. Held that the trustees, in accounting with the beneficiaries for a loss arising from the debenture stock, were entitled to take credit for the bonus of £80.

Henderson v Henderson's Trustees, 1900, 2 F. 1295; 37 S.L.R. 976; 8 S.L.T. 222.

(246)

Right of trustees to deduct expenses of realisation.

In a petition by trustees for authority to sell a house which they had in ignorance purchased ultra vires, the deed under which they acted containing no power to purchase heritable property, though it had appreciated in value, the prayer of the petition asked that the expenses of the application and of the procedure following thereon should be chargeable against the trust estate. The Lord Ordinary authorised the trustees to charge the expenses in question against the trust estate, indicating it as his opinion that when an unauthorised investment yielded a profit, the trust estate was only entitled to the net profit after deducting the expenses of earning the profit.

Lamb's Trustees, (O.H.) 1901, 9 S.L.T. 170.

(ii.) Immunity Clause.

(247)

Observations on the effect of an immunity clause.

Observed (per Lord Macnaghten) that an immunity clause affords no protection against a positive breach of law.

Observed (per Lord Davey) that the immunity from liability for the intromissions of a factor or agent extends only to the acts of a factor or agent properly appointed and acting within the legitimate scope of his agency.

Ferguson v Paterson, 1900, 2 F. (H.L.) 37; [1900] A.C. 271; 37 S.L.R. 635; 7 S.L.T. 472.

(248)

Investment not reasonably safe.

Testamentary trustees, who had power to invest the trust funds in the debenture bonds of Parliamentary trusts, in October, 1880, invested £2000 in a debenture bond for seven years of the Greenock Harbour Trust, the bonds of which were at the time in good repute as a sound investment for trust funds. In 1887 the harbour trust became insolvent, and the investment depreciated to the extent of £1300. In an action by the beneficiaries against the surviving trustee for the loss, held that the investment was not a reasonably safe one, that an indemnity clause did not protect the defender, and that he was personally liable for the loss which had accrued.

Opinion (per Lord Adam) that it was immaterial what inquiries the trustees had made before investing, if, in fact, the investment was not a prudent investment.

Alexander v Johnstone, 1899, 1 F. 639; 36 S.L.R. 453; 6 S.L.T. 358.

(249)

Immunity from omissions or neglects of agents, factors, or managers—Liability for “wilful default.”

The tenant of a farm under a current lease died in 1881 leaving a trust settlement, which specially provided that the trustees were not to be “liable singuli in solidum, or for any omissions or neglects of their agents, factors, or managers . . . but they shall be liable for wilful default, and no further.” The trust was accepted by two of the trustees, one of whom had been the truster’s law agent, and continued to act as agent and factor on the trust estate. The trustees renounced the lease, and the incoming tenant took over the waygoing crop, manure, &c., at a valuation, and also made purchases at the dispenishing sale, the articles of roup requiring payment either in ready money or by secured bills. His liability to the trust, after paying part of the price, amounted to about £900. The trustees took no steps to recover this debt beyond taking a personal bond from the debtor, and an assignation to an insurance policy on his life for £500, and eventually in the beginning of 1887 the debtor became bankrupt. The beneficiaries thereafter brought a personal action against the trustees to have them found liable to the trust estate for the loss thereby incurred.

One of the defenders founded on the fact that he had left the management of the estate in the hands of his co-trustee, the law agent for the trust, and on the clause of immunity in the trust deed.

Held, after a proof, that there had been gross neglect of duty on the part of both trustees, amounting to “wilful default,” for which they were liable.

Carruthers v Cairns, 1890, 17 R. 769; 27 S.L.R. 640.

(250)

Liability for “wilful and intentional misdoing.”

A trust deed for the bondholders of a company contained a clause of indemnity in favour of the trustees that none of them should become “liable or responsible for any cause, matter or thing except his own wilful and intentional misdoing.” Held that the trustees were liable for gross neglect although they had no sinister motive for what they did.

Wilson v Guthrie Smith, (O.H.) 1894, 2 S.L.T. 338.

(251)

Immunity from liability for “omissions, errors, or neglect of management” — Liability of each trustee for his own actual intromissions only.

In an action by a beneficiary against a body of trustees, the Court, in finding the trustees personally liable for an investment which was not reasonably safe, held that the defenders were not protected by an indemnity clause declaring that the trustees should not be liable for omissions, errors, or neglect of management, nor singuli in solidum, but each for his own actual intromissions.

Alexander v Johnstone, 1899, 1 F. 639; 36 S.L.R. 453; 6 S.L.T. 358.

(252)

“Omissions in management.”

A trust deed provided that the trustees “shall no ways be liable for any omissions in management.” Trustees who had allowed the trust funds to remain on deposit receipt for nineteen years held liable, notwithstanding the immunity clause, to make good the difference between the rate of interest on deposits and 3 per cent. which would have been earned on safe investments during the period in question.

Melville v Noble’s Trustees, 1896, 24 R. 243; 34 S.L.R. 210; 4 S.L.T. 198.

(253)

“Errors, omissions, or neglect of diligence.”

A trust disposition and settlement provided that the trustees “shall not be liable for omissions, errors, or neglect of management, nor singuli in solidum, but each shall be liable for his own actual intromissions only.” Circumstances in which trustees, who had invested on unsubstantial and insufficient security, were found personally liable, notwithstanding the immunity clause.

Knox v Mackinnon, 1888, 15 R. (H.L.) 83; 13 App.Cas. 753; 25 S.L.R. 752.

(254)

“Errors, omissions, or neglect of diligence” — “Insufficiency of securities.”

A marriage contract provided that the trustees should not be answerable “for errors, omissions, or neglect of diligence, nor for the insufficiency of securities, insolvency of debtors, or depreciation in the value of purchases.”

Held that trustees who, without obtaining a separate valuation, had invested on the security of buildings in the course of erection, were guilty of such negligence that the immunity clause afforded them no protection against personal liability for the loss on the investment.

Raes v Meek, 1889, 16 R. (H.L.) 31; 14 App.Cas. 558; 27 S.L.R. 8.

(255)

Statutory immunity—Independent valuation—Trusts (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1891, sec. 4 (1).

In making loans over heritable property trustees, in order to have the benefit of this section, must prove that they reasonably believed the valuation to have been made by an able practical valuator employed independently of the proprietor.

Boyd v Greig, (O.H.) 1913, 1 S.L.T. 398.

See also Wood, (O.H.) 1893, 1 S.L.T. 309, No. 270, infra.

(iii.) Relief.

(256)

Claim of indemnity against beneficiary—Act 1891, sec. 6.

Circumstances in which trustees who had invested trust funds in breach of trust, and were held liable for the consequent loss, held not entitled at common law or under sec. 6 of the Trusts (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1891, to be indemnified by a beneficiary against this liability.

Henderson v Henderson's Trustees, 1900, 2 F. 1295; 37 S.L.R. 976; 8 S.L.T. 222.

(257)

Improper investment—Marriage trust—Consent by spouses—Liability to make good income and capital—Income payable to husband—Income payable to wife—Act 1891, sec. 6—"Breach of trust."

Part of the trust estate under a marriage contract trust was lost through a former trustee making an improper investment of the trust funds. The trust purposes were that the trustees should pay the income of the estate to the wife for her sole and separate use without power of anticipation, and on her death to her husband, the fee being destined to the children. The trustee, having been found personally liable to replace the sum which had been lost, maintained that the spouses, in respect that they had consented to the investment, were barred from taking any benefit from the money replaced, and that accordingly any part of the sum lost which represented income payable to them or any income which should accrue during their lifetime on the portion of the amount lost which represented capital should be retained by or repaid to him. Held that the contention was well founded quoad income payable to the husband but not quoad income payable to the wife, as the trustee was there for her protection and it had not been shown that in consenting to the investment she had acted for herself and was fully informed of the circumstances.

Opinion (per Lord Mackenzie) that the words "breach of trust" contained in sec. 6 of the Trusts (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1891, meant some act of omission which was itself a breach of trust and not one that merely became so by reason of want of care on the part of the trustee.

Cathcart's Trustees v Cathcart, (O.H.) 1907, 15 S.L.T. 646.

(258)

Approval of beneficiaries—Homologation—Alimentary right.

Trustees were directed, inter alia, to pay the annual proceeds of trust funds to a lady for her alimentary use. The trustees, with the lady's knowledge and express approval, made an investment which they had no power under the trust deed to make. In an action in which she sought to make them liable for loss on the investment, held that she had no power to homologate their acts, so as to affect her alimentary right.

Sanders v Sanders' Trustees, 1879, 7 R. 157; 17 S.L.R. 75.

(259)

Beneficiaries also trustees.

In a case where a trustee was found liable to restore to a trust a sum lost through an improper investment his liability was limited by order of the House of Lords so that no benefit should arise therefrom to beneficiaries who, being also trustees, had taken part in the breach of trust.

Raes v Meek, 1889, 16 R. (H.L.) 31; 14 App.Cas. 558; 27 S.L.R. 8.

(260)

Calls on ultra vires investment.

When a trustee improperly invests trust funds in a trading company, and thereby incurs personal liability to third parties, the approval of the investment by beneficiaries after it has been made does not imply an obligation on their part to relieve him of loss which he may thereby incur.

Trustees under a marriage contract improperly invested funds of the trust in the purchase of stock in an unlimited joint stock banking company. The liferentrix of the fund afterwards approved of the investment. The company having gone into liquidation, held that a trustee had no claim of relief against the liferentrix even to the extent of her interest in the trust funds.

City of Glasgow Bank v Parkhurst, &c., 1880, 7 R. 749; 17 S.L.R. 554.

(261)

Trust to hold particular stock.

Circumstances in which trustees under a latent trust, who were registered as holders of stock of a bank which failed, held entitled to relief of calls by the persons truly interested in the stock.

Currer v Loudon, 1879, 7 R. 289; 17 S.L.R. 149.

(262)

Recourse against law agent.

Trustees, who had been found liable to repay to the trust a sum lost owing to an imprudent investment, brought an action of relief against the law agent of the trust. Held (after a proof) that the trustees had not relied on the agent's recommendation but on their own independent inquiries, and that accordingly the agent was not liable.

Opinion (per curiam) that it was not the duty of the law agent, without express instructions, to make inquiries in regard to the propriety of the investment.

Johnstone v Thorburn, 1901, 3 F. 497; 38 S.L.R. 343; 8 S.L.T. 422.

(263)

Recourse against trust estate—Calls.

Trustees had, in excess of their powers, invested trust funds in the purchase of stock of a company which went into liquidation. Held that they were not entitled to apply the other trust funds in payment of calls, and were bound to re-invest a sum equivalent to that which they had spent in the purchase of the stock.

Sanders v Sanders' Trustees, 1879, 7 R. 157; 17 S.L.R. 75.

(264)

Calls—Investment within powers conferred by trust deed—Stock of bank in good repute.

Cunningham v Montgomerie, 1879, 6 R. 1333; 16 S.L.R. 801, No. 222, supra.

(b) As Partner or Shareholder.

(265)

Trustees as partners—Trustee predeceasing a liquidation—Heir of last surviving trustee.

Though trustees are partners, and therefore liable as contributories in a liquidation for calls on shares of a joint stock company registered in their names (Muir, &c. v City of Glasgow Bank, 1879, 6 R. (H.L.) 21; 4 App.Cas. 337; 16 S.L.R. 483), the representatives of one of them who has predeceased the liquidation, though his name still stands on the register, are not so liable (Oswald's Trustees v City of Glasgow Bank, 1879, 6 R. 461; 16 S.L.R. 221), but the representatives of a trustee, who was himself the last surviving trustee, are.

Low's Executors v City of Glasgow Bank, 1879, 6 R. 830; 17 S.L.R. 3.

(266)

Failure to consult co-trustee in accepting investment—Subsequent acceptance of investment by trustee—Letter "declining" office of trustee—Resignation not intimated to company.

In a marriage contract one of the spouses conveyed to the trustees certain stocks in a joint stock bank. Shortly after the marriage the agent in the trust, without consulting one of the trustees, sent the contract to the bank for the shares to be registered in name of the trustees. The trustee in question accepted transfers of other investments transferred to the trust and signed a dividend warrant on the bank stock, adding the word "trustee" to his name. He did not formally accept the trust, and never attended a meeting of trustees. He left the neighbourhood within a year of the marriage, and on the death of one of the spouses twelve years later wrote to the agent "declining" the office of trustee. This letter was not intimated to the bank.

In the liquidation of the bank eleven years later, held (1) that he had accepted the office of trustee; (2) that he had by his actings sanctioned the transfer of the bank stock into his name; and (3) that he had done nothing to denude himself of the same, and was therefore liable as a contributory.

Ker v City of Glasgow Bank, 1879, 6 R. (H.L.) 52; 4 App.Cas. 549, 598; 16 S.L.R. 285, 507.

(267)

Divestiture of stock in a company.

Question, whether a sole surviving trustee can divest himself of stock of a joint stock company standing in his name, without investing some one else by an executed transfer.

Question, whether by resignation merely, without a transfer, a trustee can divest himself of stock in a joint stock company.

Shaw v City of Glasgow Bank, 1878, 6 R. 332; 16 S.L.R. 134.

Tochetti v City of Glasgow Bank, 1879, 6 R. 789; 16 S.L.R. 415.

(c) Under Warrandice Clause.

(268)

Bond and disposition in security by trustee with consent of trustee "as trustee"—Liability of trustee under warrandice clause.

A person infet as trustee in certain heritable subjects, after consenting to certain bonds being granted over them by his author, which were duly recorded, granted a bond and disposition in security for a new loan which he acknowledged to have received, and bound himself to repay "as trustee." In security of the personal obligation he disposed the subjects "as trustee," and the bond further contained this clause—"I grant warrandice." In an action by the last bondholder upon the clause of warrandice against the representative of the trustee, held that the trustee was personally bound in warrandice from fact and deed, and was liable for loss arising from the prior bonds to which he was a consenter.

Question, whether he was not personally liable in absolute warrandice.

Horsburgh's Trustees v Welch, 1886, 14 R. 67; 24 S.L.R. 40.

(d) For intra vires Investment.

(269)

Partial assignation of heritable bond—Postponed security—Absence of independent valuation.

The judicial factor upon a marriage contract trust estate brought an action to recover a sum of money from the trustees in consequence of an investment of the trust funds said to have been negligently made. The investment took the form of a loan over heritable property which was postponed to other loans of large amount, and the security taken was a partial assignation of a bond securing a loan of much larger amount. The loan was made on the strength of a valuation by an experienced valuator. There was no evidence to show that the valuator had been instructed for the trust independently of any owner of the property. Held that the trustees were bound to repay the sum sued for with interest from the date when the last payment of interest was made.

Boyd v Greig, (O.H.) 1913, 1 S.L.T. 398.

(270)

Prospective loss on investment—Loan on heritable security—Failure to obtain valuation.

In a petition by the representative of a deceased curator bonis the new curator lodged answers objecting to a bond and disposition in security for £24,000 taken by the curator bonis nineteen years previously over an estate which had recently been exposed for sale at £20,000 and had brought no offer. The objector stated that the subjects were from the first of insufficient value as a security and that neither at the time of the loan nor subsequently had he obtained a valuation. The petitioners replied that the subjects had just before the loan been bought at a public sale for £35,000, and that the rents had always been sufficient to meet the interest. Held that there was no clear averment of breach of duty, and no definite claim of loss to the estate; and accordingly that the petitioners were entitled to exoneration and discharge.

Wood, (O.H.) 1893, 1 S.L.T. 309.

(271)

Loss on realisation—Judicial factor.

A judicial factor on a trust estate in 1880 invested £3250 of the trust funds on a bond over house property which was valued at £4150. Interest on the bond having ceased to be paid at Martinmas, 1890, the judicial factor entered into possession of the security subjects and ultimately sold them at a loss to the trust estate of £902. Evidence upon which it was held that the judicial factor was not liable for this loss.

Manners v Strong's Judicial Factor, 1902, 4 F. 829; 39 S.L.R. 709; 10 S.L.T. 66.

(272)

Investment authorised by trust deed.

Circumstances in which held that a trustee was personally liable to make good the loss incurred on an investment of the trust funds notwithstanding the investment was within the class authorised by the trust deed.

Cathcart's Trustees v Cathcart, (O.H.) 1907, 14 S.L.T. 925.

(273)

Heritable bond by limited company in good repute.

Trustees who were directed to invest a trust estate "on such security, heritable or personal, or in such stocks as they shall think best," invested it by taking an assignment to a bond granted by a heritable security company of limited liability which was in good credit at the date of the investment. The company having afterwards gone into liquidation, held that the trustees were not personally liable to the beneficiary in the trust for the loss caused by the failure of the company to pay its debts in full.

Lamb v Cochran, (O.H.) 1883, 20 S.L.R. 575.

9. DUTIES AND LIABILITIES OF TRUSTEES INTER SE.

(274)

Administration—Duty of majority.

Observations on the duty of a majority of trustees towards a dissentient minority in regard to the conduct of the trust affairs.

Darling v Darling, 1898, 25 R. 747; 35 S.L.R. 572; 5 S.L.T. 377.

(275)

Duty of majority to consult minority—Exercise of discretionary power.

A power to trustees to postpone payment of children's shares, which was held to be a power to restrict their interest to a liferent, was exercised by two out of three trustees without notice to the third trustee that the question was to be considered. Held that the exercise of the power was invalid.

Slimon v Slimon's Trustees, (O.H.) 1915, 2 S.L.T. 19.

(276)

Assumption of new trustee by quorum—No notice to co-trustees.

Wyse v Abbott, 1881, 8 R. 983; 19 S.L.R. 77, No. 70, supra.

Malcolm v Goldie, 1895, 22 R. 968; 32 S.L.R. 711; 3 S.L.T. 101, No. 62, supra.

(277)

Appointment of new trustees by Court—Nobile officium—Disagreement among existing trustees.

Aikman, 1881, 9 R. 213; 19 S.L.R. 160, No. 82, supra.

Dick, 1899, 2 F. 316; 37 S.L.R. 232; 7 S.L.T. 276, No. 83, supra.

(278)

Petition for removal of co-trustee—Disagreement between trustees.

Hope v Hope, 1884, 12 R. 27; 22 S.L.R. 33, No. 107, supra.

Stewart v Chalmers, 1904, 7 F. 163; 42 S.L.R. 135; 12 S.L.T. 486, No. 108, supra.

(279)

Petition for removal of absent trustees at instance of co-trustees.

Walker, 1868, 6 M. 973; 5 S.L.R. 543, No. 110, supra.

(280)

Petition for appointment of judicial factor—Disagreement between trustees.

Yuill v Ross, 1900, 3 F. 96; 8 S.L.T. 254. JUDICIAL FACTOR, No. 51.

(281)

Intimation of resignation to co-trustees—Effect of failure to intimate.

Sinclair v City of Glasgow Bank, 1879, 6 R. 571; 16 S.L.R. 235, No. 93, supra.

(282)

Reliance on advice of co-trustee—Investment of funds.

Gratuitous trustees are personally liable only for losses occasioned by the want of such diligence on their part as a man of ordinary prudence uses in his own affairs.

Circumstances in which a trustee resident in England who, relying on the advice of one of his co-trustees, who was also law agent, and on the consent of the other trustee and the approval of the liferenter, had concurred in an investment which turned out to be worthless, was assuolized.

Kennedy, &c. v Kennedy, 1884, 12 R. 275; 22 S.L.R. 181.

(283)

Forgery by one of two trustees—Negligence of trustee and beneficiaries—Personal objection.

A, one of two trustees, who was also the law agent to the trust, forged the signature of the other to a transfer of a bond, part of the trust estate, and embezzled the proceeds. A judicial factor, appointed on the trust estate, raised an action of reduction of the transfer against the purchasers, who pleaded that the pursuer was barred by the neglect of the co-trustee and of the beneficiaries, in respect that they had left the entire management of the estate to A, although they had good grounds for distrusting him. Held (1) that even if negligence on the part of the co-trustee had been proved, it would have been no bar to the action; and (2) that there was no proof of negligence on the part of the beneficiaries.

Adair's Factor v Connell's Trustees, 1894, 22 R. 116; 32 S.L.R. 102; 2 S.L.T. 336.

(284)

Culpa lata — Failure to sue co-trustee for trust funds misappropriated by him—Defence that no loss resulted from failure.

In February, 1895, A, a trustee, discovered that B, his co-trustee, who acted as agent for the trust, had retained in his own hands trust money amounting to £150 which he had been instructed to place on deposit receipt with a bank. A at once applied to B for repayment of the amount, and continued at intervals to press for repayment, but he took no legal proceedings against B, although about midsummer he became suspicious that B was in pecuniary difficulties. A also took no steps to prevent B intrmitting further with the trust funds, and at Whitsunday, 1895, B collected the rent of a heritable property belonging to the trust estate, and retained it for his own purposes. In November, 1895, A was preparing to take legal proceedings against B when B became bankrupt. Held (1) that A was guilty of culpa lata in not taking legal proceedings against B without delay for recovery of the £150, but that he was not liable to repay that sum to the trust estates in respect that it was proved that nothing would have been recovered from B if proceedings had been taken against him; (2) that A was guilty of culpa lata in not taking immediate steps, on discovering B's misconduct, to prevent him intrmitting further with the trust funds, and that he was liable to repay to the trust estate the amount of the Whitsunday rent which B had appropriated.

Millar's Trustees v Polson, 1897, 24 R. 1038; 34 S.L.R. 798; 5 S.L.T. 94.

(285)

Negligence of original trustee — Action by assumed trustees — Alleged delay and contributory negligence of pursuers—Right to maintain action for behoof of beneficiaries—Mora.

One of the original trustees acting under a trust disposition and settlement died in 1887, and in the same year two new trustees were assumed, one of whom was also a beneficiary under the trust. In 1909 these new trustees, suing in their capacity as trustees, brought an action against the representatives of the deceased trustee for recovery of the funds which they alleged had been lost to the trust estate through his negligence. The defenders pleaded that the pursuers were barred by mora, and by the fact that they had themselves been guilty of negligence which had contributed to the loss. Held that, as the pursuers were suing as trustees for behoof of the beneficiaries whom they represented, the plea of bar stated against them was unavailing.

Lees's Trustees v Dun, 1913 S.C. (H.L.) 12; [1913] A.C. 213; 50 S.L.R. 520; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 259.

(286)

"All parties not called" — Action ex delicto against one of several trustees.

Beneficiaries in a trust brought an action against one of the trustees to enforce personal liability against him for alleged loss to the trust estate through the trustees having illegally lent trust funds to one of their own number. The Court repelled a plea of "all parties not called" on the ground that the action was founded on delict, involving joint and several liability.

Croskery v Gilmour's Trustees, 1890, 17 R. 697; 27 S.L.R. 490.

[See also PROCESS IV. 6 (4) (e).]

(287)

Representatives of deceased trustee not called in action against trustees for breach of trust.

In an action by a beneficiary against trustees concluding for the restoration of trust funds alleged to have been lost by improper investment, the defenders pleaded "all parties not called," in respect that the representatives of a deceased trustee, who had been a party to the transaction challenged, were not called as defenders. Held that the action being for breach of trust it was competent to sue one or more of the trustees without calling all the trustees, and plea repelled.

Observed that any right of relief as between the trustees would not be affected by the action being allowed to proceed.

Observation per curiam on the nature of an action for breach of trust.

Allen v McCombie's Trustees, 1909 S.C. 710; 46 S.L.R. 485; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 296.

10. TRUSTEE AS AUCTIONER IN REM SUAM.

(288)

Company—Director.

Observed that, wherever it can be shown that a trustee has so arranged matters as to obtain an advantage, whether in money or in money's worth, to himself personally, through the execution of his trust, he will not be allowed to retain it, but will be compelled to make it over to his constituent.

Huntington Copper and Sulphur Co. v Henderson, 1877, 4 R. 294; 14 S.L.R. 219; affirmed, 1877, 5 R. (H.L.) 1; 15 S.L.R. 217.

(289)

Purchase of beneficiary's interest by trustee.

When a trustee enters into a transaction with a beneficiary for the purchase of his interest in the trust, it is the duty of the trustee to give to the beneficiary all the information he possesses as to its value.

Dougan v Macpherson, 1902, 4 F. (H.L.) 7; [1902] A.C. 197; 39 S.L.R. 383; 9 S.L.T. 439.

(290)

Conversion of truster's business into company—Allotment of shares to trustees as individuals.

A business carried on by trustees was turned by them into a limited liability company. Held that as individuals they were not entitled to apply for an allotment of shares.

Taylor v Hillhouse's Trustees, (O.H.) 1901, 9 S.L.T. 31.

(291)

Adverse title made up by accepting trustee.

Thain v Thain, 1891, 18 R. 1196; 28 S.L.R. 902, No. 169, supra.

(292)

Purchase of trust property by wife of trustee—Husband and wife.

There is no absolute rule of law that the purchase of trust property by the wife of a trustee is illegal. Circumstances in which held that the purchase of shipping shares belonging to a trust estate by the wife of one of the trustees, on her own initiative, out of her separate estate, and for an adequate price, was valid.

Burrell v Burrell's Trustees, 1915 S.C. 333; 52 S.L.R. 312; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 101.

(293)

Authority to trustee to purchase trust subjects at public roup—Nobile officium.

Circumstances in which testamentary trustees were authorised to sell pictures, forming part of the trust estate, by public roup at prices not less than those put upon them in a valuation, under the express condition that one of the trustees as an individual should be entitled to bid for them as he might desire.

Coats's Trustees, 1914 S.C. 723; 51 S.L.R. 642; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 504.

(294)

Right of beneficiaries to bid.

Shiell v Guthrie's Trustees, 1874, 1 R. 1083; 11 S.L.R. 625, No. 373, infra.

(295)

Authority to trustees to purchase trust property—Nobile officium.

By his trust disposition and settlement a factory owner, who had been carrying on business in partnership with his two sons, appointed trustees, of whom two were his two sons, and directed them to dispose of his estate among certain beneficiaries in life-rent and fee. He granted the trustees a general power of sale by public roup or private bargain; and he also authorised them, in the event of his sons continuing to carry on the business, to sell to them the factory and plant at such price as might be fixed by the trustees or determined by arbitration. The sons having offered to purchase other heritable subjects belonging to the trust which were adjacent to the factory, the trustees presented a petition craving the Court, in the exercise of its nobile officium, to authorise the sale of these subjects to the sons at a fixed price, or otherwise to authorise their exposure at public roup with leave to the sons to bid for them. The Court refused the prayer of the petition.

Hall's Trustees v M'Arthur, 1918 S.C. 646; 55 S.L.R. 609; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 25.

(296)

Trustee taking lease of house to which truster had spes successionis.

A lady's marriage contract conveyed to the trustees her spes successionis to an entailed estate then possessed by her father. One of the trustees who had accepted office obtained from her father a lease of a house on the entailed estate. Held that there was no breach of duty on the part of the trustee in taking the lease, and that it was not reducible on that ground.

Question, whether the tenant's right under the lease was affected on the lady succeeding to the entailed estate.

Montgomerie v Vernon, 1895, 22 R. 465; 32 S.L.R. 393; 2 S.L.T. 548.

(297)

Proprietor of premises refusing new lease to trustees—Trustee resigning trust and taking lease as an individual.

The trustees of a testator were carrying on the testator's business. One of the trustees, who managed the business, ascertained that the proprietor of the premises in which it was carried on was not willing to renew the lease to the trustees. He proposed to take a lease for himself as an individual, and resigned from the trust. In a note of suspension and interdict presented by the other trustees, held that the trustee who had resigned was not entitled to enter into the lease.

Halley's Trustees v Halley, (O.H.) 1920, 2 S.L.T. 343.

(298)

Heritable bond assigned to trustee on payment of full amount.

A widow paid to her husband's testamentary trustees the full amount of a heritable bond in which they were creditors, and before obtaining from them an assignation she was assumed as a trustee. Held that the assignation subsequently granted to her was unobjectionable.

Opinion (per Lord Justice-Clerk Patton) that there is no inherent nullity, nor even anything suspicious, in a trustee obtaining an assignation of a bond due to the trust on his paying the full amount.

Fleming v Imrie, 1868, 6 M. 363; 40 J. 191; 5 S.L.R. 242.

(299)

Curator bonis—Sale of shares belonging to ward to a company of which the curator was director—Right of pre-emption in company—Approval of Accountant of Court.

Held that the sale by a curator bonis to a company, of which he was a shareholder and the managing director, of shares in the company belonging to his ward, was reducible, notwithstanding that the Accountant of Court had declined to sanction the retention of the shares by the curator, that the company had a right of pre-emption, and that the Accountant had approved of the price.

Dunn v Chambers, 1897, 25 R. 247; 35 S.L.R. 203; 5 S.L.T. 345.

(300)

One trustee partner of trust—Payments of trust funds to trustee as partner—Power of trustees to transact with co-trustee.

Circumstances in which a partnership between testamentary trustees and one of their number was held to be valid.

Question, whether the trustees would have been entitled to enter into a compromise of their co-trustee's claims.

Lawrie v Lawrie's Trustees, 1892, 19 R. 675; 29 S.L.R. 525.

(301)

Power to transact.

Held that the trustees of a deceased partner, who had become entitled under the contract of copartnership to his share in the business, could not transact with the surviving partner, who was also one of the trustees, to the effect of giving him an increased share of profits in consideration of his continuing to act as managing partner, on the ground that he, as one of the trustees, could not be auctor in rem suam.

Mackie's Trustees v Mackie, 1875, 2 R. 312; 12 S.L.R. 222.

(302)

Loan of trust funds to trustee.

Trustees advanced part of the trust funds to the liferenter—one of their number—on the security of a house which he was erecting for his occupation. Held that the transaction was ultra vires, and that the trustees were bound to replace the funds so lent.

Ritchie v Ritchie's Trustees, 1888, 15 R. 1086; 25 S.L.R. 514.

(303)

Trustee also a creditor—Transaction for his own benefit with reference to the subject of the trust.

A proprietor granted to E a bond and disposition in security over his lands, and then conveyed his whole estates to E and others as trustees, to be held and applied by them in payment of the debts due to E and certain other specified creditors. An agreement was afterwards entered into by E as an individual, the trustees, and the debtor, by which it was provided that E should not be bound to accept payment of his bond, which was for £20,000, with interest at 10 per cent., otherwise than by annual instalments of £2000. The truster, having subsequently obtained a large advance to enable him to liquidate his debts, executed a second conveyance of his estates to another set of trustees, to be held and applied by them, together with the sum so advanced, in payment of the debts due to E and the specified creditors. These trustees accordingly paid all the creditors except E, who declined to accept payment otherwise than by instalments. Held that as no one whose interests E as trustee was bound to protect had been prejudicially affected by the agreement, he was entitled to stand on it, and therefore to refuse to accept immediate payment of his debt.

Lord Ashburton v Escombe, 1892, 20 R. 187; 30 S.L.R. 194.

(304)

Trustees who had, in breach of their trust, purchased trust property, bound to communicate benefit subsequently acquired—Right to perpetuate a breach of trust cannot be acquired by prescription.

By deed of mortification the granter assigned certain sums to the town council of a burgh, to be invested and the proceeds applied towards the maintenance of two professors in a university. The funds were invested in lands, which were managed for many years by the master of mortifications, an officer of the corporation, in whose name the title was taken. Afterwards the town council appointed a portion of the lands, including a strip of land on the sea coast, to be exposed for sale by public roup. The subjects were sold for payment of a feu-duty, and to a person who afterwards declared that he had purchased on behalf of the treasurer of the town, and the latter was infeft upon a charter in his favour for behoof of the magistrates, council, and community. Soon afterwards the town council, upon a representation that they were proprietors of the ground, obtained from the Crown a grant of the salmon fishings ex adverso of the strip of land. Held (1) that the town council still held the lands in trust for the mortification, and that they could plead no prescriptive right against the trust; and (2) that having acquired the fishings in the character of proprietors of the trust property they were bound to communicate the benefit to the trust and hold them for behoof of the trust.

Magistrates of Aberdeen v University of Aberdeen, 1877, 4 R. (H.L.) 48; 2 App.Cas. 544; 14 S.L.R. 490.

(305)

Truster transacting business with trust—Duty to communicate profits.

A trust estate included two public-house businesses, which the trustees continued to carry on. One of the trustees was a wholesale dealer, who before the testator's death had been in the habit of supplying him with whisky and beer. After the testator's death and his acceptance of office as trustee he continued to supply whisky and beer, and he also looked after the management of the businesses, for which he made a charge. Circumstances in which held that the trustee was liable to communicate to the trust estate the benefit which he had received.

Cherry's Trustees v Patrick, (O.H.) 1911, 2 S.L.T. 313.

Trustee acting as law agent.

[See 2 (1), supra.]

11. EXPENSES OF ADMINISTRATION.

(1) GENERALLY.

(306)

Expenses connected with examination and change of investments—Capital or income.

In a trust settlement the testator directed his trustees "in the first place," "to pay all my just and lawful debts . . . and the expenses of every kind connected with the execution of the trust hereby created. . . . In the seventh place, I direct my trustees after fulfilling the foregoing purposes, to hold the residue of my estate for behoof of my said wife in liferent, . . . and . . . to pay to my said wife the free annual produce of the said residue as and when the same is received by my trustees." The testator then gave directions as to the disposal of the residue on his wife's death. Held that all expenses connected with the examination of investments from time to time and changes in them fell to be paid out of capital and not out of income.

Smith v Bennie, 1890, 18 R. 44; 28 S.L.R. 32.

(307)

Annual payment to trustees—Retention of capital sum as security, or charge against income.

By his trust disposition and settlement a testator directed his trustees to set aside £16,000 and hold it for the alimentary liferent use of certain liferenters and for certain other beneficiaries in fee, and to divide the residue of his estate among his residuary legatees. He also directed his trustees to pay to themselves annually the sum of twenty-five guineas. Held that the trustees were not entitled, before distributing the residue, to retain a capital sum to meet the annual payment to themselves, but were entitled to charge that payment against the revenue of the £16,000 which they continued to hold for the liferenters.

Kirkwood v Kirkwood's Trustees, 1912 S.C. 613; 49 S.L.R. 458; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 251.

(308)

Premiums of insurance—Capital or income.

Held that payments of premiums of insurance against fire are a proper charge against the revenue of trust property.

Brown v Soutar and Meacher, 1870, 8 M. 702; 42 J. 359; 7 S.L.R. 405.

(309)

Premiums of insurance paid by one trustee

—Right of recovery against trust—Policy not matured.

A trustee who has made advances for the preservation of the trust estate can recover from the estate only to the extent to which it was lucratus by his action. A trustee, who had paid premiums on a policy of insurance forming part of the trust estate, before the policy matured sued the trustees for the amount of his advances. Action dismissed as premature.

Brown v Meek's Trustees, (O.H.) 1896, 4 S.L.T. 46.

(310)

Repairs, renewal and depreciation of plant—Manufactory carried on by testamentary trustees for liferenter and fiar.

An iron manufacturer, by his trust disposition and settlement, directed his trustees to pay to his widow the whole free income or annual produce of the residue of his estate as the same should arise, and authorised his trustees, with his widow's consent, to carry on his iron business "in such way and manner as to my trustees shall seem in their discretion best for the interest of my trust estate." The trustees, with the widow's consent, carried on the business. In an action brought by the widow against the trustees, held that the defenders were not entitled to set off against the pursuer, as charges against income, any sums by way of depreciation on buildings or plant other than sums actually expended by the said trustees in the reasonable maintenance, repair and renewal of buildings and plant forming part of the residue of the said estate.

Ellis v Ellis' Trustees, 1895, 22 R. 764; 32 S.L.R. 611; 3 S.L.T. 64.

(311)

Extraordinary repairs to heritable property—Capital or income—Power to charge estate.

Pottie, 1902, 4 F. 876; 39 S.L.R. 654; 10 S.L.T. 107, No. 395, infra.

(312)

Deduction of expenses in ascertaining "yearly value"—Factor's remuneration.

Held that in ascertaining the yearly value of a landed estate within the meaning of a trust disposition and settlement the factor's remuneration was not a good deduction from the gross rental.

Earl of Wharncliffe's Trustees v Earl of Wharncliffe's Trustees, (O.H.) 1904, 12 S.L.T. 287.

(313)

Death duties—Expenses of "this trust"—Estate duty—Legacy duty.

A testator directed the residue after payment of debts to be divided into five shares, and after disposing of three and three-fourths of these shares directed that the remaining one and one-fourth share should be devoted to certain purposes, and inter alia, "discharging the necessary expenses connected with this trust." Held that the whole expenses of administering the will were chargeable against the one and one-fourth share, but that such expenses did not include estate duty and legacy duty.

Michie's Executors v Michie, 1905, 7 F. 509; 42 S.L.R. 386; 12 S.L.T. 738.

(314)

—Estate duty—Settlement estate duty —Succession duty—Debt chargeable on fee of estate—Bond and disposition in security
—Expenses of settling duties—Petition to charge expenses of petition—Finance Act, 1894, sec. 9 (5)—Succession Duty Act, 1853, sec. 44.

Trustees acting under a will, who had made up a title to heritage comprised in the trust and paid the estate, settlement estate, and succession duties due in respect thereof on the death of the truster, presented a petition for authority, under sec. 9 (5) of the Finance Act, 1894, and sec. 44 of the Succession Duty Act, 1853, to grant a bond and disposition in security over the property for the amount of the duties so paid and the expenses of settling the same and of the petition. The will contained no power to borrow, and it was stated for the petitioners that no person could be found willing to lend the amount on the security of the estate without the sanction of the Court. Held that the trustees were entitled to authority to charge the property by way of bond and disposition in security for the duties paid, and also for the expenses incurred in settling the duties, but not for the expenses of the petition. Opinions that but for the circumstances that the trustees had no power to borrow, and that no lender could be found willing to advance the amount without the authority of the Court, the petition, looking to the statutory powers of the trustees, would have been unnecessary.

Harris' Trustees v Harris, 1904, 6 F. 470; 41 S.L.R. 357; 11 S.L.T. 726.

(315)

Income tax—Deductions—Expense of distributing profits under trust deed—Income Tax Act, 1842, sec. 100, sched. D, case 5.

Testamentary trustees were assessed for income tax under case 5, sched. D, of the Income Tax Act, 1842, on the full amount received by them in Great Britain of trade profits made in India. The trustees claimed deduction of the expense of the trust administration in Great Britain, on the ground that the beneficiaries on whom the income tax fell could only receive the profits subject to this deduction. Held that the deduction could not be allowed, as the trust administration was not an expenditure for trade purposes.

Inland Revenue v Macdonald's Trustees, 1894, 22 R. 88; 32 S.L.R. 85; 2 S.L.T. 317.

(316)

Public burdens—Incidence as between trustees and liferenter of furnished house.

Held that a widow, who under her husband's settlement had the use of a furnished house, was liable in rates payable in respect of occupancy, but not for feu-duty, nor rates payable in respect of property, nor for repairs of pavement and roof.

Clark, &c., 1871, 9 M. 435; 43 J. 213; 8 S.L.R. 314.

(317)

A B executed a settlement in which he directed his trustees, "in respect Miss E D has arranged with me to take entire charge of my children in the event of my decease, I direct my trustees to make over to her" his house, with the furniture therein, and "that during all the days of her natural life, and so long as she shall not enter into any marriage after my decease," and to pay her an alimentary annuity of £500, it being declared that "the foresaid liferent and alimentary provisions shall be subject to the burden of maintaining" and educating his children so long as they should not be able to support themselves. A B subsequently married E D. In a question between A B's trustees and his widow in regard to the incidence of burdens connected with the house, held (1) upon the construction of the deed that the widow had merely a right of occupancy, and therefore (2) that the trustees were liable for feu-duty, assessments in respect of property, and landlord's repairs, but that the widow was liable for assessments in respect of occupancy and for tenant's repairs.

Bayne's Trustees v Bayne, 1894, 22 R. 26; 32 S.L.R. 31; 2 S.L.T. 276.

(318)

—Gas and water rates.

A truster provided that his widow should have the liferent use of his house "free of rent, feu-duty, ground annual, taxes, and all other deductions." Held that the trustees were not bound to pay gas and water rates for the widow.

Rodger's Trustees v Rodger, 1875, 2 R. 294; 12 S.L.R. 204.

(319)

Liability to put house in tenantable repair—Incidence as between trustees and liferenter.

A testator directed that his wife should be entitled to occupy during her life a house belonging to him at such rent as appeared as the annual value in the valuation roll. Held that the trustees were bound to put the house into proper tenantable condition and repair, and maintain it in the like condition during the widow's lifetime, and pay all expenses of doing so except the expenses of repairs proper to a tenant.

Kinloch's Trustees v Kinloch, 1880, 7 R. 596; 17 S.L.R. 444.

(320)

Right of retention.

Per Lord M'Laren—"If a private trust be superseded by sequestration or by the appointment of a judicial factor, the private trustee does not lose his right of retention of the trust estate for his necessary outlay in the fair administration of the trust."

MacGregor v MacLennan's Trustee, 1898, 25 R. 482; 35 S.L.R. 388; 5 S.L.T. 287.

(321)

Statutory trust—Expenses of applying for statutory powers.

Trustees are not entitled to expend trust funds in applying to Parliament for additional powers, unless authority has been given them to do so either expressly or by implication.

Cowan v Law, 1872, 10 M. 578; 44 J. 281; 9 S.L.R. 341.

(322)

—The trustees acting under the Edinburgh and District Waterworks Act applied to Parliament for powers to bring in an additional supply of water. This application was opposed by a number of rate-payers. The bill was passed by the House of Commons, but was thrown out by the House of Lords. Great expense had been incurred in promoting the bill, and the trustees proposed to defray these out of the trust funds. Held that the statutes under which they acted did not authorise the trustees to apply to Parliament for the additional powers sought, and interdict granted against paying the costs out of the trust funds.

Cowan v Law, 1872, 10 M. 578; 44 J. 281; 9 S.L.R. 341.

(323)

—Commissioners of supply held not entitled to apply the county general assessments to paying costs of opposing the Roads and Bridges Bill, 1878.

Wakefield v Commissioners of Supply of Renfrewshire, 1878, 6 R. 259; 16 S.L.R. 183.

(324)

—Held that costs incurred by the water commissioners of a burgh in unsuccessfully opposing a bill in Parliament promoted by certain inhabitants of the burgh for the purpose of extending the water supply and the area of distribution could not be charged against the trust funds.

Observations (per Lord Justice-Clerk Moncreiff) on the cases in which the promotion or opposition to bills in Parliament can be regarded as proper acts of administration on the part of statutory trustees.

Perth Water Commissioners v M'Donald, &c., 1879, 6 R. 1050; 16 S.L.R. 619.

(325)

Municipal Corporation (Burgh Funds) Act, 1872.

Opinion per curiam, that the Municipal Corporation (Burgh Funds) Act, 1872, enabling governing bodies in certain cases to apply the funds or rates under their charge in promoting or opposing local or personal bills in Parliament, applies to Scotland.

Perth Water Commissioners v M'Donald, 1879, 6 R. 1050; 16 S.L.R. 619.

(2) LITIGATION.

(326)

Action to reduce trust deed—Curator ad litem appointed to beneficiary—Duty of trustee to supply curator with funds to defend the action.

In an action to reduce a trust deed a curator ad litem was appointed to the beneficiaries who were all in minority or pupilarity. The trustee withdrew his defences, leaving the curator to defend the action if so advised. Held that the trustee was bound to put the curator in funds to enable him to take legal advice as to the advisability of defending the action, and if he decided to defend, that the trustee was bound to supply him with the necessary funds.

Smith v Smith's Trustee, (O.H.) 1900, 8 S.L.T. 226.

See also Cathcart v Cathcart's Trustees, (O.H.) 1906, 13 S.L.T. 909. EXPENSES, No. 493.

(327)

Unsuccessful defence of action of reduction of trust deed.

It is a question of circumstances whether testamentary trustees who have unsuccessfully defended the trust deed in an action of reduction will be allowed their expenses out of the estate.

Watson v Watson's Trustees, 1875, 2 R. 344; 12 S.L.R. 266.

(328)

—Circumstances in which testamentary trustees who had unsuccessfully defended a trust disposition in an action of reduction were allowed their expenses out of the trust estate.

Crichton v Henderson's Trustees, 1898, 1 F. 24; 36 S.L.R. 22; 6 S.L.T. 165.

(329)

Defence of character.

Circumstances in which testamentary trustees, who had unsuccessfully defended a trust deed in an action of reduction in which they were charged with impetrating the deed and received a special finding of the jury exonerating them, were allowed their expenses out of the trust estate.

Ross v Ross's Trustees, 1898, 25 R. 897; 35 S.L.R. 699; 6 S.L.T. 21.

(330)

Delay in raising action.

In an action of count, reckoning, and payment and of reduction of the trust deed which had been bona fide acted on for fifteen years the Court reduced the deed, but held that the trustee acting thereunder was not bound to denude without taking the judgment of the Court, and that he was entitled to full expenses.

Allan v M'Donald, 1871, 8 S.L.R. 512.

(331)

Motion for new trial.

Circumstances in which a body of testamentary trustees—who had unsuccessfully defended an action for reduction of the trust deed, and had, along with the trust estate, been found liable in expenses—were allowed expenses out of the trust estate, to be taxed as between agent and client; but not the expenses of an unsuccessful motion for a new trial.

Merrilees v Leckie's Trustees, 1908 S.C. 576; 45 S.L.R. 449; 15 S.L.T. 912.

(332)

———Trustees defending along with next of kin.

In an action of reduction of a testamentary trust deed, on the ground of facility and fraud and circumvention, directed against the trustees under the deed and the next of kin, whose interest it was to support the deed, the pursuers were successful in a jury trial, and in resisting a motion to set aside the verdict. The defenders were held entitled to the expenses of one defence, up to the date of the verdict, out of the trust funds.

Munro v Strain, 1874, 1 R. 1039; 11 S.L.R. 583.

(333)

———Law agents of trustees.

In an action against the sole trustee under a testamentary trust, the final interlocutor decreed against the trustee for payment of a sum of money, and found "that in all questions with the pursuer in this action the defender is not entitled to deduct the expenses which he has incurred in the action from the trust estate." The trust estate having subsequently been sequestrated on the petition of the successful pursuer of the action, the law agents who had acted for the testamentary trustee claimed to be ranked on the sequestrated estate for their expenses. Held that as the law agents for the trustee were presumably acquainted with the whole circumstances of the trust, and took the risk of the contingency that, as a result of the litigation, the trust estate might not be available for their costs, they were not entitled to rank for their account.

Ferne, Ferne & Williamson v Stephenson's Trustee, 1905, 7 F. 902; 42 S.L.R. 703; 13 S.L.T. 236.

(334)

———Defence of trust estate.

In an action against trustees, the sheriff, although of opinion that the trustees had acted in good faith, and for the benefit of the property the fee of which they held in trust, found that they acted illegally, and gave decree for £5 of damages. He also found the trustees jointly and severally liable in expenses, which he modified to one-half. The trustees paid the expenses out of the trust estate. A beneficiary then brought an action against them on the ground, inter alia, that the expenses of the previous action had been illegally paid out of the trust funds. Held that the trustees had acted in good faith and reasonably, and that they were entitled to charge their expenses against the trust estate.

Gibson v Caddall's Trustees, 1895, 22 R. 889; 32 S.L.R. 668; 3 S.L.T. 81.

(335)

———Liability of share of party interested in estate and litigating with trustees—Unsuccessful action by trustees against a residuary legatee.

In an action by testamentary trustees for recovery of a sum of money alleged to form part of the trust estate the Court held that the defender fell to be assoldied, and that she was entitled to expenses. The defender, who was one of the residuary legatees under the trust settlement, moved for a finding that no part of the expenses of the litigation should be paid out of her share of the residue. The Court granted the motion.

Easson's Trustees v Mailer, 1901, 3 F. 778; 38 S.L.R. 700; 9 S.L.T. 84.

(336)

———Objection to unauthorised payments out of estate.

In an action of multiplepounding raised in name of a trustee, a claimant objected to the condescendence of the fund in medio, in so far as the trustee took credit for a payment he had made to C, on the ground that C had no valid claim. The trustee maintained that C had a valid claim. The Court sustained the objection. Held that the trustee was personally liable in expenses to the objector in respect of his mistaken and precipitate action, and that he was not entitled to charge his own expenses against the objector's share of the fund in medio.

Buttercase & Geddie's Trustee v Geddie, 1897, 24 R. 1128; 34 S.L.R. 844; 5 S.L.T. 108.

(337)

———Beneficiary's trustee in bankruptcy.

The question as to whether the legal expenses incurred in defending a trust estate against the claims of a trustee in bankruptcy should be charged against the general trust estate or against the share of one of the beneficiaries depends upon whether the litigation has been conducted solely in the interests of the beneficiary or also in the interests of the trust estate generally. Circumstances in which the expenses were held to form a good charge against the trust funds.

Paton v Paton's Trustees, 1903, 5 F. 528; 40 S.L.R. 402; 10 S.L.T. 707.

(338)

———Widow successful in claiming jus relictæ.

In an action by a widow against the husband's testamentary trustee, in which she was successful in claiming, inter alia, jus relictæ, she was found entitled to expenses as against the defender personally. Held that the defender was not entitled to deduct the expenses which he had incurred in the action, or those in which he had been found liable to the pursuer, from the trust estate in computing the amount of her jus relictæ; quoad ultra reserving the defender's right of relief against the trust estate.

Anderson v Anderson's Trustee, 1901, 4 F. 96; 39 S.L.R. 94; 9 S.L.T. 245.

(339)

Personal liability of trustees—Reduction of ultra vires resolution.

In an action of reduction of a resolution of certain testamentary trustees, held that the resolution was incompetent and the trustees found liable in expenses as individuals.

Adam v Forsyth's Trustees, 1867, 6 M. 31; 40 J. 23; 5 S.L.R. 26.

(340)

Incompetent multipointing.

Circumstances in which trustees, who had raised for their exoneration and discharge an action of multipointing which was found to be incompetent, were held personally liable in expenses.

Mackenzie's Trustees v Sutherland, 1895, 22 R. 233; 32 S.L.R. 172; 2 S.L.T. 422.

(341)

Unsuccessful defence.

Trustees having raised an action of multipointing, one of the claimants brought a supplementary action which the trustees unsuccessfully opposed as incompetent. Held that they were not entitled to debit the trust funds with any part of the expenses incurred by them in resisting the supplementary action.

Bonar's Trustees v Cowan, 1868, 41 J. 38.

(342)

Opposition to appointment of judicial factor.

Circumstances in which certain testamentary trustees, who had unsuccessfully opposed the appointment of a judicial factor, were found liable in expenses.

Stewart v Morrison, 1892, 19 R. 1009; 29 S.L.R. 846.

(343)

Opposition to appointment of judicial factor—Petition for removal of trustees—Petition at instance of one trustee—Compromise.

One of a body of trustees presented a petition for the removal of the others and the appointment of a judicial factor; the other trustees resisted, but finally compromised upon the footing that the trust should be continued under the supervision of the Accountant of Court. Held that the petitioner was entitled to his expenses, taxed as between agent and client, out of the trust estate, and that the respondents were not entitled to charge the trust estate with any of the expenses of their opposition.

Neilson v Stewart's Trustees, 1905, 42 S.L.R. 434; 12 S.L.T. 785.

(344)

Relief of judicial expenses decerned for against trustee—Statutory trustees—Trustees sued as navigation commissioners and not as individuals—Reservation of question of personal liability.

Young v Nith Commissioners, 1876, 3 R. 991; 13 S.L.R. 636. EXPENSES, No. 267.

(345)

Possible exhaustion of estate.

Bonner's Trustee v Bonner, 1902, 4 F. 429; 39 S.L.R. 532; 9 S.L.T. 361. EXPENSES, No. 266.

(346)

Action against trustees personally—Extra-judicial expenses.

Circumstances in which a body of trustees who successfully defended an action brought against them at the instance of a beneficiary were held to be entitled to their expenses taxed as between agent and client, and also to charge the trust estate before accounting to the pursuer with all extrajudicial charges incurred by them in their controversy with him.

Peat v Peat's Trustees, 1901, 38 S.L.R. 269.

(347)

Extrajudicial expenses incurred in defending an action after resigning office.

Trustees under a marriage contract, after they had been allowed to resign and a judicial factor had been appointed on the trust estate, but before they had been discharged, were sued as individuals by the judicial factor to account for their intrusions as trustees. They were assailed and found entitled to expenses. In a petition by the trustees for discharge, held that they were entitled to retain their extrajudicial expenses incurred by them in the action out of trust funds which were still in their hands.

Erentz's Trustees v Erentz's Judicial Factor, 1897, 25 R. 53; 35 S.L.R. 93; 5 S.L.T. 180.

(348)

Unauthorised defence by individual trustee—Right to indemnification out of trust funds—Recompense.

If an individual trustee, without authority from his co-trustees, take upon himself the defence of an action directed against the trust, he cannot recover his expenditure from the trust estate, unless he show that his intervention has resulted in benefit to the trust estate.

Stewart v Dobie's Trustees, 1899, 1 F. 1183; 36 S.L.R. 917; 7 S.L.T. 125.

12. POWERS TO DEAL WITH HERITAGE.(1) POWER TO SELL OR PURCHASE.

(349)

Express power of sale—Appointment of judicial factor—Special powers—"Expedient for the execution of the trust"—Act 1884, sec. 2.

A trust deed conferred upon the trustees a power of sale, either by public roup or by private bargain. A judicial factor, who had been appointed on the estate, applied, under the Trusts Acts, 1867 and 1884, for authority to sell privately for £2100 certain feuing ground belonging to the estate, which at that time yielded £18 a year. The liferenter approved of the proposed sale, but the fir objected, and urged delay until the demand for building ground improved. The reporter obtained opinions from men of skill that the offer should be accepted. The Court refused the petition, on the ground that the proposed sale might be prejudicial to the interests of the far, and that it was therefore not "expedient for the execution of the trust."

Molleson v Hope, 1888, 15 R. 665; 25 S.L.R. 506.

(350)

Interdict by residuary trustees.

Where the residuary legatees sought to interdict the trustees from exercising a power conferred on them by the trust deed of selling the heritable property belonging to the trust, on the ground that they were entitled to a conveyance to them of the property on their providing the trustees with funds sufficient to meet the legacies and liabilities of the testator, the Lord Ordinary dismissed the note, holding that the matter was one for the discretion of the trustees.

Brown v Elder's Trustees, (O.H.) 1906, 13 S.L.T. 837.

(351)

Power to sell materials of residence

—Heirlooms.

Testamentary trustees, upon whom powers of sale had been conferred by the testator, proposed to sell the materials of a residence, together with certain pictures and pieces of plate which were in the nature of heirlooms. They had, however, doubt as to the powers of sale covering their proposed action, and accordingly presented a petition to the Court for authority. Held that the petitioners already possessed the special power they craved, and accordingly that the petition fell to be dismissed as unnecessary.

The Hamilton Trustees, 1919, 56 S.L.R. 555; 1919, 2 S.L.T. 81.

(352)

Implied power.

By a trust settlement trustees were directed to divide the residue among certain beneficiaries. Held (1) that this direction conferred by implication power to sell heritage which the truster had acquired after the date of the trust deed; and (2) that the beneficiaries' share of the heritage was moveable.

Boag v Walkinshaw, 1872, 10 M. 872; 9 S.L.R. 554.

(353)

—A testator, who was the proprietor of certain engineering works and other heritable property, directed his trustees to pay to his wife during her lifetime "the free rents, interests, and profits arising from my means and estate, heritable and moveable, or from the proceeds thereof," and after her death "to divide my means and estate, heritable and moveable, or the proceeds thereof," into three equal parts, and to hold one share for behoof of each of his son and two daughters in liferent, and his or her children in fee. The trust deed did not give the trustees express power either to sell heritage or to carry on the truster's engineering business. The truster was survived by his wife and by his three children. Held, in a question between the trustees and the widow and children, that a power to sell the engineering works and other heritable subjects was to be implied from the terms of the deed.

Thomson's Trustees v Thomson, 1897, 25 R. 19; 35 S.L.R. 16; 5 S.L.T. 140.

(354)

Trust including heritage in England and Scotland—Powers conferred on trustees to sell under English Settled Lands Acts—Application of principle to Scottish heritage.

A domiciled Englishman died, leaving certain heritable property both in England and Scotland. Under his will, executed in England, he devised his heritable estate in England, and all his other real estate whatsoever, wheresoever, to the use of his wife during her life or until she married again, and after her to his son in liferent, and also appointed trustees for the purposes of the Settled Lands Acts. On the death of the widow the son became tenant for life. Under the Settled Lands Acts he had a power of sale, which power could be exercised by his trustees during his minority. Held, on a construction of the will, that the trustees had the same power to sell the Scottish heritage as they had to sell the heritable estate in England.

Phipps v Phipps' Trustee, (O.H.) 1914, 1 S.L.T. 239.

(355)

Question whether power conferred—Competency of special case.

Mitchell Innes' Trustees v Mitchell Innes, 1912 S.C. 228; 49 S.L.R. 241; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 85, No. 636, infra.

(356)

Conditional direction to sell heritage—Condition that bond called up within certain time—Whether contingency purified by part of bond being called up.

A truster directed his trustees "twelve months after the death of my said wife and myself," to convey certain heritable subjects, "if not sold as after-mentioned," to a certain series of heirs. The subjects were burdened with a bond for £2000. He then directed his trustees that, should the holders of the bond "resolve to call up their money, and intimate such resolution prior to the expiry of twelve months prior to the expiry of the longest liver of my said wife and me," the property should be sold and the price divided, after payment of the bond, among a slightly different set of heirs. Prior to the death of the testator's widow, a person who had right to one-half of the bond gave notice to the trustees that he wished payment. The trustees arranged for payment to this creditor on his granting an assignation to another lender, and the property was not sold. Held that the calling up of a part of the bond was not in the circumstances the event contemplated by the testator, and that the trustees were not then bound to sell the property.

Bryson's Trustees v Clark, 1880, 8 R. 142; 18 S.L.R. 103.

(357)

Power to sell on expiry of liferent—Depreciating property—Authority to sell during liferent.

A tenement of houses formed part of a trust estate. The testator had authorised his trustees to sell, if that was in their opinion expedient, when the property came to be divided after the expiry of a liferent, but the only reason for his postponing the power of sale apparently was that he considered that the money could not be better invested. Before the expiry of the liferent the property rapidly depreciated, and the trustee petitioned the Court for power to sell. The petition was opposed by one of the beneficiaries. Held that the petition was competent, and a remit made to a man of skill to report on the expediency of sale.

Robison's Trustee, (O.H.) 1898, 6 S.L.T. 241.

(358)

No power of sale—Act 1867, sec. 3.

Circumstances in which trustees under a trust settlement which gave no power to sell were authorised, under sec. 3 of the Trusts Act, 1867, to sell heritable property, and under sec. 7 of the same Act to advance the price obtained for the maintenance and education of beneficiaries who were minors.

Weir's Trustees, 1877, 4 R. 876; 14 S.L.R. 564.

(359)

Sale expedient and not inconsistent with trust purposes—Act 1867, sec. 3.

A truster who died in 1810 directed that the residue of his estate should be invested in the public funds till a suitable investment in land in the neighbourhood of the town of Perth should be found, and that the rents and profits of such land when acquired should be applied in the promotion of education in Perth. There was no power of sale. A suitable investment was not found until 1851. In 1881 the trustees, on the representation that it was expedient that the land so purchased should be sold, applied to the Court for authority to carry out a contract of sale into which they had provisionally entered. They suggested no new purchase of land near Perth to which to apply the money, but proposed with part of it to pay off a heritable debt on the property they proposed to sell, and to invest the rest in heritable security. The petition was opposed by a dissenting trustee, but only on the ground that the debt had been illegally entered into, and that the other trustees were not entitled to pay it off out of the trust funds. Held, after a report by a man of business in favour of the application, that the sale fell to be granted as being expedient and not inconsistent with the purposes of the trust. Question (per Lord Young), whether the trustees had not power, irrespective of the Trust Acts of 1867, to sell the lands without the necessity of applying to the Court.

Deacons of the Incorporated Trades of Perth v Hunt, 1881, 18 S.L.R. 585.

(360)

Depreciating property—Intention of trust.

Trustees presented a petition for power to sell two heritable properties which were in a decaying and ruinous state, which it would entail great expense to repair. The trustees had no funds to meet the expense, and the trust deed contained no express prohibition of sale. All the beneficiaries concurred in the petition, and the man of skill to whom a remit was made reported that in the circumstances the sale was expedient in the interests of the trust. The Lord Ordinary granted the power sought, holding that it was not inconsistent with the main purpose or intention of the trust, and in view of the report of the man of skill that it was expedient.

Fiddes' Trustees, (O.H.) 1899, 7 S.L.T. 67.

(361)

Petition for authority to sell house liferented by widow of truster—Widow as trustee one of the petitioners—Unnecessary petition.

Trustees held a house for the liferent use of the testator's widow, the trust deed declaring that all the provisions thereunder were alimentary. The trustees deemed it expedient to sell the house, which represented nearly one-half of the testator's estate, on the ground that the widow was quite unable to maintain herself and her family therein. The widow was willing to give her consent to the sale, but the trustees, who included the widow amongst their number, along with the widow as an individual petitioned the Court for power to sell. The Lord Ordinary refused the petition as unnecessary, on the ground that the trustees had power to sell the house with the consent and concurrence of the widow, whose consent was evidenced by her being a party to the petition.

Charlton's Trustees, (O.H.) 1901, 9 S.L.T. 130.

(362)

Expediency—Intention of truster.

Petition for power to sell a trust estate consisting of heritage refused as not being expedient for the execution of the trust and being inconsistent with the intention thereof.

Hiddleston's Trustees, (O.H.) 1906, 13 S.L.T. 705.

(363)

County hall held by trustees—Transference of trust property to County Council—Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, sec. 25, sub-sec. (2).

A petition by trustees who represented the different public interests of a county, and who held as trust property for various county purposes a county hall erected about 1819, to be allowed to transfer the said hall to the County Council, and for exoneration and discharge, was granted.

Earl of Rosebery, 1892, 29 S.L.R. 865.

(364)

—Sale of heritage by trustee without authority of the Court—Confirmation of sale—Nobile officium.

A trustee acting under a trust disposition and settlement which contained no power to sell heritage sold a part of the trust estate without having first obtained the authority of the Court. The purchaser having objected to the title offered by the trustee, the latter presented a petition craving the Court "to approve, ratify, and confirm" the sale. The Court refused the petition.

Clyne, 1894, 21 R. 849; 31 S.L.R. 692; 2 S.L.T. 53.

(365)

Prohibition of sale—Intention of trust—Act 1867, sec. 3.

A truster directed his trustees to hold certain estates for payment of his debts, and in any event for 21 years, and for payment of an annuity, also secured by a separate bond, to his nephew, upon whom and a series of heirs they were directed to entail the estates when the debt should all be paid off. The trustees were expressly forbidden to sell any part of the landed estates in question. At the truster's death the annual burdens and interest of debts exceeded the rental by £106. Held that the Trusts Act, 1867, sec. 3, did not authorise the Court to grant authority to sell any part of the estate.

Hay's Trustees v Hay Miln, 1873, 11 M. 694; 45 J. 430; 10 S.L.R. 473.

(366)

—General power and prohibition against selling a particular subject — Act 1867, sec. 3.

A truster in his settlement gave his trustees general power of sale. In a codicil he directed—"As I consider that the value of property in B will improve, I direct and appoint my trustees to hold and retain the property known as K . . . and not to sell or dispose of the same before the youngest of my sons attains 21 years of age." In a petition brought by the trustees before the youngest child had attained majority, under the 3rd section of the Trusts Act, 1867, for power to sell the property dealt with in the codicil in the interests of the trust estate, the Court refused the petition on the ground that, assuming that a sale was "expedient for the execution of the trust," it was "inconsistent with the intention thereof."

Marshall's Trustees, 1897, 24 R. 478; 34 S.L.R. 343; 4 S.L.T. 249.

(367)

Implied prohibition of sale.

Held that a power given by a testator to his trustees to sell his heritable estate, with the exception of certain lands, implied a prohibition against selling the excepted lands.

Whyte's Factor v Whyte, 1891, 18 R. 376; 28 S.L.R. 78.

(368)

—Circumstances rendering sale necessary for preservation of trust estate.

A truster directed his trustees to sell his whole heritable estate, excepting his heritable estate in L and T. Held that that did not prevent the trustees being authorised to sell the heritable estate in L and T when that had become necessary in the interests of the beneficiaries, and for the preservation of the trust estate against the diligence of creditors.

Sutherland's Trustees, 1892, 29 S.L.R. 903.

(369)

Application for directions of Court—Judicial Factors (Scotland) Act, 1889, sec. 18.

Held that it was not competent for the Court, upon a report by the Accountant under sec. 18 of the Judicial Factors Act, 1889, to give directions as to whether trustees should or should not delay to sell heritable estate; which the testator had directed them to sell at such time as they thought advantageous or expedient, that not being a question which related to the investment or to the distribution of the estate.

Earl of Stair's Trustees, 1896, 23 R. 1070; 33 S.L.R. 777; 4 S.L.T. 92.

(370)

English trust—Scottish heritage—Act 1867, sec. 3.

Trustees under an English trust which embraced a heritable property in Scotland presented a petition to the Court under sec. 3 of the Trusts (Scotland) Act, 1867, for authority to sell the Scots property. The Court refused the petition on the ground that the Act did not apply to English trusts.

Carruthers' Trustees—Allan's Trustees, 1896, 24 R. 238; 34 S.L.R. 166; 4 S.L.T. 193.

(371)

Trustees under an English trust, having obtained the sanction of the High Court of Justice in England, petitioned the Court, in the exercise of its nobile officium, to authorise the sale of certain heritable subjects belonging to the trust estate, which were situated in Scotland. The Court granted the petition.

Allan's Trustees, 1897, 24 R. 718; 34 S.L.R. 532; 4 S.L.T. 361.

(372)

Sale authorised by Court—No bid at upset price authorised—Authority of Court for sale without reserve.

Certain heritable subjects were exposed to roup at the price recommended by a man of business to whom the matter was remitted, but no bid was made. The Lord Ordinary, without further remit, granted authority to sell "at the best price which can be obtained."

Jamieson's Trustees, (O.H.) 1909, 1 S.L.T. 36.

(373)

Right of beneficiary to bid for trust property.

Held that when trust property in which several beneficiaries are interested is exposed for sale by public roup, one of the beneficiaries may lawfully purchase.

Shiell v Guthrie's Trustees, 1874, 1 R. 1083; 11 S.L.R. 625.

Authority to trustees to bid.

[See IV. 10, supra.]

(374)

Delay in selling—Liability of trustees.

Circumstances in which trustees under a family settlement were held not chargeable with undue delay in selling heritage which had belonged to the trustor.

Scott v Handyside's Trustees, 1868, 6 M. 753; 40 J. 387; 5 S.L.R. 195.

(375)

Authority to purchase heritage—Heritage accessory to property already held.

Circumstances in which on a remit to men of skill power to purchase heritable property adjacent to property already held was granted to testamentary trustees where the power was not conferred by the trust deed, in respect that the acquisition would be beneficial to the estate, and that the price was reasonable.

Wardlaw's Trustees, (O.H.) 1902, 10 S.L.T. 349.

(376)

Defective machinery in trust deed—Nobile officium.

A farmer, who was tenant of a farm which had been in his family for some time and on which was maintained a well-known herd of shorthorns, died without issue. He left a trust disposition and settlement in which he expressed the desire that his nephew should succeed to the farm and should carry on the herd of shorthorns, and directed his trustees to convey to his nephew, on his attaining the age of 21, the whole residue of his estate, including the lease of the farm with its plenishing and the stock thereon. After the testator's death, the landlord decided to sell the farm (which by that time was held merely by tacit relocation), but gave the testator's trustees the option of purchasing it at a certain price. At that time the nephew was aged 17, and was qualifying himself as an agriculturist with a view to taking up the farm. The funds in the hands of the trustees were sufficient to meet the greater part, but not the whole, of the price demanded. The trust disposition and settlement, however, conferred on them no power to purchase heritage, or to borrow on the security of the estate. The trustees thereupon presented a petition craving the Court, in the exercise of its nobile officium, to authorise them to purchase the farm, and to borrow the sum required to make up the price on the security of the farm when purchased. The Court granted the authority craved.

Anderson's Trustees, 1921 S.C. 315; 58 S.L.R. 245; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 186.

(2) POWER TO EXCAMP.

(377)

A power to sell heritage does not imply a power to excamp.

Bruce v Stewart, 1900, 2 F. 948; 37 S.L.R. 739; 8 S.L.T. 61.

(3) POWER TO FEU.

(378)

Ultra vires—Reduction by vassal of the feu contract in favour of his predecessor on the ground that it was ultra vires of the trustees who had granted it.

A feu granted by trustees in 1867 was sold by the vassal in 1888 to A, who recorded the disposition in his favour in the Register of Sasines, and thereby obtained an implied entry. In 1895 A raised an action against the trustees for reduction of the feu charter, on the ground that it was ultra vires of the trustees. Held that the ground of reduction stated was not relevant, in respect (1) that the pursuer, if prejudiced, was not prejudiced by the feu charter, but by the contract he had made with the original vassal, to which the trustees were not parties; and (2) that the pursuer, being an entered vassal, was not entitled to reduce the feu contract without clearing the record of the disposition in his favour.

Tayport Land Co. v Dougall's Trustees, 1895, 23 R. 287; 33 S.L.R. 214.

(379)

Prescription.

Question, whether a feu charter granted by trustees in 1867, and bearing to be granted in the exercise of powers conferred by a private Act of Parliament (which was mentioned), and only in so far as consistent with the Act, could be validated by prescriptive possession, so as to exclude the plea that it was ultra vires of the trustees in respect that the conditions of the Act had not been complied with.

Tayport Land Co. v Dougall's Trustees, 1895, 23 R. 287; 33 S.L.R. 214.

(380)

Act 1867, sec. 3—Intention of trust—Prohibition against sale or disposal.

A trustor who died in 1825 left the residue of his estate to be applied for behoof of a grammar school, and directed his trustees to let a park belonging to the trust estate annually or on lease for a period not exceeding seven years, "declaring that my said park shall never be sold or disposed of." In a petition by the trustees for authority to feu the park, held that the Court could not grant authority to feu, as that was contrary to the trustor's intention as expressed in the trust deed.

Oliver's Trustees, 1876, 3 R. 639; 13 S.L.R. 421.

(381)

Application by fiars or fiduciary fiars.

Pottie, 1902, 4 F. 876; 39 S.L.R. 654; 10 S.L.T. 107, No. 395, infra.

(382)

Noble officium — English trust — Order of English court.

Trustees in an English trust holding lands in Scotland obtained an order of the High Court of Justice in England setting forth that it was expedient in the interests of the beneficiaries that the trustees should have power to deal with the lands of the truster situated in Scotland by granting mineral leases and feus, and empowering the trustees to apply at any time, or from time to time, to the courts in Scotland for authority to grant such leases or feus. Subsequently the trustees presented a petition to the Court of Session for, inter alia, a general authority to grant leases of the minerals and feus of the lands in Scotland. The Court—in respect the duty of supervising the administration of the trustees lay with the English court—in the exercise of an auxiliary jurisdiction, without further inquiry granted the general authority.

Pender's Trustees, 1907 S.C. 207; 44 S.L.R. 196; 14 S.L.T. 555.

(4) POWER TO GRANT LEASES.

(383)

Prohibition against selling or disposing of subject—Lease for ninety-nine years.

The trustees of a charitable foundation were directed by the trust deed "not to sell or dispose of" a warehouse, part of the trust estate, but to keep it in good repair for all time coming. After the lapse of some years it required extensive repairs, and the occupant of the adjoining premises offered to take it on lease for ninety-nine years on terms advantageous to the trust. Held that the trustees had no power in themselves to enter into such a contract, which was struck at by the prohibition against disposing of the subject.

Petrie's Trustees v Ramsay, 1868, 7 M. 64; 41 J. 38.

(384)

Act 1867, sec. 3 — Power to grant long leases — 999 years — Power not inconsistent with intention of deed.

A trust deed directed that after the death of the truster's widow (who was to have a lifereit of the whole estate), the trustees were to enter into possession of the whole lands thereby disposed, and to divide and pay over the proceeds half-yearly among his children as an alimentary provision, and, upon the death of the last survivor of the said children, to sell and dispose of the whole lands so conveyed, and to divide the proceeds among his grandchildren then alive. The trustees, during the life of the truster's widow, presented a petition to the Court for leave to grant a lease of part of the said subjects for 999 years, the expediency of which course was beyond dispute. Held that the proposed lease was not contrary to the truster's intention as expressed in the trust deed, and authority granted as craved.

Birkmyre, 1881, 8 R. 477.

(385)

Power to let mansion-house for such space as the trustees should think proper—Lease granted to continue till tenant gave notice—Ultra vires.

A testator by his trust disposition and settlement empowered his trustees to let the mansion-house of W. from year to year, or, if they should think fit, to permit the heir of entail entitled to succeed to his lands under a deed of entail which he had executed to possess the mansion-house rent free, but only for such space as they should think proper. The trustees subsequently granted a "lease" whereby, on the narrative of the powers conferred upon them by the testator, they let the mansion-house to the heir of entail for the space of one year from the term of Whitsunday, 1879, "but renewable from year to year as after-mentioned." It was further provided that, in the event of said heir "not giving notice to the trustees six months before the term of Whitsunday" in any year "of his intention to remove from the subjects let at said term . . . this lease shall be held to be renewed for another year."

In an action at the instance of the trustees, held (1) that by the terms of the "lease" the trustees divested themselves of all power to terminate the heir of entail's occupancy of the mansion-house; and (2) that in doing so they had exceeded the powers given them by the testator, and therefore reduced the lease, and ordained the heir of entail to remove.

Elliott's Trustees v Elliott, 1893, 31 S.L.R. 36; 1 S.L.T. 269.

(386)

Power to let new mineral fields—Act 1867, sec. 2 (3).

Question, whether sec. 2, sub-sec. (3), of the Trusts Act, 1867, which gives a power to trustees to let minerals upon long leases, includes a power to open up and let new mineral fields.

Observed (per Lord Blackburn) that, whether it does or does not give this additional administrative power, it does not change the beneficial enjoyment of the property.

Campbell v Wardlaw, 1883, 10 R. (H.L.) 65; 8 App.Cas. 641; 20 S.L.R. 748.

(387)

—Act 1867, sec. 2.

A testator by his settlement directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate for his son in lifereit and the son's children in fee, and, failing the son leaving children, or in the event of the children dying before the period of vesting, for his daughter in lifereit and her children in fee. "All requisite powers" to enable his trustees to carry out the purposes of the settlement, including a power "to sell and dispose of the trust estate," were conferred on the trustees, but no express power to grant mineral or other leases. Part of the estate consisted of a small portion of land containing minerals, which could only be advantageously worked by letting them to an owner of adjoining minerals. Held that the trustees had power to grant a lease of these minerals.

Naismith's Trustees v Naismith, 1909 S.C. 1380; 46 S.L.R. 844; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 127.

(388)

Mineral field let but unworked during testator's lifetime—New lease by trustees.

A testator, by his settlement, directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate for his children in liferent and their issue in fee. The trustees had power to sell the estate, but the settlement was silent as to powers of leasing minerals. Part of the residue consisted of a mineral field, which the testator, who died in 1871, had let in 1868 for a term of thirty years, with breaks. The minerals were never worked by the lessees, who in 1878 took advantage of a break in the lease to end it. Held that the trustees had power to enter into a new lease of the subjects in 1900.

Dick's Trustees v Robertson, 1901, 3 F. 1021; 38 S.L.R. 744; 9 S.L.T. 115.

(389)

Nobile officium—English trust—Petition to grant mineral leases of lands situated in Scotland—Process.

The trustees under an English testamentary trust obtained an order from the High Court of Justice in England, which set forth that in the judge's opinion it was expedient in the interests of the beneficiaries that the trustees should have power to deal with lands of the truster situated in Scotland by granting mineral leases and feus thereof, and of consent empowered the trustees to apply at any time, or from time to time, to the courts in Scotland for authority to grant such leases or feus. The trustees presented a petition to the Court, "in conformity with the proceedings taken in the English court and as an appeal to the nobile officium of the Court," for a general authority to grant leases of the minerals and feus of the lands, or otherwise to grant a particular lease of a specified mineral subject, and a particular feu of a specified portion of ground. The Court granted the latter alternative prayer of the petition, and quoad ultra continued the petition.

Pender's Trustees, 1903, 5 F. 504; 40 S.L.R. 382; 10 S.L.T. 644.

(390)

Power to accept renunciation of lease—Discretion of trustees.

A petition (not under the Trusts Act) by testamentary trustees for power, not given by the trust deed, to accept the renunciation of a lease dismissed as incompetent, the matter being one for exercise of the trustees' own discretion.

Observed that in the case of tutors-nominate the Court has occasionally granted powers which they would not give to trustees. Berwick, 1874, 2 R. 90; 12 S.L.R. 58.

(391)

Power to grant lease of urban property.

Noble's Trustees, 1912 S.C. 1230; 49 S.L.R. 888; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 211, No. 392, infra.

(5) POWER TO EXPEND MONEY ON REPAIRS.

(392)

Power to expend trust funds on, and grant lease of, urban tenement—Nobile officium—Discretion of trustees.

The trustees under a testamentary settlement (the purposes of which involved separate interests of liferenters and fiars) presented a petition to the nobile officium of the Court for authority to expend a portion of the capital of the trust estate in altering and repairing an urban tenement, and for power thereafter to lease the tenement for twenty-one years, which, in their opinion, would be to the advantage of all the beneficiaries. The Court dismissed the petition, holding that the questions were matters of administration upon which the trustees must exercise their own discretion. Opinion (per Lord Kinneir) that the power to lease carried with it the power to spend money on the subjects so as to put them into a tenable condition.

Noble's Trustees, 1912 S.C. 1230; 49 S.L.R. 888; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 211.

(393)

Rebuilding heritable property—No express power to rebuild—Personal liability of trustees.

Circumstances in which held that trustees who had expended trust funds in rebuilding and improving heritable subjects belonging to the estate, which twenty-one years after the rebuilding realised £100 less than the sum expended upon them, had not acted imprudently or negligently, and that loss had not been caused by their fault.

Armstrong v Wilson's Trustees, 1904, 7 F. 353; 42 S.L.R. 286; 12 S.L.T. 581.

(394)

Power to complete mansion-house in course of erection implied from terms of deed.

A proprietor commenced the erection of a mansion-house on his estate, but died when the walls were a few feet high. The deceased's settlement contained a direction to his trustees "that the new mansion-house which I am about to erect shall be kept in a state of thorough repair" "at the expense of the trust." The truster further directed the trustees to allow the liferenter to occupy the mansion-house during his lifetime. The liferenter having required the trustees to complete the mansion-house at the expense of the trust, held that the trustees had power to do so, the truster's intention being sufficiently indicated by the terms of the deed.

Brochie v Stewart, 1869, 7 M. 1031; 41 J. 583; 6 S.L.R. 673.

(395)

Cost of extraordinary repairs—Capital or income—Power to charge estate—Trusts (Scotland) Act, 1867, sec. 3.

In terms of a destination in a trust disposition and settlement lands were conveyed to A and B, a brother and sister equally "in liferent, for their liferent use alienarily, and to their heirs and assignees in fee." In a petition at common law and under the Trusts Act, 1867, by A and B, each of whom had children, power granted (1) to charge the lands with the cost of extraordinary repairs which had become necessary, and (2) to feu certain portions, A and B being either fiars under the destination, or entitled, as fiduciary fiars for their heirs and assignees, to reasonable powers of administration.

Pottie, 1902, 4 F. 876; 39 S.L.R. 654; 10 S.L.T. 107.

(6) POWER TO MANAGE FARM.

(396)

Power of trustees to take farm into their own hands—Nobile officium.

A heritable estate was held by testamentary trustees under a settlement, which conferred power upon them to grant leases and to borrow money for the purposes of the trust. The trustees were unable to obtain any offer for the tenancy of a farm on the estate except at an entirely inadequate rent, and accordingly they presented a petition to the Court to authorise them, in the exercise of its nobile officium, to take the farm into their own hands and to manage it for the trust, and for that purpose to borrow money on the security of the trust estate. The Court dismissed the petition as unnecessary, holding that to take the farm into their own hands was, in the circumstances, an ordinary act of administration on the part of the trustees, for which they did not require to obtain the authority of the Court.

Dunbar's Trustees, 1915 S.C. 860; 52 S.L.R. 656; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 461.

13. POWER TO BORROW.

(397)

No express power to borrow—Whether sum borrowed in rem versum of trust estate.

A testator appointed A and B trustees, directing that A should manage a farm, the lease of which formed part of the trust estate. A managed the farm for upwards of two years. After A and B had been superseded by a judicial factor an action was brought against the factor for payment of £300, the pursuer alleging that A being in need of money to meet rent, taxes, and other charges in connection with the farm, the pursuer, at his request, accepted a bill to him, as trustee foresaid, for £300 sterling, which bill was discounted, and the proceeds applied by A for the benefit of the farm or trust estate, and that the pursuer had paid the bill. Held (1) that as the trust deed did not expressly empower A to borrow money for behoof of the trust estate, he was not entitled to do so; and (2) that the averments that the estate had been benefited by the sum borrowed were not sufficiently specific to let in proof that the proceeds of the bill were in rem versum of the trust estate.

Ralston v M'Intyre's Factor, 1882, 10 R. 72; 20 S.L.R. 49.

(398)

Borrowing in order to pay out beneficiary's share—Act 1867, sec. 3.

A trustor gave his trustees no power to borrow. On the death of one of his daughters a valuation was made, and her children agreed to accept a certain sum in full of their claims on the trust. The time was, in the judgment of the trustees, unfavourable for selling any part of the heritage, and it was not, in their opinion, capable of division for the purposes of the settlement. Authority granted to borrow a sum sufficient to meet the claim of the children of the daughter who had died.

Lochhead's Trustees, 1883, 21 S.L.R. 168.

(399)

Replacement of existing bonds.

Where a trust deed conferred no power on the trustees to borrow money on the security of the trust estate, but the trustees wished to replace two bonds which existed at the time of the testator's death by a new bond at a lower rate of interest, the Lord Ordinary granted the trustees power to do so, although a man of skill to whom the application had been remitted reported that in his opinion no judicial authority was necessary, as the act proposed was not one of alienation but merely of administration.

Henderson's Trustees, (O.H.) 1901, 8 S.L.T. 431.

(400)

Liability for death-bed and funeral expenses of trustor—No available trust funds—Power to borrow on security of heritage held by trustees in fee—Power to create charge on reversionary interest.

The husband of a deceased lady obtained a decree against her testamentary trustees for the amount of her death-bed and funeral expenses. There were no trust funds available to meet the debt, but it was possible for the trustees to borrow the money on the security of a villa, which was held by them subject to a liferent. It was also possible for the trustees to raise the money by borrowing on the security of a reversionary interest in the lady's marriage contract trust estate, which would fall to the testamentary trustees on the death of her husband, but this method of raising the money would entail the payment of a higher rate of interest on the loan. The trustees proposed to borrow the money on the security of the villa and to make the sum so borrowed a charge on the reversionary interest when it should become available to them on the death of the husband. The liferenter objected. The Court authorised the trustees to borrow the money on the security of the reversionary interest, but not on the security of the villa.

Paris v Sturrock's Trustees, (O.H.) 1896, 4 S.L.T. 74.

Sturrock's Trustees, (O.H.) 1897, 4 S.L.T. 228.

(401)

—Extraordinary repairs.

The beneficiaries holding a heritable property under a will presented a petition under sec. 3 of the Trusts (Scotland) Act, 1867, for authority to charge the estate with extraordinary expenditure incurred through municipal assessments for paving, and through the reconstruction of drainage and repairs to a tenement damaged in a gale, and also for authority to feu the estate. It was doubtful whether the petitioners were fiars or merely liferenters with a fiduciary fee. The Court, without deciding the question as to the nature of the petitioners' right to the estate, granted the authority craved.

Pottie, 1902, 4 F. 876; 39 S.L.R. 654; 10 S.L.T. 107.

(402)

Express power to borrow for trust purposes — Exercise of power ultra vires — Immunity clause in favour of lenders.

The University Court of Glasgow lent money on a bond and disposition in security to a body of testamentary trustees, who had power to borrow, for trust purposes, on security of the trust estate. The trust deed contained an immunity clause to the effect that "parties paying moneys to my trustees . . . shall not be entitled to inquire into or see to the application of the same." The testamentary trustees applied the borrowed money in paying off the claims of certain of the testator's children who claimed legit and threatened to reduce the will. Two of the beneficiaries, who had right to annuities from the trust funds, raised an action for reduction of the bond against the trustees and the University Court, averring that borrowing money for the purpose for which the money was borrowed was ultra vires of the trustees. The action was defended by the University Court. Held that in the absence of any relevant averment of fraud, the immunity clause, coupled with the trustees' power to borrow, was a sufficient protection to the lenders, and defenders assoltied.

Buchanan v Glasgow University Court, 1909 S.C. 47; 46 S.L.R. 49; 16 S.L.T. 421.

(403)

Power to borrow for purchase of heritage.

Anderson's Trustees, 1921 S.C. 315; 58 S.L.R. 245; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 186, No. 376, infra.

(404)

—"Equitable mortgage"—Act 1867, sec. 3—"Not inconsistent with the intention" of trust.

A testator, who resided and carried on business in England, but died domiciled in Scotland, by a trust disposition and settlement in Scottish form directed his trustees from his moveable estate to pay his debts "excepting any bonds or mortgages on" his "heritable properties," and gave them "express power to borrow . . . for repaying bonds or mortgages on" his "heritable property which may be called up, and to grant bonds or mortgages over said heritable property for that purpose." The testator had constituted an "equitable mortgage" over his heritage in Scotland in favour of a bank in England by depositing the title deeds with them, and undertaking to execute a formal "mortgage" over the property. The bank having called up the loan, the trustees presented a petition under sec. 3 of the Trusts (Scotland) Act, 1867, for power to borrow on the security of the heritage to pay off the loan. Held that the power craved was not "inconsistent with the intention" of the trust, and power granted to borrow to the extent of the sum due at the testator's death.

Kerr's Trustees v Kerr's Curator ad litem, 1907 S.C. 678; 44 S.L.R. 510; 14 S.L.R. 857.

(405)

Power to charge heritage with death duties —English trust — Scottish heritage—Nobile officium.

Held that a petition by trustees under an English will to charge heritage in Scotland belonging to the trust with the amount of estate and succession duties paid by them in respect thereof, was properly presented to the Inner House, as being an appeal to the nobile officium.

Harris's Trustees v Harris, 1904, 6 F. 470; 41 S.L.R. 357; 11 S.L.T. 726.

(406)

Personal liability of trustees borrowing on security of trust estate.

Opinions (per Lord Herschell, Lord Watson, and Lord Fitzgerald) that the fact that trustees in the exercise of an express or implied power have borrowed money for trust purposes on the security of the trust estate does not necessarily involve personal liability in the event of loss resulting to the estate from the transaction, their liability depending on whether the transaction was a prudent one in the circumstances.

Binnie v Binnie's Trustees, 1889, 16 R. (H.L.) 23; 14 App.Cas. 576; 26 S.L.R. 794.

V. DISTRIBUTION OF ESTATE.

1. PAYMENT OF PROVISIONS.

(1) GENERALLY.

(407)

Intimation by trustees to beneficiaries.

Observations on the duties of trustees with regard to intimation of bequests to beneficiaries.

Rodger's Trustees v Allfrey, 1910 S.C. 1015; 47 S.L.R. 869; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 157.

(408)

Vested right to pro indiviso share of residue—Ascertainment of amount—Postponement of payment.

Held that a legatee who had a vested right to a definite pro indiviso share of residue was not entitled to payment thereof before the date fixed by the testator for realising the estate, as the amount of residue could not be ascertained before that date.

Macculloch v M'Culloch's Trustees, 1903, 6 F. (H.L.) 3; [1904] A.C. 55; 41 S.L.R. 88; 11 S.L.T. 429.

(409)

Division of trust estate—Valuation of shares—Interest of liferenter—Deduction from estate before division.

By trust disposition and settlement the truster's wife was liferented in the truster's house, and the furniture and plenishings therein. The trustees were further directed after certain payments, as mentioned in the deed, "to make up a state and valuation of any trust estate, heritable and moveable, wherever situated, including that part thereof in which my said wife is liferented as afore-said . . . and on a valuation and corresponding state being so made out, showing the free amount or balance of my said trust estate, to convey, assign, or pay over one just and equal third part or share of such free amount or balance of my said trust estate to and in favour of my wife." Held that the value of the widow's liferent interest in the house, furniture, &c., was a proper deduction from the trust estate preparatory to a division thereof among the beneficiaries.

Munro's Trustees, 1878, 16 S.L.R. 211.

(410)

Delay in payment of money—Personal liability of trustee—Interest.

A widow raised an action against testamentary trustees for payment of £11,000 as damages, on the ground that heritable properties belonging to her had been brought to a forced sale through the fault of the defenders in withholding payment of sums due to her. Held (1) that the action was not relevant, as the pursuer had not set forth circumstances inferring liability on the part of the defenders for damages for delay other than interest; and (2) that the pursuer's acceptance of interest excluded the claim for damages.

Roissard v Scott's Trustees, 1897, 24 R. 861; 34 S.L.R. 637; 5 S.L.T. 18.

(411)

Depreciation in value of estate before actual payment—Personal liability of trustees.

A beneficiary was entitled to payment from trust funds in 1909. The trustees did not inform him of his right, but retained the money until 1911, when they induced him to discharge them of their intromissions and reconvey the money to them under a new trust. In 1917 the beneficiary obtained decree of reduction of the discharge and new trust deed. The trust funds had greatly depreciated. Held that the trustees were bound to make good the depreciation from 1909.

Cross v Cross's Trustees, (O.H.) 1919, 1 S.L.T. 167.

(412)

Transaction between trustees and beneficiaries—Mora.

A testator who died in 1844 left legacies to the amount of £17,000, and liferent annuities amounting to £100 per annum, but died intestate quoad residue. His heritable and moveable estates were large, but he had extensive liabilities undertaken for three trading and manufacturing concerns. In the years 1846 and 1847 the trustees made payment to the legatees of one-half of their legacies, but delayed payment of the remainder. In 1851 the trustees, being pressed for payment by the legatees and having been advised by an accountant that the estate would probably be insufficient to meet the legacies in full, offered to compromise the claims of the legatees by payment of the legacies in full without interest, on condition that they obtained from the legatees an assignation of their claims and a discharge from the next of kin. In February, 1852, a deed was executed by the legatees and next of kin, who were advised by independent agents, by which, in consideration of the legacies having been paid in full, they assigned their whole claims against the trust to a person as trustee for J & S, the law agents for the trustees. J, one of the partners of J & S, was one of the trustees. In 1886 the representatives of one of the legatees raised a reduction of the deed of assignation and discharge against the representatives of the trustees, based on general averments of fraud, misrepresentation, and concealment, and an averment that the pursuers had been greatly prejudiced by the deed, and on the plea that, as the transaction involved the purchase of the trust estate by one of the trustees, it was illegal. At the date of the action nearly all those who had taken part in bringing about the arrangement were dead. The Court assoilzied the defenders, holding that fraud had not been proved, and that, quoad ultra, the action had not been timeously raised. Lord Young and Lord Craighill further holding that no relevant ground of action had been stated.

Buckner v Jopp's Trustees, 1887, 14 R. 1006; 24 S.L.R. 680.

(413)

Right to income of estate—Estate under superintendence of Accountant of Court—Payment on simple receipt.

Held that a beneficiary under a trust which was under the superintendence of the Accountant of Court was entitled to payment of the sum brought out as due to him on the trust accounts as audited each year by the Accountant on granting a simple receipt, and that it should not be a condition of payment that he annually examine the accounts and acknowledge that they are correct.

Wales's Trustee, (O.H.) 1893, 1 S.L.T. 57.

Compensation—Set-off.

[See COMPENSATION II.]

(2) UNAUTHORISED PAYMENTS.

(414)

Payments to beneficiary under error as to legal rights—Liability of beneficiary to repay—Bona fide percepta et consumpta.

In an antenuptial contract of marriage the husband bound himself to make such contributions as were necessary to secure to his widow the usual annuity from the Bombay Civil Fund, and in the event of his widow not being entitled from any cause to such annuity he bound himself and his heirs to pay to her an annuity of £300. The husband predeceased his wife, and left a trust disposition and settlement by which he, inter alia, directed his trustees to pay to his widow an annuity of £300 "in addition to what she is entitled to under" the contract of marriage, "my intention being that" she "shall have a free annuity of £600 under the said marriage contract and these presents, any annuity she may receive from the Bombay Civil Fund being imputed to account thereof." In 1882 the Bombay Civil Fund annuity was by Act of Parliament increased by a pension of £60 a year, but the husband's representatives continued to pay her an additional £300 a year until 1894. In a special case presented by the widow and her husband's representatives, held (1) that from the time she became entitled to the additional annuity of £60 she was only entitled to receive an annuity of £240 from her husband's estate, but (2) that she was not bound to repay the over-payments, these having been made in bona fide ignorance of any doubt as to her right to receive them.

Hunter's Trustees v Hunter, 1894, 21 R. 949; 31 S.L.R. 337; 2 S.L.T. 134.

(415)

Payment of liferent made in error—Bona fide percepta et consumpta.

Held that the doctrine of bona fide percepta et consumpta applies only to the fruits of a subject, and not to a subject itself, and therefore does not apply to payments of a liferent made in error when the liferent itself is the subject.

Darling's Trustees v Darling's Trustees, 1909 S.C. 445; 46 S.L.R. 394; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 207.

(416)

Objecting beneficiary also a trustee—Claim for repetition—Personal bar.

A husband by trust disposition and settlement gave his widow a liferent of the residue of the testamentary trust fund, and in respect thereof "recommended" and "enjoined" her "to discharge or abstain from exacting" from a son of the marriage her liferent rights in certain lands under a previous inter vivos trust deed. This deed gave to the son, on his surviving his mother, an alimentary liferent of the lands, protected from the diligence of his creditors, of which lands the son was in possession as tenant. The son was a trustee both under the testamentary and under the inter vivos trust deed. The husband died in 1867, and the widow was allowed to enjoy both the liferent of the residue and the rents of the lands until 1872, when, for the first time, the son challenged her right to draw both provisions, and it was found, in an action at his instance, that she was bound to make her election. She thereupon elected to take the liferent of the lands.

In a second action at his instance, held that though the plea of bona fide perception and consumption did not apply in a case of election, yet, as the son had, as trustee on both trusts concurred in the payments made to his mother, he was barred from claiming repetition of the payments of the produce of the residue down to the date of his judicial challenge of her right to draw both provisions.

Johnston v Johnston, 1875, 2 R. 986.

(417)

Discharge granted by legatees—Claim by legatees as heirs ab intestato—Personal bar.

A testator bequeathed certain legacies in favour of his grandchildren, who were also his heirs ab intestato, and directed his trustees to divide the residue of his estate among "such purposes of a religious, charitable, or educational character, or partly among my own relatives" as his wife might specify. After his death his wife, by deed of directions, instructed the trustees to pay out of the residue a legacy to an infirmary, and also made provisions in favour of the grandchildren. On her death the trustees paid the legacy to the infirmary, and also paid to the grandchildren, who granted discharges therefore, the amounts then payable to them under the settlement and deed of directions. Thereafter the grandchildren raised an action against the infirmary and the trustees, for declarator that the bequest of residue was void from uncertainty, and that the residue fell into intestacy, and that the legacy should be repaid by the infirmary to the pursuers or to the trustees. The defenders pleaded that the action could not proceed until after reduction of the discharges granted by the pursuers for the legacies paid to them under the bequest of residue and deed of directions which were now impugned.

Held that the pursuers were not prevented by these discharges from demanding repetition of the payment which was made in error to the infirmary.

Armour v Glasgow Royal Infirmary, 1909 S.C. 916; 46 S.L.R. 740; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 503.

(418)

Bona fide perception.

For some years a residuary legatee received payment without challenge of certain dividends. It was then found that the dividend bearing securities belonged to the next of kin. Held that the rule of bona fide perception applied to the dividends paid to the residuary legatee.

Ferguson v Lord Advocate, (O.H.) 1906, 14 S.L.T. 52.

(419)

Illegal payments to beneficiaries—Interest due by beneficiaries.

Where trustees had acted ultra vires in paying an annual allowance to a daughter of the trust as an advance to account of her share of residue, held that the amounts so paid, with interest to the date of division of residue, were to be imputed to her share, and that the interest was to be calculated at the rate which the rest of the trust fund was yielding.

Baird's Trustees v Duncanson, 1892, 19 R. 1045; 29 S.L.R. 862.

(420)

Assignment of share of trust estate—Illegal payment of share to assignor—Rights of assignee—Compensation.

Macpherson's Judicial Factor v Mackay, 1915 S.C. 1011; 52 S.L.R. 778; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 110, No. 520, infra.

(421)

Payment of capital to liferenter—Trust conveyance by spouses for themselves in liferent and children of wife by former marriage in fee—Fee declared not to vest till payment—Delivery—Advances by trustee to husband out of capital—Liability to account.

A husband and wife executed a joint trust deed, whereby they conveyed an estate to the husband in liferent, for his liferent use allenerly, and to A, and such others as might be assumed as trustees, "in fee, heritably and irredeemably," for these purposes:—First, for payment of the trust expenses; second, for payment to the wife, if she should survive her husband, of the free rents during her life; third, that the trustees should, on the death of the longest liver of the spouses, sell the estate, and divide the free residue among the wife's children by her first marriage: Declaring "that the whole provisions herein shall not become vested interests in the said G M, A M," &c., naming the wife's children, "until the term of payment thereof; but on the death of any of them before said term of payment the provision to any of them so dying, leaving lawful issue, shall be divided equally among his or her issue alive at the time of payment, and failing such issue, shall belong to" the surviving children or their issue equally per stirpes. At the date of the trust deed the wife was fiar of the estate. The deed was immediately registered in the Register of Sasines on behalf of the husband and the trustee for their respective rights of liferent and fee, and was immediately delivered to A, who accepted, and began at once to act under the trust. During the lifetime of the spouses A made advances to them out of the capital of the trust. Held, in an action against him at the instance of the children of the wife, that by the trust deed the spouses had divested themselves of the fee of the estate, and that therefore A was bound to account to the pursuers for the capital of the trust estate advanced by him to the trustees.

Morrison v Allan, 1886, 13 R. 1156; 23 S.L.R. 846.

(422)

Liferent due to wife applied for behoof of husband with her assent—Transaction between wife and trustees.

By antenuptial contract of marriage the wife conveyed to trustees certain funds for behoof of herself in liferent, exclusive of her husband's rights, and of the children in fee. The husband conveyed nothing to the trustees, but he bound himself, inter alia, to insure his life in the trustees' names for a certain sum, and to pay the annual premium, and in the event of the trustees finding it necessary at any time "to pay to the company any sum or sums on account of the premium" he bound himself to repay them. He failed to pay the premium, and the trustees for many years, with the wife's knowledge, paid the premium out of the liferent of the wife, both they and she being in the belief that they were entitled to do so. Thereafter the wife being desirous that her income should be free of the burden of keeping up the policy, and a doubt having been raised as to the power of the trustees to keep it up out of her income, the two spouses and the trustees entered into an agreement for the sale of the policy, on the footing that the proceeds should be added to the trust funds. Nine years afterwards the spouses raised an action against the trustees for repayment, with interest, of the sums expended in paying the premiums, on the ground that the payments were ultra vires of the trustees. Held that, even assuming the payments to have been ultra vires of the trustees, the action was barred by the fact that the wife had been a party to the agreement which embodied a settlement of the whole transaction.

Opinion (per Lord Justice-Clerk Moncreiff) that the question was one not between beneficiary and trustee, but between trustor and trustee, and that the wife, being in the position of a trustor, and having been in the knowledge of the action of the trustees, was not entitled to dispute it afterwards.

Spence v Boyd, 1888, 15 R. 376; 25 S.L.R. 283.

(423)

Annuity discharged by payments to another person with assent of annuitant—Proof—Parole.

A widow was entitled under her marriage contract to an annuity from her husband's estate. In an action by her for payment of arrears her husband's trustees admitted that during the period in question she had not received the annuity directly, but stated that she was residing with her husband's mother, that the money had been paid to the latter, and that the pursuer had agreed to her maintenance during that period being set against the annuity. They produced a minute of the meeting of the husband's trustees, of whom she was one, and at which she was present. The minute, which was not signed by the pursuer, bore:—"This annuity, Mrs. Panton stated, had not been paid directly to her, but as she just lived in family with the late" mother-in-law "out of whose funds, and the rents of Mr. Panton's property, the house expenses were defrayed, she was willing to let the annuity be set off against her maintenance." The pursuer deposed that she did not understand what "took place at the meeting, and that she never agreed to give up her claim to the annuity during the time she resided with her mother-in-law." Parole evidence was led to show that the pursuer acquiesced in and approved of the manner in which the annuity had been applied. The trustees also produced eleven receipts for half-yearly payments of the annuity subsequent to the death of the husband's mother. Held that no intention to discharge the trustees had been proved.

Question as to the competency of parole evidence to prove the discharge.

Cameron v Panton's Trustees, 1891, 18 R. 728; 28 S.L.R. 490.

(424)

Rate of interest due by trustees who were in breach of trust.

Where trustees had improperly paid away trust funds, but had not made, or attempted to make, any profit for themselves, it was held that they were liable in interest on the sums so paid away at 3 per cent., as being the average rate of trust interest.

Heritable Securities Investment Association v Miller's Trustees, 1892, 20 R. 675; 30 S.L.R. 354.

(425)

—A, who was a trustee under B's settlement, appointed C a trustee under his own settlement. C, who was a law agent, managed both the trust estates, and paid away funds belonging to A's trust estate to legatees under B's settlement. Held that C was not entitled to business charges on these intromissions, and that his bona fides did not prevent his being liable in repayment with interest to the beneficiaries under A's settlement. Interest allowed at the rate of 3 per cent. to the date of the action and of 4 per cent. thereafter.

Pursell's Trustees v Newbigging, &c., 1871, 8 S.L.R. 710.

(426)

Specific bequest handed over to beneficiary—Insolvent estate—Liability of trustees to creditors.

Testamentary trustees handed over a piano, the subject of a specific bequest, to the beneficiary. The trust estate having turned out to be insolvent, held that the trustees were liable to account to the creditors of the trust for the value of the piano.

Murray's Trustees v Murray, (O.H.) 1905, 13 S.L.T. 274.

2. DISCRETIONARY POWERS OF TRUSTEES.

(1) GENERALLY.

(427)

Authority given by testator—Authority equivalent to direction—Failure to exercise—Intestacy.

Opinion (per Lord Stormonth-Darling, Ordinary): "When a testator 'authorises and empowers' his trustees to do a certain thing in such circumstances that failure to do it will result in intestacy, the power is to all intents and purposes a direction."

Brown's Trustees v Young, (O.H.) 1898, 6 S.L.T. 32.

(428)

Division by trustees of money undivided by trust.

A sum of money was given to a person to divide among his children. After his death his trustees were informed of the fact, and were told that the sum was still undivided, and a jotting by the donor of the amount to be given to each child was shown to them, and they thereupon gave to each his share. Held that the trustees in the circumstances were entitled to take credit in their accounts for the sums so paid.

Robertson v Taylor, 1868, 6 M. 917; 40 J. 526; 5 S.L.R. 597.

(429)

Discretionary power to continue trust till estate cleared of debt—No reasonable prospect of debt being paid—Right of fiar to terminate trust.

Sinclair's Trustees v Sinclair, 1913 S.C. 178; 50 S.L.R. 296; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 81, No. 544, infra.

(2) UNCERTAINTY.

[See SUCCESSION IV. 10.]

(3) TIME, MODE, AND AMOUNT OF PAYMENTS.

[See also VESTING VII. 2.]

(430)

Discretion as to time and mode of payment of legacies.

A testator left legacies to each of his nieces, to be paid "when my trustees shall find it suitable and convenient to pay the same." Held that although the trust estate was in a condition conveniently to pay the legacies, the trustees were not bound to make immediate payment to the daughters of the sums bequeathed.

Cuninghame's Trustees v Duke, 1873, 11 M. 543; 45 J. 348; 10 S.L.R. 357.

(431)

Trust for benefit of truster's relations—Application to Court to fix payments.

A testator directed his trustee, in the third place, to pay an annuity of £20 to his brother, and further, in the fifth place, to hold his estates, which were heritable, and apply the free yearly revenue thereof "for preserving the aged and infirm among the descendants of my father from want or from the necessity of applying for public relief, and for obtaining for the young among the said descendants, both boys and girls, such a good, sound, plain, and useful education as will enable them to earn a livelihood for themselves, . . . with power . . . to maintain the young among the said descendants either in family with their parents or otherwise, while at their education," declaring that the trustees should not be entitled "to apply any sum beyond £20 sterling per annum for the benefit or relief of any one, either young or old, of said descendants, and that only while, in the judgment of my trustees, he or she stands in need of it in supplement of his or her own exertions." The revenue of the trust was about £580, only about £200 being expended in charitable objects, the rest being divided among the trustor's next of kin. (1) A petition by the annuitant for an additional grant under the fifth purpose of £10 per annum granted, notwithstanding the limitation of £20 per annum, which was held to be confined in its application to the fifth purpose. (2) In a petition by a relative of the testator for a grant towards the support of her children the Court fixed the sum to be paid by the trustees at £2 per month.

Ritchie v Davidson's Trustees, 1890, 17 R. 673; 27 S.L.R. 530.

See also Thomson v Davidson's Trustees, 1888, 15 R. 719; 25 S.L.R. 547.

CHARITABLE TRUSTS, No. 35.

(432)

Power to withhold payment—Exercise of power.

A trustor, after directing his trustees to divide the residue of his estate amongst his sons on their attaining majority, provided that the capital of one-half of their shares should not be payable to them until the age of twenty-five; "declaring, nevertheless, that my trustees shall have power to pay to any of my sons the capital of the said half, in whole or in part, as soon after he shall have attained majority as they shall deem advisable, and that, on the other hand, my said trustees, if they shall consider it for the interest of any of my sons, shall have power to withhold payment of the capital of such half . . . even after he shall have attained the age of twenty-five, . . . and that either during the remainder of his life or for such shorter period or periods as my said trustees shall from time to time determine," meantime paying him the interest. One of the sons survived his father, and died two years after attaining the age of twenty-five, without having received payment of the whole of his one-half share of the residue. The trustees had not recorded any minute determining to exercise their power to withhold payment, but they had in point of fact not paid, without protest on the part of the son. Held that in retaining the portion of the one-half share the trustees were to be presumed to have acted in the exercise of the power conferred on them, and there being no evidence to the contrary, that there had been a valid exercise of the power.

White's Trustees v White, 1896, 23 R. 836; 33 S.L.R. 660; 4 S.L.T. 59.

(433)

Power to restrict interest to alimentary liferent—Partial payment without exercise of power—Arrestment by beneficiary's creditor—Subsequent exercise of power.

Chambers' Trustees v Smith, 1878, 5 R. (H.L.) 151; 3 App.Cas. 795; 15 S.L.R. 541. SUCCESSION, No. 735.

(434)

Power to limit interest to liferent—Heritage—Whether beneficiary entitled to conveyance in liferent.

A trustor directed his trustees, upon his eldest son attaining the age of twenty-five years, "forthwith to convey and make over to" him the residue of his estate; "and in particular to convey to" him the estate of A. The deed contained a declaration that if any of the trustor's children conducted themselves so as not to merit the approbation of the trustees, the latter should execute a minute stating this, and that then the provisions in favour of such children should "belong to them only in liferent, for their liferent use alienably, and to their issue or heirs" (named in the settlement) "in fee." Before the eldest son reached the age of twenty-five years the trustees by minute restricted his right to a liferent. After the son reached the age of twenty-five he and his assignee claimed from the trustees a conveyance to the estate of A in liferent. Held that neither the son's assignee nor the son was entitled to a conveyance in liferent.

Ker's Trustees v Justice, 1868, 6 M. 627; 40 J. 324; 5 S.L.R. 382.

(435)

Duty of majority of trustees proposing to exercise power to consult minority.

Slimon v Slimon's Trustees, (O.H.) 1915, 2 S.L.T. 19, No. 275, supra.

(436)

Power to render share alimentary—Time within which it must be exercised.

A trustor conferred on his testamentary trustees "a discretionary power to render any child's share alimentary and inalienable." By the trust deed the period of division of the trust funds was declared to be the death of the trustor's widow. The trustees delayed to realise the trust estate, and four years afterwards resolved to exercise the discretionary power, and declared the share of the son "alimentary and inalienable." The assignee of a son's share raised an action of reduction of this resolution. Resolution reduced, on the ground that the discretionary power could not be exercised later than a reasonable time after the death of the liferentrix.

Adam v Forsyth's Trustees, 1867, 6 M. 31; 40 J. 23; 5 S.L.R. 26.

(437)

Exercise of power ultra vires.

Testamentary trustees were directed to fix and determine whether, in their opinion, it would be prudent or expedient to give to a son of the testator the uncontrolled command and disposal of the understood or expected interest of the son in the succession. In the event of their determining that it was not expedient, the trustees were directed to set aside the son's share and to place it under such restrictions as they might deem advisable, giving to the son an alimentary life-rent; but should they resolve that the share should be unrestricted, they were directed to pay it over unconditionally. There was a destination over in the event of the son dying without issue and without having received his share. The trustees by deed of conveyance and assignation, on the narrative that they considered that the share of the son should be placed under restriction, but that a curator bonis having been appointed to him the further interference of the trustees was unnecessary, assigned and conveyed the son's share to him absolutely. Held that the trustees had acted ultra vires, in respect that having determined that the share should be placed under restrictions, they were not entitled to convey it to him.

M'Nicol's Executrix v M'Nicol, 1893, 20 R. 386; 30 S.L.R. 428.

(438)

Valid exercise of power.

Testamentary trustees were given a discretionary power to "lay out and invest the shares of any of my said children in trust for behoof of any of them or their issue in such manner as my trustees shall think proper, so as to secure the shares of any of my said children as an alimentary provision for themselves or their issue." Held that the trustees had validly exercised the power by creating a trust in themselves for behoof of one of the children, for his life-rent use alienably, and of his issue, equally among them in fee.

Cox's Trustees v Rainie, (O.H.) 1899, 6 S.L.T. 370.

(439)

Gift of whole or portion of annual income according to trustees' discretion.

A testator directed his trustees to invest in their own names, as trustees, a sum of £5000, and to pay to A B during his life-time "either the whole or only a portion of the annual revenue thereof, and that subject to such conditions and restrictions, all as my trustees in their sole and absolute discretion think fit," and, on the decease of A B, to pay "said sum of £5000, with any revenue accrued thereon that has not been paid to" A B, to A B's children, declaring that in the event of A B dying without children, "said sum of £5000 and accumulations of revenue, if any," should form part of the residue of his estate. The testator died in June, 1899. A B was the testator's sole next of kin, and in 1903 he assigned to X, in security of a debt of £650, his interest in the deceased's estate as next of kin and as a legatee. In August, 1904, an action was raised by X as assignee of A B against the trustees concluding for payment of the income of the £5000. The pursuer maintained that the defenders—who had since the testator's death paid only certain trifling sums to A B from time to time—were bound to have exercised their discretion annually as to the amount of the income of the £5000 to be paid to A B, and, in respect that they had failed to do so, were bound to make payment of the whole income thereof that had accrued since the date of the testator's death, under deduction of the sums paid to A B. Held that the payments to be made to A B were left by the testator entirely in the discretion of the trustees, and that in the circumstances the trustees had done nothing to entitle the Court to interfere with their discretion, and defenders absolved.

Train v Clapperton, 1908 S.C. (H.L.) 26; [1908] A.C. 342; 45 S.L.R. 682; 16 S.L.T. 45.

(440)

Bankruptcy of liferenter.

Trustees, who had a discretionary power to limit the interest of a liferenter and add the balance of the income to the capital, held entitled on the bankruptcy of the liferenter to reduce the sum payable to him from the trust to a reasonable alimentary allowance and add the balance to capital.

White's Trustee v White's Trustees, (O.H.) 1917, 1 S.L.T. 272.

(441)

Retention of income.

Held that in the absence of a definite averment of mala fides the Court would not enquire into the motives of testamentary trustees in exercising a discretion conferred upon them by the trustor to withhold payment of part of the income of the estate destined to a beneficiary.

MacTavish v Reid's Trustees, (O.H.) 1904, 12 S.L.T. 404.

(442)

Creation of sinking fund—Redemption at par of securities bought at premium.

Held that trustees were not entitled to use part of the income of a trust estate to form a sinking fund for the purpose of covering loss of capital which might arise from the redemption at par of redeemable securities which they or the trustor acquired at a premium and which they properly held as part of the residue of the trust estate, because the liferenters of the residue were entitled to the actual income of the residue and not to a constructive income reached by making deductions and allowances which were not authorised by the trust deed. Opinion that if the capital of the estate was prejudiced, it was prejudiced by virtue of the scheme of the deed.

Heath v Baxter's Trustees, (O.H.) 1902, 10 S.L.T. 462.

(4) APPORTIONMENT BETWEEN CAPITAL AND INCOME.

(443)

Distribution of revenue between capital and income.

A testator made his trustees the sole competent judges of the fair proportion to be placed to capital and income respectively of the trust estate, which included a freestone quarry and plantations on a considerable scale. Held that it was competent for him to do so, and that neither the trustees nor any party taking benefit under the trust deed could come to the Court with a special case to obtain the opinion of the Court upon those points.

Low's Trustees, 1871, 8 S.L.R. 638.

(444)

Apportionment of dividends from ships between income and capital—Finality of apportionment—Unexpected increase in capital value—Right to re-apportion.

A testator died in 1907 leaving a trust disposition and settlement in which he, inter alia, provided:—"In the event of any part of my said estate being at the date of my decease invested . . . in wasting securities the proportion of the return from such wasting investments which shall be treated as income or whether the whole or any part of such return shall be treated as income for the purposes of these presents shall be matters entirely in the discretion of my trustees and as to which they shall be the sole judges." For a number of years after the testator's death the trustees, treating certain shares in steamships as wasting securities, apportioned the annual dividends from these shares between income and capital, the amounts determined to be income being paid by them to the liferenters of these shares, and the amounts determined to be capital being carried to the capital account of the trust. In 1917, when the shares were ultimately realised, the sum obtained for them, owing to the effect of the war, largely exceeded their value at the date of the testator's death. In a question between the liferenters and the fiars, held that the allocations of the dividends between income and capital were final, and could not be reconsidered by the trustees with the object of making further payments to the liferenters out of the portions of the dividends which had been credited to capital.

Warrack's Trustees v Warrack, 1919 S.C. 522; 56 S.L.R. 472; 1919, 2 S.L.T. 37.

(5) EXERCISE OF DISCRETIONARY POWERS BY ASSUMED TRUSTEES.

(445)

Power to select objects of bequest conferred on nominated trustees—No express power to assume—Failure of trustees.

A testatrix conveyed her whole means and estate to trustees (whom she also appointed her executors), for certain purposes, and with regard to the residue of her estate she "ordained the same to be paid by my said executors to such charitable or religious purposes, and in such proportions as they or the acceptor or survivor of them may think proper according to their or his discretion." The testament conferred no power of assuming new trustees. The trustees named accepted office but died after only a small portion of the residue had been distributed by them. A judicial factor was then appointed on the trust estate. Held that the discretionary powers committed to the trustees were personal to them, and could not be exercised by the Court, and that the residue undisposed of fell to be distributed among the testatrix's heirs in mobilis as intestate succession.

Robbie's Judicial Factor v Macrae, 1893, 20 R. 358; 30 S.L.R. 411.

(446)

Right of assumed trustees to exercise power.

A testator authorised and empowered his trustees and executors on the death of his wife to donate the residue of his estate amongst certain institutions. Held that the power could validly be exercised by assumed trustees as well as by the original trustees nominated by himself.

Brown's Trustees v Young, (O.H.) 1898, 6 S.L.T. 32.

(447)

Assumed trustees held entitled to exercise discretionary powers conferred by a testator on his trustees to select objects of a bequest, there being no indication in the settlement of a contrary intention on the part of the testator.

M'Credie's Trustees v M'Credie, (O.H.) 1915, 1 S.L.T. 410.

(448)

Express right given to assumed trustees.

A testator conferred a discretion to select beneficiaries upon his trustees "original or assumed or otherwise appointed." Held that the trust machinery was validly constituted, and that assumed trustees could exercise the discretionary powers.

Dick's Trustees v Dick, (O.H.) 1906, 14 S.L.T. 325.

(449)

Right of deceased trustee's executor to exercise power.

By a trust disposition and settlement a lady directed payment of a legacy to A "to be divided by him between foreign and home missions." A died before the legacy was paid over to him. But he had stated before his death that when the money came into his hands he intended to divide it in certain proportions among missions which he had named as recipients. He had, however, made no intimation of any division to the parties he intended should benefit. Held that on A's death, without having divided the legacy, it lapsed, and A's executrix could not exercise the power conferred upon him.

Landale's Trustee v Nicol, (O.H.) 1918, 2 S.L.T. 10.

(450)

Exercise of discretion by trustee appointed by Court.

A testator directed his trustees to pay and devote the residue of his estate to such charitable or benevolent purposes and at such time or from time to time as they in their own discretion should think fit. All the trustees having died, the Court appointed new trustees. Held that, as there was no delectus personæ by the testator indicated in his selection of trustees, the trustees appointed by the Court had power to select beneficiaries, even although there was no effectual gift unless and until the power was exercised.

Miln's Trustees v Drachenhauer, (O.H.) 1921, 1 S.L.T. 152.

(451)

Terms of testamentary writings on which held that a discretionary power conferred on trustees to distribute residue among a number of charities could be exercised by trustees appointed by the Court.

Grieve's Trustees v Wilson, (O.H.) 1904, 12 S.L.T. 347.

John Macfarlane's Trustee v Malcolm Macfarlane's Trustees, (O.H.) 1896, 4 S.L.T. 22.

Malcolm Macfarlane's Trustees v Helen Macfarlane's Trustees, (O.H.) 1896, 4 S.L.T. 23.

(452)

No express power to assume — Assumption of new trustee by surviving trustee.

A testatrix by her settlement appointed two persons to be her trustees and executors (the appointment of one of them being afterwards recalled by codicil), and conveyed to them her whole estate. The trust purposes included a direction to divide the residue among such charitable institutions in Glasgow, and in such proportions "as my trustees in their absolute and uncontrolled discretion shall decide." The deed was silent as to the assumption of new trustees. On the testatrix's death the sole nominated trustee accepted office, and, after assuming a new trustee in virtue of the statutory power to do so, died without having taken any steps to distribute the estate.

Held, on a construction of the terms of the settlement, that, as there was no indication that the testatrix intended to limit the exercise of the discretionary power as to the residue to the trustee nominated by her, that power could be validly exercised by the assumed trustee.

Shedden's Trustee v Dykes, 1914 S.C. 106; 51 S.L.R. 115; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 370.

(453)

Power of appointment vested in original trustee—Personal and not transmissible to assumed trustees—Mode of division upon supervening insanity of original trustee.

The sole trustee under a settlement was directed to hold a sum for behoof of a family of children, and was invested with the amplest discretionary powers as to the proportions in which the sum should be paid and the times and manner of payment. The trustee, after making unequal payments to the beneficiaries to account of their shares, became hopelessly insane. She had previously assumed a co-trustee, who after her insanity assumed another trustee under the Trusts Act, 1867. Held that a valid bequest had been made to the children as a class, and that the powers conferred upon the trustee were a burden on that bequest; that since these powers could not be exercised by the trustee named in the settlement, the effect was, not that the powers were transferred to the assumed trustees, but that the burden flew off, and the bequest to the children as a class became unqualified, and accordingly that the fund fell to be divided in such proportions as, when added to the payments to account previously made, would produce equality among the beneficiaries.

Hill's Trustees v Thomson, 1874, 2 R. 68; 12 S.L.R. 20.

3. APPROPRIATION OF INVESTMENTS —SEVERANCE OF TRUST.

(454)

Whether appropriation authorised — Ultra vires—Depreciation of investments.

Testamentary trustees, who were directed to pay a legacy of £5000 at a postponed date, invested that sum in trust investments and appropriated them to the legacy. The trust deed contained no direction to appropriate, either express or implied, nor was appropriation necessary to facilitate the administration of the trust. When the term of payment of the legacy arrived the investments appropriated thereto had materially depreciated in value, and the legatee claimed payment of the legacy in full.

Held that the trustees were not entitled to appropriate investments to the legacy, and accordingly that the legatee was entitled to payment in full.

Colville's Trustees v Colville, 1914 S.C. 255; 51 S.L.R. 204; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 62.

(455)

Ultra vires.

Circumstances in which it was held that an appropriation of investments by trustees to particular legacies was ultra vires, and that loss which had accrued on certain investments fell upon residue.

Scott's Trustees v Scott, 1895, 23 R. 52; 33 S.L.R. 65; 3 S.L.T. 136.

(456)

Intra vires—Appreciation in value of investments appropriated.

A testator directed his trustee to hold a specified sum for a certain party in liferent, and his issue in fee, and to pay over the residue of his estate "as it accrues and becomes available" to his residuary legatees. On the death of the liferenter it was found that the stocks, in which the legacy had been invested, had considerably increased in value. In a competition between the fiars and the residuary legatees, held that the trustee had an implied power under the terms of the trust deed to set aside and invest the specified sum for the satisfaction of the legacy, and, accordingly, that the fiars were entitled to the benefit of the appreciation in the value of the securities.

Vans Dunlop's Trustees v Pollok, 1912 S.C. 10; 49 S.L.R. 7; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 341.

(457)

Liability for calls on shares held for one beneficiary—Whether trustees entitled to relief against whole funds held.

A testatrix directed her trustees to pay to her daughter A "the interest or annual rent of £2000" during her life, and on her death to pay the fee of that sum to her children. She made a similar provision for her daughter B in liferent and her children in fee; and she directed her trustees, after making provision for the payment of these legacies, to divide the residue of her estate. The trustees allocated various stocks belonging to the testatrix and sums of money to meet the legacies of £2000 to A and B respectively. The residue was then divided. Among the stocks belonging to the testatrix was certain stock of the City of Glasgow Bank, a portion of which was, on the request of A, retained by the trustees as an investment of part of the legacy to her and her family. The City of Glasgow Bank afterwards suspended payment, and the trustees were subjected to heavy calls. They claimed relief out of the trust estate generally, which then consisted only of funds held for behoof of A and B and their respective families. Held that while the trustees were under the trust deed empowered to retain the City of Glasgow Bank stock, being stock held by the truster, as an investment of the special legacies bequeathed to A and B and their families, yet having appropriated certain investments for behoof of B and her family, they must be regarded as holding the same in trust for their behoof exclusively, and were not entitled to relief therefrom for liability arising from investments held for A and her family.

Observed that the liability incurred by the trustees in respect of the calls on the City of Glasgow Bank stock was in no sense a debt of the truster.

Robinson v Fraser's Trustee, 1881, 8 R. (H.L.) 127; 6 App.Cas. 855; 18 S.L.R. 740.

(458)

Whether appropriation made.

A testator in his settlement directed his trustees to divide the residue of his estate into two portions, the first of which was to be of such an amount as should be sufficient to yield a free annual income of £1500. The trustees by minute resolved "to set apart a portion of the trust estates of such an amount as should be sufficient to yield a free annual income of £1500 to the widow," and accordingly set apart certain shares and other property specified in the minute, "but declaring that should the annual income or revenue of said portions of the trust estate exceed in any year the sum of £1500, the excess shall fall into the income of the remaining estates; and that should said annual income or revenue in any year be less than the sum of £1500, the deficiency shall be made up from the income or revenue of the said remaining estates." Held that the trustees had not made a final apportionment of the trust estate.

Smith's Trustees v Smith, 1900, 2 F. 713; 37 S.L.R. 509.

(459)

Liability of beneficiaries inter se for loss on investments.

A testator directed his trustees to divide the residue of his estate into equal shares corresponding to the number of his children, and to hold the shares destined for his sons for his widow in liferent and for them respectively in fee, with a discretion to the trustees to pay the shares to the sons on their giving security for payment of interest to the widow. They were directed to hold the daughters' shares after the widow's death for them in liferent and their children in fee. Most of the sons' shares were paid to them, "subject to rectification," after a valuation of the residue, some of the payments being made after it was known that there would be a considerable loss on some of the investments. In a special case presented after the death of the widow the sons contended that as they had received the bulk of their respective shares the residue in the hands of the trustees virtually consisted of the daughters' shares, which the trustees were bound to retain, and that the daughters' shares should bear losses arising on investments subsequent to the payment of the sons' shares, or at least that their shares should bear the losses proportionally with the undivided portions of the sons' shares. Held that in the final division of the residue the trustees were bound to equalise the payments to the children, as nothing had occurred in the way of appropriation of shares to sons or daughters to prevent an equal distribution of the losses arising on trust investments.

Teacher's Trustees v Teacher, 1890, 17 R. 303; 27 S.L.R. 250.

(460)

Severance of interests of beneficiaries—Appropriation of an investment to meet several legacies.

Testamentary trustees were directed "to invest, hold or set aside and retain and administer" a specific sum for each of the testator's six daughters by name, and to pay to each the income of "the sum so set aside for each of them" during their lives for their alimentary use alienably; and upon the respective deaths of the daughters to pay the capital of "the sums so held and set apart for each of my said daughters" to their children, vesting in the children being postponed till each daughter's death. The trustees were empowered to retain the truster's investments, or to realise them and reinvest the proceeds. Held (1) that, under the terms of the settlement, the trustees were bound to set apart for each daughter the sum provided for her or securities representing that amount, and to administer the same for her behoof; and (2) that the allocation of investments, against the wish of one daughter, as a cumulo security for the provisions to her and three of her sisters, was not a valid fulfilment of this obligation.

Grosset v Birrell's Trustees, 1920 S.C. 231; 57 S.L.R. 187; 1920, 1 S.L.T. 123.

(461)

Incidence of gains and losses on investments.

Circumstances in which it was held that, as there had been no specific appropriation of the investments, the ordinary rule applied, whereby gains or losses on investments fell to be distributed among the beneficiaries in proportion to the amount of their respective bequests.

Lynch's Judicial Factor v Griffin, 1900, 2 F. 653; 37 S.L.R. 462.

(462)

Aggregation of separate trust funds—Right to appreciation in value of investments.

Magistrates of Edinburgh v M'Laren, 1879, 8 R. (H.L.) 140; 4 App.Cas. 823; 16 S.L.R. 828, No. 126, supra.

(463)

Appropriation of part of heritable bond to meet specific legacy—Payment of legacy in full out of general estate—Subsequent loss on realisation of bond.

Under a trust deed the trustees were directed to set aside £1000 for behoof of a legatee in life during her minority, with power to pay over the capital to her when she had attained majority. A judicial factor who had been appointed to manage the trust estate appropriated £1000 of a bond and disposition in security for £3250 as an investment for this legacy, and paid the legatee interest at the rate of $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. (being the rate in the bond) during her minority. In January, 1890, the legatee having attained majority, the factor paid over the capital of the legacy to her. The payment was made in full out of the general funds of the trust. Shortly afterwards the debtor in the bond having defaulted in payment of interest the judicial factor sold the security subjects at a loss of £902.

Held that, looking to the circumstances as to the value of the security subjects, known to the judicial factor at the time when he made payment to the legatee, he was entitled to pay her out of the general funds of the trust.

Manners v Strong's Judicial Factor, 1902, 4 F. 829; 39 S.L.R. 709; 10 S.L.T. 66.

(464)

Right to retain share of residue to meet depreciation in appropriated investments.

A testator directed his trustees to set apart or invest a specific sum for each of his daughters on their attaining a certain age, to be held in trust for their life for use, and for their issue, if any, in fee, and to hold the whole residue in trust for the purchase of lands to be entailed in manner directed by him. Held that the trustees, after having set apart securities to the amount specified for all the daughters, were not bound or entitled to reserve a portion of the residue to meet any deficiency in the value of the securities for the daughters' provisions which might exist at the time when payment of the fee was to be made.

Gordon v Gordon's Trustees, 1868, 41 J. 43; 6 S.L.R. 74.

(465)

Amount falling to be set aside—Bequest of sum required to yield £120 per annum.

Circumstances in which the Court fixed the sum of £4000 as the amount which the trustees ought to have set aside as likely, one year with another, to produce £120.

Munro's Trustees v Munro, 1899, 1 F. 980; 36 S.L.R. 761.

(466)

Sum required to meet annuity—Discretion of trustees.

A testator directed his trustees to pay an annuity of £500 a year to his wife. The trustees set aside a sum which yielded £120 to £150 in excess of the amount of the annuity. Held that the sum retained was not so extravagant as to show that the trustees had not exercised a reasonable discretion.

Chivas' Trustees v Stewart, 1907 S.C. 701; 44 S.L.R. 15; 14 S.L.T. 357.

4. POWER TO MAKE ADVANCES OUT OF CAPITAL.

(467)

Express power—Extent of power.

By a testamentary settlement trustees were directed, on the death of two annuitants (who predeceased the testator), to hold a share of residue "for behoof of" J H and his family as follows, viz. :—For payment of the interest of said share to J H to the extent of one-half thereof, and the interest of the other half to his children, and if J H and his children "stand in need thereof" the trustees were directed "to expend the capital of said share for and in behalf of the said J H and his said children in such proportions as they may think proper." Held that the power to advance capital was a power to advance to the extent of one-half only to J H, and to the extent of the other half to the children.

Gillies' Trustees v Hodge, 1900, 3 F. 238; 38 S.L.R. 150; 8 S.L.T. 320.

(468)

Power to make advances on marriage—Annual allowance subsequent to marriage.

A trust left his estate to be divided among his family of four daughters, vesting being postponed till the period of payment, viz., the majority of the youngest daughter. He empowered his trustees "to make advances" to his daughters "on their marriage," which advances were to be accounted as part of their shares, and to be deducted from their shares of the residue on the final division taking place. Three of the daughters were married during the subsistence of the trust. The trustees on the occasion of each marriage paid the daughter a sum of £1000, and made her an annual allowance of £300. None of the husbands of the daughters was unable to maintain his wife without assistance from the trust. Held (1) that the annual allowances were ultra vires of the trustees; (2) that the allowances so paid to each married daughter, with interest thereon to the date of division, were to be imputed to account of her share of residue; (3) that the interest was to be calculated at the rate which the rest of the trust fund was yielding; and (4) that no interest was chargeable on the sums of £1000.

Baird's Trustees v Duncanson, 1892, 19 R. 1045; 29 S.L.R. 862.

(469)

——— Liferenters interfering as to exercise.

A trustor left the life interest of the whole residue of his estate to his widow, and gave power to the trustees to make advances out of capital to one of two heirs during the currency of the life interest, the expediency of doing so being left "to the exclusive judgment" of the trustees, "without control or interference from any party whatever." Held that the widow had no power to veto the trustees in making advances out of capital.

Caithness's Trustees v Caithness, 1877, 4 R. 937; 14 S.L.R. 585.

(470)

——— Power lost by acceleration of period of division.

A testator by his settlement directed his trustees to hold his estate, first, for payment of an annuity to his widow, and upon her death to divide his estate equally among his children, directing them in the case of daughters either to hold or to settle their shares for behoof of the daughters in life interest alienably and their children in fee, the income of such shares being declared alimentary and exclusive of jus mariti. The trustees were empowered to make advances to a certain extent to the testator's children and grandchildren, such advances to be imputed to their shares at the period of division. The widow repudiated her conventional provisions, and claimed her legal rights, which repudiation and claim by a former judgment (infra, No. 567) was held to have accelerated the term of division, so as to make it the duty of the trustees to deal with the estate as if she were naturally dead. Held that the power of making advances out of the trust estate was applicable only to the period before division, and that the arrival of that period made it no longer legally possible for the trustees to exercise the powers conferred by the settlement.

Alexander's Trustees, 1873, 45 J. 515; 10 S.L.R. 535.

(471)

Discretionary power of trustees—Exercise by judicial factor—Special powers.

A testator conveyed to certain persons named and to such other persons as should be assumed in terms of law to act in the trust, as trustees for executing the trust, his heritable and moveable estates. He directed his trustees, inter alia, to retain and invest £4000 for behoof of his son D in life interest alienably and of his issue in fee, and on the death of D without issue to pay the sum to the testator's other sons, subject to the condition that "in case at any time my trustees may in the exercise of their judgment and discretion think it prudent and advisable to pay over" to D "the whole or any part of the principal of the said sum of £4000 as his own absolute property, they shall have, and they are hereby granted full power, authority, and liberty to do so, . . . it being my intention to give to my trustees the same full powers and discretion in giving the said principal sum" to D, "which I myself now possess." A judicial factor who had been appointed in room of the trustees, who had resigned, presented a petition, bearing to be at D's request, for power to invest a portion of the £4000 in the purchase of an annuity in favour of D and his wife, and the survivor of them. The Court, holding that the proposed investment, being at D's request, was virtually a payment to D himself, granted the prayer of the petition.

Howden v Simson, 1895, 23 R. 113; 33 S.L.R. 79; 3 S.L.T. 158.

(472)

——— Exercise by assumed trustees—Judicial factor.

Robbie's Judicial Factor v Macrae, 1893, 20 R. 358; 30 S.L.R. 411, No. 445, supra.

(473)

Act 1867, sec. 7—Advance to minor beneficiaries.

Circumstances in which the Court refused a petition for an advance of capital for the maintenance and education of minor beneficiaries, holding that even on the assumption that the proposed advances out of capital were not "expressly prohibited by the trust deed" in the sense of the Act, they were not such as the Court in the exercise of its discretion could in the circumstances authorise—Lord Young and Lord Craighill holding further that the proposed advances out of capital were expressly prohibited in the sense of the Act.

Thomson v Miller's Trustees, 1883, 11 R. 401; 21 S.L.R. 269.

(474)

Where a trustor leaves his estate to his widow in life interest and his children in fee, subject to provisions by which the vesting of the estate in the children is suspended, the children, if unable to support themselves, may have a claim for aliment against their father's estate, but this claim must be dealt with by the trustees on their own responsibility, and the Court has no power, either at common law or under sec. 7 of the Trusts Act, 1867, to authorise them to make advances to the children out of capital during the lifetime of the widow.

Baillie's Trustees, (O.H.) 1896, 33 S.L.R. 589; 4 S.L.T. 30.

(475)

Authority given to make advances out of the price of heritage for the education and maintenance of minor beneficiaries.

Weir's Trustees, 1877, 4 R. 876; 14 S.L.R. 564.

(476)

———Nobile officium.

A truster directed his trustees to pay to his widow a certain annuity out of his estate, under burden of her maintaining and educating his children until they were able to support themselves. The annuity having proved insufficient for the maintenance and education of the children, the trustees presented a petition to the Court under sec. 7 of the Trusts (Scotland) Act, 1867, or alternatively as an appeal to the nobile officium, for authority to make an additional payment to the widow out of the capital of the estate. Circumstances in which the Court, in exercise of the nobile officium, having regard to the fact that the children were in law entitled to be alimented out of the estate of their father, granted authority to the trustees to make payment to the widow out of capital of an additional sum for two years, reserving right to the trustees to apply again.

Bett's Trustees, 1922 S.C. 21; 59 S.L.R. 70; 1921, 2 S.L.T. 246.

(477)

———"Vested interest."

Held that the words "vested interest" in sec. 7 of the Trusts Act, 1867, meant "primary interest," although it might be contingent on survivorship; and trustees authorised to advance from a fund liferented by a father, who consented, although the capital did not vest in his children till his death and that of certain annuitants.

Pattison v Pattison's Trustees, 1870, 8 M. 575; 42 J. 291; 7 S.L.R. 323.

(478)

———Unappropriated income forming part of capital—Vesting in a class.

Testamentary trustees held the residue of a trust estate for behoof of the testator's children, who were all minors, subject to a direction to divide it among the children or the survivors, when the youngest child should reach twenty-one years of age. The settlement contained a declaration that the provisions to the children should not become vested interests in them until the period of division, and there was no direction as to the application of the accruing income. There was no destination over in the event of the children all dying before the date of division. A petition was presented by the trustees for authority to apply the whole of the income, or such part thereof as they should think proper, for behoof of the children, on the ground that this was necessary for their maintenance and education. Held that the petition might be granted under sec. 7 of the Trusts Act, 1867, in respect (1) that the unappropriated income formed part of the capital; (2) that although the interest of each child was contingent, and had not vested, the children as a class had a vested interest in the sense of the statute; (3) that no persons had an interest in the residue other than the children and their heirs or representatives.

Ross's Trustees, 1894, 21 R. 995; 31 S.L.R. 812; 2 S.L.T. 149.

See also Webster v Miller's Trustees, 1887, 14 R. 501; 24 S.L.R. 368, No. 509, infra.

(479)

Petition for power to encroach on capital—Petitioner not a trustee.

By holograph will a testator bequeathed "all I am possessed of . . . to my wife so long as she lives, subject to her not marrying again, and at her death the estate to be equally divided amongst the children." The widow, who had been decerned executrix-dative, presented a petition for authority under sec. 7 of the Trusts Act, 1867, to encroach on capital for the maintenance of herself and her children. The Lord Ordinary dismissed the petition as unnecessary, holding that the petitioner was not a trustee within the meaning of the Trusts Acts, and that under the will, subject to conditions, the whole estate was bequeathed to her, and that she was entitled to use both capital and income for support of herself and her children.

Rigg's Executrix, (O.H.) 1905, 13 S.L.T. 144.

5. POWER TO MAKE ALLOWANCES OUT OF INCOME FOR MAINTENANCE AND EDUCATION.

(1) DISCRETION EXPRESSLY GIVEN TO TRUSTEES.

(480)

Allowance to widow for maintenance of children.

A truster having provided that his widow should be permitted to occupy his mansion-house as a home for herself and their children, and that his trustees should pay to her such sums as they thought fit for the maintenance and education of the children, —circumstances in which held that they were authorised to pay her £2000 per annum in addition to her own jointure of £1000 per annum.

Ferguson's Trustees, 1869, 8 M. 155.

(481)

Averments of special requirements of children.

By a trust disposition and settlement trustees were empowered to make such allowance as they might think proper to the truster's children for their proper maintenance and education out of the free interest of their presumptive shares of the residue of his estate. A petition at the instance of the trustor's widow craving increased allowances, which it was alleged were required on account of the very delicate health of the pupils, refused, the Court holding that there was no sufficient ground for interfering with the discretion of the trustees.

Opinion (per Lord Deas) that to justify such interference a gross case of dereliction or misconception of duty must be presented.

Douglas v Douglas's Trustees, 1872, 10 M. 943; 44 J. 522; 9 S.L.R. 600.

(482)

Advances out of surplus income for expenditure not expressly contemplated by testator.

A testator in his settlement provided an annuity and certain liferents to his widow, declaring that these provisions were intended for the behoof of herself and the children of the marriage, it being his wish that the children should remain in family with their mother "and be maintained and educated out of the said annuity." The testator directed that on the death of his widow the whole estate should be held for behoof of his children and their issue, and that during the widow's life the surplus income, after providing for the annuity, should "be held and applied by my trustees for behoof of my said child or children, and the survivors or survivor of them, and the issue of the deceasers as aforesaid; it being hereby declared that my trustees shall have power, as they are hereby authorised and empowered, either to accumulate said surplus from year to year . . . or in the option of my trustees, and if they in the exercise of their discretion shall see fit, to apply the said surplus, or any part thereof, to the outfit or establishment of such of them as shall be sons in business or professions, and such of them as shall be daughters in marriage." Held that during the widow's life the trustees were entitled out of surplus income to make such advances as they might think desirable either for the education of any of the children or for such change of residence as might be considered necessary for the health of any member of the family.

Christie v Christie's Trustees, 1877, 4 R. 620; 14 S.L.R. 399.

(483)

Discretion given by trustor to increase provision—Consent of fiars.

A testator, who died in 1821, provided to his daughter, who was then married, an annuity of £50, empowering his trustees, "if my funds will admit, and if they shall think she has occasion for it, eventually to make some addition to said annuity, according as their own good judgment and discretion shall suggest." The residue of his estate, with accumulation of interest, was to be paid to his daughter for behoof of her children in the event of her surviving her husband. In 1869, the estate being then under the management of a judicial factor, the daughter being nearly eighty years of age, her husband nearly ninety, and they being in poor circumstances, the factor petitioned for authority to pay the daughter an additional annuity of £300 a year, stating the rental of the heritage at £515, and the accumulations at £6600. The principal beneficiaries consented. The Court granted the authority craved.

Allan, 1869, 8 M. 139; 42 J. 63; 7 S.L.R. 71.

(484)

Fund vested in testator's grandchildren—Interest payable to children "after the death of both parents"—Payment of allowance from income during mother's life.

A testator directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate for his son in liferent and his children in fee, the children's shares to be payable on the majority of sons, and on majority or marriage of daughters. The trustees were further empowered "after the death of both parents" before the term of payment, to pay the interest of the estate to the children or to make advances to them out of capital for furthering their prospects in life. The son left a widow and two pupil children.

Held (1) that the son's widow was not entitled to a liferent of the residue of the testator's estate; and (2) that the trustees were entitled, but not bound, to make advances from income for the maintenance and support of the children during their mother's lifetime.

Spears' Trustees v Spears, 1873, 11 M. 731; 45 J. 450; 10 S.L.R. 509.

(485)

Power to "make advances" to daughters "on their marriage"—Whether annual allowance within power—Interest.

Baird's Trustees v Duncanson, 1892, 19 R. 1045; 29 S.L.R. 862, No. 468, supra.

(486)

Payment to be made to person charged with child's custody.

Circumstances in which held that where marriage contract trustees had, in the exercise of the discretion committed to them, made a certain allowance for the maintenance and education of a pupil, there was no ground for the interference of the Court; but that the allowance should not have been paid to the pupil's factor loco tutoris, but directly to the person charged with his custody.

Ferguson v Robertson, 1869, 41 J. 212; 6 S.L.R. 238.

(2) FAILURE OF TRUSTER'S DIRECTIONS FOR MAINTENANCE.

(487)

Testamentary provision to widow for maintenance of children—Forfeiture of provision on remarriage—Allowance fixed by Court.

A testator directed his trustees to allow his widow the liferent use of his house and to pay her an annuity of £120 until his youngest child reached majority, on condition that she bound herself to maintain and upbring them. In the event of her re-marriage the annuity was to be reduced to £20, and she was to forfeit the liferent of the house. The testator was survived by his widow and three pupil children. The widow remarried while the children were still in pupillarity.

Held that the children were entitled to an allowance from the income of the estate for their maintenance and education until they were able to maintain themselves or until majority, and directed the sum of £20 for each child to be paid by the trustees.

Gilmour's Trustees, 1872, 44 J. 555; 9 S.L.R. 610.

(488)

Reputation by widow of testamentary provision—Acceleration of period of payment.

A testator directed his trustees to pay his widow the whole revenue of the residue of his estate during her life, subject to restriction to an annuity of £100 in the event of her second marriage. He then, in the seventh place, directed them "on the death of my said wife" to apply the residue to and for behoof of C, his adopted daughter, and to expend a part or the whole of the annual income, or part of the capital if they thought fit, in the maintenance, education, and upbringing of C until she should attain the age of twenty-one or be married, and that on either of these events happening the trustees should, as they considered it most for the advantage of C, either denude of the trust and make over the whole estate to her, or in the event of her marriage settle the same or part thereof on trustees for C in liferent alimentary and her children in fee, paying over the remainder to her absolutely, or, whether married or unmarried, allow her a liferent and postpone payment of the fee and retain it in their hands for such length of time as they deemed best, declaring that C, on attaining twenty-one years of age or being married, should have power to test on the fee of the residue, if settled on her issue, then among such issue in such proportions as she might fix, and if not settled on issue, or failing issue, then in favour of such persons as she might name by any writing under her hand, "declaring that it is my wish that my trustees should act towards my said adopted daughter as if she were my own child, and as they consider will be best at all times for her moral good and comfort and advancement in life." Then, in the last place, in the event of C dying before attaining twenty-one years of age or being married, or of her surviving that age or event but dying before receiving payment of the residue and having failed to test thereon, the truster directed his trustees to pay the residue, or what remained of it, equally to and among the then surviving children per stirpes of his brothers and sisters. The truster was survived by his wife and by C, who was in minority. The widow rejected the provisions in her favour in the settlement, and took her legal rights. On C attaining twenty-one years of age, held that the trustees had power to make payments to C for her maintenance.

Cairns v Cairns' Trustees, 1901, 3 F. 545; 38 S.L.R. 364; 8 S.L.T. 474.

(489)

Supervening incapacity of widow—Casus improvisus.

A truster directed his trustees to pay an annuity of £200 a year to his widow, and £50 for the aliment of each of his children during their pupillarity, with power to the trustees to increase the allowance after they reached minority, or in the event of their mother's death or second marriage. The widow having become imbecile during the pupillarity of the children, an additional allowance for the children was considered necessary by the trustees in order to provide them with a governess. Held that the trustees had power to increase the allowance.

Briggs' Trustees v Cathcart, 1869, 8 M. 242; 42 J. 106.

(3) RIGHT OF CHILDREN TO INTEREST OF FUND OR TO A MAINTENANCE ALLOWANCE.

(490)

Fund not vested—Testator in loco parentis to children.

Where trustees were directed to hold £5000 and shares of residue for behoof of a mother in liferent and of such of her children as should reach the age of twenty-five years and the survivors in fee, and where these provisions had not at the death of the liferenter vested in any of the children by reason of none of them having reached that age, the Court held that the children as a class were entitled to the accruing income for their education and maintenance, it being admitted that the testator had placed himself in loco parentis to them, and that the advances were necessary.

Duncan's Trustees, &c., 1877, 4 R. 1093; 14 S.L.R. 650.

(491)

Fund vested but not payable—No direction to accumulate.

Held that advances made by testamentary trustees to minor beneficiaries out of the income of a fund which had vested in these beneficiaries, but which was not payable until their majority or marriage, and as to which there was no direction to accumulate, were properly made, although the settlement did not expressly confer any power upon the trustees to make advances.

Normand's Trustees v Normand, 1900, 2 F. 726; 37 S.L.R. 517; 7 S.L.T. 430.

(492)

Fund payable on majority—Right of children to payments for maintenance—Contract of separation—Father's obligation to maintain children.

A father, having bound himself in a voluntary contract of separation to make certain provisions for his children, and to be at the expense of educating them, died leaving a trust settlement wherein he directed his trustees to pay the provisions on the children attaining majority. Held that the children were entitled to the expenses of their education after their father's death.

Meiklam's Trustees v Meiklam, 1868, 6 S.L.R. 2.

(493)

—Payment to father of sum necessary for children's maintenance.

Held that testamentary trustees who held a fund for children, to be paid on their attaining majority, were bound to pay to the children's father out of the income the sum necessary for their maintenance and education.

Mackintosh v Wood, 1872, 10 M. 933; 44 J. 512; 9 S.L.R. 591.

(494)

Posthumous child.

A father having divested himself of his whole estate—which was entirely heritable—during his life in favour of trustees, the income to be payable to him during his life, and after his death in an annuity to his widow and the aliment and education of his children nominatim till the youngest attained majority, when the estate was to be divided among the children. A posthumous child was born four months after his death. Held the posthumous child was entitled to aliment out of the trust estate.

Spalding v Spalding's Trustees, 1874, 2 R. 237; 12 S.L.R. 169.

(495)

Allowance to be paid to father as individual.

In a petition by a father domiciled in England for himself and as administrator-in-law for his pupil children, for an order upon Scottish testamentary trustees to make an annual payment to him, either as administrator in law or as an individual, for their maintenance and education, from the income of a fund held for them by the trustees, the Court authorised the trustees to make an annual payment to the petitioner as an individual for this purpose.

Edmiston v Miller's Trustees, 1871, 9 M. 987; 43 J. 545; 8 S.L.R. 645.

(496)

—Application by father for payment of whole income—Allowance granted for outlays.

Held that the father of a pupil was not entitled, as administrator-in-law, to claim payment of the whole annual income of a fund held by trustees for behoof of the pupil, but that he was entitled to such an allowance out of it as would relieve him of the pupil's maintenance and education, the amount being a question for the discretion of the trustees in the first instance.

Stewart's Trustees v Stewart, 1871, 8 S.L.R. 367.

(497)

Right of father to repayment of his expenditure for children out of fund.

A testator directed his trustees to pay the interest of £10,000 to his daughter, Mrs. H., and on her death to "hold and apply" the interest for the maintenance and education of her children. After the daughter's death her husband maintained and educated their children for five years without making any claim upon the trustees, who accumulated the interest. In an action brought by the husband against the trustees for payment of the amount expended by him in the aliment and education of the children during the five years, the pursuer explained that he had contemplated a reduction of his father-in-law's settlement, and on this account had previously abstained from making any claim. Held that H. was entitled to be reimbursed out of the accumulated income of the children's provision for his expenditure on their account during the five years in question.

Hutcheson v Hoggan's Trustees, 1904, 6 F. 594; 41 S.L.R. 408; 11 S.L.T. 731.

(498)

Specific allowance by Court—Amount of capital uncertain.

A petition was presented by a minor and her curators praying the Court to ordain the trustees of a trust under which she was a beneficiary to pay a specific sum as an annual allowance for her maintenance and education. The trustees were willing to pay all reasonable expenses, but objected to paying a specific sum, as the amount of the capital to which she would be ultimately entitled was uncertain, as it depended upon a question of accounting whether it would amount to £2000 or £3000 or to as much as £8000.

The Court fixed an allowance of £155 per annum.

Mackie, 1872, 10 S.L.R. 49.

(499)

—Heir to dukedom.

Circumstances in which the Court allowed the trustees holding a fund for the benefit of the heir to a dukedom, aged 17, to make payment of £1000 per annum for his maintenance and education, the income of the fund amounting to £2800 per annum.

Duke of Sutherland, 1905, 13 S.L.T. 104.

(4) APPLICATIONS UNDER THE TRUSTS ACT, 1867, SEC. 7.

(500)

Fund vested in a class.

Testamentary trustees held a fund of £100,000 for behoof of the children, nati and nascituri, of the testator's four daughters per stirpes. The fund was burdened with a life rent annuity, but yielded a surplus income of £2700, which was not disposed of, and fell to capital. The share of each grandchild did not vest till majority.

The trustees presented a petition to the Court under sec. 7 of the Trusts Act, 1867, for authority to make annual payments of £500 for the maintenance, education, and upbringing of the five pupil children of one of the testator's daughters, and of the six pupil children of another, on the ground that such payments were necessary to enable the children to be educated in a manner suitable to the fortune which they would inherit. The petition was not opposed by the testator's two unmarried daughters. The Court, holding that the residue had vested in the grandchildren as a class, and that the payments were necessary for the proper education of the grandchildren, considering their circumstances, authorised the trustees to make payments of not more than £500 annually for each family for two years.

Clark's Trustees, 1895, 22 R. 706; 32 S.L.R. 511; 3 S.L.T. 35.

(501)

Implied direction to accumulate.

Testamentary trustees held the residue of a trust estate for behoof of the testator's children, who were all minors, subject to a direction to divide it among the children or the survivors, when the youngest child should reach 21 years of age. The settlement contained a declaration that the provisions to the children should not become vested interests in them until the period of division, and there was no direction as to the application of the accruing income. There was no destination over in the event of the children all dying before the date of division. A petition was presented by the trustees for authority to apply the whole of the income, or such part thereof as they should think proper, for behoof of the children, on the ground that this was necessary for their maintenance and education. Held that the petition might be granted under sec. 7 of the Trusts Act, 1867, in respect (1) that the unappropriated income formed part of the capital; and (2) that although the interest of each child was contingent, and had not vested, the children as a class had a vested interest in the sense of the statute.

Ross's Trustees, 1894, 21 R. 995; 31 S.L.R. 812; 2 S.L.T. 149.

(502)

Fund not vested—No express power to make advances.

Circumstances in which trustees under a settlement were authorised to pay to a minor beneficiary, and to her father as her guardian, for five years (till she should come of age), a specified yearly allowance from the free income (which was being accumulated) of her prospective share of the trust estate under their charge, although the settlement declared that her share should not vest in her till majority, and did not expressly confer any power upon the trustees to make advances.

Martin, 1904, 6 F. 592; 41 S.L.R. 400; 11 S.L.T. 741.

(503)

Direction to make discretionary payments of income to children only after their father's death—Application by children for payment during father's life.

A trustee directed his trustees to accumulate the income of a fund for behoof of the children of a married daughter and to pay them their share of capital and accumulated income on respectively attaining majority; and further, in the event of the father's death, but in that event only, before all or any of the children reached majority, the trustees were empowered to pay to the mother or expend at their discretion such part of the income as they might think necessary for the children's maintenance and education. In an application by the children, who were all in pupillarity, under sec. 7 of the Trusts Act, 1867, for such payments out of the accumulated income as the Court might deem sufficient, held that the petition fell to be refused, in respect that the proposed advances were expressly prohibited by the trust deed.

Thomson v Miller's Trustees, 1883, 11 R. 401; 21 S.L.R. 269.

(504)

Fund divisible among children when youngest attained a certain age—Application of whole income for behoof of children.

A testator directed his trustees to divide a certain sum among the children of his daughter when the youngest of them reached the age of 21. The income of the said sum being the only fund available for the education and maintenance of the said children, who were all in minority or pupillarity, the Lord Ordinary, under sec. 7 of the Trust (Scotland) Act, 1867, granted the trustees authority to apply the whole of the income of the sum for behoof of the children until the youngest attained the age of 21.

Hodgson's Trustees, (O.H.) 1904, 12 S.L.T. 532.

(505)

Prohibition of advances from income—Direction to accumulate.

Advances for the maintenance and education of beneficiaries out of income directed to be accumulated, and out of capital, not allowed, on the grounds (1) that such advances out of income were prohibited by the trust deed, and (2) assuming that the advances out of capital were not expressly prohibited, that they were not such as the Court in the exercise of its discretion could in the circumstances authorise.

Thomson v Miller's Trustees, 1883, 11 R. 401; 21 S.L.R. 269.

(506)

Application for sanction of advances already made.

Sec. 7 of the Trusts Act, 1867, does not give the Court power to sanction advances already made by trustees for the education and maintenance of minors.

Young's Trustees, (O.H.) 1895, 3 S.L.T. 192.

(5) APPLICATIONS TO THE NOBILIS OFFICIUM.

(507)

Application by mother for increase of allowance made by trustees.

A testator placed his whole property, yielding £55,000 a year, "under the exclusive management and direction" of his trustees until his son, an only child, should attain twenty-five years of age. The trustees were appointed tutors and curators to the son, who was eight years old at his father's death. The deed contained no direction with regard to the allowance to be made for the education and maintenance of the minor. The trustees for some time made a certain allowance, but the mother applied to the Court for its increase. Held that, in the absence of any direction by the testator, the Court had a discretionary power to fix the amount of the allowance, and an increase granted.

Baird v Baird's Trustees, 1872, 10 M. 482; 44 J. 299; 9 S.L.R. 223.

(508)

Direction to accumulate.

A testator directed that the revenue of the residue of his estate should be accumulated with the principal during the lifetime of his widow, and that the whole should be divided at her death among his children alive at that date, and the issue of predeceasing. The judicial factor on the trust estate, with consent of the other beneficiaries, applied for authority to make advances during the widow's life for the maintenance of a daughter of the trustee and her children, who were in straitened circumstances. An advance for one year only out of the income of the accumulating funds, "to be administered and applied personally by the factor" in the education and clothing of the daughter's children, granted.

Latta, 1880, 7 R. 881; 17 S.L.R. 630.

(509)

Direction to accumulate.

Circumstances in which the Court authorised advances to be made out of the income of trust funds directed to be accumulated, being of opinion that it was highly expedient, if not necessary, for the maintenance and education of the beneficiaries that such advances should be made.

Webster v Miller's Trustees, 1887, 14 R. 501; 24 S.L.R. 368.

(510)

Circumstances in which the Court allowed trustees to make advances for the education of two minors for whose benefit the trustor had directed the accumulation of an annual sum of interest from a fund liferented by their mother, and, in the event of her death, until a certain capital sum had been reached; such sum having already been reached at the date of the application.

Colquhoun, 1894, 21 R. 671; 31 S.L.R. 557; 1 S.L.T. 591.

(511)

Authority to trustees to make advances for maintenance of beneficiaries —Power to continue advances after Thellusson Act began to operate.

Trustees were directed to accumulate the income of a trust estate for the benefit of the trustor's grandchildren, but received authority from the Court to make advances for the grandchildren's maintenance and education. Held that the trustees were entitled to continue to make advances to the grandchildren after the Thellusson Act came into operation and stopped further accumulation of income.

Muir's Trustees v Jameson, (O.H.) 1903, 10 S.L.T. 701.

(512)

Vesting postponed till death of liferenter — Allowance to child who had attained majority.

A testator executed a trust settlement six years before he died, at a time when his estate was much smaller than it was at his death. He left a small annuity to his widow, and directed that the residue should vest in his children on her death or second marriage, but payments should not be made to them until they attained majority. Power was given to the trustees to make advances for the education, maintenance, or advancement in life of any of the children who might be in minority at the date of vesting. In exercise of its nobilis officium, the Court authorised the trustees to make a yearly allowance to a daughter who had attained majority and kept house for her mother and a younger sister.

Milne's Trustees, 1919, 57 S.L.R. 112.

(513)

Annuity to widow—Obligation of widow to maintain children—Power to make advances of capital to major children—Special powers.

Under a trust disposition and settlement the widow of the testator received out of the income of the estate an annuity of £300, subject to the burden of maintaining therefrom any children of the marriage remaining in family with her and unable to support themselves. With regard to the surplus income, the trustees were empowered to apply it, in whole or in part, in providing a liberal education for the children, and were directed to accumulate any surplus not so expended during the widow's lifetime and add it to residue. The residue was divisible after her death equally among the children on their attaining majority, vesting being expressly postponed until the period of payment. Power was given to the trustees to advance one-half of each child's prospective share of capital to fit them out in business or marriage or otherwise as the trustees might deem for the child's advantage. After the testator's death, and when the two children of the marriage, James and Robert, were aged respectively twenty-four and twenty-two, and still lived with their mother, the trustees presented a petition to the Court for authority to advance to each, out of surplus income, or otherwise out of capital, and so long as they should be unable to maintain themselves, a yearly allowance of £150. James was, owing to ill-health, unable to follow any occupation; Robert, as a clerk, earned a salary of £100, rising to £200 by yearly instalments of £10. The capital value of the estate exceeded £35,000, and the yearly surplus income was between £600 and £700. The Court granted the prayer of the petition in the case of James, but refused it in the case of Robert.

Robertson's Trustees, 1909 S.C. 236; 46 S.L.R. 139; 16 S.L.T. 496.

(514)

Power to make advances—Annuities ceasing on beneficiaries attaining certain age—Advances out of funds directed to be accumulated.

Under a trust disposition and settlement the residue of the testator's estate became divisible equally among his four daughters on the death of his widow and on his youngest daughter attaining the age of twenty-five years. So long as his wife should survive him and the youngest of his daughters not have attained the age of twenty-five years, the trustees were to pay certain annual allowances to each of his four daughters. After the testator's death the trustees paid the annual allowances to the daughters until the youngest attained the age of twenty-five. As the widow was then still alive, the period of division of the estate had not arrived, but, as the testator had made no provision for the allowances to his daughters being continued after the youngest reached the age of twenty-five, the trustees then ceased payment. Two of the daughters, however, were unmarried and had no other means of support. The Court, on the petition of the trustees, and in the exercise of its nobile officium, authorised the trustees to continue the advances to the unmarried daughters so long as they should, in the trustees' opinion, be unable suitably to maintain themselves, the allowances to cease on their marriage, and to be deducted from their respective shares of residue.

Sinclair's Trustees, 1921 S.C. 484; 58 S.L.R. 326; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 275.

(515)

Pupil children resident with father abroad—Payment from trust funds belonging to children.

Circumstances in which the Court, on the petition of the father, who had been appointed guardian of pupil children residing with him in New Zealand, authorised and ordained testamentary trustees holding funds belonging to the children to make payment to him of £150 per annum from the income of the funds for the maintenance and education of the children until further orders of the Court.

Seddon, 1893, 20 R. 675; 30 S.L.R. 526.

(516)

Payment to truster's son for aliment of grandchildren.

A testator left a heritable estate, the rental of which was £900 a year, settled upon his only son in life and his children in fee.

Of the income of the personal estate, which was £4600, the son received annually about £2300 as an alimentary payment for the support of himself, his wife, and children, the remaining £2300 of income being accumulated by the trustees for the children. In a petition at the son's instance, asking that the trustees should be ordained to contribute out of the free annual income for the suitable education and maintenance of the children (of whom there were seven under nineteen years of age), the Court authorised the trustees to pay a sum equal to one-half of the cost of such education in each year, including board when from home, and travelling expenses, the payment by the trustees not to exceed £500 in any one year.

Muir v Muir's Trustees, 1887, 15 R. 170; 25 S.L.R. 119.

(517)

Authority to make advances—Incidence of advances on respective shares of beneficiaries.

By his trust deed and settlement a testator bequeathed the residue of his estate equally among his grandchildren, and directed his trustees to accumulate the income until the beneficiaries respectively attained the age of twenty-five (or being grand-daughters were married), when the share of each was to be ascertained and set apart. While the beneficiaries were in minority the trustees obtained authority from the Court to make advances for their education and maintenance, and, in terms of the interlocutor, charged all the advances made to the general accumulation account. On an application for authority to make further advances, held (1) that the previous interlocutor did not decide the incidence of the advances made, and (2) that all the advances made and to be made for behoof of each grandchild should be charged to and deducted from his or her individual share.

Muir's Trustees v Muir, 1899, 37 S.L.R. 257; 7 S.L.T. 222.

(518)

Beneficiary not descendant of truster—Power to make advances of income—Capital unvested—Vested right to income.

A testatrix directed her trustees to hold the residue of her estate "for behoof of A C P . . . until she attains the age of twenty-three years complete, when they shall pay over the same to her, with all accumulations that may have accrued thereon." In the event of A C P not attaining twenty-three, the estate was to be divided among certain substitute beneficiaries. When A C P, who was not a descendant of the testatrix, was seventeen, the judicial factor on the estate presented a note craving power to pay the income of the residue to A C P, who was without other means of subsistence. The Lord Ordinary, in the exercise of the nobile officium, granted the power craved, observing that though A C P had no vested right in the capital of the residue, he was not prepared to hold that she had not a vested right in the income.

Walker, (O.H.) 1905, 13 S.L.T. 141.

6. ASSIGNATION OF INTEREST IN TRUST ESTATE.

(519)

Legacy to married woman declared non-assignable—Authority to trustees to pay husband's debt out of legacy when due.

A legacy to a niece which was declared to be alimentary and non-assignable did not vest until the death of the testator's widow. During the lifetime of the widow the legatee by letter authorised the trustees to pay a promissory note due by her husband to the testator, "now out of the legacy left me by my uncle, or when the same is payable." The trustees accordingly paid the note, and on the death of the testator's widow they deducted the amount so paid from the legacy. In an action by the legatee against the trustees, held (1) that the advance was to be regarded as made by the trustees as individuals; (2) that the legacy on vesting became the absolute property of the legatee, and that therefore her prospective interest therein was assignable; and (3) that the trustees, notwithstanding their fiduciary position, were entitled, in virtue of the authority which she had granted, to repay themselves the amount of their advance.

Rothwell v Stuart's Trustees, 1898, 1 F. 81; 36 S.L.R. 97; 6 S.L.T. 215.

(520)

Assignment of share in trust estate—Subsequent payment of share to assignor—Rights of assignee—Compensation.

A beneficiary under a trust estate, who was also a trustee, assigned his interest in the estate to the extent of £1000, and the assignation was duly intimated. Thereafter he withdrew from the trust estate sums largely in excess of his whole share therein. Held that the assignees were not affected by the actings of their cedent subsequent to the intimation of the assignation; and, accordingly, that they were entitled to rank on the trust estate for the £1000.

Macpherson's Judicial Factor v Mackay, 1915 S.C. 1011; 52 S.L.R. 778; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 110.

(521)

Duty of trustees to creditor attaching beneficiary's interest.

By her trust disposition and settlement a testatrix directed her trustees, on the death of a liferenter, to convey her whole estate to A, an American citizen, and gave them special powers of investment in American securities, desiring them to act in this matter under the advice of a New York trust company. The trust funds were invested by the trustees in American securities which were deposited with this company. In an action against the trustees by an American creditor of the fief, who had obtained a decree in the Scottish courts adjudging to her the whole interest in the fee, the pursuer maintained that the defenders were bound to invest the funds in such form as would prevent her right under the Scottish decree being defeated. The Court assailed the defenders, holding that they were under no duty to do anything for the purpose of fortifying the pursuer's position which would not have been required in the ordinary course of the administration of the trust.

Brower's Executor v Ramsay's Trustees, 1912 S.C. 1374; 49 S.L.R. 962; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 215.

(522)

Lapsed trust—Right of beneficiary to complete title in his own name—Right of assignee—Act 1867, sec. 14.

The Trusts Act, 1867, sec. 14, does not apply to the assignee of a beneficiary. Macknight, 1875, 2 R. 667.

(523)

Intimation—One only of two trustees.

Intimation of an assignation of a beneficial right under a trust was made to A, one of the two trustees. The other trustee was in bad health, but was able for business, and had not resigned. The funds were in A's hands, and he managed the whole affairs of the trust. Held that the intimation was sufficient.

Jameson v Sharp, 1887, 14 R. 643; 24 S.L.R. 453.

(524)

Cedent sole trustee—Intimation to law agent of trust.

Where the cedent of an interest under a trust is himself the sole trustee, intimation of the assignation is unnecessary.

Opinion (per Lord Justice-Clerk Macdonald and Lord Moncreiff) that intimation to the law agents of the trust is sufficient intimation to the trustees.

Browne's Trustee v Anderson, 1901, 4 F. 305; 39 S.L.R. 226; 9 S.L.T. 328.

(525)

Right to control investment—Conveyance of beneficial right.

Marriage contract trustees were authorised to invest funds in lands and to change such investments with the written consent and direction of the spouses. Held that conveyances by the husband of his interest in the trust funds did not deprive him of the power to give such consent and direction.

Duke of Devonshire v Fletcher, 1874, 1 R. 1056; 11 S.L.R. 606.

(526)

Right of assignee to inspect trust accounts.

A contingent interest in a trust was assigned by the beneficiary. Held that the assignee was entitled, on paying a reasonable fee to the trustees' law agents, to inspect the trust accounts.

Salamon v Morrison's Trustees, (O.H.) 1912, 2 S.L.T. 499.

(526a)

Action by assignee of liferentrix against trustees—Declarator as to amount of a reasonable alimentary allowance—Ancillary conclusions for payment.

A lady who was in right of an alimentary liferent of the residue of a trust estate assigned it in security of a loan. On her failure to repay, the creditor obtained a decree against her, and thereafter brought an action against the trustees and the life-rentrix concluding for declarator that £275 was a reasonable alimentary allowance and for payment of the surplus to him. The reasonableness of the amount not being disputed by the defenders, the Lord Ordinary granted the declaratory conclusion, but found it unnecessary to dispose of the other conclusions of the summons.

Craig v Pearson's Trustees, (O.H.) 1915, 2 S.L.T. 183.

VI. TERMINATION OF TRUST.

1. REVOCATION.

(1) INTER VIVOS TRUSTS—NOT MATRIMONIAL.

(527)

Trust for administration—Universal trust disposition.

A trust disposition was executed in the following terms:—"I . . . appoint" A and B "my trustees and managers of my affairs, and that absolutely, and for that purpose I assign, dispose, and make over to them . . . my whole heritable and moveable property . . . And I direct my trustees as follows:—(First) My said trustees shall take possession of my estates fore-said, as I hereby authorise them to do, for the purposes after mentioned; (Second) My said trustees will give me the free income of my estate during my lifetime, and I undertake not to interfere with them in any manner of way; (Third) At my death I direct my said trustees to dispose of my estates after making payment of the legacies after mentioned." Directions then followed as to the disposal of the truster's estate at her death and the payment of legacies, and the deed concluded with a clause recalling and cancelling all prior settlements executed by the truster. Held that the deed was to be construed as creating a trust for administration only; that it did not divest the grantor of her right to the estate conveyed, and that it was revocable.

Byres' Trustees v Gemmell, 1895, 23 R. 332; 33 S.L.R. 236; 3 S.L.T. 214.

(528)

Recorded and delivered deed.

A trust conveyance of heritage inter vivos, ex facie absolute and irrevocable, stamped, recorded in the Books of Council and Session, and extract delivered to trustee, though declared by a subsequent deed to be revocable, held a delivered and irrevocable deed.

Tennent v Tennent's Trustees, 1869, 7 M. 936; 41 J. 530; 6 S.L.R. 629.

(529)

Trust for persons named—Divestiture of grantor—Inter vivos disposition to trustees.

In 1903 Mrs. W. executed an inter vivos trust disposition by which—on the narrative that she wished to make provision for herself in the first place in the case of continued illness or incapacity, and for certain persons therein mentioned, after her death, in the second place—she conveyed to trustees the sum of £700 for behoof of herself in lifereit, and on her death for certain persons named in the deed in fee. Power was given to the trustees, at their own absolute discretion, to apply any part of the principal sum for the maintenance of the truster during her life. The deed was declared to be irrevocable. Of even date with this deed, Mrs. W. executed a testamentary settlement of the whole personal estate which should belong to her at the time of her death. The inter vivos trust disposition was delivered to the trustees, together with the sum of £700, which was invested and administered by them in terms of the trust. Held that the trust disposition was irrevocable, and effectually divested the truster of the sum conveyed.

Walker v Amey, 1906, 8 F. 376; 43 S.L.R. 242; 13 S.L.T. 657.

(530)

Divestiture of grantor—Conveyance by spouses for themselves in lifereit and children of wife in fee.

A husband and wife executed a joint trust deed, whereby they conveyed an estate to the husband in lifereit, for his lifereit use allanarly, and to A, and such others as might be assumed as trustees "in fee, heritably and irredeemably," for these purposes; second, for payment to the wife, if she should survive her husband, of the free rents during her life; third, that the trustees should, on the death of the longest liver of the spouses, sell the estate, and divide the free residue among the wife's children by her first marriage: declaring "that the whole provisions herein shall not become vested interests in the said G M, A M," &c., naming the wife's children, "until the term of payment thereof; but on the death of any of them before said term of payment the provision to any of them so dying, leaving lawful issue, shall be divided equally among his or her issue alive at the time of payment, and failing such issue, shall belong to" the surviving children or their issue equally per stirpes. The deed was immediately registered in the Register of Sasines on behalf of the husband and the trustee for the respective rights of lifereit and fee, and was immediately delivered to A, who accepted, and began at once to act under the trust. During the lifetime of the spouses A made advances to them out of the capital of the trust. Held, in an action against him at the instance of the children of the wife, that by the trust deed the spouses had divested themselves of the fee of the estate, and that therefore A was bound to account to the pursuers for the capital of the trust estate advanced by him to the trustees.

Morrison v Allan, 1886, 13 R. 1156; 23 S.L.R. 846.

(531)

Delivery to the trustees.

A trustor by trust disposition, on the narrative that he was then in solvent circumstances, and that he regarded himself as morally and legally liable to the persons therein named for the sums therein mentioned, and that he was desirous of making a suitable provision for his wife and children, disposed certain heritable subjects, and also assigned certain policies of insurance upon his own life to trustees, and bound himself to the trustees to keep the policies in force. He then directed the trustees to hold and apply the trust estate for payment of a variety of provisions to his wife and children, some of which were to come into immediate operation, and also for payment of £500 to a nephew, payment of the last-mentioned provision being directed to be made as soon as the trustees had received payment of the proceeds of the policies of insurance. The residue of the trust estate was directed to be divided, on the death of his wife, among his lawful children. It was further declared that none of the provisions should become vested interests until the period of payment. The deed contained no express power to revoke, and was delivered to the trustees, who were infeft in the heritable subjects and intimated the assignation of the policies in their favour to the insurance companies. Subsequently the trustor executed a deed revoking the provision of £500 to the nephew. Held, after the death of the trustor, that the provision in favour of the nephew was irrevocable.

Robertson v Robertson's Trustees, 1892, 19 R. 849; 29 S.L.R. 752.

(532)

Trust subject to mortis causa provisions.

A married woman inter vivos conveyed certain estate belonging to her to trustees for (1) herself in liferent, and (2) her children in fee "subject to the provisions of any mortis causa settlement" she might make. Held that the deed in so far as it was not merely administrative was purely testamentary and therefore revocable.

Lockhart v Martin, (O.H.) 1904, 12 S.L.T. 142.

(533)

Inter vivos disposition — Recorded and delivered—Power to trustees to advance capital to trustor.

By trust disposition and assignation a lady assigned and disposed certain heritage described in the deed, and the whole remainder of her estate, heritable and moveable, to trustees, first, for behoof of herself in liferent, exclusive of the jus mariti and right of administration of any husband she might marry; and second, for behoof of her two sisters and their respective heirs in fee. In the third place, she provided that, notwithstanding the above provision of liferent and fee, it should be within the power of her trustees, at any time, in their sole discretion, to advance to her the whole or such part of the capital as they might think fit. She further declared that the deed should be held as an alimentary provision for behoof of herself, and should not be affectable or attachable by her debts or deeds, or the diligence of her creditors. The deed was delivered to the trustees, who accepted office, and was thereafter recorded in the Register of Sasines. Held that the deed was not revocable by her.

Shedden v Shedden's Trustees, 1895, 23 R. 228; 33 S.L.R. 154; 3 S.L.T. 180.

(534)

Deed declared irrevocable—Immediate vesting in part of the estate.

By de presenti deed a trustor conveyed certain enumerated pieces of property to trustees for herself in liferent and after her death to certain beneficiaries. In the case of certain of the items of property vesting was postponed till her death; in the case of others there was immediate vesting. The deed was expressly declared to be irrevocable, and proceeded on the narrative that it was executed to give effect to bequests by her late husband. Held that the deed was irrevocable.

Laurence v Murray, (O.H.) 1901, 9 S.L.T. 165.

(535)

Trustor undivested—Proof of trust dependent on parole testimony of beneficiary.

A B deposited two sums of money in a bank taking the deposit receipts in the following terms:—"A B for behoof of C D." A B never parted with the deposit receipts, which were in her possession and control at her death, but after her death C D brought an action against A B's executor for delivery of the deposit receipts in which she maintained, inter alia, that A B held the money in trust for her and sought to prove it by parole evidence of statements made by A B during her lifetime. The defender was assoltized.

Drummond v Mathieson, (O.H.) 1912, 1 S.L.T. 455.

(536)

No existent beneficiary—Disposition by an unmarried man in trust for behoof of himself and his widow in liferent and children in fee—Liferents declared alimentary — Revocation by trustor while still unmarried.

A, an unmarried man, by a deed of trust, assigned to trustees stocks and shares amounting in value to over £1000, with directions to pay the income to himself during his lifetime, and after his death to his widow, should he have married, "declaring that the said provisions in favour of me and of my widow shall be for my and her respective liferent alimentary use alternately, and shall not be affectable by my or her debts, or deeds, or by the diligence of my or her creditors." With regard to the capital he directed the trustees to hold it for behoof of his lawful issue, and, in the event of there being no lawful issue who should acquire a vested right, then on the death of the survivor of himself and his wife to pay one-half to B, his brother, and the other half to C, his half-sister. The deed was not declared to be irrevocable. The trustees accepted office, and completed a title to the stocks and shares. About a year after granting the deed A, who was still unmarried, desired to revoke it. In a special case, held that the deed was revocable, A's limitation of his own interest to an alimentary liferent not having the effect of making it irrevocable, and there being no other person in existence with a right to any portion of the fund—the provisions in favour of B and C being merely testamentary.

Bertram's Trustees v Bertram, 1909 S.C. 1238; 46 S.L.R. 865; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 86.

(537)

Existent beneficiaries—Trust for trustor in liferent and issue in fee.

A lady by a delivered deed conveyed funds to trustees for behoof of herself in alimentary liferent allenerly and her children in fee. At the date of the deed she had children alive and other children were subsequently born. Held that the deed was irrevocable.

Opinion (per Lord Stormonth-Darling) that "where a man makes a de præsentis trust conveyance for behoof of himself in liferent and for the ultimate payment of the fee to persons named or in existence and delivers the deed, the presumption, I think, must be that the trustees from the first hold for the fiars as well as for the granter, and that unless and until the purposes fail the deed is irrevocable . . . the presumption may be overcome where the deed itself contains clear indications that its primary purpose was to create a trust for administration only."

Smith v Davidson, (O.H.) 1901, 8 S.L.T. 354.

(538)

Beneficiaries in existence with contingent interest—Trust for persons named and survivor and children of such as might de cease—Postponement of vesting till payment.

A trustor by delivered deed conveyed estate to trustees for payment to himself of an alimentary liferent and division of the fee amongst his children A and B, and the survivor of them, and the issue of such of them as might die. Vesting was postponed till the period of payment. One of the children had pupil children. Held that the deed was irrevocable because there were in existence beneficiaries with a contingent interest who could not consent to revocation.

Foucalt v Foucart's Trustees, (O.H.) 1896, 4 S.L.T. 211.

(539)

Trust containing contingent provisions for "wife and children"—Ascertainment of identity as at emergence of contingency—Revocation.

A prospective liferenter under a deed of entail executed a trust disposition of his prospective liferent in order to pay debts.

The trustees were directed to pay the free remaining revenue to the trustor as an alimentary allowance, but, if the trustor should become bankrupt or attempt to alienate the revenue, the trustees were directed to apply it in their discretion for the trustor's maintenance or that of his "wife and children." Terms of the trust disposition under which held that the expression "wife and children" meant the trustor's "wife and children" as at the date when the discretionary power might fall to be exercised, and, since the consent of a possible future "wife and children" was unobtainable, the trustor was not entitled to revoke the deed.

Leslie v Leslie, (O.H.) 1910, 2 S.L.T. 254.

(2) MATRIMONIAL TRUSTS.

[See MARRIAGE CONTRACT I. 3, II. 2.]

2. RIGHT OF BENEFICIARY TO DEMAND DENUDING.

[For Matrimonial Trusts, see MARRIAGE CONTRACT I. 3 and ALIMENTARY PROVISION.]

(1) IMPOSSIBILITY OF EXECUTING TRUST.

(540)

Trust unworkable—Constitution of new trust with modified purposes—Authority of Court.

A testator directed his trustees to pay an annuity to his widow and to distribute the capital of the estate, so far as consistent with securing the widow's annuity, among his daughters in half-yearly payments. From these payments he excluded the jus mariti and right of administration of his daughters' husbands, and declared them strictly alimentary. After four years it was found that the trust had become unworkable, that the moveable property was exhausted, and that though power to borrow on security of the heritage was conferred, no further distribution could be made to the daughters without borrowing in a way prejudicial to their real interests. On the joint application of the widow and the daughters, who were all of full age, the Court authorised a conveyance of the estate by the trustees to new trustees for the purposes of a trust securing the widow's annuity and providing for the distribution of the property among the daughters as an alimentary fund and exclusive of the jus mariti.

Gray v Gray's Trustees, 1877, 4 R. 378.

(541)

Directions to trustees mutually repugnant.

The trustees under a trust disposition and settlement were directed to settle the share of one of the trustor's daughters in her marriage contract in terms similar to the terms of the settlement of her two sisters, which were absolutely repugnant. Held that the direction, being impossible of execution, because self-contradictory, must be held pro non scripto, and that the daughter was entitled to payment of her share.

Murray v Matheson's Trustees, (O.H.) 1898, 6 S.L.T. 149.

(542)

Public trust to acquire and hold vacant ground—Failure of trust from want of funds.

A vacant piece of ground adjacent to a street of villas was subject to a building restriction in favour of one of the villas. A number of the proprietors of the villas met together and subscribed a sum of money for the purpose of purchasing the vacant piece of ground in order to prevent its being bought by a speculative builder. The subscribers bought the vacant piece of ground, but after some years it was found impossible, through lack of funds, to keep the ground open, and a majority of the subscribers obtained the appointment of a judicial factor, who presented a petition for power to sell the ground subject to a building restriction in favour of all the villa properties similar to that which already existed in favour of one of the villas. The proprietor of that villa objected. Held that the trust fell to be wound up, as the original trust purpose had failed; that the Court would not superimpose a second trust to vary the purposes; and therefore that the ground must be sold as it stood, and the price distributed among the contributors after payment of any trust debts.

Wood, (O.H.) 1896, 3 S.L.T. 277.

(543)

Trust to be administered for benefit of employees by partners of firm—Conversion of firm into limited company.

H, by a letter addressed to a firm of which he was a partner, directed two shares of his interest in the business to be held in trust in the books of the firm, subject to his liferent, and the annual proceeds applied "for the purpose of rewarding meritorious or long service employees of our said firm." H died, and seven years after his death the business was converted into a limited company. In an action of multipointing, the shares were claimed by (1) the testator's executor, (2) the surviving partners of the old firm, and (3) the limited company. Held that the conversion of the business into a limited company was an event which had not been provided for by the truster, and which rendered it impossible to carry on the trust, and that the shares fell into intestacy.

Hedderwick's Trustees v Hedderwick's Executor, 1910 S.C. 333; 47 S.L.R. 238; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 36.

(544)

Discretionary power to trustees to continue trust till estate cleared of debt—No reasonable prospect of debt being paid—Right of fiar to terminate trust.

A truster declared it to be his wish and intention that the trust should continue for ten years after his death, and such further period as his trustees might consider necessary and expedient for carrying out the "ultimate object" of the trust (viz., the freeing of the heritable estate from debt) "in so far as this may reasonably be attained." Thirty-five years after the truster's death the estate had not been freed from debt, and the person who, if the period for distribution had arrived, was entitled to the fee demanded that the trustees should denude in his favour. Certain annuities charged on the estate were still current, and, as the fiar was alleged to be financially embarrassed, it was suggested that, if the trustees denuded in his favour payment of the annuities might be endangered. Circumstances in which held that, as the trustees admitted that there was no prospect that the estate could be freed of debt within any time that could be specified, they were bound to denude in favour of the fiar.

Sinclair's Trustees v Sinclair, 1913 S.C. 178; 50 S.L.R. 296; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 81.

Cf. Scarlett v Lord Abinger's Trustees, 1907 S.C. 811; 44 S.L.R. 525; 14 S.L.T. 842, No. 559, infra.

Home's Trustees v Fergusson's Executrix, 1921 S.C. 474; 58 S.L.R. 367; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 283, No. 560, infra.

(545)

Trust contrary to law — Direction to accumulate for purchase of lands—Direction to entail at future date—Failure of trust for accumulation.

A testator directed his trustees to pay the rents of certain lands to his widow during her life, and on her death to accumulate the rents for the purchase of additional lands till the death of the longest liver of certain nephews and nieces, and in that event to execute an entail in favour of the heirs-male of the body of the testator's nephew L. C., and a series of heirs. The testator's widow survived him for thirty-two years, so that accumulation subsequent to her death was struck at by the Thellusson Act. Held that the failure of the trust purpose did not accelerate the date for executing the entail, as until the death of the longest liver of the nephews and nieces it could not be known who would be the institute.

Campbell's Trustees v Campbell, 1891, 18 R. 992; 28 S.L.R. 771.

(546)

Discretion to trustees to retain estate till death of all testator's grandchildren and in certain events to convey to testator's nearest lineal issue — Rutherford Act, 1848, sec. 48—Entail Amendment Act, 1868, sec. 17.

A truster, by his trust disposition, directed his trustees, "if they consider it proper, to continue to retain the trust estate under their own management until the death of all my grandchildren, and thereafter, as soon as there shall be five of my lineal descendants in existence, to bring the trust to an end by denuding of the trust estate equally in favour of my nearest lineal issue then alive." Held that such a settlement was struck at by the 48th section of the Rutherford Act and the 17th section of the Entail Amendment Act, 1868, and that the only surviving grandchild was immediately entitled to the whole estate.

Davie v Davie's Trustees, (O.H.) 1900, 8 S.L.T. 28.

(2) FAILURE OF TRUST PURPOSES OR TRUST MACHINERY.

(547)

Trust exhausted—Payment to beneficiary—Claim for payment by heir-substitute—Claim against trustees qua trustees or qua individuals.

A testatrix provided that "whatever more may remain of my means I wish to be equally divided between my two daughters (A and B) and son C, and in the event of my daughter A having no children, I would wish and will and settle should return to my other daughter's family if not spent during her lifetime, at the same time I give my daughter A full power to use it as she may require, but if not spent at her death it should return to B's family." A duly received her share of the testatrix's estate. A considerable time after A's death B's family sued and recovered from A's executors the share, without interest, which A had received. Thereafter B's family sued the testatrix's trustee for the amount of the interest at 5 per cent. on A's share from the date of her death. The Lord Ordinary dismissed the action as irrelevant, holding that A's share did not remain subject to a trust after it had been paid over to A, and that there was no duty on the testatrix's trustee to recover A's share so far as unspent on her death and pay it over to B's family, and accordingly that if the pursuers had any claim, it was a personal claim against A's executors.

Masson v Scott's Trustees, (O.H.) 1910, 2 S.L.T. 28.

(548)

Trust purposes superseded—Trust for rebuilding a bridge—Bridge rebuilt from other funds.

A testator bequeathed his estate to a town council "in trust in order that they, or their successors in office, may use the whole thereof in rebuilding" a certain bridge, "when such a thing may be required; till that time shall arrive, my bequest shall lie in proper security, annually having the interest added to it." The bridge was restored by public subscription, and the necessity for rebuilding it was postponed to an indefinite date. Held that the trust had not lapsed.

Templeton v Magistrates of Ayr, (O.H.) 1910, 2 S.L.T. 12.

(549)

Casus improvisus—Gift to two sons on younger attaining twenty-five—Survivorship clause—Younger son dying in minority—Payment to elder son while under twenty-five.

A testator directed his trustees to pay the residue of his estate to two of his sons A and B, on the younger, B, attaining the age of twenty-five. In the event of the death of either son "before the succession opens to him" without leaving issue his share was to accresce to the survivor. B died in minority at that date. A had not attained the age of twenty-five. Held that the whole of the residue vested in A at B's death and that A was entitled to payment thereof.

Mackie v Gladstone, 1876, 13 S.L.R. 368.

(550)

Reason for postponing payment disappearing.

A testator directed his trustees to make over his business and whole stock-in-trade to his son John, "subject to a legacy or debt of £2000 in favour of" his son James, "to be paid to him by his brother John at the first term of Whitsunday, twenty years after my decease (payment of the above legacy or bequest being postponed by me for such a length of time in order that my son John may not be unduly burdened in conducting the said business); and in the event of my son James dying before the said legacy of £2000 becomes payable to him, then I direct my trustees to pay and divide the same equally among his lawful children." The testator died in 1876, and his son John in 1885, leaving a widow, but no children. Held, in a question between the trustees, James, and James's children, that the legacy to James vested a morte testatoris, and that as the reasons for postponing the date of payment had disappeared, the payment might be anticipated, under discount in respect the legacy did not carry interest until the term of Whitsunday, 1896.

Finlay's Trustees v Finlay, 1886, 13 R. 1052; 23 S.L.R. 774.

(551)

Alimentary annuity—Annuitant acquiring right to fee—Whether trustees bound to denude.

A testator directed the trustees under his trust disposition and settlement to pay an alimentary annuity to his wife in the event of her surviving him. Her son, in whom the fee of the estate had vested, died, leaving a general disposition and settlement in favour of his mother, and without having received payment of any part of the residue, the whole of which the trustees had found it necessary to retain in their hands to meet the widow's annuity. Held that the trustees were bound to continue to make provision for payment of her alimentary annuity out of the residue notwithstanding her acquisition of the fee, and, therefore, that she was not entitled to require them to denude in her favour.

Howat's Trustees v Howat, 1922 S.C. 506; 59 S.L.R. 411; 1922 S.L.T. 382.

(552)

Unqualified right to fee.

By trust disposition and settlement a testator directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate for behoof of his daughter, "in liferent for her liferent alimentary use alienably," and declared that the liferent should be purely alimentary and not affectable by debts or subject to the jus mariti of any husband she might marry. In the event of her being married and leaving lawful issue he directed the residue to be made over to such issue after their mother's death, and in the event of her death without lawful issue the residue was to be made over to the trustor's heirs, executors, and assignees whomsoever. The daughter, being 58 and unmarried and being also his heir at law and sole next of kin, brought an action to have it declared that there had vested in her an absolute right to the fee of said residue. Held that although there was in her an unqualified reversionary right to the residue of the estate, the right of life interest was qualified, and that the trustees must hold the income of the residue as an alimentary provision for her benefit, and could not pay the capital over to her.

Barron v Barron's Trustees, (O.H.) 1887, 24 S.L.R. 735.

(553)

No continuing trust—Direction to purchase alimentary annuity—Right to immediate payment of capital.

A testatrix directed her trustees to set aside a certain sum, "and to purchase from the Government or any Scottish insurance company of good standing a joint annuity payable to my daughters . . . equally during their joint lives and the lives of the survivors or survivor of them, which annuities shall be for their alimentary use alienably, not subject to their debts or deeds nor liable to the diligence of their creditors and without power of anticipation." The testatrix made no provision for a continuing trust to protect the alimentary character of this annuity, but conferred upon the trustees "all requisite powers for carrying out the purposes of this settlement." Held that the daughters were entitled to immediate payment of the capital sum directed to be expended on the purchase of the annuity. Question (per Lord Skerrington), whether the constitution of a continuing trust was essential to the creation of a valid alimentary right.

Dempster's Trustees v Dempster, 1921 S.C. 332; 58 S.L.R. 297; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 180.

See also Kennedy's Trustees v Warren, 1901, 3 F. 1087; 38 S.L.R. 827; 9 S.L.T. 149. SUCCESSION, No. 1243.

(554)

Competing trusts—Power of appointment under marriage contract—Appointor's direction that fund to be administered by her testamentary trustees.

By an antenuptial contract of marriage the trustees were directed, after the death of the surviving spouse, to hold the wife's estate for behoof of the children of the marriage in such proportions, and subject to such conditions, limitations, and restrictions, as she might appoint. The wife executed a deed of appointment by which she directed the marriage contract trustees to hold certain shares of the estate for behoof of her daughter in alimentary life interest, and on her daughter's death to dispose of the capital in such manner as the latter might direct. Discretionary powers were conferred on the trustees of advancing capital to or for behoof of the daughter. Subsequently the wife made a holograph writing in the following terms:—"I hereby alter the deed of appointment . . . to this extent, that the provisions it contains in favour of my daughter are to be paid to the trustees named" in the wife's trust disposition and settlement "to be administered by them . . . as directed in the said deed of appointment." Held that the capital of the estate appointed to the daughter fell, on the death of the survivor of the spouses, to be paid over by the marriage contract trustees to the wife's testamentary trustees, and to be administered by them in terms of the deed of appointment.

Ewing's Trustees v Ewing, 1909 S.C. 409; 46 S.L.R. 316; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 104.

(555)

Funds held by trustees under an inter vivos settlement, for issue subject to power of appointment—Power exercised by will—Whether settlement or testamentary trustees to hold fund.

Where under an inter vivos settlement trustees were directed to stand possessed of trust funds for the issue of the settlor, as she should appoint, and this power of appointment was validly exercised by the settlor in her will, by which she directed the whole residue of her estate to be held by her testamentary trustees for certain purposes, held that the settlement trustees were in the circumstances bound to pay over the settlement trust funds to the testamentary trustees.

Dalziel v Dalziel's Trustees, 1905, 7 F. 545; 42 S.L.R. 404; 12 S.L.T. 793.

(556)

Power to wind up trust.

Where one of two acting trustees suddenly proceeded to America with a view to permanent residence there, leaving no address, the Court refused authority to the other trustee to grant conveyances of the trust property as sole remaining trustee, and to wind up the trust.

Waugh's Trustee, 1892, 20 R. 57; 30 S.L.R. 85.

(3) ACCELERATION OF PAYMENT.

(a) Trust for Accumulation or for Payment of Debt.

(557)

Trust for accumulation.

A testator gave his wife an annuity and directed his trustees to accumulate the balance of the revenue. The vesting of the fee was suspended until the widow's death. The widow claimed her legal rights, but this had not the effect of accelerating the vesting. Opinion (per Lord Watson) that the existence of the trust for accumulation was sufficient to bar distribution of the estate fixed by the testator.

Muirhead v Muirhead, 1890, 17 R. (H.L.) 45; 15 App.Cas. 289; 27 S.L.R. 917.

(558)

Accumulation of surplus income for residue during life of annuitant—Acceleration of payment of general legacy refused.

By the sixth purpose of his trust disposition and settlement, a testator directed his trustees upon the death of his wife to set aside out of the residue of his estate the sum of £10,000, the free interest and profits accruing annually from the said sum to be applied as a provision or endowment of a professor of natural science in the New College of Edinburgh in connection with the Free Church of Scotland. By the seventh purpose the testator directed his trustees upon the death of his wife to apply £7000 in building a territorial church, and £3000 as a partial endowment for the minister. The last purpose was in the following terms:—"After all the above purposes shall have been fulfilled, I appoint and direct my trustees to apply and pay over the whole residue and remainder of my estate, if such there shall be, to and for the use and benefit of such four of the schemes of the Free Church of Scotland, and in such proportions as to my trustees shall appear most expedient." The residue of the estate, after payment of legacies, but subject to the widow's annuity, amounted to £27,000. Held that during the widow's life the trustees were not entitled to make an immediate payment of the £10,000 to the prejudice of the four schemes of the church as residuary legatees.

Elder's Trustees v Treasurer of the Free Church of Scotland, 1881, 8 R. 593; 18 S.L.R. 392.

(559)

Trust for payment of debts—Entail to be executed when debts paid off—Offer by beneficiary to pay debts.

A peer who died in 1903 by his will, after providing certain annuities, directed his trustees to apply the surplus income of his estates in Scotland year by year towards payment of the debts secured over his Scots estates, "my intention being that my trustees shall continue to hold and administer my said landed estates in Scotland, and apply the free income thereof in or towards payment of the debts affecting the same until the whole of the said debts shall be absolutely discharged and extinguished." He further directed his trustees after all the debts had been paid to convey the Scots estates by deed of entail to "the person who shall at the time when such debt shall be finally discharged" be in right of the peerage, the destination being subject to an exclusion of Roman Catholics. In 1905 the person entitled to succeed to the Scots estates, if the entail fell to be executed at once, brought an action for declarator that on the pursuer paying off the debts on the Scots estates the trustees were bound to execute the deed of entail. Held that the trustees were bound to continue the trust until the debts secured on the Scots estates were paid off out of revenue in the ordinary course of administration.

Scarlett v Lord Abinger's Trustees, 1907 S.C. 811; 44 S.L.R. 525; 14 S.L.T. 842.

(560)

Direction to apply revenue of lands in clearing off burdens, and, on debt being extinguished, to convey lands—Offer by prospective beneficiary to pay off debt in return for immediate conveyance.

By his trust disposition and settlement a testator directed his trustees, after paying certain legacies, to accumulate the revenue of his estate of B, and from time to time to apply the same in payment of the debts secured upon the estate, and, as soon as the debts and legacies should have been satisfied, to convey the estate to the eldest son of his brother J. F. and his heirs. Thirty-nine years after the death of the testator, when only about one-third of the debts had been paid off out of surplus revenue, an offer was made on behalf of the then heir of the eldest son of the testator's brother J. F. to pay off, or to provide the trustees with money to pay off, the remaining debts, in return for a conveyance of the estate thus disburdened. Held that, as there was nothing in the settlement restricting the trustees to the surplus revenue of the estate as the only source from which the debts could be repaid, they were bound to accept the offer and grant a conveyance to the person then entitled to the estate.

Horne's Trustees v Fergusson's Executrix, 1921 S.C. 474; 58 S.L.R. 367; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 283.

See also Sinclair's Trustees v Sinclair, 1913 S.C. 178; 50 S.L.R. 296; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 81, No. 544, supra.

(b) Renunciation of Provisions.

[See also ALIMENTARY PROVISION II.]

(561)

Renunciation of annuity—Annuity declared to be alimentary.

Terms of settlement under which held that the period of division of residue fixed by the truster could not be anticipated by a discharge of alimentary annuities.

Henderson's Factor, 1874, 11 S.L.R. 507.

(562)

Trust inter vivos—Whether renunciation of reserved alimentary liferent so as to accelerate payment of fee within power of truster.

H executed an inter vivos trust disposition and assignation, which he declared to be irrevocable, whereby he conveyed to trustees a sum of £20,000 that they might pay to him during his life for his alimentary use alienably the free annual income, and hold the fee or capital for behoof of his whole lawful children born or to be born, and the issue of such of them as should predecease, in such shares as he should fix by any writing under his hand, and, failing such writing, equally per stirpes, payable to them as they attained majority. The fund was paid over to the trustees, who thereafter administered it in terms of the trust disposition and assignation. In 1879 H, being then a widower and 68 years of age, executed a deed of apportionment and division whereby he renounced his reserved liferent over £8500 of the trust funds, and directed his trustees to make an immediate division of that sum among his children. In a question between the trustees on the one hand, and the father and his children, who had all reached majority except one, who was 18 years of age, on the other, held that the deed of renunciation, apportionment, and division was within the power and competency of H, and that the same should receive effect.

Hamilton's Trustees v Hamilton, &c., 1879, 6 R. 1216; 16 S.L.R. 722.

(563)

Right to renounce liferent—Direction to trustees to invest for behoof of A and pay interest.

In his trust disposition and settlement executed in 1858 a testator who had three daughters, one married and two unmarried, directed his trustees, previous to their dividing the residue of his estate, "to set apart and invest" in their own names £1600 in two sums of £800 each "for behoof of" his two unmarried daughters, M and W, "the interest thereof to be paid to them respectively so long as they remain unmarried," declaring that in the event of either of them contracting marriage or dying, the interest on the sum "effeiring to such daughter" should be paid to the other so long as she remained unmarried. The testator further authorised his trustees to pay to each daughter on her marriage a sum not exceeding £200 "out of the said sum of £1600" for outfit, and then directed his trustees after payment of his debts, and "after investing the said sum of £1600," to make over the residue of his estate to his three daughters, share and share alike, "but deducting from the shares of my said children . . . any sum . . . that may have been paid by my said trustees to any of my said daughters for outfit in the event of the marriage of either of them." In the event of any of the children dying before the period of division, her share was to accrue to the survivors. The testator was survived by his three daughters. Held (1) that the provision in the residuary clause that the sums paid by the trustees for marriage outfit from the £1600 should be deducted from M and W's shares of residue showed the testator's intention that the fee of the £1600 should form part of the residue, and that it fell to be disposed of accordingly, and (2) that the unmarried daughters were entitled to renounce their liferents of the £1600, and to obtain immediate payment of their shares of the capital thereof as residue.

Whitehead's Trustees v Whitehead; 1897, 24 R. 1032; 34 S.L.R. 782; 5 S.L.T. 74.

(564)

Heritage held for a beneficiary in liferent with power of disposal — Liferent not declared alimentary—Sale of interest by beneficiary.

A trustee held certain heritable property for behoof of a lady under directions "to apply the same to the sole and separate use of (the lady) during the natural term of her life, jus mariti being excluded, and the said trustee shall pay over and apply or dispose and assign the said property to such persons as the said (lady) shall by any deed from time to time appoint." Then followed a substitution of other persons. The lady sold her interest in the property. Held that the lady being sole beneficiary and her interest not being restricted to an alimentary liferent, she was entitled, on executing an irrevocable deed of appointment, to a decree ordaining the trustee to execute a disposition to the purchaser.

Steward v Vanner, (O.H.) 1894, 1 S.L.T. 549.

(565)

Exercise of power of appointment given to liferentrix—Uncertainty as to value of trust fund at termination of liferent.

The liferentrix of a marriage contract trust fund who had a power of apportionment of the fee apportioned it to the extent of £800. The liferentrix and all the fiars except one, who had disappeared, consented to the £800 being immediately paid over. Held that the marriage contract trustees were not entitled to make immediate payment, because the trust fund was of uncertain amount, liable to be increased or diminished according as the investments of the trustees increased or diminished, and accordingly, if immediate payment were made, the other fiars might be prejudiced.

Robertson v Robertson's Trustees, (O.H.) 1900, 8 S.L.T. 50.

(566)

Renunciation of liferent — Execution of power of appointment.

A judicial factor held a marriage contract estate for the widow in liferent, and the only child of the marriage in fee. The child had an indefeasible right of fee. The judicial factor, with concurrence of the liferentrix, presented a petition for authority to denude in favour of the fiar on the liferentrix renouncing her liferent and executing an appointment of the capital to the fiar.

Mackie's Judicial Factor, (O.H.) 1920, 2 S.L.T. 95.

(567)

Widow repudiating testamentary provisions—Residue—Postponement of payment.

A trust settlement directed the trustees to give the truster's widow the liferent of his furniture and an annuity of £70, and further bore, "upon the death of my spouse, and the youngest of my children having attained majority or the whole of them being married, I direct my trustees" to "divide" the residue of the heritable and moveable estates among the trustor's children, the shares of daughters to be held by the trustees for behoof of them in liferent, and of their children in fee. The trustor was survived by his widow, and by six daughters, all of whom were married. The widow renounced her provisions, and claimed terce and jus relictæ. The terce amounted to £160 per annum. Held that, as it appeared from the deed that the trustor had postponed the period of division to the date of the widow's death, for no other purpose than to give effect to the provisions in her favour, which had now lapsed, the period had arrived for dividing the residue, and that the subsistence of the legal burden of terce was no impediment to the division.

Alexander's Trustees, 1870, 8 M. 414; 42 J. 193; 7 S.L.R. 240.

(568)

Residue—Conveyance to residuary legatees subject to burdens.

A testator directed his trustees, in the event of his leaving no issue, to pay to his widow a free yearly annuity of £200, and give her the liferent use of a house, "and whatever further interest and annual income my said estates shall yield . . . shall be accumulated during the lifetime of my said wife by my said trustees, and form part of my estates." The estate yielded a clear return of more than £300 a year, after paying the widow's annuity, which, in the event, which happened, of the trustor leaving no issue, was the only provision to be paid or provided for during her life. On her death the trustees were to pay to the children of J M "surviving at said period" the sum of £100 each, and an annuity of £100 a year to the brother of the trustor's widow, "provided he return to this country and reside here, and provided my said trustees consider that he requires the same." The residue was to form a fund to be vested in certain persons ex officio for the establishment of a charitable foundation, to be styled after the trustor, "The Lucas Trust." Held, on the widow's repudiation of the settlement, that the trustees and patrons of "The Lucas Trust" were entitled to an immediate conveyance of the residue, subject to existing and contingent interests.

Lucas's Trustees v "The Lucas Trust," 1881, 8 R. 502; 18 S.L.R. 363.

(569)

Right to surrender policy of insurance held in trust for married woman — Married Women's Policies of Assurance Act, 1880, sec. 2.

A policy effected by a married man upon his own life for behoof of his wife under the 2nd section of the Married Women's Policies of Assurance Act, 1880, may be surrendered at any time by the trustee who holds it, with concurrence of the wife.

Opinion (per Lord Shand) that it may be surrendered without the concurrence of the wife, unless the insurance company have notice of any intended breach of trust.

Schumann v Scottish Widows' Fund Society, 1886, 13 R. 678; 23 S.L.R. 474.

(c) Security for Payment of Provisions.

(570)

Payment under burden of debts and provisions.

A testator left his whole estate in trust for payment of his debts, the expenses of the trust, an annuity to his widow, and certain provisions to his younger children. On payment of the debts and provisions, the trustees were directed to convey the residue to the testator's eldest surviving son, but not until he should have attained the age of twenty-five. The eldest son having attained the age of twenty-five, held that the trustees were not entitled to convey the residue to him on condition that he bound himself to satisfy the whole debts, obligations, and liabilities affecting the trust estate.

Colt v Colt's Trustees, 1868, 5 S.L.R. 660.

(571)

Demand for payment by one of several flars — Consent of liferenter.

A testator conveyed his heritable and moveable estates to trustees for payment of certain legacies and annuities, and for payment of the liferent of the remainder to his widow. He further directed his trustees, after the death of the longest liver of himself and his wife, to pay a provision of £18,000 to his son, and a provision of £8000 to each of his four daughters, and to hold the residue of his estate for behoof of his son. He declared that the children's provisions should vest at his decease. The testator was survived by his widow and by his five children. The son applied to the trustees for payment of his provision of £18,000. The widow consented to the application, and offered to discharge her liferent in regard to that sum. The funds in the hands of the trustees at the date of the application were amply sufficient to meet all the children's provisions. Held that the trustees were not bound to accede to the son's demand, in respect that the daughters were entitled to pari passu payment of their provisions along with the son, and that it was possible that when the date of payment arrived the estate might be insufficient to pay the provisions in full.

Haldane's Trustees v Haldane, 1895, 23 R. 276; 33 S.L.R. 206; 3 S.L.T. 199.

(572)

Direction to distribute on expiry of lease.

A testator directed that his trustees should, on the expiry of a lease of a mill in his favour, "in or about the year 1892, as I think, . . . but not sooner, pay and convey" the residue of his estate to certain beneficiaries, whose right to the residue vested a morte testatoris. Held that the trustees were entitled before the expiry of the lease to pay over the available residue to the beneficiaries, reserving only so much as was necessary to carry on the administration of the trust, and to protect themselves from personal liability.

Archibald's Trustees v Archibald, 1882, 9 R. 942; 19 S.L.R. 709.

(573)
Gift of one-third part of annual income—Right of fiars to payment of capital during subsistence of liferent.

Testamentary trustees were directed to "pay one-third part of the annual income or produce of the residue" of the estate to the testator's widow during her life, and to "hold" the residue "subject always to the foresaid liferent" for behoof of the children. There was a further direction that the sons' shares should be paid to them on attaining majority. Held that the trustees, on making provision for payment to the widow of the income of a third of the revenue, might during her life pay the capital to the beneficiaries.

Robertson's Trustees v Black, 1910 S.C. 1132; 47 S.L.R. 839; 1910, 2 S.L.R. 149.

(574)
Payment under burden of annuity—Sums set aside to meet legacies.

A proprietor of an entailed estate, after making provisions of specific amount to his younger children, payable at majority or marriage, directed his trustees, after the purposes of the trust "have been fully satisfied by the succession to the lands of P . . . opening to them," to convey the residue to his eldest son under burden of an annuity to his mother. P . . . was a property to which the testator had succeeded, subject to a liferent, and formed a very large portion of the estate at his own disposal. The liferenter predeceased the testator. Sums having been set aside to satisfy the provisions of certain of the younger children, of which the term of payment had not arrived, the eldest son called on the trustees to convey the residue to him. Held that, irrespective of the question whether the younger children's portion had vested or not, he was entitled to a conveyance.

Scott v Scott's Trustees, 1876, 4 R. 229; 14 S.L.R. 272.

(575)
Annuity to widow—Payment of surplus over sum required to secure annuity.

A testator directed his trustees to pay an annuity of £4000 a year to his widow, "this is to be a first charge on my estate; Third, the balance of the income of my estate to be divided equally among my children; Fourth, on the death of my wife, my estate to be equally divided among my four children; Fifth, in the event of the death of any of my children (being married) without leaving any family, the widow or widower to be liferented in their portion." The testator was survived by his wife and children. He left moveable estate valued at £469,900, and the sum required to secure the widow's annuity was £150,000. Held that the capital having vested in the children a morte testatoris, the trustees were bound forthwith to distribute the capital among the children, except in so far as it was necessary to retain capital to secure the widow's annuity.

Coats' Trustees v Coats, 1903, 5 F. 401; 40 S.L.R. 330; 10 S.L.T. 585.

(576)
Trust for payment of annuity—Annuity heritably secured.

Where under a testamentary trust only one special interest remains to be provided for, and that is of a partial kind, and can be provided for as effectually in some other way, the Court will liberate the estate from the trust.

A trustor conveyed certain lands to testamentary trustees for payment of various provisions, directing them after satisfaction thereof to convey the lands to a certain series of heirs named in a deed of entail also executed by him. All the purposes of the trust having been satisfied, except payment of a small annuity out of the rents, and certain other provisions all in favour of one beneficiary, held that the judicial factor on the trust estate was entitled to convey it to the heir of entail then in right of the succession, the annuity and other provisions in question being made real burdens upon the estate, and being declared in the disposition and deed of entail executed by the judicial factor at the sight of the Court to be still payable and prestable by him, and authority of the Court accordingly interposed to the said disposition and deed of entail.

Munro v Macarthur, 1878, 16 S.L.R. 126.

(577)
Security for annuity—Agreement between annuitant and beneficiaries.

A trustor directed his trustees to invest his means, and "from the free annual proceeds thereof" to pay a certain annuity; further, upon the death of the annuitant, to "divide my whole means and estate into seven shares," to be paid to certain named beneficiaries. There was a substitution in the event of any of the beneficiaries predeceasing the testator. The annuity did not exhaust the income. Held that as the estate vested a morte testatoris, the sanction of the Court might be given to an arrangement between the beneficiaries and the annuitant under which the estate was to be divided, on satisfactory security being given to the annuitant.

Mackay's Trustees, 1878, 16 S.L.R. 197.

(578)
Purchase of annuity out of capital—Alimentary annuity.

Where trustees administering a trust estate of upwards of £3000 were directed in the first place to apply a sum of £50 per annum for the alimentary maintenance of the trustor's son, the capital of the trust estate being divisible among other beneficiaries on the son's death, held that the trustees were not entitled to purchase an annuity out of the capital without the consent of all the beneficiaries in right of the capital.

Parlane's Trustees v Parlane, 1902, 4 F. 805; 39 S.L.R. 632; 10 S.L.T. 48.

(579)

By antenuptial contract of marriage executed on the occasion of his second marriage, A obliged himself to pay to his intended wife, in the event of her surviving him, a free alimentary annuity. A predeceased his wife, leaving a trust disposition and settlement, by which he conveyed his whole estates to trustees for, inter alia, "implement of the provisions contained in the marriage contract," and directing his trustees to hold the residue of his estate for behoof of six of his children by his first marriage equally. Five of the children to whom the fee of the residue was destined, with consent of the widow, who was forty-six years of age, with the view of terminating the testamentary trust, called on the testamentary trustees to apply so much of the capital of the residue as was necessary in the purchase of a Government annuity, payable to the marriage contract trustees for behoof of the widow as an alimentary annuity. The sixth child had gone abroad, and his address was unknown, but there was no presumption that he was dead. A factor loco absentis who had been appointed to him objected to the proposed application of capital. In a special case, held (1) that the testamentary trustees would sufficiently implement the obligation undertaken by A in his antenuptial marriage contract by purchasing a Government annuity in the terms proposed, and that the marriage contract trustees would be in safety to accept such an annuity; but (2) that the testamentary trustees were not entitled to apply the capital of the residue in such a purchase except with the consent of all the beneficiaries in right of the capital proposed to be so applied, such an application of capital not being an ordinary act of trust administration.

Graham's Trustees v Graham's Trustees, 1898, 1 F. 357; 36 S.L.R. 273; 6 S.L.T. 257.

(580)

A testator directed his trustees or their successors to hold £4000 for behoof of his son D in liferent allenarly, and of his issue in fee, whom failing, to pay the same to the testator's other sons, with power to the trustees, if they thought it prudent, to pay the whole or any part of the principal to D. In a petition at the instance of a judicial factor, appointed on the resignation of the trustees, of the liferenter (then fifty-two years of age and unmarried), and of all others then in existence who were interested in the fund, for the appointment of a new judicial factor, with special powers, to apply a fourth part of the fund in purchasing an annuity for behoof of the liferenter, the Court granted the special powers craved.

Simson, 1883, 10 R. 540; 20 S.L.R. 359.

[For conditions defeasible at will of legatee, see SUCCESSION XVII.]

(4) PRESUMPTION AGAINST CHILD-BEARING.

[See also PRESUMPTION I.]

(581)

Offer to renounce liferent — Liferent not declared alimentary.

Testamentary trustees held a fund in trust for one of the testator's nieces in liferent allenarly, and her children as they respectively attained majority in fee. The liferent was not declared to be alimentary. In 1902, when the niece was fifty-seven years of age, and all her existing children had attained majority, a special case was presented for determination of the question whether the trustees were entitled, on the joint request of the niece and the children, to pay over the capital of the fund to the children. The trustees maintained that they were not in safety to do so, in respect of the possibility of the niece having other children. At the date of the special case the niece was a widow, her husband having died in 1898, nineteen years after the birth of the youngest child. It was admitted that the fee had vested in the children, subject to partial defeasance in the event of other children being born and attaining majority. The children offered to purchase an annuity for their mother, and she and they offered to discharge the trustees, and to obtain and deliver to the trustees a paid-up policy of insurance, providing for the payment of such sum as might be necessary in the event of other children being born. Held that the trustees were entitled, on the completion of the proposed arrangements, to pay over the fund to the children.

M'Pherson's Trustees v Hill, 1902, 4 F. 921; 39 S.L.R. 657; 10 S.L.T. 143.

(582)

Application to nobile officium — Competency — Application at instance of beneficiary.

By his trust disposition and settlement a testator directed, with regard to a legacy of £13,500, that it should be paid to certain persons as trustees, to be held by them in trust for behoof of his daughter in liferent and of her children in fee, on such conditions as she might appoint by any writing under her hand, which failing, equally among them; and, failing children, for such person or persons as the daughter might appoint. The testator died in 1896, and, in 1922, the daughter, being then fifty-nine years of age and unmarried, appointed the legacy to herself absolutely, and directed that it should be paid over to herself. Thereafter she presented a petition to the nobile officium of the Court, setting forth these facts, and craving the Court to authorise payment of the trust funds to her. She also averred that the restriction of her interest to a liferent was applicable only in the event, which had become impossible, of a child being born to her, and that payment of the funds to her would not affect the interest of any living person except herself. The Court refused the petition, holding that the petitioner's proper remedy was not by an application to the nobile officium, but by a direct action against the trustees for payment.

Snodgrass, 1922 S.C. 491; 59 S.L.R. 394; 1922 S.L.T. 339.

(583)

Gift of fee subject to defeasance on birth of children.

A trustee conveyed his estate to trustees for payment of the annual income to his daughter, to be under her exclusive control and at her sole disposal, and also directed that they should hold the estate for the benefit of her lawful children if she was married, and if she died unmarried or without lawful children, that they should convey and make over the estate to his nearest lawful heir whomsoever. The daughter, who was her father's heir, and was also unmarried and fifty-five years of age, raised an action of declarator of her right to the fee. Held that the fee had vested in the daughter both under the special destination and as her father's nearest lawful heir, and that the trustees were bound to convey the estate to her on condition that she entered into an obligation to reconstitute the trust if she married and had a child.

Williamson v Williamson's Trustees, (O.H.) 1881, 19 S.L.R. 276.

3. EXONERATION OF TRUSTEES.

(584)

Action of multipointing and exoneration—Double distress—Competency.

Connell's Trustee v Chalk, 1878, 5 R. 735; 15 S.L.R. 413, No. 638, infra.

Mackenzie's Trustees v Sutherland, 1895, 22 R. 233; 32 S.L.R. 172; 2 S.L.T. 422, No. 639, infra.

(585)

Double distress—Claim by creditor and claim by beneficiary—Competency.

Glen's Trustees v Miller, 1911 S.C. 1178; 48 S.L.R. 931; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 178, No. 640, infra.

(586)

Petition for discharge—Trustees resigning obtaining discharge from co-trustees but not from beneficiaries—Act 1867, sec. 9.

Two trustees resigned from a trust. They were able to obtain a discharge from the other trustees, but not from the beneficiaries, so they presented a petition under sec. 9 of the Trusts Act, 1867, to obtain a discharge from the Court. The Lord Ordinary dismissed the petition, holding that under the statute the Court could only intervene when it was impossible for the resigning trustee to obtain a valid discharge either from the remaining trustees or from the beneficiaries.

Matthew's Trustees, (O.H.) 1894, 2 S.L.T. 122.

(587)

Judicial audit.

Testamentary trustees were directed by the testator to apply the residue of the trust estate in the establishment and maintenance of a charitable institution, and to apply to the Court annually for a remit to an accountant, whose report upon their intromissions, when approved by the Court, should be to them a sufficient exoneration and discharge. Held (by a majority of seven judges) that the Court could not competently entertain an application by the trustees for an audit of their accounts in terms of the foregoing direction in the trust deed.

Dundas, 1869, 7 M. 670; 41 J. 343; 6 S.L.R. 435.

(588)

Discharge—Disposition of heritage to legatees—Right of trustees to general discharge of intromissions.

Two heritable properties formed practically the whole assets of a trust estate, and the rents of the properties were subject to the general purposes of the trust. Under the trust deed the trustees were directed to make over the properties to two legatees on the occurrence of a certain event. Held that on making over the properties to the legatees, the other trust purposes having been fulfilled, the trustees were entitled to obtain from the legatees a general discharge of their intromissions.

Davidson's Trustee v Cooper, (O.H.) 1895, 3 S.L.T. 28.

(589)

Objection to trust accounts—Mora.

Challenge of trust accounts, brought forty years after their date, when interest to challenge first emerged, held not barred by mora, or by an award by an accountant given effect to in an action between another party and the trustee.

Aitken v Hunter, 1871, 9 M. 756; 43 J. 413; 8 S.L.R. 510.

(590)

Transaction between trustees and beneficiaries—Mora.

Buckner v Jopp's Trustees, 1887, 14 R. 1006; 24 S.L.R. 680, No. 412, supra.

(591)

Trustees continuing to act though functi officio.

In an action of multipointing and exoneration raised by testamentary trustees the Court found one of the claimants entitled to certain lands. During the dependence of a reclaiming note against this decree the trustees granted a lease of part of the lands, and refused to convey the estate to the claimant until they received exoneration. Held that the trustees were entitled to exoneration up to the date of raising the action, but that they were bound to denude in favour of the heir without receiving exoneration for subsequent actings.

Barnet's Trustees v Barnet, 1872, 10 M. 730; 44 J. 414; 9 S.L.R. 462.

(592)

Expenses of obtaining exoneration.

In an action by a sole trustee for his discharge in which defences were lodged, held that the pursuer, who was successful in the action, was entitled to expenses taxed as between agent and client.

Davidson's Trustee v Simmons, 1896, 23 R. 1117; 33 S.L.R. 748; 4 S.L.T. 80.

VII. ACTIONS RELATING TO TRUSTS.

1. JURISDICTION.

(1) INTERNATIONAL LAW.

(593)

Trustee resident in England.

Held (per Lord M'Laren, Ordinary) that a trustee under a Scottish trust who was domiciled in England, and was cited edictally, was subject to the jurisdiction of the Court of Session in an action of accounting for the trust funds, to which all the trustees were called as defenders.

Kennedy v Kennedy, 1884, 12 R. 275; 21 S.L.R. 274.

(594)

—A person carrying on business in Scotland granted a trust deed for behoof of his creditors to two trustees, one of whom resided in Scotland and the other in England. In an action of accounting raised in Scotland against both trustees, the trustee residing in England pleaded no jurisdiction. The Court repelled the plea, on the ground that the trust estate was in Scotland.

Robertson's Trustee v Nicholson, 1888, 15 R. 914; 25 S.L.R. 652.

(595)

—Held that a domiciled Englishman resident in England, who is a trustee administering a Scots trust which includes Scots heritable estate, is subject to the jurisdiction of the Scots courts in all actions relating to the trust and the trust estate, and therefore in an action in which the Court had to determine whether the trust still subsisted or had been brought to an end.

Lord Ashburton v Escombe, 1892, 20 R. 187; 30 S.L.R. 194.

(596)

Jurisdiction of sheriff court.

The proprietor of a feu in the county of Lanark raised an action of damages in the sheriff court of that county against his superiors, two trustees, of whom one resided in the county and the other was domiciled in and resided in England. The ground of action was that the defenders had leased the minerals within the pursuer's feu to a tenant who had worked them. The defenders pleaded that the sheriff had no jurisdiction. Held that it was competent for the sheriff to entertain the action, as it involved a claim which arose directly out of the administration and management of an estate within his jurisdiction.

Thomson v Wilson's Trustees, 1895, 22 R. 866; 32 S.L.R. 653; 3 S.L.T. 77.

(597)

All trustees resident furth of Scotland—Allegation in defence that trust estate distributed.

In an action by a legatee against two trustees who had taken out confirmation in Scotland under a Scottish trust deed, the trustees pleaded no jurisdiction in respect that they were not resident in Scotland, and that the whole estate had been distributed twelve years before. The Lord Ordinary (Kyllachy) repelled the plea, holding that the jurisdiction once constituted against them by their obtaining confirmation, and acting as trustees under a Scottish trust, remained unaffected.

M'Gennis v Rooney, 1891, 18 R. 817.

(598)

English heritage—Jurisdiction of English court to determine right of administration of English heritage belonging to a Scotsman.

A testator, domiciled in Scotland, conveyed to trustees his whole estate, consisting in part of English heritage, and gave them powers of sale. He declared that he desired his affairs to be administered and wound up as far as practicable in accordance with the law and practice of Scotland. He left, among other legacies, three legacies to a nephew who was his heir, and directed that the residue of his estate should be divided among charities. By the English Statute of Mortmain charities cannot take heritage or the proceeds of heritage under a mortis causa deed. The trustees raised an action in the Scots courts, with a conclusion, inter alia, for declarator that they were entitled to call upon the heir, as a condition of taking the English heritage, to bear a rateable proportion, corresponding to the value of the real estate, of the whole debts, legacies, and bequests made by the testator, with a view of dividing, under their own administration in Scotland, the whole estate, so as to carry out, as fully as possible, all the trust purposes. The heir thereupon took proceedings in the English court for the purpose of ascertaining his rights to the English estate and for obtaining administration of the testator's real and personal estates, but only in so far as it might be necessary or proper for the purpose of obtaining for himself the English real estate free of all liabilities. The Scots court sisted procedure in the declarator, to await the decision of the English court as to the right to administer the English heritage.

Hewit's Trustees v Lawson, 1891, 18 R. 793; 28 S.L.R. 528.

(599)

Conflict between courts of Scotland and England—Trust funds partly in Scotland partly in England—Order of English court on Scottish executors confirmed in Scotland—Confirmation and Probate Act, 1858, sec. 12—Treaty of Union, 1706, article 19.

Orr Ewing's Trustees v Orr Ewing, 1885, 13 R. (H.L.) 1; 10 App.Cas. 453; 22 S.L.R. 911. JURISDICTION, No. 61.

(600)

Appointment of judicial factor.

A judicial factor appointed on a trust estate on the ground that the estate might be removed forth of the jurisdiction of the Scots courts.

Orr Ewing's Trustees v Orr Ewing, 1885, 13 R. (H.L.) 1; 10 App.Cas. 453; 22 S.L.R. 911.

Bowman v Russell's Trustees, 1891, 19 R. 205; 29 S.L.R. 175.

(601)

Forum non conveniens.

The child of a deceased person raised an action concluding (1) for declarator of legitimacy; (2) for payment of legitim out of his estate; and (3) for payment of aliment in the event of decree not being obtained under the first two conclusions. The action was directed against the trustee of the deceased under his deed of settlement, his widow, and his sister, the two latter of whom were interested in respect of their pecuniary rights and interests in the estate of the deceased. All the defenders were in England, but the pursuer alleged that she had used arrestments to found jurisdiction against the trustee. Opinions (per Lord Shand and Lord Adam) that in the absence of the widow and sister, who were the real parties interested in the action as defenders, the Court of Session was forum non conveniens to try the question with the trustee, who was only interested as a holder of funds.

Morley v Jackson, 1888, 16 R. 78; 26 S.L.R. 52.

(602)

English trust — Trustees holding heritage in Scotland — Breach of trust — Action of accounting.

The trustees of a domiciled Englishman acting under his will, which was made in the English form, lent a sum of money out of the trust estate to one of their number who became bankrupt. The trustees had bought heritable property in Scotland for the residence of the testator's children, one of whom resided in Scotland. In an action of accounting brought against the trustees the Lord Ordinary repelled a plea for the defenders of forum non conveniens.

Mackay v Mackay, (O.H.) 1897, 4 S.L.T. 337.

(2) SCOTTISH COURTS.

(603)

Jurisdiction of Inner House — Application alternatively under Trusts Acts and nobile officium.

A petition by beneficiaries under a trust deed for advances out of the trust funds rested alternatively upon the nobile officium of the Court and the provisions of the Trusts Act, 1867, is competently presented in the Inner House.

Webster v Miller's Trustees, 1887, 14 R. 501; 24 S.L.R. 368.

(604)

Petition for power to sell heritage and for special powers—Act 1867, sec. 16—Nobile officium.

A benevolent society presented a petition to the Inner House for authority to sell a heritable property on certain terms, and for authority to apply to the general purposes of the society a fund bequeathed to it for a special purpose for which it would no longer be required if the terms of the sale were carried through. Quoad the crave for authority to sell, the petition was founded on the Trusts (Scotland) Act, 1867, which enacts that petitions under the Act shall be brought before a Lord Ordinary; quoad the other crave the application was to the nobile officium of the Court. Held that the whole petition might competently proceed before the Inner House, in respect that it was not reasonably convenient, in view of the close connection between the subject-matter of the two craves, that there should be separate petitions, one to the Outer and the other to the Inner House.

Prime Gilt Box Society, 1920 S.C. 534; 57 S.L.R. 463; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 2.

(605)

Petition for power to purchase heritage and to borrow on security of the trust estate — Competency — Act 1867, sec. 16— Nobile officium.

Testamentary trustees presented a petition in the Inner House for power (1) to purchase heritage, and (2) to borrow money on the heritage when purchased, to meet part of the purchase price. The former crave was an appeal to the nobile officium of the Court; the latter was a crave which, under sec. 16 of the Trusts (Scotland) Act, 1867, fell to be brought in the first instance before a Lord Ordinary. The Court allowed both craves of the petition to proceed before the Inner House.

Anderson's Trustees, 1921 S.C. 315; 58 S.L.R. 245; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 186.

(606)

Power to English trustees to charge heritage in Scotland—Nobile officium.

Held that a petition by trustees acting under an English will to charge heritage in Scotland belonging to the trust with the amount of estate and succession duties paid by them in respect thereof was properly presented to the Inner House, as being an appeal to the nobile officium.

Harris' Trustees v Harris, 1904, 6 F. 470; 41 S.L.R. 357; 11 S.L.T. 726.

(607)

Jurisdiction of Lord Ordinary—Petition for removal of trustee on ground of mental incapacity—Act 1891, sec. 8.

Held that a petition for the removal of a trustee under a marriage contract on the ground of mental incapacity, brought under sec. 8 of the Trusts (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1891, was competently brought before a Lord Ordinary.

Johnston v Johnston, 1900, 2 F. 467; 37 S.L.R. 344; 7 S.L.T. 343.

Reid, (O.H.) 1897, 5 S.L.T. 124.

2. TITLE TO SUE AND DEFEND, AND LIABILITY TO BE SUED.

(608)

Nomination as trustees — Declarator of validity of trust.

A holograph testamentary writing contained bequests of certain heritable subjects and a nomination of trustees in these terms: "My wish is that Peter Robb be one trustee and Alexander Smith be the other." Held that the trustees named had a title to sue an action of declarator for the purpose of establishing the validity of the trust and completing their own title to the subjects.

Robb's Trustees v Robb, 1872, 10 M. 692; 44 J. 383; 9 S.L.R. 454.

(609)

Title of nominated trustees to apply for an order for opening sealed letter alleged to contain trust directions.

Edmond v Lord Provost of Aberdeen, 1898, 1 F. 154; 35 S.L.R. 193; 5 S.L.T. 230, No. 52, supra.

(610)

Validity of title to sue based on order of Court of Chancery.

Owing to informality in the deed of assumption, the title of existing trustees was invalid. The trust estate was situated in England and Ireland as well as in Scotland, and on the application of the trustees an order was made by the Court of Chancery in England, with a view to cure the defect. The trustees came to sue in Scotland, as superiors of certain lands, for reduction of a decree of forfeiture of superiority pronounced in 1849 and decree for the recovery of casualties of non-entry. Held that, as the trust was as much an English as a Scottish trust, the title conferred on them by the Court of Chancery must be recognised as valid, at least until set aside in a competent process.

Rossmore's Trustees v Brownlie, 1877, 5 R. 201; 15 S.L.R. 129.

(611)

Action by one of two trustees—Refusal of co-trustee to concur—Co-trustee called as defender.

One of two co-trustees was also a beneficiary under the trust deed. He brought an action, suing as trustee only, against an alleged debtor. All the other beneficiaries requested the trustees to abstain from suing the alleged debtor, and the other trustee refused to concur in the action and was called as defender for his interest as trustee. Held that the pursuer had no title to sue, and action dismissed.

Campbell's Trustee v Campbell, (O.H.) 1894, 1 S.L.T. 563.

(612)

Action by one trustee without concurrence of remaining trustees—Judicial factor.

Where one of three trustees sued another for payment of a sum alleged to be due by him to the trust estate, without concurrence of the remaining trustee, a judicial factor was appointed and conjoined as pursuer.

Morison v Gowans, 1873, 1 R. 116; 11 S.L.R. 27.

(613)

Option in a contract of copartnery to trustees of a deceased partner to become partners in his stead—Title of one of several trustees to enforce the right.

The trustees of a deceased partner of a trading company had power to carry on his interest in it after his death. By a majority, consisting of A and B, they resolved to give notice to the company that they elected, in terms of the contract of copartnery, to take up the deceased's share in the partnership, C, the third trustee, declining to vote. The company disputed the right of the trustees to become partners. A and C subsequently, after inquiry, arrived at the opinion that it was not for the benefit of the trust to become a partner of the company. A then resigned office, and B, against the wish of C, raised an action in her own name against the company for declarator that the trustees by the notice given had, according to the terms of the deed of copartnery, made the trust a partner. Held that B had no title to sue.

Neilson v Mossend Iron Co., 1885, 12 R. 499; 22 S.L.R. 265.

Judgment reversed on another point, 1886, 13 R. (H.L.) 50; 11 App.Cas. 298; 23 S.L.R. 867.

(614)

Reduction—Action by single trustee under prior deed—Beneficial interest.

In an action brought for reduction of a trust disposition and settlement on the ground that the granter was at the date of execution of unsound mind, the pursuer set forth as his title to sue that he was one of three trustees nominated and appointed in and a beneficiary under a prior trust disposition and settlement executed by the granter. The pursuer did not call as defenders the two other trustees under the earlier deed. Held that the pursuer had a title to sue as a beneficiary under what he alleged to be the only valid settlement of the testator.

Question, whether he had a title to sue as a trustee.

Duncan v Duncan, 1892, 20 R. 200; 30 S.L.R. 167.

(615)

Action for arrears of trust funds—University—Concurrence of true beneficiaries.

Funds having been bequeathed to be invested and the proceeds applied towards the maintenance of two professors in a university, the university with the concurrence of the two professors interested raised an action of declarator and accounting against the trustees. Held this was a good title to sue for arrears.

Magistrates of Aberdeen v University of Aberdeen, 1877, 4 R. (H.L.) 48; 2 App. Cas. 544; 14 S.L.R. 490.

(616)

Breach of trust—Action by one of two parties having title to sue.

In an action against trustees for alleged breach of trust at the instance of one of two beneficiaries, the defender pleaded that the action was incompetent, in respect that the other beneficiary was neither conjoined as a pursuer nor called for her interest as a defender.

Held (1) that as any beneficiary might sue for breach of trust, the action was competent; but (2) that as the action if properly and not collusively contested would be res judicata against the other beneficiary, it was proper that intimation should be made to her that she might, if so advised, sist herself as a pursuer.

Observed that the other beneficiary could not be called as a defender, as she had no interest to defend.

Allen v M'Combie's Trustees, 1909 S.C. 710; 46 S.L.R. 485; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 296.

(617)

Loss through improper investment—Liability of law agent to be sued along with trustees—Trustees and law agent of trust.

An action of damages at the instance of beneficiaries under a trust against both the trustees and the law agent to the trust, on account of loss sustained owing to the insufficiency of the security upon which part of the trust funds was lent, held incompetent as against the law agent, because he had not been employed by the pursuers.

Raes v Meek, 1889, 16 R. (H.L.) 31; 14 App.Cas. 558; 27 S.L.R. 8.

(618)

Loss through improper investment—Loss of capital and income—Title of judicial factor to sue trustees for recovery of income.

A judicial factor, who had superseded trustees in a testamentary trust, brought an action against the trustees for recovery of capital and interest which had been lost by them through an investment. The trust was for the benefit of (1) liferenters quoad the revenue, and (2) fiars. Held that the pursuers had no title to demand more than replacement of the capital, the claim for recovery of interest being a question for the liferenters.

Macfarlane's Trustees v Macarthur, (O.H.) 1900, 8 S.L.T. 111.

(619)

Action by heirs ab intestato against trustees and against alleged debtor to trust.

The heirs ab intestato of A raised an action against his testamentary trustees, and also against Glasgow Infirmary, which had received payment of a legacy out of A's estate. The pursuers alleged that the legacy was void, and had been paid in error, and that the sum paid fell into intestacy, and they demanded that the amount should be repaid to the pursuers or to the trustees. The trustees concurred with the legatee in maintaining in defence that the money was properly paid, and pleaded "no title to sue." Held that the pursuers had a good title to maintain the action to the effect of demanding that the money should be repaid to the trustees.

Armour v Glasgow Royal Infirmary, 1909 S.C. 916; 46 S.L.R. 740; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 503.

(620)

Inhibition.

When a heritable bond is granted in favour of certain persons as trustees, the assignation of the beneficial interest to other persons does not affect the title of the trustees to use inhibition in their own names against the debtor in the bond.

Clarke v M'Nab, 1888, 15 R. 569; 25 S.L.R. 389.

(621)

Liability to be sued—Liability of trustees for interest on uninvested funds—Competency of trying question in action of accounting.

Melville v Noble's Trustees, 1896, 24 R. 243; 34 S.L.R. 210; 4 S.L.T. 198, No. 201, supra.

(622)

All parties not called—Action ex delicto against one of several trustees.

Beneficiaries in a trust brought an action against one of the trustees to enforce personal liability against him for alleged loss to the trust estate through the trustees having illegally lent trust funds to one of their own number. The defender pleaded that the action should be dismissed as all the trustees had not been called. The Court repelled the plea on the ground that the action was founded on delict.

Croskery v Gilmour's Trustees, 1890, 17 R. 697; 27 S.L.R. 490.

[See also PROCESS IV. 6 (4) (e).]

(623)

Action against trustee who had resigned—Action by creditor of testator.

Held that a creditor of a testator had no title to sue a trustee who had resigned for an accounting of his intromissions with the trust estate and for payment of the debt due by the testator to the creditor.

Town and County Bank v Walker, 1905, 13 S.L.T. 287.

(624)

Action against trustee after estate distributed and trustee discharged.

Held that it is competent to sue a trustee, who has distributed the whole trust estate and been discharged by the beneficiaries, for the purpose of constituting a claim against the trust estate.

Assets Co. v Falla's Trustee, 1894, 22 R. 178; 32 S.L.R. 143; 2 S.L.T. 349.

(625)

Prescription—Claim against representative of trustee.

A claim against the representative of a trustee for a sum alleged to be due under the trust is not a claim of trust accounting, but an ordinary debt, and the negative prescription is a good answer to it.

Murray v Mackenzie, (O.H.) 1897, 34 S.L.R. 571; 4 S.L.T. 231.

(626)

Action of count and reckoning by beneficiary against trustees and against alleged debtor to trust—Allegation by pursuer that trustees and debtor acting in concert.

A beneficiary under a trust raised an action against A, one of the trustees, as an individual, and against her and the other trustees as trustees, concluding that A should count and reckon to the trustees for a sum alleged to be due by her to the trust, she having acted as leading trustee and factor for many years. The pursuer alleged that the trustees had refused to call on A to account, and that they were acting in concert with her for the purpose of enabling her to evade her obligation. Held that the pursuer had a title to sue.

Watt v Roger's Trustees, 1890, 17 R. 1201; 27 S.L.R. 904.

(627)

Action of count and reckoning by beneficiary against trustee—Demand for general accounting for his whole intromissions.

A beneficiary of a trust brought an action against one of the trustees calling upon him as an individual to account for the "whole intromissions had by him with the means and estate of the deceased." Held that the pursuer had no title to sue.

Opinion (per Lord Low, Ordinary) that an action in the above form was not necessarily incompetent, but that to justify it the circumstances must be special.

Crammond v Gordon, (O.H.) 1902, 10 S.L.T. 12.

(628)

Accounting against the representatives of the trustees under a lapsed trust—Procedure—Parties to call as defenders.

Houstoun's Factor v Houstoun's Trustees, 1868, 6 M. 286; 40 J. 156. PROCESS, No. 1078.

(629)

Creditors in bond.

Title of creditors in a bond and disposition in security over the trust estate to call trustees to account for their intromissions.

Lucas' Trustees v Beresford's Trustees, 1892, 19 R. 943; 29 S.L.R. 813.

(630)

Personal bar—Mora—Objections to trust accounts—Action brought on interest emerging.

Where the interest of the challengers of trust accounts did not emerge until the death of the liferentrix of a trust estate, nearly forty years after the date of the accounts, held that they were not barred by mora nor by an award of an accountant given effect to in an interlocutor of Court in an action between the liferentrix and the trustee.

Aitken v Hunter, 1871, 9 M. 756; 43 J. 413; 8 S.L.R. 510.

(631)

Action by beneficiary against debtor to trust—Claim previously compromised by trustee.

Where a beneficiary of a trust brought an action against a debtor of the trust, with whom the trustees had arrived at a settlement, to have the debtor ordained to exhibit an account of her transactions with the deceased truster, action dismissed on the ground that the pursuer had no title to sue, and that her only recourse was against the trustees on conclusions appropriate to a suit for maladministration.

Observed (per Lord Stormonth-Darling, Ordinary) that the case was "quite different from a case where the claim desired to be enforced, be it good or bad, has never been made and is still open."

Hannah v Sharp, (O.H.) 1901, 9 S.L.T. 333.

(632)

Assignment of interest in security—Action for payment against trustees—Concurrence of assignees.

A beneficiary under a trust assigned his interest by an assignment which was ex facie absolute but truly in security. The assignment was intimated to the trustees. He sued the trustees for payment with the consent of the assignees, who were willing to grant a discharge in favour of the trustees. Held that the beneficiary had a title to sue.

Craig v Craig's Trustees, (O.H.) 1918, 2 S.L.T. 293.

(633)

Creditor of trust suing debtor of trust alleging that trustee declined to move.

A creditor of a person divested of his estate by decree of cessio raised an action to recover his debt against a person alleged to be a debtor to the estate. The action concluded alternatively for payment to the pursuer, or otherwise to the trustee in the cessio, and was founded on averments to the effect that the pursuer was the only unpaid creditor, and that the trustee had declined to move in the matter. Held that the pursuer had no title to sue.

Observed that the pursuer might have compelled the trustee to give the use of his name on security being found for expenses, or to grant an assignment of his claim against the defenders.

Henderson v Robb, 1889, 16 R. 341; 26 S.L.R. 222.

(634)

Title and interest to appear in reclaiming note—Trustee removed from office after obtaining decree for expenses in Outer House.

A trustee on a sequestrated estate, who had raised an action and obtained from a Lord Ordinary a decree for expenses, was afterwards removed from office. The defender having reclaimed, and the new trustee having declined to sist himself, the previous trustee presented an application to be sisted on the ground that he had an interest in the question of expenses. The Court refused the application.

Mackenzie v Fowler, 1897, 24 R. 1080; 34 S.L.R. 810; 5 S.L.T. 107.

3. COMPETENCY.

(635)

Application for directions of Court — Judicial Factors (Scotland) Act, 1889, sec. 18.

Earl of Stair's Trustees, 1896, 23 R. 1070; 33 S.L.R. 777; 4 S.L.T. 92, No. 369, supra.

(636)

Special case—Whether power conferred by trust deed—All parties agreed that exercise of power desirable.

A special case, to which the parties were the trustees on a trust estate and the beneficiaries, was brought to determine a question as to the trustees' power to sell certain heritable subjects, the trustees maintaining that they had no such power, the other parties maintaining that they had. All parties, however, were agreed that a sale would be expedient.

Held that, although there was no real contention between the parties, the special case was competent.

Mitchell Innes' Trustees v Mitchell Innes, 1912 S.C. 228; 49 S.L.R. 241; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 85.

Galloway v Campbell's Trustees, 1905, 7 F. 931; 42 S.L.R. 712; 13 S.L.T. 256. Process, No. 1235.

(637)

Declarator that trustees were acting ultra vires — Action involving appeal to nobile officium—Competency of action.

Question, whether an action of declarator that testamentary trustees had acted ultra vires in reducing, under a discretionary power conferred upon them, the income payable to a beneficiary and that they were bound to exercise the discretion fairly and reasonably was not incompetent in respect that it involved an appeal to the nobile officium of the Court necessitating a petition to the Inner House.

MacTavish v Reid's Trustees, (O.H.) 1904, 12 S.L.T. 404.

(638)

Multiplepointing — Exoneration and discharge—Double distress.

A testamentary trustee, who was in doubt whether the right to a legacy was vested in the legatee's trustee in bankruptcy or in a person to whom the legatee had previously granted an assignation, refused to accept a discharge from the assignee without the concurrence of the trustee in bankruptcy, which the latter refused to give, although by letter he withdrew any claim and authorised the payment to the trustee.

Held that the testamentary trustee was not entitled to raise an action of multiplepointing for his exoneration.

Connell's Trustee v Chalk, 1878, 5 R. 735; 15 S.L.R. 413.

(639)

Exoneration and discharge—Double distress.

While trustees were in course of distributing a trust estate amounting to £300 among the beneficiaries a claim for a debt of £64 was made against it, in payment of which the beneficiaries, with the exception of A and B, were willing to acquiesce. The trustees having brought an action of multiplepointing (in which the fund in medio was the whole estate) against the beneficiaries and the creditor for the purpose of obtaining exoneration and discharge, A and B pleaded that the action was incompetent. The Court dismissed the action as incompetent on the grounds (1) that there was no double distress; and (2) that the trustees did not aver that the beneficiaries had refused to grant them extrajudicial exoneration and discharge.

Mackenzie's Trustees v Sutherland, 1895, 22 R. 233; 32 S.L.R. 172; 2 S.L.T. 422.

(640)

Exoneration and discharge—Double distress—Claim by creditors and claims by beneficiaries.

Testamentary trustees, exposed to a claim by a single creditor for the whole funds under the administration, brought an action of multiplepointing for distribution of the estate and for their own exoneration, calling as defenders the creditor and the beneficiaries entitled to take under the trust. The creditor was prosecuting his claim by a direct action against the trustees; and among the beneficiaries no questions were raised inter se.

Held that the action was incompetent either as an action for distribution or for exoneration, in respect that the claim of the creditor and the claims of the beneficiaries were not truly competing claims, and that the creditor was not delaying to constitute his debt against the estate.

Glen's Trustees v Miller, 1911 S.C. 1178; 48 S.L.R. 931; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 178.

(641)

Double distress—Action by beneficiaries to submit doubtful claim to jurisdiction of Court.

While testamentary trustees were engaged in administering the trust funds, the ultimate beneficiaries, on the ground that the trustees were about to pay a claim to which they objected, raised a multiplepointing with a view to bring the trust fund into Court for distribution.

Held that the action was incompetent, there being no double distress.

Robb's Trustees v Robb, 1880, 7 R. 1049; 17 S.L.R. 717.

(642)

Claim by trustees.

When trustees under a testamentary deed bring an action of multiplepointing to have a question which has been raised as to its validity determined, it is their duty to lodge a claim, as trustees, for the whole fund for the purpose of administration.

Hall's Trustees v Macdonald, 1892, 19 R. 567; 29 S.L.R. 465.

Judgment on the merits reversed in the House of Lords, 1893, 20 R. (H.L.) 88; [1893] A.C. 642; 31 S.L.R. 279.

(643)

Fund in medio.

Where there were competing claimants to one-half of a trust estate, the right to the other half not being in dispute, one of the claimants raised an action of multiplepoinding in name of the trustee, bringing the whole estate into Court as the fund in medio.

Held that the action was incompetent.

Macnab v Waddell, 1894, 21 R. 827; 31 S.L.R. 679; 2 S.L.T. 44.

(644)

Objection to trustees' condescendence of fund in medio, that it did not include debt due to trust—Allegation by trustees that debt discharged.

In a multiplepoinding brought by testamentary trustees for the distribution of an estate, one of the beneficiaries stated as an objection to the condescendence of the fund in medio that it did not include a sum of £600 said to be due to the estate by one of the trustees. In answer the trustees produced a discharge granted by the trustee to the alleged debtor, and explained that they were satisfied they could not prosecute the claim with any hope of success, but they offered to allow the objector to sue in their names on his finding security for the expenses of the proceedings. The Court repelled the objection, holding that this was all the trustees could be required to do.

Brown's Trustees v Brown, 1888, 15 R. 581; 25 S.L.R. 393.

(645)

Application by Scottish trustees to pay income to fathers of minor beneficiaries in England—Nobile officium.

Petition by trustees acting under a Scottish trust settlement for authority to pay the income of legacies to the fathers of minor beneficiaries who were domiciled in England, and from whom, according to the law of England, a valid discharge could not be obtained, refused on the ground that the Court had no power to grant the authority craved.

Atherstone's Trustees, 1896, 24 R. 39; 34 S.L.R. 40; 4 S.L.T. 118.

(646)

Petition under Presumption of Life Act, 1891—Claim to share of beneficiary presumed dead—No competing claimant—Action to obtain judicial exoneration.

A beneficiary under a trust deed disappeared, and his sister obtained a decree in a petition under the Presumption of Life Act, 1891, presuming his death, and claimed his share of the trust estate. There was no competing claimant, but the trustees raised a multiplepoinding stating that they had been unable to discover any reliable information as to whether the brother had ever been married and left lawful issue. Held that the pursuers were entitled to raise the action for their judicial exoneration as trustees and that the action was competent.

Davidson v Ewen, (O.H.) 1895, 3 S.L.T. 162.

(647)

Petition to complete beneficiary's title to funds in a lapsed trust—Person entitled to the possession of the trust property "for his own absolute use"—Body of trustees entitled to immediate conveyance in trust—Act 1921, sec. 24.

The Trusts (Scotland) Act, 1921, enacts, by sec. 24, that any person who shall be entitled to the possession "for his own absolute use" of property held in a lapsed trust may apply to the Court for authority to complete a title to it in his own name. Held that the method of completing title provided by the section was not competent to a body of trustees administering a charitable trust, who were entitled to an immediate conveyance of property held in a lapsed trust for the purpose of administering it in terms of their own trust.

M'Clymont Trustees, 1922 S.C. 503; 59 S.L.R. 397; 1922 S.L.T. 379.

4. EXPENSES OF LITIGATION.

[See EXPENSES I. 12, II. 2 and III. 13 (7).]

TRUST DEED FOR CREDITORS. See BANKRUPTCY.

TURNPIKE ROADS ACT, 1831. See LIMITATION OF ACTIONS.

TUTOR. See MINOR AND PUPIL.

UDAL PROPERTY. See FISHINGS; HERITABLE PROPERTY.

UNDERGROUND DWELLINGS. See PUBLIC HEALTH.

UNDUE INFLUENCE. See FRAUD.

V. VALUE—Continued.

	COL.
(2) Particular Subjects,
(a) Dwelling-houses,	1189
(b) Farms, Shootings, and Fishings,	1189
(c) Shops and Offices,	1190
(d) Theatres and Public Halls,	1192
(e) Schools,	1194
(f) Hotels and Public-houses,	1195
(g) Factories and other Industrial Subjects,	1196
(i.) Contractor's Principle,	1198
(ii.) Comparison with Similar Subjects,	1201
(iii.) Output Basis,	1202
(iv.) Miscellaneous Questions,	1203
(h) Asylums and Hospitals,	1205
(i) Cemeteries,	1207
(j) Harbours and Piers,	1208
(k) Gas and Electric Light Undertakings,	1213
(l) Waterworks and Sewers,	1217
(m) Public Parks,	1219
(n) Subjects Unoccupied, Unfinished, or Unfit for Occupation,	1221
4. Allocation of Value,	1224

VI. VALUATION OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS,	1226
---------------------------------------	------

VII. VALUED RENT,	1232
-------------------	------

VIII. OFFENCES,	1232
See JUSTICIARY V. 31.

STATUTES.

Act 1854—Valuation of Lands — 17 & 18 Vict. c. 91.
Act 1857—Valuation of Lands Act Amendment—20 & 21 Vict. c. 58.
Act 1867—Valuation of Lands Amendment—30 & 31 Vict. c. 80.
Act 1879—Valuation of Lands—42 & 43 Vict. c. 42.
Act 1886—Sporting Lands Rating—49 Vict. c. 15.
Act 1887—Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Amendment—50 & 51 Vict. c. 51.
Act 1889—Advertising Stations (Rating)—52 & 53 Vict. c. 27.
Act 1895—Lands Valuation (Scotland)—58 & 59 Vict. c. 41.
Act 1902—Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Amendment—2 Edw. VII. c. 25.

I. VALUATION ROLL.

1. PREPARATION OF ROLL.

(1)

Failure to return particulars called for by assessor—Recovery of penalties—Nature of particulars that may be called for—"Yearly rent or value"—Act 1854, secs. 1 and 7.

Held that the only statement which a proprietor of heritable subjects in a burgh is bound to make to an assessor under sec. 7 of the Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Act, 1854, is a statement of the particulars enumerated in sec. 1 of the Act; and accordingly that, while bound to state the "yearly rent or value" of the subjects, he is not bound to state the "gross amount to be paid by the tenant yearly."

Bruce v Walker, 1911 S.C. (J.) 7; 6 Adam, 338; 48 S.L.R. 65; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 317.

(2)

Failure to supply assessor with adequate information.

Forrest's Factor v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1920 S.C. 496; 57 S.L.R. 563; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 194, No. 235, infra.

Scouller v Assessor for Glasgow, 1912 S.C. 757; 49 S.L.R. 152; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 491, No. 331, infra.

Cowan & Sons v Assessor for Midlothian, 1894, 21 R. 812; 31 S.L.R. 733; 2 S.L.T. 48, No. 352, infra.

(3)

Prosecution for false return.

A proprietor of lands within a burgh, having been convicted and sentenced by the sheriff, upon a complaint charging him with having knowingly made a false return under the Act of 1854, of the actual annual rent of his property, brought a suspension on the ground that the complaint was irrelevant. Held that the complaint ought to have set forth wherein the return was erroneous, and what was the actual value of the lands, and conviction and sentence suspended accordingly.

Robertson v Hamilton, &c., 1878, 4 Coup. 154; 16 S.L.R. 181.

(4)

Notes on valuation roll.

Held that notes on the valuation roll, stating the number of furnaces of an ironwork which were out of blast, ought to be discontinued.

Addie, 1868, 11 M. 979.

(5)

Cost of preparing burgh valuation roll—Method of assessment—Act 1854, sec. 18—Local Acts—Implied repeal.

Held that the Corporation of Glasgow are precluded by the provisions of the Glasgow Municipal Act, 1878, and the City of Glasgow Act, 1891, from requiring the parish councils of the parish of Glasgow and of other parishes partly within the boundaries of the city, under sec. 18 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854, to assess and levy along with the poor rates the cost of preparing the burgh valuation roll.

Glasgow Corporation v Glasgow Parish Council, 1910 S.C. 858; 47 S.L.R. 711; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 51.

(6)

Resolution by county council to print roll—Treasury—"Regulation"—Local Government Act, 1889, sec. 83.

Held that a resolution of the county council to have the valuation roll printed is not a "regulation" requiring the approval of the Treasury in the sense of the 83rd section of the Local Government Act, 1889.

County Council of Lanarkshire v Lord Advocate, 1892, 19 R. 617; 29 S.L.R. 497.

(7)

Expenses connected with printing roll—Liability of Crown—Act 1854, secs. 3 and 18—Act 1857, sec. 1—Registration Amendment Act, 1885, sec. 12.

When the assessor under the Lands Valuation Acts is the surveyor of Inland Revenue for the district, and the county council has resolved, under sec. 12 of the Registration Amendment Act, 1885, that the valuation roll shall be printed, the extra trouble caused to the assessor and his clerks in preparing and revising the roll for the press falls to be paid for by the Inland Revenue.

County Council of Lanarkshire v Lord Advocate, 1892, 19 R. 617; 29 S.L.R. 497.

2. CONCLUSIVENESS OF ROLL.

[See also ELECTION LAW II. 6.]

(8)

Where party assessed has neglected statutory mode of redress.

Where an assessment has been made for the poor or other purpose upon the amount contained in the existing valuation roll, and the party assessed, thinking himself aggrieved, has neglected the proper statutory means of redress, held that it is incompetent in subsequent proceedings to adduce evidence to contradict the valuation roll.

M'Lachlan v Tennant, 1871, 43 J. 390; 2 Coup. 45; 8 S.L.R. 497.

(9)

Failure of assessor to notify proprietor of increased valuation—Action for reduction of entry—Competency—Jurisdiction of Court of Session—Act 1854, secs. 5 and 30—"Want of compliance with the provisions of this Act"—"Making up" valuation roll.

An entry in the valuation roll having been increased in amount without the statutory notice required by sec. 5 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854, having been given, the person aggrieved brought an action in the Court of Session for reduction of the entry. Held (1) that the failure to give notice was not a want of compliance with the provisions for "making up" the roll, and so was not exempted from challenge by sec. 30 of the Act of 1854; (2) that an action in the Court of Session for reduction of the entry was competent, by virtue of the jurisdiction inherent in the Court to grant redress in all cases where the rights of a subject have been infringed through an inferior tribunal, or administrative body, acting ultra vires of its statutory powers.

Moss' Empires v Assessor for Glasgow, 1917 S.C. (H.L.) 1; 54 S.L.R. 12; 1916, 2 S.L.T. 216.

(10)

Subjects twice entered—Poor—Assessment—Act 1854, secs. 8, 9 and 33.

A county valuation roll containing an entry of certain lands contained also a separate entry of part thereof. The collector of poor rates of the parish assessed the proprietor upon both entries. In a suspension, held that the error, as one of assessment and not of valuation, could be rectified by the Court.

Sharp v Latheron Parochial Board, 1883, 10 R. 1163; 20 S.L.R. 771.

(11)

Erroneous entry in roll—Action in Court of Session for relief from assessment—Declarator and interdict—Reduction of entry in roll—Competency—Act 1854, sec. 30.

A body of trustees were entered in the valuation roll as proprietors, tenants, and occupiers of salmon fishings, and on appeal to the magistrates the entry in the roll was sustained. They brought an action in the Court of Session concluding for reduction of the entry in the roll, and also for declarator that they were not liable to assessments in respect thereof, and for interdict to restrain any proceedings against them for recovery. Held that the action was competent as regards the conclusions for declarator and interdict.

Observations as to the competency of the reductive conclusion of the summons.

Abercromby v Badenoch, (O.H.) 1909, 47 S.L.R. 18; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 114.

(12)

Action in Court of Session for relief from assessment—Declarator and interdict—Competency—Act 1879, sec. 6.

Held that sec. 6 of the Valuation Act, 1879, did not debar the proprietor of an estate from bringing an action for declarator that no part of his lands fell within the municipal boundary of an adjacent city and for interdict against the corporation from assessing him.

Hope v Magistrates of Edinburgh, (O.H.)
1897, 5 S.L.T. 195.

(13)

Conclusiveness in question of poor law assessments—Poor Law (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1845, sec. 37.

A parochial board assessed for poor rates the owner and occupier of waterworks on the annual value of the subjects appearing in the valuation roll without allowing deduction of the average cost of repairs, insurance, &c., in terms of the 37th section of the Poor Law Act, on the ground that the assessor in preparing the valuation roll had already made these deductions. In a suspension held (1) that for the purposes of assessment under the Poor Law Act, 1845, the valuation roll as completed in terms of the Valuation of Lands Act, 1854, was conclusive as to the yearly rent or value of lands and heritages entered therein, and that the Court of Session had no jurisdiction to review the process by which the entry there made was reached; and (2) that before assessment the suspender was entitled to have the above deductions made from the sum entered in the valuation roll.

Magistrates of Glasgow v Hall, 1887, 14 R. 319; 24 S.L.R. 241.

(14)

Held that a parish council in assessing for poor rates are bound to take as conclusive the annual value of the subjects entered in the valuation roll, and to make the deductions allowed by sec. 37 of the Poor Law Act, 1845, from the annual value so ascertained, irrespective of the deductions which may have been made by the assessor in fixing the annual value of the subjects as entered in the valuation roll.

Burghhead Harbour Co. v George, 1906, 8 F. 982; 43 S.L.R. 754; 14 S.L.T. 253.

(15)

Entries in valuation roll as basis for assessment.

A pursuer brought an action concluding for declarator that he was not tenant or occupier, in the sense of the Lands Valuation Acts, of certain subjects, and was not liable to be rated or assessed for burgh and parish rates in respect thereof, and for interdict against such assessment. He averred that he had been entered in the valuation roll as tenant and occupier of the subjects; that he was not a tenant or occupier in the sense of the Valuation Acts and could not legally be entered in the valuation roll as such; and that he was threatened with proceedings for the recovery of rates and taxes in respect of the subjects in question.

Opinions (per Lord Justice-Clerk Scott Dickson and Lord Ormisdale) that these averments were irrelevant, in respect that the entry in the valuation roll was not decisive of liability to assessment, which depended on the Burgh Police and Poor Law Acts, and the pursuer had failed to aver that he was not liable to assessment under these Acts.

Dante v Assessor for Ayr, 1922 S.C. 109; 59 S.L.R. 101; 1922 S.L.T. 74.

(16)

Effect of Crofters Holdings Act, 1886.

In an action for payment of an assessment of poor rates laid upon the defender (1) as proprietor and (2) as occupier, in respect of tenants paying under £4 of rent—the entries in the valuation roll being the basis of assessment—the defender stated that she was unable to recover payment (1) of her rents, and (2) of the rates which she had paid for tenants under £4; that her tenants were crofters, and that prior to the making up of the valuation roll they had made application to the Crofters' Commission for reductions of rent, which, if granted, would take effect from the date of application, and that the Commission had pronounced an order sisting in hoc statu her right to sell in execution of any decree for rent she might obtain. She maintained that as, subsequent to the date of the valuation roll, her only available remedy for the recovery of rents and rates had been suspended by the action of the Crofters' Commission under the Crofters Acts, the remedies of the collector for enforcing payment from her of rates founded on the valuation roll ought also to be suspended. Held that the defence was irrelevant.

Macfarlane v Matheson, 1888, 16 R. 230; 26 S.L.R. 155.

(17)

In question of assessment to property tax.

The Commissioners of Inland Revenue, in estimating the annual value of lands and heritages, are not bound by the valuation roll, except in counties and burghs in which the officer of Inland Revenue has been appointed assessor for the valuation roll in terms of the Valuation of Lands Act, 1857.

Observed that the provisions of the Lands Valuation Act, 1857, sec. 6, are applicable to purposes of local taxation only, and have not repealed or altered the rule laid down by the Property and Income Tax Act, 1842, sec. 60, for ascertaining the value of lands for purposes of imperial taxation.

Menzies v Inland Revenue, 1878, 5 R. 531; 15 S.L.R. 285.

(18)

Interpretation of entries—Salmon fishings—Entry of "fishings" equivalent to "salmon fishings."

In a question between a fishery board, who were entitled under the Salmon Fisheries (Scotland) Act, 1868, to impose an assessment on salmon fisheries entered in the valuation roll, and a proprietor who had a right to the salmon fishing in a river ex adverso of his estate but who averred that it was worthless in comparison with the trout fishings, circumstances in which held that the board were entitled to treat an entry in the roll of "fishings" as an entry of "salmon fishings."

Don District Fishery Board v Burnett,
1918 S.C. 37; 55 S.L.R. 90; 1917, 2
S.L.T. 183.

(19)

Questions between landlord and tenant—
Act 1854, sec. 6.

Opinions (per Lord Justice-Clerk Moncreiff and Lord Trayner) that the 6th section of the Act 1854, laying taxation on one who under a long lease is deemed to be proprietor, will not supersede any previous agreement between him and the actual owner as to payment of public burdens.

Jopp's Trustees v Edmond, 1888, 15 R.
271; 25 S.L.R. 211.

(20)

Reduction of rent—Proof of agreement.

Opinion that a return by a landlord to an assessor under the Valuation Act of the rent of a farm is not conclusive evidence as between landlord and tenant of an agreement to reduce the rent fixed in a written lease.

Rattray v Leslie's Trustee, 1892, 19 R.
853; 29 S.L.R. 764.

(21)

Question between superior and vassal—
Proof of value.

In an action by a superior for declarator and for payment of a casualty of composition, where the parties were at issue as to the amount payable, held that the valuation roll was not conclusive as to the annual value of the lands, and that the superior was entitled to a proof.

Duke of Argyll v Bullough, 1904, 6 F.
949; 41 S.L.R. 737; 12 S.L.T. 258.

II. APPEALS.

1. TO THE VALUATION COMMITTEE.

(22)

Competency—Notice of appeal—Act 1854, secs. 5 and 9.

The Lands Valuation Act, 1854, sec. 9, enacts that any person whose name is entered by the assessor in the valuation roll shall be entitled to appeal to the commissioners of supply with reference to such entry, provided the appellant shall intimate in writing that he is to maintain the appeal, and "specify the amount of the valuation which he alleges should be substituted for that stated by the assessor." The proprietor of K intimated in writing to the assessor "an appeal against your entering in the valuation roll the shootings of K at £5," and added that the lands were not shot over, and that if the shootings were let as assessed the rent of the lands would be diminished to a very much larger extent. Before writing the letter he had stated to the assessor verbally that he objected to the shootings being entered in the valuation roll at all.

Held that there had been sufficient intimation of an appeal against the shootings being entered in the roll.

Maitland v Assessor for Midlothian, 1888,
15 R. 592; 25 S.L.R. 318.

(23)

Notice of appeal—Failure to specify valuations to be substituted.

Circumstances in which held that magistrates were right in refusing an appeal on the ground that the notice of appeal given to the assessor did not specify the valuation to be substituted for the assessor's entry.

Observed that if the assessor had had knowledge of the grounds of the appeal, the objection to the notice could not have been sustained.

Symington & Sons v Assessor for Coatbridge, 1895, 22 R. 588; 32 S.L.R. 431.

(24)

Failure to specify valuations to be substituted—Act 1854, sec. 9.

In the course of preparing the valuation roll of a burgh, the assessor received from the education authority a list of the schools in the burgh with their existing valuations. On the assessor intimating that he proposed to increase these valuations, a correspondence took place between the parties, the education authority objecting to the basis of valuation proposed by the assessor, but intimating that they were prepared to agree to an increase of 10 per cent. on the existing valuations. Eventually the assessor transmitted to the education authority a notice of the assessments which he had made, and the relative notice as to right of appeal. In reply, the clerk to the education authority wrote, "With reference to the notices received of the valuations ranging from 100 per cent. increase to 333 per cent. increase, I beg to intimate an appeal." The magistrates having dismissed the appeal as incompetent, in respect that the appellants had not specified the figures which they alleged should be substituted for those of the assessor, as required by sec. 9 of the Lands Valuation Act, 1854, held that, as it was clear in the circumstances that the authority objected to any increase on the existing valuations, there had been a sufficient compliance with the requirements of the section, and that the appeal had been competently taken.

Ayrshire Education Authority v Assessor for Irvine, 1922 S.C. 435; 59 S.L.R.
288; 1922 S.L.T. 109.

(25)

Timeous intimation.

An assessor having before making up his roll intimated to a proprietor that he proposed to enter his subjects at a certain valuation, the proprietor gave notice that he appealed against the intended valuation. The assessor thereafter made up the roll and transmitted the statutory notice of the entry to the proprietor, who gave no further intimation of appeal. Held that the notice of appeal required by sec. 9 of the Act must be intimated to the assessor after the entry in the roll has been made, and after notice of the entry has been made to the party affected in terms of sec. 5, and that the notice of appeal in question was therefore insufficient.

Assessor for Linlithgowshire v Ballantine, 1895, 22 R. 591; 32 S.L.R. 432; 2 S.L.T. 570.

(26)

Timeous intimation.

Where intimation of appeal in terms of the Valuation Act, 1854, was not given six days before the day fixed for the hearing of valuation appeals in a burgh, although owing to adjournments it was given more than six days before the appeal was actually heard, held that as no reasonable excuse for the delay had been given, the intimation was not timeous, and that the appeal was rightly refused by the magistrates.

Watson, Gow & Co. v Assessor for Glasgow, 1910 S.C. 807; 47 S.L.R. 374; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 189.

(27)

Hearing of evidence — Same grounds of appeal determined in previous year — Act 1879, secs. 7, 8 and 9.

The valuation roll annually made up by the assessor being in each year, in terms of the Valuation of Lands Act, a new roll, any person aggrieved by an entry in it is entitled to appeal, and the commissioners of supply of the county or magistrates of the burgh, as the case may be, are bound to hear any evidence tendered by him in support of his appeal, although the entry in the roll and the evidence tendered are the same as were under consideration in an appeal court in a former year, and there is no change of circumstances.

Smith v Assessor for Argyllshire, 1885, 12 R. 905; 22 S.L.R. 753.

(28)

A valuation appeal committee are not entitled to refuse to hear an appeal on the ground that they had heard and disposed of the same questions between the same parties in the preceding year. Where a valuation committee refused to hear an appeal, the Court remitted, with instructions to hear evidence and arguments, and to dispose of the case on the merits.

Lamont v Assessor for Dumfriesshire, 1900, 2 F. 610.

2. TO THE VALUATION APPEAL COURT.

(29)

Jurisdiction of Valuation Appeal Court.

The Valuation Appeal Court is a supreme court, and its proceedings cannot be set aside by the Court of Session on the ground that they are ultra vires and incompetent.

Stirling & Sons v Holm, 1873, 11 M. 480; 45 J. 306; 10 S.L.R. 296.

(30)

Competency.

Question whether it is competent under the valuation statutes to appeal to the Valuation Appeal Court on questions other than proper questions of value.

Cuninghame v Assessor for Ayrshire, 1895, 22 R. 596; 32 S.L.R. 453; 2 S.L.T. 618.

(31)

Entry of party on roll.

Held that an appeal to the Lands Valuation Appeal judges on the question whether the appellant had been improperly entered in the roll as the proprietor of the subjects described is incompetent. Per Lord Low—“The result of the Valuation Acts appears to me to be this—(1) any entry in the roll can be brought under review of the commissioners or magistrates, either by a person whose name is entered in the roll or by a third party; (2) the determination of the commissioners or the magistrates in regard to the yearly value can be brought under review of this Court either by the person whose name is entered in the roll, or by the assessor, or by a third party; but (3) no appeal at the instance of any one is allowed from the determination of the commissioners or the magistrates in regard to any entry other than that of the yearly value.”

British Linen Co. v Assessor for Aberdeen, 1906, 8 F. 508; 43 S.L.R. 442; 13 S.L.T. 952.

(32)

Questions incident to value.

While no appeal to the Valuation Appeal Court is competent in regard to any entry in the valuation roll other than that of yearly value, the Court is not thereby debarred from incidentally determining questions which may affect other entries in the roll (such as the question whether an appellant is proprietor or tenant) where these questions require to be decided in order to reach the question of yearly value.

Ferguson v Assessor for Invernesshire, 1912 S.C. 768; 49 S.L.R. 158; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 505.

(33)

Substance of question.

An appeal to the Lands Valuation Appeal Court is competent only upon a question of value, but the fact that the determination of the valuation committee does not take the form of a decision as to value will not preclude an appeal if the true question at issue is one of value. Held, accordingly, that an appeal against the decision of a committee, which had directed that a parish church and churchyard should be deleted from the valuation roll as having no value, was competent as being truly an appeal on a question of value.

Assessor for Kincardineshire v Heritors of St. Cyrus, 1915 S.C. 823; 52 S.L.R. 268; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 49.

(34)

Objection to constitution of valuation committee — Member of committee brother of assessor — Administration of justice—Judge—Disqualification.

In an appeal to the Lands Valuation Appeal Court against a determination of the valuation committee of a burgh upholding a valuation of the burgh assessor, the appellant challenged the determination on the ground, inter alia, that one of the members of the committee was a brother of the assessor, the other party to the appeal, and was as such disqualified for sitting. Held that the objection was one which the Court could not competently consider, its function being limited to determining questions of valuation. Opinion (per Lord Salvesen) that there was no substance in the objection. Observations upon the respective roles of the committee and the assessor in valuation proceedings.

M'Gilvray v Assessor for Oban, 1916 S.C. 665; 53 S.L.R. 486; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 102.

(35)

Time for lodging appeals.

Stein v Assessor for Falkirk, 1912 S.C. 853; 49 S.L.R. 380; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 295, No. 47, infra.

(36)

Notes of evidence—Evidence laid before judges—Weight of evidence against findings—Duty of Court.

When the evidence taken before the valuation committee or magistrate is recorded and laid before the judges along with findings in fact, the judges, while entitled to examine the evidence, will not, unless the great weight of evidence is against the findings, disregard them.

Smith v Assessor for Argyllshire, 1885, 22 S.L.R. 753.

(37)

Power of judges to review evidence of comparative value in a locality.

Question how far, when the evidence has been recorded, the appeal judges are to consider the whole valuations of similar subjects within the district for the purpose of ascertaining, by a balance of evidence, whether the assessor, in his valuation of a particular subject, has arrived at a correct result upon the question of amount, as compared with other subjects.

M'Jannet v Assessor for Stirling, 1882, 10 R. 32; 19 S.L.R. 590.

See also Assessor for Argyllshire v Islay Distillery Co., 1884, 11 R. 841; 21 S.L.R. 563, No. 342, infra.

(38)

Appeal against recent valuation by the judges—New evidence.

In 1902 the Lands Valuation Appeal judges fixed the yearly value of the Alma Spinning Mill, Arbroath (occupied by the owners), at £1293, and in succeeding years the assessor continued to enter the mill at that sum. In 1907 the owners appealed against the entry, and adduced evidence that since 1900 nearly all the similar mills in Arbroath had been sold, and at prices which showed that the assessor's valuation of these mills was over 50 per cent. too high. The valuation committee (with the exception of £130, which they allowed for depreciation) confirmed the assessor's valuation on the ground that there was no change of circumstances since the value was fixed in 1902. Held by the Judges, on appeal, that the evidence (which was not before the Court in 1902) as to the recent sales of other mills justified a reconsideration of the value of the mill in question, and reduced the valuation to £923.

Webster & Sons v Assessor for Arbroath, 1908 S.C. 613; 45 S.L.R. 508; 15 S.L.T. 996.

(39)

—Renewed appeal on different ground.

In 1910 the Valuation Appeal Court of new considered and determined the value of certain subjects which it had settled in 1908, although there had been no material change of circumstances, upon the ground that the case raised a question which had not been considered in the previous appeal.

North British and Mercantile Insurance Co. v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1910 S.C. 814; 47 S.L.R. 368; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 169.

(40)

Appeal by third party—Over-valuation.

Objection by third parties not on the valuation roll that the valuation was fictitious for the purpose of creating a vote held to be competent.

M'Gregor, &c. v Menzies, 1874, 4 R. 1144.

(41)

Complaint by third party—Act 1854, sec. 13.

A distillery and malt barns were entered at £300. A third party complained and craved that the valuation should be increased to £400. The commissioners, by the casting vote of the preses, altered the valuation to £400. The proprietor of the subjects craved a case, which was stated accordingly. The complainer before the commissioners declined to be a party to the case, maintaining that it was incompetent, in respect that under the Act of 1854 the decision of the commissioners was final, while under the Act of 1857 it was only the officer of Inland Revenue or the appellant in the Valuation Court who could require a case. Held that the commissioners were wrong, and that the valuation should be £300.

Magistrates of Linlithgow, 1878, 9 R. 1236.

(42)

—Act 1854, sec. 13.

The proprietor of lands and heritages in a county made a complaint against the accuracy of the return made by another proprietor to the assessor. Held that the complaint, not being a complaint against the valuation stated by the assessor, was not competent.

Question (per Lord Fraser), whether a complaint by a third party, that a property has been entered by the assessor at too high a rent, is competent.

Question, whether under the Valuation Acts a third party can competently bring before the appeal judges, on a case stated, a complaint made to the magistrates or commissioners of supply.

Rule v Lord Abinger, 1883, 10 R. 502; 20 S.L.R. 323.

(43)

—Act 1854, secs. 8, 9, and 13—Act 1879, secs. 6, 7, 8, and 9.

The Lands Valuation Acts entitle persons dissatisfied with an assessor's valuation of subjects held by themselves "to appeal," and persons dissatisfied with an assessor's valuation of subjects held by others "to complain" to the commissioners or magistrates "sitting as an appeal court," and give right to persons "entitled to appeal" to the commissioners or magistrates to require them to state a case for the opinion of Her Majesty's Judges. Held that the right to require a case to be stated is given to third parties complaining as well as to those objecting to the valuation of their own property.

Ferrier v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1892, 19 R. 882; 29 S.L.R. 723.

See also British Linen Co. v Assessor for Aberdeen, 1906, 8 F. 508; 43 S.L.R. 442; 13 S.L.T. 952, No. 31, supra.

(44)

Expenses.

Observed that if assessors continued in the face of express and repeated decisions to raise questions, it would be matter for consideration whether expenses should not be awarded against them.

Forbes Irvine v Assessor for Aberdeenshire, 1893, 20 R. 626; 30 S.L.R. 617.

(45)

—Power to award expenses—Failure to give timeous intimation that appeal withdrawn.

Intimation by the Lands Valuation Appeal Court that, although it was not the practice of the Court to make any award of expenses, the Court would in future hold itself free to award expenses against an appellant who has put his opponent to unnecessary expense by failing to give timeous notice that the appeal has been withdrawn.

Assessor for Greenock v Wilson, 1919 S.C. 474; 56 S.L.R. 177; 1919, 1 S.L.T. 109.

3. STATEMENT OF CASE FOR APPEAL.

(46)

Observations on the form of special case required by the Valuation Act, 1857, sec. 2. Bank of Scotland, 1873, 11 M. 991; 45 J. 586; 10 S.L.R. 663.

(47)

Duties (1) of appeal committee; (2) of parties to the appeal.

Valuation committees in counties and burghs must hold their Courts between 10th and 19th September, with continuation of days, and complete their work and dispose of all appeals before 30th September. Parties appealing against any determination of a committee, and the respondents in such appeal, must hand to the clerk of the committee their reasons for appeal and answers respectively within ten days from the determination appealed against, i.e., in no case later than 10th October; and the clerk of the valuation committee must transmit the complete case to the Inland Revenue as soon after that date as is reasonably possible, and at any rate in time for the sitting of the Lands Valuation Appeal Court. In preparing the case it is the duty of the committee themselves to state the facts and their determination upon them, and to add the reasons of appeal and the answers furnished by the parties; but it is also proper and convenient that the committee should submit a draft of the case to the parties for their observations, provided that no undue delay is thereby caused.

Stein v Assessor for Falkirk, 1912 S.C. 853; 49 S.L.R. 380; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 295.

(48)

Findings in fact—Act 1879, sec. 7.

In a case stated on a complaint, the valuation committee set forth the evidence at length, as taken down in shorthand, and the following determination:—"The committee find that the complainer has failed to establish his averments, and they therefore find it unnecessary to alter the roll in this case." Held that the case had been improperly stated, as it did not set forth the facts proved. Lord Lee was of opinion that, but for well-founded objections on other grounds, it ought to be remitted for amendment, and Lord Fraser, that it ought to be dismissed as incompetent.

Rule v Lord Abinger, 1883, 10 R. 502; 20 S.L.R. 323.

(49)

In a case stated for the opinion of the Valuation Appeal Court, the valuation committee set forth the contentions of the parties, that the appellants had led evidence (which was set forth at length, as taken down in shorthand), and the following determination:—"The committee sustained the appeal to the effect of reducing the valuation" to a certain sum. Held that the case had been improperly stated, as it neither set forth the facts proved, nor stated whether the determination of the committee proceeded on the principle contended for by the assessor, or on that contended for by the appellants, and case dismissed.

Steel Co. of Scotland v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1892, 19 R. 847; 29 S.L.R. 722.

(50)

In an appeal held that a case stated for the opinion of the Lands Valuation Appeal Court which did not set forth the facts proved was not a case stated in terms of the Act, and that the appeal fell to be dismissed.

Union Tube Co. v Assessor for Coatbridge, 1895, 22 R. 583; 32 S.L.R. 425.

(51)
Observed that, in stating a case for appeal to the Valuation Appeal Court, it is the duty of the valuation committee to make specific findings of fact, and it is not sufficient to refer the Appeal Court to the notes of evidence.

Guardbridge Paper Co. v Assessor for Fife, 1921 S.C. 634; 58 S.L.R. 425; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 360.

(52)

Remit for restatement.

A case for appeal against a decision of burgh magistrates contained merely a narrative of what took place before the magistrates, and a statement that certain evidence was led, and that the magistrates arrived at certain conclusions, with an appendix containing a print of the evidence. Case remitted to be restated, with directions to the magistrates to set forth the facts bearing on the matters at issue which they find to be admitted or proved or within their personal knowledge, and also the grounds of their decision.

Glasgow and South-Western Railway Co. v Assessor for Greenock, 1898, 25 R. 1229; 35 S.L.R. 943; 6 S.L.T. 148.

(53)

Amendment of case—Minute of admission of facts on appeal—Act 1879, secs. 7 and 9.

A case for appeal under the Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1879, in a case in which there had not been any evidence led, did not contain any statement by the valuation committee of facts admitted, or within the personal knowledge of the committee. The Court remitted to the valuation committee to restate the case, setting forth the facts bearing on the matter at issue which they found to be admitted or within their personal knowledge.

Aberdeen District Lunacy Board v Assessor for Aberdeenshire, 1907 S.C. 737; 44 S.L.R. 429; 14 S.L.T. 792.

(54)

Remit for further evidence.

Circumstances in which in a valuation appeal the Court, on a motion of the appellant, in terms of the 9th section of the Valuation Act, 1879, remitted the case to the valuation committee to take further evidence, although the appellant had declined to avail himself of an opportunity of leading the evidence when the case was before the commissioners.

Ramsden v Assessor for Inverness, 1894, 21 R. 797; 31 S.L.R. 472; 1 S.L.T. 532.

(55)

Refusal of motion for remit.

Held that the power conferred upon the Court by sec. 9 of the Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1879, to remit a case, for further information, to the commissioners or magistrates by whom it has been stated, is limited to such matters as a mistake committed in the statement of the case, the setting forth specific details of matters stated generally, or the correction of a judgment of the valuation committee refusing to allow competent, or admitting incompetent evidence; and that the Court will not remit a case to enable an appellant to lead evidence which was available to him when the case was before the commissioners.

Assessor for Argyllshire v Marquis of Breadalbane, 1889, 16 R. 793; 26 S.L.R. 529.

(56)

A case for appeal contained a narrative of what took place before the magistrates, with the contentions of parties, and a statement that the magistrates arrived at certain conclusions, but did not set forth the facts found by the magistrates. It did not appear that the appellants had complained of the form of the case or requested the magistrates to make definite findings in fact. The Court dismissed the appeal, refusing to make a remit for restatement, on the ground that the appellants were responsible for the form of the case unless they could show that they had done their best to obtain a case properly stated.

Stirling Gaslight Co. v Assessor for Stirling, 1899, 1 F. 583; 6 S.L.T. 326.

(57)

An assessor entered certain subjects at a yearly value ascertained by taking a percentage on the cost of the subjects. In an appeal to the magistrates the appellants maintained that the assessor ought to have taken the rent stipulated in a lease of the subjects, but led no evidence to show that the assessor's valuation was excessive, assuming that the lease was to be disregarded. The magistrates having confirmed the assessor's valuation, the appellants appealed to the Valuation Judges. Motion by the appellants for a remit to the magistrates for an inquiry into the value of the subjects refused.

Bell v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1904, 6 F. 501; 41 S.L.R. 490; 12 S.L.T. 18.

III. PARTIES LIABLE TO BE ENTERED IN THE ROLL.

(58)

Competency of Appeals to Valuation Appeal Court.

British Linen Co. v Assessor for Aberdeen, 1906, 8 F. 508; 43 S.L.R. 442; 13 S.L.T. 952, No. 31, supra.

Ferguson v Assessor for Inverness-shire, 1912 S.C. 768; 49 S.L.R. 158; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 505, No. 32, supra.

1. PROPRIETOR.

(59)

Creditor in possession receiving rents—Competency of entering proprietor in roll as owner—Competency of suing creditor not entered in roll for payment of rates—Act 1854, sec. 42—Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1889, sec. 105.

The proprietor of heritable subjects was entered in the valuation and assessment rolls of a county for the years 1911-13 as the owner of the subjects. The county council, who had failed to recover from him the rates due for these years, having discovered that a heritable creditor had been in receipt of the rents for the years in question under a decree of maills and duties, issued demand notes in July, 1914, to the heritable creditor for the unpaid rates, and thereafter brought an action against him to recover the amount. Held

(1) that the proprietor of the subjects might be entered in the roll as owner, although a heritable creditor was in actual receipt of the rents; and (2) that, the proprietor being correctly upon the roll for the years 1911-13, it was incompetent in 1914 to demand payment of the rates for these years from the heritable creditor whose name did not appear in the roll; and action dismissed. Semble that the only persons against whom proceedings for the recovery of rates can competently be taken by the rating authority are those whose names appear in the roll for the period of assessment.

Lanarkshire County Council v Miller, 1917 S.C. 35; 54 S.L.R. 45; 1916, 2 S.L.T. 236.

(60)

Bondholder — Possession — Unoccupied house.

A bondholder was entered as proprietor of an unoccupied house. He stated that a previous proprietor (now bankrupt) had sold the house to a feuing company, on an unrecorded conveyance, and that the company had for the last two years been entered as proprietors on their own return. The assessor stated that the company, and the previous proprietor and his creditors, had repudiated connection with the property, and had referred to the bondholder as virtual owner; that he had exposed the property to sale by public roup, and advertised it to be let, and that the key was held by a local factor for his behoof. The appellant denied he had advertised the house to be let, or had employed the local factor, or had the key. The committee refused to delete the appellant's name as proprietor, on the ground that by the Valuation Act, 1854, sec. 42, "proprietor" included adjudgers, wadsetters, or other persons in actual receipt of the rents and profits of lands and heritages. Held that the committee were wrong.

Ritchie, 1881, 9 R. 1244.

(61)

Bondholder in possession under decree of maills and duties.

The appellants were entered as proprietors of four houses as heritable creditors in possession. The houses were in the same terrace. There was no appeal in regard to one house which was let, and yielded a rent. The appellants stated that the other houses were vested in the trustee on a sequestrated estate. They had entered into possession of the let house under decree of maills and duties, but did not enter into possession of the unlet houses. The committee held the appellants to be in possession. Held that the committee were wrong.

Bryden's Trustees, 1881, 9 R. 1244.

(62)

Lease of twenty-eight years with breaks—Act 1854, sec. 6.

Bishop v Assessor for Paisley, 1910 S.C. 821; 47 S.L.R. 372; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 158, No. 192, infra.

(63)

White fishings—Solway Act, 1804 (44 Geo. III. c. xlv.), sec. 9.

The Solway Act, 1804, sec. 9, enacts that if any person or persons, not being the owner, occupier, or farmer of a salmon fishery within the limits of the Act, or a person duly authorised by such owner, occupier, or farmer, shall kill or attempt to kill any fish whatsoever within these limits he shall be liable in certain penalties. The owner of a salmon fishery within the limits of the Act granted licences to erect stake-nets within the bounds of his fishery for the purpose of taking white fish, under certain regulations and on certain payments. Held that he was properly entered in the valuation roll as proprietor of "fishings in Solway" in respect of these payments, the rent or value being stated at their gross amount.

Lord Herries, 1883, 11 R. 397; 21 S.L.R. 539.

(64)

Mid-superior of salmon fishings who has imposed restriction on method of fishing by his disponent—Act 1854, sec. 42.

The proprietor of certain salmon fishings in the sea, disposed them by feu-disposition to trustees, who by feu-disposition disposed them to a third party, but under burden of a restriction prohibiting such third party from fishing with net and coble. The trustees were entered in the valuation roll as proprietors of fishings.

Held in an action of declarator and interdict, that the trustees were not proprietors of fishings within the meaning of the Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Act, 1854, and were not liable to be assessed in respect thereof.

Abercromby v Badenoch, (O.H.) 1909, 47 S.L.R. 18; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 114.

(65)

Buildings erected by squatter—Act 1895, sec. 4.

The contractors for the construction of certain waterworks were permitted by the tenants of farms adjoining the works, and by the water trustees for whom the works were being constructed, to erect stores and huts on the farms and on ground belonging to the water trustees. The contractors had no lease, and paid nothing for the permission. They let the stores and huts, and received rent for them. Held that the contractors, having no title of tenancy, did not fall to be entered in the valuation roll as "proprietors" of the stores and huts within the meaning of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854, sec. 42, or under the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1895, sec. 4.

Young & Sons v Assessor for Peebles, 1899, 1 F. 579; 36 S.L.R. 597; 6 S.L.T. 326.

(66)

Croft sold by Congested Districts Board—Payment by annual instalments—Method of valuation.

A crofter prior to 1905 held a croft from the proprietor of the estate of Glendale at a fair rent fixed by the Crofters' Commission. In 1905 the Congested Districts Board purchased the estate and entered into an agreement with the crofter to sell him his holding at a price payable by annual instalments spread over fifty years, possession to be given immediately, but a formal title to be granted only after the price had been paid up in full. Held that from the date of the sale the crofter had become proprietor of the holding, and, accordingly, that it fell to be entered in the valuation roll at its true letting value and not at the rent that had been fixed for it as a crofter-holding by the Crofters' Commission.

Ferguson v Assessor for Inverness-shire, 1912 S.C. 768; 49 S.L.R. 158; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 505.

(67)

Proprietor and occupier—Parish minister.

Held that a parish minister was proprietor and occupier of his manse and glebe in the sense of sec. 42 of the Valuation Act, 1854, and as such subject to a local road assessment imposed on proprietors and occupiers as defined by that Act.

Cowan v Gordon, 1868, 6 M. 1018; 40 J. 597; 5 S.L.R. 645.

(68)

Waterworks of local authority from which no profit could be made.

The magistrates and town council of a town, as the local authority, brought water into the town, by means of pipes laid for the most part along the public roads. The cost of the works was obtained from the Public Works Loan Commissioners, repayable, with interest, by instalments spread over fifty years. The works could not be let, and, as the magistrates maintained, yielded no profit. Held that the magistrates were rightly entered as proprietors and occupiers of the waterworks in the county valuation roll.

Magistrates of Castle-Douglas, 1881, 9 R. 1243.

2. TENANT.

(69)

Renunciation of lease—Act 1854, sec. 5.

Premises were let on lease for seven years to a public company which went into liquidation. Before the Whitsunday following the liquidators agreed with the landlord for a renunciation of the lease. This agreement was confirmed by the shareholders on 8th June, and the receipt and discharge were granted on 30th June. Intimation of this change was made to the assessor before 8th September, but he continued the name of the company on the valuation roll as tenants. Held that under the 5th section of Lands Valuation Act, 1854, the company should not have been entered as tenants, and that the proprietors should have been entered both as proprietors and occupiers.

Scottish Lands and Buildings Co., &c. v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1884, 11 R. 568; 21 S.L.R. 403.

(70)

Subjects let to partnership—Death of one partner—Trustee in sequestration of surviving partner renouncing lease—Acquiescence of landlord.

A lease was taken by two partners of a firm on behalf of the firm. The firm was thereafter dissolved by the death of one of the partners, and the remaining partner becoming insolvent, a trust deed was executed for behoof of his creditors, to which the landlord acceded. The trustee declined to adopt the lease, and the landlord acquiesced on the footing of his obtaining a ranking for damages in respect of the failure to continue the lease. The firm (per the trustee) were entered in the valuation roll as tenants of the premises, the premises being entered in the roll as unoccupied. Held that the firm ought not to have been entered in the roll.

Clunas & Allison's Trustee v Assessor for Dundee, 1902, 9 S.L.T. 509.

(71)

Seasonal tenant—Act 1854, sec. 1.

Certain stances were let to a restaurateur as refreshment stances for five seasons at a rent per season. The period of the let for each season was from a date in April to a date in October. The lessee erected kiosks upon the stances which he removed at the close of each season. Opinions (per Lord Justice-Clerk Scott Dickson and Lord Ormisdale) that the lessee was rightly entered in the valuation roll as tenant and occupier of the stances, in respect that his occupation of the stances was rateable notwithstanding that his right of occupation was for part only of the year. Opinion contra (per Lord Salvesen).

Dante v Assessor for Ayr, 1922 S.C. 109; 59 S.L.R. 101; 1922 S.L.T. 74.

(72)

Exhibitors within grounds of Scottish National Exhibition—Lease or permission to use ground—Act 1895, sec. 4.

The executive committee of the Scottish National Exhibition held the ground occupied by the exhibition under a lease which, inter alia, excluded sub-tenants, but empowered the executive to allocate space to exhibitors and make charges therefor. Certain caterers for amusements and exhibitors entered into agreements with the executive, by which they were empowered to make erections on ground allocated to them upon certain terms of payment. The assessor having, under sec. 4 of the Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Act, 1895, entered the caterers and exhibitors in the valuation roll as proprietors of their respective erections, held upon appeal that as they were not lessees of the ground allocated to them, they did not fall to be entered in the roll.

Popular Amusements, Limited v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1909 S.C. 645; 46 S.L.R. 426; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 223.

3. OCCUPIER.

(73)

Occupier—Whether letting for a year or less than a year—Act 1854, sec. 2.

The appellants were proprietors of houses, which were let at monthly rents varying from 14s. to 10s. The agreements bore that the houses were let for a year at a rent per month of four weeks payable in advance; if in arrear of rent the tenant was to remove on receiving three days' notice. By the Lands Valuation Act, 1854, sec. 2, the names, &c., of tenants and occupiers of subjects separately let, for a shorter period than a year, were not to be inserted in the roll, the effect being to subject the proprietor to liability for occupiers' rates. The assessor did not enter the names, &c., of the present tenants and occupiers. The commissioners held that the letting was yearly, and that the tenants were to be entered. Held the commissioners were right.

M'Intyre, 1880, 9 R. 1239.

(74)

Colliery company letting houses to their employees during employment.

Employees of a colliery company occupied dwelling-houses belonging to the company at a rent of less than £10 a year, under an agreement which set forth that the occupancy was terminable at a week's notice on either side, but that the occupant of the house was liable to summary ejection in the event, inter alia, of his ceasing to be in the employment of the company. The employees further authorised the company to deduct from their wages the amount of their house rents "as weekly tenants." An employee was neither entitled nor bound to take one of the company's houses on entering its service; and the company had no control over its employees except during the hours of their active employment.

Held that the company were not occupiers of the houses within the meaning of the Valuation Acts.

Carron Co. v Francis, 1915 S.C. 872; 52 S.L.R. 693; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 36.

(75)

Sub-tenant.

The rent of a farm let on an improving lease was fixed at £15. A sub-tenant of part of the farm was entered as occupier at £55. Held that the name of the sub-tenant should not be entered on the roll.

Fraser, 1867, 11 M. 976.

(76)

Held that a number of cottages held in lease by a firm of fishcurers, and sub-let to fishermen, should be valued at the original rent, but that the names of the occupiers, with the rents paid by them, should also be entered, as a guide to the assessor in making up the roll of voters.

Hay & Co., 1869, 11 M. 981.

(77)

Where subjects are sub-let the only rent which ought to appear in the valuation roll under the heading "Yearly rent or value" is the rent paid by the principal tenant to the owner. The occupier's column may, however, contain in addition to the name of the principal tenant that of the sub-tenant, with the rent paid by him and the extent of his occupation.

Cowdenbeath Coal Co. v Assessor for Fife, 1891, 18 R. 948; 28 S.L.R. 622.

(78)

Sub-lease of part of subjects let—Separate entry of part sub-let.

Where subjects let are in part sub-let the whole rent payable by the tenant and received by the landlord should be entered as a single sum in the column of the valuation roll headed "yearly rent or value," but the name of the sub-tenant should be entered in the column headed "occupier."

Observations on the competency of entering a subordinate figure in the valuation roll, showing the value of the sub-let portion of the subjects.

Glasgow Billiard Rooms Co. v M'Call, 1933, 5 F. 507; 40 S.L.R. 592; 10 S.L.T. 760.

(79)

Sub-tenancy under lease where sub-tenants are excluded.

Circumstances in which the sub-tenants were entered as occupiers jointly with the tenants.

Duke of Richmond, 1869, 11 M. 981.

(80)

Public park owned and regulated by municipal corporation.

Opinion that the proper entry under the head "occupier" was "the corporation" and not "the public."

Glasgow Parish Council v Assessor for Glasgow, 1912 S.C. 818; 49 S.L.R. 315; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 157, 171.

(81)

Advertisement board—Act 1889, secs. 3 and 4.

Held that the Advertising Stations (Rating) Act, 1889, did not warrant the insertion in the valuation roll, as tenant or occupier, of the name of a person who paid a yearly rent for the exclusive use of advertising boards attached to a house not belonging to or occupied by him.

Fry & Sons v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1893, 20 R. 622; 30 S.L.R. 612.

(82)

Act 1889, sec. 3—Applicability to Scotland.

A billposter was tenant of a piece of vacant ground, at an annual rent of £25, with exclusive right to erect billposting hoardings thereon. Having erected such hoardings and affixed advertisements thereto, he was entered in the valuation roll (1) as tenant and occupier of the site at the annual value of £25, and (2) as proprietor and occupier of the hoardings at the annual value of £6. He appealed against the former entry (but not against the latter), and craved that his name should be deleted from that entry, maintaining that his landlord as being "the person who permitted the ground to be used" for advertisement hoardings, was under sec. 3 of the Advertising Stations (Rating) Act, 1889, to be deemed to be in the beneficial occupation of the ground, and to be alone rateable in respect thereof. Held that the entry was in accordance with the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Acts, 1854 and 1895, and that it was right. Question whether the Advertising Stations (Rating) Act, 1889, applied to Scotland. Opinion that even if the Act applied to Scotland the entry was right, in respect that the appellant was the person who had permitted the ground to be used for advertisement, hoardings, within the meaning of sec. 3.

Beith v Assessor for Glasgow, 1904, 6 F. 504; 41 S.L.R. 589; 12 S.L.T. 97.

(83)

Contract permitting erection on board—Whether owner of land or owner of board the "occupier" of site—Statute—Applicability to Scotland—Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854, secs. 1 and 6—Advertising Stations (Rating) Act, 1889, sec. 3.

The owner of hotel premises entered into an agreement with a firm of billposters by which, for an annual payment of 10s. 6d., he permitted them to affix an advertisement board for tyres to a part of his premises to be afterwards determined. The permission was to remain in force for three years, and thereafter to be ended by three months' notice from either party. The agreement provided that the firm should have reasonable access to the premises for purposes connected with the board, and also that no other advertisement of a tyre was to be displayed on the premises. Following on this agreement a board was erected on a strip of vacant ground in front of the hotel, and the "site" of the board was entered by the assessor in the valuation roll at the yearly rent or value of 10s. 6d. and the firm of billposters as "tenants" and "occupiers." In an appeal at their instance they contended that they should not have been entered as tenants or occupiers, in respect (1) that the agreement was not a lease but a licence, (2) that under sec. 3 of the Advertising Stations (Rating) Act, 1889, the owner of the land, being the person who "permitted" the ground to be used for advertisement, must be deemed to be the "occupier." Held that the entry was correct under the Lands Valuation Acts, in respect that the agreement was in effect an ordinary lease of a portion of land at a yearly rent, and that the Act of 1889 (if applicable to Scotland, as to which opinions reserved) in no way altered the prescribed mode of making up the valuation roll under the Valuation Acts.

A. J. Wilson & Co. v Assessor for Kincardineshire, 1913 S.C. 704; 50 S.L.R. 240; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 29.

IV. SUBJECTS FALLING TO BE INCLUDED IN THE ROLL.1. GENERALLY.

For competency of appeal to the Valuation Appeal Court on the question whether particular subjects ought to enter the roll, see—

Assessor for Kincardineshire v Heritors of St. Cyrus, 1915 S.C. 823; 52 S.L.R. 268; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 49, No. 33, supra.

(84)

Church.

Held that parish churches were not to be entered in the valuation roll.

Heritors of Kingoldrum, 1877, 4 R. 1149.

(85)

Parish churchyard.

Held that parish churches and churchyards, being extra commercium, are not valuable as lands and heritages within the meaning of the Valuation Acts, and should not be entered in the valuation roll.

Assessor for Kincardineshire v Heritors of St. Cyrus, 1915 S.C. 823; 52 S.L.R. 268; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 49.

(86)

Private chapel.

Held that a private (Episcopal) chapel yielding no revenue was rightly entered in the valuation roll.

Menzies, 1873, 11 M. 989; 45 J. 585.

(87)

University buildings—Special immunity from taxation claimed.

The University of Glasgow claimed exemption from all public or local taxation and assessments in virtue of a series of charters and statutes, combined with immemorial usage, and the old university buildings were never entered on the valuation roll. On the transference of the University to new buildings, objections was made to the entry of these buildings in the valuation roll. Held that they were properly entered in terms of the Valuation Act, such entry not being intended to determine any question of liability, but being merely for the purpose of valuation.

University and College of Glasgow v Magistrates of Partick, 1870, 11 M. 982; 43 J. 181; 44 J. 430; 8 S.L.R. 284; 9 S.L.R. 443.

(88)

Public bridge.

Held that a bridge was properly entered in the valuation roll in respect that it yielded a revenue from bridge dues.

Magistrates of Dumfries, 1871, 11 M. 984; 9 S.L.R. 444.

(89)

The Ayr Bridge was entered at £1480, the sum for which it was let to a tenant. The trustees appealed against the bridge being put on the roll, on the ground that it was a part of the turnpike road, and not a heritable subject within the meaning of the Valuation Act. The bridge had been erected under special Act, and the trustees were restricted as to the application of the revenue—which was to be applied to the cost of erecting the bridge and paying off the debt on it. When the debt was cleared off, the bridge was to be declared free of pontage. By arrangement between the trustees and the magistrates the pontage could be determined at once. The magistrates dismissed the appeal. Held that the magistrates were right.

Ayr Bridge Trustees, 1881, 9 R. 1246.

(90)

—Where transferred to road trustees under Roads and Bridges Act, 1878, but dues still leviable.

By the 93rd section of the Roads and Bridges (Scotland) Act, 1878, bridges over the river Leven which had belonged to private proprietors, who exacted pontage dues, were vested from the date of the Act in the county road trustees, who were to provide part of the compensation by continuing to levy the pontage dues. When the compensation had been paid the bridges were to become highways, and free of toll. Held that while the dues were leviable the bridges fell to be entered as assessable subjects on the valuation roll.

Dumbartonshire County Road Trustees, 1884, 11 R. 571; 21 S.L.R. 401.

(91)

Market.

The magistrates of a burgh let the right to levy rents or dues for stands in the public street of the burgh on market days. Held that the market stances, being the solum of a public street, and therefore not capable of being the subject of a lease, should not be entered in the roll.

Aberdeen City Treasurer, 1877, 4 R. 1149.

(92)

Lunatic asylum (public).

Held that a lunatic asylum supported by public rates should be entered in the valuation roll.

Banffshire District Lunacy Board, 1870, 11 M. 982; 44 J. 430; 9 S.L.R. 443.

(93)

Showground—Public square—Ground belonging to private person.

Ground in the centre of a town belonging to a private individual was used as a public square, but at certain times in the year was occupied as a showground by owners of travelling shows who paid the proprietor £20 a year for the temporary right of occupancy.

Held (1) that the ground fell to be entered in the valuation roll; (2) that it ought to be entered as “land (market place)”; and (3) that the value to be entered was £20.

Stevenson v Assessor for Upper Ward of Lanarkshire, 1901, 3 F. 459; 38 S.L.R. 494; 8 S.L.T. 440.

Public parks.

[See V. 3 (m), infra.]

(94)

Public sewers and purification works in burgh—“Lands and heritages.”

Held that sewers and sewerage purification works in a burgh were “lands and heritages” within the meaning of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854, and as such fell to be entered in the valuation roll at their true and not at a merely nominal value.

Assessor for Aberdeen v Magistrates of Aberdeen; Assessor for Lanark v Magistrates of Lanark, 1913 S.C. 712; 50 S.L.R. 244; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 38.

See also Water of Leith Sewerage Commissioners v Assessor for Midlothian, 1914 S.C. 664; 51 S.L.R. 177; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 24, No. 400, infra.

(95)

Unfinished waterworks.

Avondale Parish Council v Middle Ward District Committee of Lanarkshire County Council, 1898, 25 R. 594; 35 S.L.R. 668; 5 S.L.T. 384, No. 411, infra.

(96)

Private sewer—Conduit attached to factory—Partly in burgh, partly in county—Act 1854, sec. 42.

The Inveresk paper mills were situated in the county of Midlothian at a short distance outside the boundaries of the burgh of Musselburgh. From the mills there was laid a conduit, the sole purpose of which was to carry off effluent or waste from the mills. For the greater part of its length the conduit, which was constructed of concrete, was underground, and for two-thirds of its length it was within the burgh of Musselburgh, passing underneath streets and other property belonging to the burgh. In so far as within the burgh it had been constructed by the proprietors of the mills in virtue of a recorded agreement with the town council, by which the town council gave the proprietors of the mills a right of wayleave for the conduit. Held that, in view of its nature and construction, the conduit fell within the definition of lands and heritages in sec. 42 of the Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Act, 1854, and that the portion of the conduit within the burgh had rightly been entered in the burgh valuation roll.

Inveresk Paper Co. v Assessor for Musselburgh, 1907 S.C. 747; 44 S.L.R. 433; 14 S.L.T. 790.

(97)

Commuted multures.

Held that payments in commutation of multures were not "lands and heritages" in the sense of the Valuation Act.

Duchess of Sutherland, 1869, 11 M. 980.

(98)

Held that an annuity of forty bolls of victual secured on lands in lieu of multures did not fall within the description of "lands and heritages" in the sense of the Valuation Act.

M'Leod, 1869, 11 M. 980.

(99)

Moss—Fuel.

Held that the revenue derived from moss lands for fuel should be included as rent in the valuation roll.

Forbes, 1873, 11 M. 990; 45 J. 585; 10 S.L.R. 662.

(100)

Slag heap.

A large slag heap, owned by trustees and deposited on ground belonging to them, was let to a railway company under a lease by which the company had, on payment of a royalty or fixed rent, right to remove and use the slag for the purposes of their railway. Held that the slag heap was a heritable subject, and that the trustees and the railway company had rightly been entered in the valuation roll as respectively the proprietors and the tenants thereof.

Airdrie, Coatbridge, and District Water Trustees v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1908 S.C. 596; 45 S.L.R. 491; 15 S.L.T. 889.

(101)

Submarine minerals—Lease from Crown—Ownership—Solum of sea inter fauces terræ.

A proprietor, who possessed under lease from the Crown the minerals lying under the sea below low-water mark ex adverso of his lands, appealed against the assessor having entered in the valuation roll the rent paid by him for the subjects, on the grounds (1) that they were not the property of the Crown, but res nullius until occupied by himself; and (2) that the minerals being in the bed of the sea below low-water mark, they were beyond the limits of the parish and county in the valuation roll of which they were entered. Held (1) that the appellant, by his acceptance of the lease from the Crown, and by his possession ex facie under it, was barred from objecting to the entry of the minerals in the valuation roll; (2) that the entry of the minerals under the sea had been properly made in the valuation roll of the adjoining parish.

Cuninghame v Assessor for Ayrshire, 1895, 22 R. 596; 32 S.L.R. 453; 2 S.L.T. 618.

(102)

Compensation for surface damage—Right to prevent coal from being worked.

The titles of a vassal reserved to the superior the coal in the lands feued, but gave the vassal the right to prevent the coal from being worked except on the "stoop-and-room" system, one object of which was to provide against the subsidence of the surface. The vassal entered into an agreement with the lessee of the coal under which, in return for annual payments, the amount of which was to be regulated by the coal won, the lessee became entitled to work the coal on the "longwall" or complete excavation system. Held that the vassal did not fall to be entered in the valuation roll as proprietor of collieries in respect of such payments.

Assessor for Fife v Currer, 1888, 15 R. 632; 25 S.L.R. 465.

(103)

Dredged channel in open sea.

Held that a channel dredged by harbour commissioners outside the entrance to their harbour, and below low-water mark, was not land and heritage owned and occupied by the harbour commissioners within the meaning of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854.

Leith Docks Commissioners v Magistrates of Leith, 1911 S.C. 1139; 48 S.L.R. 919; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 141.

(104)

Loch—Fishings—Fishings of no value—Loch not let as separate subject.

The Loch of Skene was entirely surrounded by the estates of Skene and Echt. It was not let or occupied as a separate subject, the fishings being of no value. The assessor in making up the valuation roll treated the loch as a separate subject, and entered it at a yearly value of £10 in name of each proprietor. Held, upon appeal, that the loch did not fall to be entered on the roll, as it had no value separable from the adjoining lands of which it was merely an adjunct, but observed that a loch, if actually let or if otherwise a direct source of profit to its proprietor, or the shootings and fishings over a loch, might in certain circumstances fall to be entered separately in the roll.

Assessor for Aberdeenshire v Lady Cowdray, 1911 S.C. 970; 48 S.L.R. 395; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 231.

(105)

Fishings—Trout fishings.

Observations as to the method of dealing with a right of trout fishing for the purposes of the valuation roll.

Don District Fishery Board v Burnett, 1918 S.C. 37; 55 S.L.R. 90; 1917, 2 S.L.T. 183.

(106)

Annual compensation for injury to fishings.

Held that an annual payment as compensation for injury to fishings did not fall to be entered in the valuation roll.

Magistrates of Renfrew, 1868, 11 M. 979.

(107)

Sum paid by upper proprietors to lower proprietor for abstention from netting.

The upper proprietors of salmon fishings on a river agreed to pay £782 a year to the proprietor of the fishings at the mouth in consideration of his abstaining from netting the river. Thereafter the rod-fishings were let at greatly increased rents, at which figures they were entered in the roll. The "rod-fishings" at the mouth, which were in the proprietor's own hands, were entered at an estimated yearly value, and there was also an entry of "right of net fishing" at £782.

Held that the latter entry fell to be deleted, it being for the proprietor to determine in what manner his right of salmon fishing should be exercised, and it not being disputed that the value entered in the roll of the rod-fishings represented the fair annual value of that manner of exercising the right.

Assessor for County of Elgin v Duke of Richmond and Gordon, 1905, 7 F. 424; 42 S.L.R. 512; 12 S.L.T. 831.

(108)

Charge for permission to view place of interest—Waterfalls.

Held that the valuation of "land under wood and Clyde waterfalls" rightly included the income derived from the charge made by the proprietor for visitors passing through his woods to view the falls.

Ross v Assessor for Upper Ward of Lanarkshire, 1898, 3 F. 461.

(109)

—Abbotsford.

The furnished mansion-house, offices, and grounds of Abbotsford were let to a tenant at a rent of £170, under reservation to the proprietor of right to admit visitors during certain months to Sir Walter Scott's library and certain other rooms containing articles of interest. The proprietor derived a revenue of £419 from charges for admission thereto. Held that the income derived from this latter source did not fall to be taken into account in fixing the value of the subjects to be entered in the valuation roll.

Maxwell Scott v Assessor for Roxburghshire, 1890, 17 R. 833; 27 S.L.R. 606.

(110)

—The mansion-house of Abbotsford was let as a furnished house, together with offices, garden ground, and shootings. The lease reserved to the proprietors a right of access to the rooms known as Sir Walter Scott's library, drawing-room, &c., and of showing these rooms to visitors and tourists during weekdays from 1st March to 15th October; and further reserved to the proprietors absolutely the chapel and sacristy, and certain rooms, cupboards, &c., for storing superfluous furniture. The proprietor derived a revenue from showing the first-mentioned rooms to visitors. The house and shootings were entered in the valuation roll at £130, the lessee being entered as tenant or occupier, and there was a separate entry at £50, of the portions absolutely or partially reserved, the proprietors being entered in this entry as tenants or occupiers. The proprietors appealed against the latter entry, contending that it ought to be deleted. Held that the portions of the house absolutely reserved to the proprietors fell to be entered in the roll, but not those to which a right of access was reserved, and the parties being agreed that £10 was the fair annual value of the former, if separately let, that the valuation at £50 fell to be reduced to £10.

Maxwell Scott's Trustees v Assessor for Roxburghshire, 1902, 4 F. 536; 39 S.L.R. 852.

(111)

Advertisement board—Whether board a heritable erection falling to be entered in roll—Act 1895, sec. 4.

Opinions reserved upon the question whether an advertisement board erected on a piece of vacant ground was a "heritable erection," within the meaning of sec. 4 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1895, falling to be entered in the valuation roll.

A. J. Wilson & Co. v Assessor for Kincardineshire, 1913 S.C. 704; 50 S.L.R. 240; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 29.

2. MACHINES, TOOLS, AND APPLIANCES.

(1) CASES BEFORE ACT OF 1902.

(112)

Plant and tools—Fixed or attached to lands or heritages.

Held that the annual value of plant and tools not physically attached to lands or heritages should not enter the valuation roll.

North British Railway Co. v Assessor of Railways and Canals, (O.H.) 1887, 25 S.L.R. 4.

(113)

Grain mill.

Held that the annual value of machinery in a cornmill fell to be included in the valuation.

Chalmers, 1871, 11 M. 983; 44 J. 430; 9 S.L.R. 444.

(114)

Paper mill—Steam engines.

The steam power of a paper mill in the hands of the proprietor was supplied by a number of engines of different sizes, which were fixed by bolts and nuts to solid foundations of masonry, specially designed for their reception. Although they could be removed without injury to themselves or to the buildings, the foundations would have required alteration to adapt them to engines of any other shape or size. Held that the engines were heritable fixtures in the sense of the Act of 1854, and fell to be valued as part of the lands and heritages.

Observed that the rules which regulate the rights of landlord and tenant in regard to machinery erected by the tenant during the currency of his lease had no application; and that the principles to be applied were practically those which regulate the rights of heir and executor.

Cowan & Sons v Assessor for Midlothian, 1894, 21 R. 812; 31 S.L.R. 733; 2 S.L.T. 48.

(115)

Machinery in foundry.

In a foundry occupied by the proprietors a number of machines of different sizes, weighing from two to sixty tons, were attached by bolts to specially prepared foundations. If the machines were removed the foundations would require to be altered or reconstructed, unless the machines were replaced by other machines of the same size and shape. Held that the machines were "fixed or attached" to the lands or heritages in the sense of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854, sec. 42, and fell to be valued as part of the foundry.

In the same foundry there were (1) a drilling machine five tons in weight, resting on a sole-plate without bolts; (2) a morticing machine four tons in weight, resting on a concrete foundation without bolts; and (3) a number of travelling cranes which ran on rails bolted to wooden beams fixed to the walls. Held that these machines were not "fixed or attached" to the lands or heritages in the sense of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854, sec. 42, and did not fall to be valued as part of the foundry.

Assessor for Dundee v Carmichael & Co., 1902, 4 F. 525; 39 S.L.R. 573; 9 S.L.T. 513.

(2) CASES AFTER ACT OF 1902.

(116)

"Machinery fixed or attached" — Electricity supply company—Act 1854, sec. 42—Act 1902, sec. 1.

In reaching the yearly value of an electric supply company's works, held (1) that a milker booster, switchboard for electric lighting department, booster, traction switchboard with boosters, storage battery, switchboard and balancer, electric generators, motor generators, and high tension switchboards, all being within the company's building, and loose or so fixed that they could be removed without necessitating the removal of any part of the building, were not "lands and heritages" within the meaning of the Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Acts; but (2) that copper mains laid loose in pipes through the streets were "lands and heritages," not being in a building, and so not within the exemption enacted by sec. 1 of the Act of 1902.

Coatbridge and Airdrie Electric Supply Co. v Assessor for Coatbridge, 1907 S.C. 780; 44 S.L.R. 454; 14 S.L.T. 937.

(117)

—Machinery in any "building"—Act 1902, sec. 1.

The Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1902, sec. 1, modifies the definition of "machinery fixed or attached" contained in sec. 42 of the Valuation Act, 1854, in cases where the machinery is situated in "any building occupied for any trade, business, or manufacturing process." Held that structures in steel works consisting of roofs supported on pillars, and having in some cases no sides, and in others "splits" covering a portion only of the sides, were "buildings" within the meaning of that section.

Colville & Sons v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1922 S.C. 460; 59 S.L.R. 347; 1922 S.L.T. 294.

(118)

—Removal "without necessitating the removal of any part of the building"—Machines attached to foundations by cement—Act 1902, sec. 1.

The Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1902, sec. 1, excludes (with certain exceptions) from the definition of "machinery fixed or attached" contained in sec. 42 of the Valuation Act, 1854, machines "which are only so fixed that they can be removed from their place without necessitating the removal of any part of the building." A number of machines in steel works rested on foundations of brick or concrete. It was necessary that the machines should be perfectly level and in complete contact throughout with their foundations. In order to avoid the necessity of planing the bed-plates of the machines and of removing all inequalities from the foundations, the machines, when they were installed, were levelled up by wedges inserted between the foundations and the bed-plates, and cement was run in which filled all vacant spaces and also, incidentally, attached the bed-plates to the foundations, the result being that the removal of the machines from their places would involve breaking the cement. Held that the machines could be removed from their places without necessitating the removal of any part of the buildings, and, accordingly, that they did not fall within the category of "machinery fixed or attached."

Colville & Sons v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1922 S.C. 460; 59 S.L.R. 347; 1922 S.L.T. 294.

(119)

—Act 1854, sec. 42—Onus of proof.

Held that soda-recovery plant, rotary furnaces, tanks, grass boilers, and similar plant, installed in a paper mill in connection with the manufacturing processes, were not heritable subjects falling to be entered in the valuation roll, in respect that the assessor had failed to discharge the onus of proving that they could not be removed without injury to the buildings in which they were situated.

Guardbridge Paper Co. v Assessor for Fife, 1921 S.C. 634; 58 S.L.R. 425; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 360.

(120)

—"Appliances"—Rails for overhead travelling crane—Bar cooling framework—Act 1902, sec. 1.

The Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1902, sec. 1, excludes (with certain exceptions) from the definition of "machinery fixed or attached" contained in sec. 42 of the Valuation Act, 1854,

"machines, tools, or appliances" in buildings occupied for trade purposes, which can be removed without necessitating the removal of any part of the building. In certain steel works an overhead travelling crane ran upon rails which were attached to brackets by screw bolts with moveable nuts, the brackets being riveted to the upright steel columns or pillars which supported the roofs. In the same works, for the purpose of supporting bars of steel while cooling, frameworks composed of iron bars were laid across transverse walls within the buildings. Held that the rails upon which the crane ran and the cooling frameworks were "appliances," and, accordingly, as they could be removed without disturbing the building, they were not "machinery fixed or attached."

Colville & Sons v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1922 S.C. 460; 59 S.L.R. 347; 1922 S.L.T. 294.

(121)

— "Plant for heating such building"
— Linoleum factory—Bed-frames for supporting linoleum in drying chamber—Hot-air and steam apparatus for drying linoleum
— Automatic sprinklers for extinguishing fire
— Act 1854, sec. 42—Act 1902, sec. 1.

Held in the valuation of a linoleum factory (1) that the expression "machinery fixed or attached" in sec. 42 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854, as amended by the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1902, sec. 1, did not include the bed-frames upon which the linoleum was supported in the drying chamber, each bed-frame occupying the whole of a specially constructed building without rigid attachments to either floor or walls, and being capable of removal in sections without injury to the building, and that accordingly the bed-frames did not fall to be entered in the valuation; (2) that the hot-air apparatus and steam pipes used for drying the linoleum by raising the temperature in the drying chambers to 135 degrees were "plant for heating . . . such building" and were rightly included in the valuation; (3) that a sprinkler apparatus, consisting of small piping and sprinkler-heads and forming part of an automatic fire-extinguisher, was heritable and was rightly included in the valuation.

Michael Nairn & Co. v Assessor for Kirkcaldy, 1915 S.C. 801; 52 S.L.R. 256; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 58.

(122)

— Drying machines connected with fixed boilers and engines, but removable without interfering with buildings—Act 1854, sec. 42—Act 1902, sec. 1.

In a fish manure and oil factory the machines for drying the raw material consisted of long steel cylinders resting horizontally on iron pedestals connected by holding-down bolts to concrete blocks sunk into the soil. The outer portion of these cylinders formed steam jackets for supplying the heat to dry the materials in the interiors. These jackets were connected by steam pipes with the factory boilers, and the condensed steam was carried back by other pipes to the feed-pumps of the boilers. The material in the cylinders was stirred by means of revolving shafts passing through the cylinders, and the vapours from the process of drying were carried off by means of fans. The revolving shafts and fans were driven by belts connected with the factory engines. Held that the drying machines were not "machinery fixed or attached" to the heritable subjects within the meaning of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854, sec. 42, as amended by the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1902, sec. 1, and accordingly were not "lands and heritages" falling to be entered in the valuation roll, in respect (1) that they did not form part of the plant for producing or transmitting first motive power, or for heating or lighting the building; and (2) that they could be removed from their places without necessitating the removal of any part of the building in which they stood.

Aberdeen Fish Manure and Oil Co. v Assessor for Kincardineshire, 1916 S.C. 681; 53 S.L.R. 492; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 81.

(123)

— Machinery for "producing or transmitting first motive power" — Electric motors—Current purchased from generating station—Act 1854, sec. 42—Act 1902, sec. 1.

Machinery in certain iron works was driven by two electric motors situated in the works, the electric current required for the motors being led into the works by cables from the generating station of an electrical power company which sold electric current to consumers. The motors and the cables connecting them with a switchboard in the works were the property of the proprietors of the works; the switchboard and the cables connecting it with the generating station were the property of the electrical power company. Held that the motors were machinery for "producing or transmitting first motive power," and fell accordingly, as "lands and heritages," to be valued in the valuation roll under the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854, sec. 42, as amended by the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1902, sec. 1.

Etna Iron and Steel Co. v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1919 S.C. 474; 56 S.L.R. 113; 1919, 1 S.L.T. 29.

(124)

— Electric motors for driving machines—Combined electric motor and machine—Current purchased from generating station—Act 1854, sec. 42—Act 1902, sec. 1.

A butcher installed in his premises (1) electric motors, which drove machines for mincing and other purposes, and (2) a combined motor and meat-crushing machine known as the "Hobart." The electric current required for the motors and the "Hobart" was purchased from the Corporation of Glasgow, from whose generating station it was led into the premises by cables. The motors rested upon rails, and were kept in position by T bolts; the "Hobart" was not bolted, but rested upon a wooden box, and could be removed by simply undoing the couplings of the cables. As regarded the motors, held (1) that they were machines for "producing or transmitting first motive power" within the meaning of sec. 42 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854, as amended by sec. 1 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1902; (2) that, as such, and in respect, further, that they were in some degree fixed or attached to the solum, they came within the definition of "lands and heritages" contained in the above sections. As regarded the "Hobart" machine, held that, as there was nothing in the case to enable the Court to separate the two functions it performed, it could not, as a unumquid, be regarded as limited to the production or transmission of first motive power, and, as it could be removed from its place without the removal of any part of the building where it was situated, it was not a heritable subject. Question whether, in order to bring machinery for producing or transmitting first motive power within the definition of "lands and heritages," any attachment or fixture whatsoever is necessary.

Assessor for Glasgow v Watson, 1920 S.C. 517; 57 S.L.R. 629; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 262.

(125)

———Boilers supplying steam both for power and manufacturing processes—Pump and filters for boilers—Mechanical stokers and rakers—Shafting—Act 1854, sec. 42—Act 1902, sec. 1.

In the valuation of a paper mill, held that, under machinery or plant "for producing or transmitting first motive power," there fell to be included (1) all the boilers employed in raising steam for the engines which produced the motive power, although a portion only of the steam so raised was used in the engines, the remainder being employed directly in the manufacturing processes; (2) the pumps which fed the boilers, and the filters which cleansed the water supplied to the boilers; (3) the mechanical plant which stoked and raked out the furnaces which heated the boilers; (4) the main shafting throughout the mill, which was driven by belting directly from the engine which supplied the motive power, as distinguished from the secondary shafting driven off the main shafting. Held, accordingly, that these items were "lands and heritages" under the Lands Valuation Act, 1854, sec. 42, as amended by the Lands Valuation Amendment Act, 1902, sec. 1, and fell, as such, to be entered in the valuation roll.

Guardbridge Paper Co. v Assessor for Fife, 1921 S.C. 634; 58 S.L.R. 425; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 360.

(126)

———Electric motors—Electric dynamos—Motor generators—Rotary converters—Act 1902, sec. 1.

In a number of steel works the machinery was driven by electric motors. In some of the works the current for the motors was supplied by dynamos driven by steam engines situated within, and belonging to, the works. In others the current was purchased from an electric power company. In some of the latter works the motors were driven directly by the current so purchased without conversion; in others the current required to be converted, which was effected by one or other of two methods. By one method the purchased current drove a machine known as a "motor generator," composed of two distinct units, the motor and the converting generator driven by the motor. By the other method the purchased current drove a rotary converter, which performed the same function as the motor generator, but was an indivisible machine of which it was impossible to affirm that one part received and another produced current. Held that, under machinery or plant "for producing or transmitting first motive power," there fell to be included (1) the motors which were directly driven by the purchased current without conversion; (2) the motor portion of the motor generator; and (3) (a matter of concession) the whole rotary converter; but that there fell to be excluded (1) the steam-driven dynamos and the motors driven by the electric current produced by the dynamos, and (2) the generator portion of the motor generator, and (3) motors driven by converted current.

Colville & Sons v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1922 S.C. 460; 59 S.L.R. 347; 1922 S.L.T. 294.

(127)

Reserve or "stand-by" plant.

Of six boilers installed in a paper mill four only were used at a time, the other two being kept in reserve against any emergency. The six boilers were used in rotation. Further, certain auxiliary electric lighting plant was used only at week-ends, when the main plant was not running. Held that all the boilers and the electric lighting plant fell to be entered in the roll at their full value.

Guardbridge Paper Co. v Assessor for Fife, 1921 S.C. 634; 58 S.L.R. 425; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 360.

3. OTHER ACCESSORIES OF HERITAGE.

(128)

Tenant's fixtures.

Fixtures erected by a tenant which are heritable in a question between heir and executor, though they may be removeable in a question between landlord and tenant, fall to be entered in the roll under sec. 4 of Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1895.

Gilchrist v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1898, 25 R. 589; 35 S.L.R. 663; 5 S.L.T. 330.

(129)

Water rights — Right of millowner to water for mill—Occupier.

The proprietors of a mill had a right, under the feu contracts by which they acquired the ground on which their mill was built, to a supply of water from an aqueduct passing through the ground, in such manner as not to diminish the supply of water. For this right they were bound to pay a certain "rate or duty or ground annual," which was declared to be a real burden on the ground. The aqueduct and the water supply belonged to a water trust who were rated thereon. The magistrates and council having taken into account in the valuation of the mill the amount annually paid by the proprietors of the mill for water rights as being the annual value of an assessable subject, held (by Lord Lee) that this judgment was right (by Lord Fraser) that it was wrong. The judges being thus divided in opinion, the valuation stood.

Fleming, Reid & Co. v Assessor for Greenock, 1885, 22 S.L.R. 606.

(130)

Water for mill obtained from adjacent county—Claim to deduction in roll of county where mill situated.

The owners and occupiers of a paper mill in Clackmannanshire paid a yearly rent of £150 as tenants of a water right in Fife for water for the rest of the mill. Held that the rent paid for the tenancy of the water right in Fife should not be deducted from the annual value of the mill in Clackmannanshire, as determined on the basis of the capital value of the mill, calculated on the floor and cubic space of the mill premises according to the method universally applied in the county in the case of public works not actually let.

James Alexander Weir, Limited v Assessor for Clackmannanshire, 1901, 4 F. 513; 38 S.L.R. 853.

(131)

House fittings.

The proprietor of a house let it unfurnished, but fitted with grates, gas fittings, chandeliers, blinds, curtain poles, and picture rods. He contended that a certain percentage of the gross rent should be allowed as a deduction in respect of the said fittings, as these were moveable, but the assessor entered the gross rent in the valuation roll. Held that these fittings formed part of the lands and heritages let, and that their annual value was rightly included in the valuation.

Cowans v Assessor for Forfarshire, 1910 S.C. 810; 47 S.L.R. 382; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 263.

(132)

"Buildings and pertinents thereof"—Cast-iron plates and sleepers laid on ground in steel works—Act 1854, sec. 42.

The ground inside buildings which formed part of steel works was paved with large plain square cast-iron plates, and in some cases with old railway sleepers, which were not attached to the soil, and could be removed to any other position without fitting or alteration. They were originally laid in order to facilitate the conveyance of material to the machines, but, in works in which overhead railways had been subsequently introduced, their main use was to provide a firm and tidy flooring. Held that the plates and sleepers did not form part of the buildings, and were not "lands and heritages."

Colville & Sons v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1922 S.C. 460; 59 S.L.R. 347; 1922 S.L.T. 294.

4. TENANTS' ERECTIONS AND IMPROVEMENTS.(1) CASES BEFORE ACT OF 1895.

(133)

Additional buildings erected by the tenant under a lease for a period not exceeding twenty-one years which contains no obligation on the tenant to erect such buildings or to pay rent therefore, do not increase the valuation of the subjects leased.

Assessor for Glasgow v North British Railway Co., 1884, 11 R. 562; 21 S.L.R. 397. See also—

Duke of Richmond, 1868, 11 M. 978.

Graham Brothers, 1871, 11 M. 982; 43 J. 228; 44 J. 430; 8 S.L.R. 332; 9 S.L.R. 443.

Magistrates of Perth, 1871, 11 M. 983.

Summerlee Iron Co., 1875, 4 R. 1146.

Nitshill Coal Co., 1879, 9 R. 1238.

Nimmo & Co., 1880, 9 R. 1239.

Coltness Iron Co. v Assessor for Linlithgowshire, 1882, 10 R. 21.

Thomson v Assessor for Renfrewshire, 1883, 10 R. 500.

Gossnell v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1883, 10 R. 665.

Marr Typefoundry Co. v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1884, 11 R. 563.

Morrison's Trustees v Assessor for Coatbridge, 1893, 20 R. 616; 30 S.L.R. 610.

Furnace Gases Co. v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1893, 20 R. 620; 30 S.L.R. 609.

Coltness Iron Co. v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1895, 32 S.L.R. 426; 2 S.L.T. 521.

(2) CASES AFTER ACT OF 1895.(a) Erections or Structural Improvements.

(134)

Alterations on public-house by tenant—No alteration in rent.

The tenant of a public-house to meet objections under the Licensing Act executed an alteration on the premises at the cost of £25. The rent remained unaltered. The assessor continued the previous valuation, but added a new entry in respect of the alterations—"Part of public-house, £60." Opinions reserved on the question whether the alterations were "erections or structural improvements" within the meaning of the Act.

Peggie v Assessor for Kirkcaldy, 1901, 3 F. 462; 38 S.L.R. 492; 8 S.L.T. 409.

(135)

Offices erected by shipowners who occupied a special berth in a harbour—Lease—Act 1895, sec. 4.

The Clyde Navigation Trustees, proprietors of the quays in Glasgow harbour, allocated a special berth at one of the quays to a shipping company, during the granters' pleasure, and under reservation of a right to the trustees to use the berth for general purposes when vacant. The company paid no rent for the berth, but they rendered certain services in the matter of collecting dues. The company, with the permission of the trustees, erected offices on the quay, but they were entitled to remove them in the event of their vacating the berth. The assessor entered the offices in the valuation roll as erections or structural improvements of which the shipping company were proprietors, under sec. 4 of the Lands Valuation Amendment Act, 1895. Held that the section was inapplicable and that the entry fell to be deleted, in respect that (assuming the company to be lessees of the berth) the lease was not for a yearly rent conditioned as the fair annual value of the subject let, which was a condition precedent to the application of the section. Opinions that the shipping company were not lessees of the berth.

Assessor for Glasgow v Clyde Shipping Co., 1920 S.C. 510; 57 S.L.R. 554; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 191.

(136)

Corrugated iron sheds resting on bricks or sleepers and easily removable—Wooden shed resting on sleepers but fitted for wheels—"Erections" by lessee—Act 1854, sec. 42—Act 1895, sec. 4.

The tenant of a piece of ground placed on it two sheds as bothies for his employees and as storehouses. The sheds were made of corrugated iron, and rested on bricks or sleepers. They were so constructed that they could be taken to pieces and re-erected, and one had in fact formerly been erected elsewhere. The tenant had also placed upon the ground a wooden shed which he used as his office. It was constructed to move on wheels, but the wheels had been removed and it rested on sleepers placed on the ground. The wheels, however, were preserved, and could be replaced at any moment, if it was desired to move the shed elsewhere. Held (1) that the corrugated iron sheds were heritable subjects and fell to be entered in the valuation roll under sec. 4 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1895, as "erections" made by the lessee; (2) that the wooden shed was not a heritable subject, and, accordingly, did not fall to be entered in the valuation roll.

Assessor for Glasgow v Gilmartin, 1920 S.C. 488; 57 S.L.R. 224; 1920, 1 S.L.T. 191.

(137)

"Erections or structural improvements" by lessee—Machinery—Act 1895, sec. 4.

Heritable machines installed by a tenant are "erections" within the meaning of sec. 4 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1895.

Assessor for Glasgow v Watson, 1920 S.C. 517; 57 S.L.R. 629; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 262.

(b) Exemptions.

(138)

Agricultural purposes—Tomato house in market garden—Act 1895, sec. 4.

Held that greenhouses used for cultivating tomatoes in a market garden were not erections and structural improvements for agricultural purposes within the meaning of the exemption contained in sec. 4 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1895.

Gilchrist v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1898, 25 R. 589; 35 S.L.R. 663; 5 S.L.T. 330.

(139)

Small landholder—House and shop—Market gardening—Glass houses for tomato growing—Act 1895, sec. 4—Small Landholders (Scotland) Act, 1911.

A small landholder under the Small Landholders (Scotland) Act, 1911, on whose holding there was no house, erected thereon a building consisting of a dwelling-house of two rooms and a kitchen and a small shop. He also erected three glass houses in which he grew tomatoes, and he used the rest of his ground as a market garden. Held that the house, shop, and glass houses all fell, under sec. 4 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1895, to be entered in the roll at their fair annual value, with the holder as proprietor and occupier, in respect that they were erections made by the holder which did not fall within the exemption in sub-sec. (1) of that section of "erections or structural improvements made or acquired for agricultural purposes." Observations (per Lord Johnston) on the position of a small landholder in the matter of (a) house building, (b) market gardening.

Blane v Assessor for Ayrshire, 1915 S.C. 797; 52 S.L.R. 265; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 47.

(140)

Small landholders' houses rebuilt or enlarged for letting to summer visitors—Small Landholders (Scotland) Act, 1911.

The dwelling-houses upon the holdings of certain small landholders under the Small Landholders (Scotland) Act, 1911, who paid rent for their lands only, had been enlarged or rebuilt either by the existing holders or by their fathers to whose rights they had succeeded, for the purpose of letting to summer visitors. Held that the houses did not fall under the exemption of "erections or structural improvements made or acquired for agricultural purposes," contained in sub-sec. (1) of sec. 4 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1895, and accordingly that, under that section, they had been rightly entered in the valuation roll, with the small landholders as proprietors and occupiers, at figures representing the difference between their actual value and the value of dwelling-houses in keeping with the agricultural requirements of the holdings.

Sym v Assessor for Bute, 1915 S.C. 781; 52 S.L.R. 199; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 41.

(141)

Improvements for working or cleaning minerals — Clayfield—"Minerals"—Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1895, sec. 4, exemption (2).

A tenant who under his lease had right to dig and take clay to a considerable depth below the surface made certain erections upon the ground let to him, which he used exclusively for the purpose of working the clay. Held that "clay" was a "mineral" within the meaning of exemption (2) of sec. 4 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1895, and that the erections fell to be deleted from the roll.

Assessor for Portobello v Mitchell & Sons, 1896, 23 R. 686; 33 S.L.R. 520.

(142)

Electric lighting plant—Act 1895, sec. 4, exemption (2).

The tenant of a colliery erected electric lighting plant at the colliery. The light was not supplied for any purpose except the ordinary business of surface operations at the colliery and the lighting of the pit bottom. Held that the electric lighting plant was within exemption (2) of sec. 4 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1895, and did not fall to be entered in the roll.

Assessor for Fife v Wemyss Coal Co., 1903, 5 F. 505.

(143)

Mineral lease—Rent paid by royalties—Value of erections included in royalties—Act 1895, sec. 4, exemption (2).

A firm of brick manufacturers, lessees of minerals under a thirty-one years' lease for which rent was paid by royalties, erected new buildings on the subjects let as a head office for their whole business, which worked two other mineral fields held under different leases. Held that the new buildings fell to be valued and entered in the roll as separate subjects under sec. 4 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1895; repelling the pleas (1) that, as the buildings had been erected to facilitate the increasing output of the business, their value was already included in the valuation of the subjects of the lease, which was based from year to year on the increasing amount of the royalties, and (2) that, in any event, they fell under the exemption in sec. 4, of erections used exclusively for the purpose of working the minerals.

John G. Stein & Co. v Assessor for Stirlingshire, 1915 S.C. 775; 52 S.L.R. 196; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 436.

(144)

Act 1895, sec. 4, exemptions (2) and (3).

A tenant of certain seams of fireclay and quarries of rotten rock and freestone rock under a lease which stipulated for a fixed rent or for a royalty on every ton of these minerals carried away, erected certain kilns in which the rotten rock and freestone rock, after being quarried, was dried, and also certain buildings containing two boilers, an engine, and pan-mills, in which the fireclay, rotten rock, and freestone rock were ground. Held (1) that these erections did not fall within the meaning of exemption (2) in respect that they were used for converting the minerals on which the royalty was payable into a finished product; and (2) that they did not fall under exemption (3), in respect that the royalty was not calculated upon the finished product, but upon the raw mineral.

Garthverrie Fireclay Co. v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1897, 24 R. 738; 34 S.L.R. 619; 4 S.L.T. 295.

(145)

Structures in which minerals are treated—Mineral lease—Granite crushing plant—Act 1895, sec. 4, exemption (3).

A lease of granite quarries, including a site for a granite crushing plant, stipulated for the payment in lieu of rent of certain specified royalties upon all products of the quarries sold by the tenants, including a royalty on every ton of "crushed granite manufactured" by the tenants. The tenants erected a crusher in which they broke up stones which, by reason of their inferior quality or size, could not be used for more profitable purposes. Held that the plant was exempted from entry in the valuation roll under sec. 4 (3) of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1895, in respect that it was a "structure" for "treating" minerals, and that one of the royalties was calculated upon the minerals as so treated.

D. H. & J. Newall v Assessor for Kirkcudbrightshire, 1919 S.C. 468; 56 S.L.R. 110; 1919, 1 S.L.T. 13.

(146)

Kilns for baking blaes—Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1895, sec. 4, exemption (3).

Held that kilns, ovens and other apparatus for grinding, moulding and baking blaes, and turning the same out in the form of bricks, were structures in which minerals were treated within the meaning of exemption (3).

Assessor for Stirlingshire v Stein & Co., 1900, 2 F. 596; 37 S.L.R. 656; 7 S.L.T. 385.

(147)

Buildings and machinery for dressing stone—Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1895, sec. 4 (3).

Held that the exemption in sec. 4 (3) did not apply to buildings and machinery used for cutting and dressing stone by mechanical means.

Scottish Freestone Quarries v Assessor for Dumfriesshire, 1900, 2 F. 602; 37 S.L.R. 660; 7 S.L.T. 465.

(148)
Rent calculated by minerals treated in erections—Act 1895, sec. 4 (3).

A chemical company under agreement acquired right to recover the tar and ammonia from the gases of the adjoining blast furnaces of an iron company at a royalty of one shilling per ton on the coal consumed in the furnaces of the latter. They erected buildings for the purpose of working the gas on a piece of ground adjoining the ironworks, which had been leased to them under the agreement. Held that as the lease was not a lease of minerals, exemption (3) of sec. 4 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act did not apply.

Furnace Gases Co. v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1896, 23 R. 689; 30 S.L.R. 609.

(149)
Lordship calculated upon minerals as treated in such structures—Act 1895, sec. 4 (3).

Blaes were let at a fixed rent or, in the option of the landlord, at a lordship per ton of bricks or goods manufactured at the works in kilns erected by the tenant. Held that the rent or lordship stipulated in the lease was calculated upon the minerals as treated in the structures and that the exemption in sec. 4 (3) applied to the kilns.

Held further, that it was not a ground for taking the structures out of the exemption that the tenant had power to make bricks therein out of blaes of clay brought from elsewhere.

Assessor for Stirlingshire v Stein & Co., 1900, 2 F. 596; 37 S.L.R. 656; 7 S.L.T. 385.

(150)
Lordship stipulated for unmanufactured minerals removed—Act 1895, sec. 4 (3).

A mineral lease stipulated for a lordship of 6d. per ton on unmanufactured clay removed from the lands, and for a lordship of 6½d. upon goods manufactured in the kilns erected by the tenant.

Held that it was not a ground for taking the structures out of the exemption in sec. 4 (3) that a lordship was stipulated under the lease for clay removed in an unmanufactured state.

Cleghorn Terra-Cotta Co. v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1900, 2 F. 600; 37 S.L.R. 658; 7 S.L.T. 386.

5. CUMULO OR SEPARATE VALUATION.

(151)
Dwelling-house with adjuncts.
Opinion (per Lord Fraser) that where premises consist of a dwelling-house and adjuncts the assessor ought to value the whole as one subject.

M'Jannet v Assessor for Stirling, 1882, 10 R. 32; 19 S.L.R. 590.

(152)
Farmhouse and farm.
Held that the dwelling-house attached to a farm should not be separately entered in the valuation roll.

Henderson, 1871, 11 M. 985; 44 J. 431; 9 S.L.R. 445.

(153)
Farm buildings within special district—Principle of valuation—Local Government (Scotland) Act, 1894, sec. 45, sub-sec. (1).

Of a farm of 223 acres, 9 acres, including the farmhouse and steadings, lay within a special water supply and drainage district. The assessor, in valuing the 9 acres, included the value of the buildings thereon. Held that the farm, with the farm buildings, should have been valued as a unum quid, and the amount distributed proportionally to acreage.

Forbes Irvine v Assessor for Aberdeen-shire, 1897, 24 R. 741; 34 S.L.R. 622.

(154)
Grass parks farmed by proprietor as one holding.

An assessor entered separately, each at the rent it produced for grazing purposes, a number of grass parks in the proprietor's occupation, which he farmed as one holding, on the ground that some of the parks might be included in a drainage district, which it was in contemplation to form, and would then have to be assessed separately. Held that the assessor's entry was wrong, and that the holding ought to be entered as a unum quid.

Maitland v Assessor for Midlothian, 1893, 20 R. 628; 30 S.L.R. 618.

(155)
House and lands not contiguous.
Held that the occupant of lands and a house in different parts of the same parish was not entitled to have them entered together as one holding with a view to their being jointly assessed for poor rates.

Glass, 1872, 11 M. 988; 44 J. 433; 9 S.L.R. 446.

(156)
Hotel and stables.
 A property, owned and occupied by a hotel-keeper, consisted of a hotel situated in a main street and, behind the hotel, stables and a stable yard opening on to a side street. There was no internal communication between the stables and the hotel, but the two back doors of the hotel opened into the stable yard. Ordinary hiring was done in the stables in addition to business immediately connected with the hotel. Held that the hotel and stables were rightly valued by the assessor as a unum quid.

Philip v Assessor for County of Elgin, 1912 S.C. 774; 49 S.L.R. 160; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 508.

(157)
Bank buildings with dwelling-houses occupied by bank officials.
 The premises of certain banks, including the banking office and the dwelling-houses of certain bank officials, were entered in the valuation roll as a unum quid at one cumulo valuation. The banks appealed, and maintained that the offices and dwelling-houses ought to be separately valued for the purposes of the Valuation Acts, and in order to satisfy the purpose of a local Act which in authorising an assessment made a distinction between the assessment of dwelling-houses and offices. In the case of some of the banks the dwelling-houses were entirely detached from the bank buildings, in others they formed part of the bank buildings, but had no internal communication with the business premises; in others they formed part of the bank buildings, and were connected by internal communication with the business premises. The Court, while of opinion that the provisions of the local assessing Act had no effect upon the question of valuation, which must be ruled by the provisions of the Valuation Acts, held (1) in cases where the dwelling-houses were entirely detached from the bank buildings, that they ought to be separately valued; (2) where they formed part of the main building, and had internal communication with the business premises, that the whole ought to be valued as a unum quid.

Bank of Scotland v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1890, 17 R. 839; 27 S.L.R. 611.

Bank of Scotland v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1891, 18 R. 936; 28 S.L.R. 619.

(158)

Co-operative store, including separate industries.

St. Cuthbert's Co-operative Association v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1896, 23 R. 681; 33 S.L.R. 487; 3 S.L.T. 278, No. 316, infra.

(159)

Cumulo rent for two sets of premises—Part of rent declared to be interest on price of one set.

A lease of two contiguous sets of premises fixed a certain sum as rent, of which part was apportioned to one portion of the premises, and another part was declared to be interest on the price of the other portion, and on the cost of meliorations, which consisted in connecting the two sets of premises for business purposes. The connection was shut up and one of the sets of premises let to a sub-tenant. Held that the subjects were properly assessed at the total sum stipulated as rent, under deduction only of the rent stipulated in the sub-lease.

Riley, Webster & Borland v Assessor for Glasgow, 1883, 20 S.L.R. 321.

(160)

Public park—Houses and offices situated in and used in connection therewith.

Held that houses and offices situated in and used by the officials of a public park belonging to the Corporation of Glasgow did not fall to be separately entered and valued in the valuation roll, but that the park, houses, and offices fell to be treated as a unum quid.

Glasgow Parish Council v Assessor for Glasgow, 1912 S.C. 818; 49 S.L.R. 315; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 157, 171.

(161)

Cemetery with superintendent's house and greenhouse — Assessment — Exemption of burial ground from assessments and rates—Rating Exemptions (Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 1.

A house and greenhouse were situated within a cemetery, the only access being by the cemetery gate. The house was the residence and office of the superintendent, and the greenhouse was used for storing and forcing plants bedded out in the cemetery. Held that the cemetery, the house, and the greenhouse all fell to be entered in the valuation roll as a unum quid. Observations on the bearing of this decision upon the question whether the houses fell under the statutory exemption from assessments and rates conferred on burial grounds by the Rating Exemptions (Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 1.

Edinburgh Parish Council v Edinburgh Magistrates, 1912 S.C. 793; 49 S.L.R. 307; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 129.

(162)

Asylum—Farm and houses occupied in connection therewith.

A parochial board erected a lunatic asylum for the treatment of pauper lunatics. They acquired at different periods land for farming purposes to afford occupation for the lunatics, and erected residences for the medical superintendent and the employees. The asylum, the medical superintendent's house, and the other houses, were separately entered in the valuation roll, and the lands continued also to be entered separately as they were before being acquired for asylum purposes. Held that, as the asylum had under the Lunacy Acts no other character than that of a lunacy ward of a poorhouse, the other subjects could not be regarded as pertinents thereof, and that the separate entries were right.

Barony Parochial Board v Assessor for Dumbartonshire, 1882, 10 R. 39; 19 S.L.R. 728.

(163)

In the case of an asylum for pauper lunatics held that all the asylum buildings and offices were rightly valued as a unum quid, but that a farm and plantation used as an adjunct to the asylum fell to be valued separately.

Govan District Lunacy Board v Assessor for Renfrewshire, 1899, 1 F. 591; 36 S.L.R. 603.

(164)

Two houses used as homes for incurables—Laundry—Farm land—Principle of valuation—Rate per bed.

An association owned a property, extending to about 48 acres, on which there were two houses used as homes for incurables, another house used as a laundry for the two homes, and houses for employees. The assessor entered each of the two homes, the laundry, the employees' houses, and the farm land separately in the valuation roll—his aggregate valuation of the whole being £568. Held that the two homes and the laundry were to be valued as a unum quid at £400 (which was approximately £3 per patient's bed) instead of £467, the aggregate of the assessor's valuation of these three subjects, and that the other subjects had been rightly entered by the assessor.

Glasgow Association for the Relief of Incurables v Assessor for Dumbartonshire, 1907 S.C. 769; 44 S.L.R. 441; 14 S.L.T. 878.

(165)

School and playground.

Merchant Company Education Board v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1911 S.C. 948; 48 S.L.R. 387; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 233, No. 322, infra.

(166)

Oil-works and coalfield.

Held that oil-works connected with a coalfield were properly entered separately in the valuation roll.

Drumgray Coal Co., 1867, 11 M. 977.

(167)

Additional rent payable for ground taken for purposes of lease.

The tenants of shale, under a lease for thirty-one years, were entitled to take in addition ground for the purposes of the lease on payment "for all ground that may be occupied, used, or taken by them for any of the purposes before mentioned, and for all surface damages or other damages." Held that such ground being separately let for more than twenty-one years, the oil works erected thereon by the tenants fell to be separately valued on the footing of the tenants being proprietors.

Dalmeny Oil Co. v Assessor for Linlithgowshire, 1884, 11 R. 566; 21 S.L.R. 400.

(168)

Minerals and houses—Lease of minerals and houses for thirty-one years—Whether tenant to be separately entered as proprietor of houses.

By a lease for thirty-one years the minerals in certain lands were let to a tenant at a lordship of one-ninth of all the metals smelted. The subjects let also included "washing-floors, smelting-mills, houses, buildings, parks, and other grounds at Leadhills." The tenant was empowered to make certain additions to his works, and was bound to make certain improvements, and to maintain his houses in good condition during the currency of his lease. The subjects let were entered in the valuation roll at £1705 9s., being the amount of the lordship, but the duration of the lease being over twenty-one years, the tenant was, in accordance with sec. 6 of the Valuation of Lands Act, 1854, also entered as proprietor of the miners' houses, mansion house occupied by the manager, &c., which were valued at £111 10s. The tenant objected to this valuation on the ground that the assessor in taking the miners' houses, &c., at their full value, and the minerals at the full amount of the lordship paid, had valued the houses twice over. On an appeal against the valuation, held that by the terms of the lease the lordship covered all the subjects let, and that no separate value should be entered for the miners' houses and mansion house.

Leadhills Silver, Lead Mining, and Smelting Co. v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1886, 13 R. 827; 23 S.L.R. 611.

(169)

Mineral lease for thirty-one years with right to take surface for house on compensating agricultural tenant—Valuation of houses after termination of agricultural lease.

A company was entitled, under a lease of minerals for thirty-one years from Whitsunday, 1874, to take portions of the surface as sites for miners' houses on condition of compensating the agricultural tenant for damage during the agricultural lease which ended at Martinmas, 1891, and of thereafter paying a certain rent per acre for the ground to the end of the mineral lease. The company was to be entitled to remove the houses at the end of its lease. The company erected miners' houses at various dates prior to Martinmas, 1891. The assessor, regarding the company as tenant of the houses under a thirty-one years' lease, entered it in the valuation roll as proprietor of the houses, and entered the houses at their annual value. In an appeal, held that the company could only be regarded as tenant of the surface under a lease for the fourteen years from Martinmas, 1891, to the end of the mineral lease, and that being entitled to remove the houses at the end of the lease it could only be entered as tenant at the rent payable under the lease.

Merry & Cuninghame v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1895, 22 R. 586; 32 S.L.R. 429.

(170)

Separate consideration for houses and stores—Whether deduction to be made from rent of minerals.

By a lease for thirty-one years the coal, ironstone, and other minerals in certain lands were let for a fixed rent or, at the landlord's option, for lordships, with right to the tenant to use and occupy the stores, manager's house, and dwellings for workmen situated on the lands, the tenant being taken bound to relieve the landlord of all feu-duties (which amounted to £78) payable to the landlord's superior in respect of some of those houses, and to pay to him a ground rent on an agricultural value for the remainder, which were built on ground belonging to the landlord himself, and also to relieve the landlord of his share of the taxes. Held that under the lease there was payable, in respect of the houses and stores, a consideration separate from the fixed rent or lordships, and that therefore, as the lease was for more than twenty-one years, the houses and stores were to be separately entered in the valuation roll at their fair annual value independently of the lease.

William Dixon, Limited v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1884, 11 R. 844; 21 S.L.R. 562.

(171)

Held subsequently that the fixed rent or lordships were payable solely for the minerals which fell to be entered at the full value without deduction of the value of the houses and stores.

William Dixon, Limited v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1885, 12 R. 639; 22 S.L.R. 385.

(172)

Mill—Water power for which separate payment stipulated in feu contract.

The proprietors of a mill had right under their feu contract to the use of the water power derived from an aqueduct which passed through their grounds. For this use they were bound to pay their superiors "a rate or duty or ground annual," which was declared to be a real burden on the ground. This duty was entered in the valuation roll as part of the superior's property, and the millowners were also entered for the mill at a sum made up of the feu-duty, the water duty, and 6½ per cent. on the cost of the mill buildings. The valuation of the mill having been confirmed by the magistrates and town council, the millowners took a case, objecting to feu-duty and water duty being treated as part of the value, on the grounds that they were burdens, not privileges, and that the superior having been properly entered as owner of the water rights, to enter them as the property of the appellants was to subject them to double valuation. The valuation stood, the judges being divided in opinion, Lord Lee holding that the mode of valuation was right, while Lord Fraser held that it was erroneous, the statutory rule being to ascertain the rent a tenant would give for the mill with all its privileges.

Fleming, Reid & Co. v Assessor for Greenock, 1884, 11 R. 857; 21 S.L.R. 594.

See also James Alexander Weir, Limited v Assessor for Clackmannanshire, 1901, 4 F. 513; 33 S.L.R. 853, No. 356, infra.

(173)

Harbour and fixed machinery.

Ayr Harbour Trustees v Assessor for Ayr, 1894, 21 R. 807; 31 S.L.R. 726; 2 S.L.T. 47, No. 369, infra.

V. VALUE.

1. GENERAL PRINCIPLES OF VALUATION.

(174)

Private knowledge of valuation committee.

Observed that the Court will not disturb valuations reached by a valuation committee in the light of their own local knowledge, unless there has been an error in principle.

Cadzow Coal Co. v Assessor for Hamilton, 1905, 7 F. 413; 42 S.L.R. 502; 12 S.L.T. 828.

(175)

Observed that the magistrates were not entitled to take into consideration facts regarding the private affairs of a firm or its partners, said to be within their personal knowledge, when these facts were neither admitted nor proved.

Craiks, Limited v Assessor for Forfar, 1909 S.C. 658; 46 S.L.R. 438; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 269.

(176)

Held that a valuation committee are not entitled to proceed upon facts not admitted or proved, but stated by them to be within their personal knowledge, unless these facts are public matters or matters of common knowledge; and that the accommodation of a public-house whose valuation is in question, its condition several years earlier, and the rents and other particulars of similar houses in the neighbourhood with which it is compared, are not matters that fall within that category.

Moyes v Assessor for Perth, 1912 S.C. 761; 49 S.L.R. 154; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 460.

(177)

Onus.

The Valuation Appeal Judges are unwilling to disturb the valuation approved by the valuation committee, when the committee appear to have proceeded on a sufficiently correct principle, and when they state that, having applied their minds to the question of the rent obtainable in the market, they are satisfied that the value entered could be obtained for the subjects in the market.

British Oil and Guano Co. v Assessor for Ross and Cromarty, 1900, 2 F. 605; 37 S.L.R. 659; 7 S.L.T. 387.

(178)

Matters of detail.

The Court will not interfere with a determination of the valuation committee on a question of detail where there is no question of principle involved, and where there is evidence before the committee which could support the determination.

Fortescue v Assessor for Kincardineshire, 1894, 31 S.L.R. 474.

(179)

Onus on assessor to justify increase of valuation.

Where an electric lighting undertaking had for five years been assessed at the same figure, and the assessor increased the valuation, held that the onus was on him to show cause why the valuation should be increased, and that as he had failed to do so, the valuation should remain as before.

North of Scotland Electric Light and Power Co. v Assessor for Brechin, 1909 S.C. 655; 46 S.L.R. 436; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 227.

(180)

—Alleged general rise in prices—
Licensed premises.

A burgh assessor, in valuing for the year 1920-1921 the hotels, public-houses, and licensed grocers' premises in the burgh in the occupation of their owners, added 33½ per cent. to the values which had appeared in the roll for several years previously. In appeals heard by the valuation committee the assessor led no evidence to justify the increase, and no rebutting evidence was led by the appellants. The committee, proceeding upon their knowledge that, during the preceding four or five years, prices in general had risen considerably, increased all the valuations by 30 per cent. Held (1) that a general rise in prices did not necessarily involve an increase in the value of the class of heritable subjects under consideration; and (2) that, as the assessor had not attempted to discharge the onus which lay upon him of proving that the value of the subjects had increased, the former values fell to be restored.

Maxwell v Assessor for Galashiels, 1921 S.C. 629; 58 S.L.R. 352; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 272.

(181)

—Bona fide lease—Statutory power to increase rent—Power not exercised—Act 1854, sec. 6—Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920.

The lease of a dwelling-house expired at Whitsunday, 1920, and was renewed by tacit relocation for the year to Whitsunday, 1921. By the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920, which came into force in July of that year and applied to the house in question, the existing restrictions against raising the rents of such subjects were modified to the extent of permitting landlords to raise rents by 30 per cent. The landlord did not raise the rent for the remainder of the current lease, and stated that he did not intend to do so. The assessor entered the subjects in the valuation roll for the year 1920-1921 at a figure representing the increased rent which the landlord might have demanded under the Act. In an appeal the assessor referred to the provisions of the Act, but led no evidence. Held that the subjects fell, under sec. 6 of the Lands Valuation Act, 1854, to be entered in the roll at the rent payable by the tenant under the lease, the assessor having failed to discharge the onus that was upon him of showing that that rent was not a bona fide rent.

Anderson v Assessor for Peebles, 1921 S.C. 605; 58 S.L.R. 242; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 148.

(182)

—Owner-occupiers—Appeal committee fixing flat rate increase without evidence—Appellants called on to show that increase inapplicable in their cases—Ordinary subjects—Subjects falling under Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915—Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920.

The valuation committees of the upper and lower wards of Renfrewshire, in dealing with appeals by owner-occupiers for the year 1920-21, having in view the extraordinarily large number of appeals presented, adopted the following procedure. Having classified the cases in various categories, and having heard an argument in each class of case, the committees, without hearing any evidence, announced that, in the case of houses, shops, public works, and public buildings, they would add 20 per cent. to the valuations of the preceding year, except in any case in which the appellant could adduce good reason for taking his case out of the general category. Thereafter a number of individual cases were heard, and the appeals were dismissed, including a case relating to a dwelling-house of the class to which the Increase of Rent Acts, 1915 to 1920, applied. In none of the cases was any evidence led by the assessor. Held (by a majority of the Court) that the method adopted by the committee was illegal, the onus of proof being upon the assessor and not upon the appellants; and that, in the absence of proof by the assessor of any increase in values, the former valuations fell to be restored, except in the case of the dwelling-house above referred to, where it was legitimate to assume, in the absence of proof to the contrary by the appellant, that, had he desired to let his house, the statutory increase recently permitted under the Increase of Rent Act, 1920, might have been obtained.

Naismith v Assessor for Renfrewshire, 1921 S.C. 615; 58 S.L.R. 344; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 265.

(183)

Onus of proof on claimant for decreased valuation.

Where licensed premises, let under a lease, had been entered in the valuation roll in former years, without objection, at a certain figure, and no change of circumstances had supervened, except the assignment of the lease by the original tenant to another tenant, the assessor entered the subject in the roll at the former figure. Held, in an appeal at the instance of the new tenant, that the assessor had acted rightly, and that the onus of proving the valuation to be excessive lay upon the appellant.

Livingston v Assessor for Paisley, 1909, 46 S.L.R. 433; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 230.

(184)

Date at which value falls to be determined—Small dwelling-house let by month—Statutory increase of rent subsequent to Whitsunday—Landlord's failure to give necessary notice—Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920.

In valuing, for the year Whitsunday, 1920, to Whitsunday, 1921, a miner's house let by the month, the assessor took for the first three months of the period the rent at which the house was let (the "standard" rent under the Rent Restrictions Acts), and for the remaining nine months the increased rent which the landlord would then be entitled to exact under the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act of 2nd July, 1920, and which he had intimated to the tenant he would demand. The assessor added these figures together, and entered the total as the yearly value of the subjects. Held (1) that the assessor was entitled to determine the market value of the subjects as at the date when he made up the roll (i.e., in August, 1920) instead of as at Whit-sunday, 1920, and, accordingly, was justified in taking into account the increased rent which had become exigible; (2) that the fact that the landlord might not have given a valid notice to the tenant to enable him to exact the additional rent did not affect the question.

M'Garrity v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1921 S.C. 652; 58 S.L.R. 422; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 357.

(185)

Failure to supply assessor with adequate information.

Forrest's Factor v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1920 S.C. 496; 57 S.L.R. 563; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 194, No. 235, infra.

Scouller v Assessor for Glasgow, 1912 S.C. 757; 49 S.L.R. 152; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 491, No. 331, infra.

Cowan & Sons v Assessor for Midlothian, 1894, 21 R. 812; 31 S.L.R. 733; 2 S.L.T. 48, No. 352, infra.

(186)

Subjects held under burden of restrictions

—Public hall erected by private person.

A proprietor conveyed a plot of ground to trustees, with directions to erect a public hall thereon for the use of a town of some 2000 inhabitants. There were a variety of restrictions as to the purposes for which the trustees might allow the hall to be used. They were empowered to impose such charges as they thought fit, and the revenue was to be applied to defray expenses. The hall was built at a cost of £4000, but, as managed by the trustees, it was carried on at a loss. The assessor entered the hall at £110, being somewhat less than 3 per cent. on the cost of its erection. The trustees appealed to the county valuation committee, and contended that the valuation should be on the principle of taking the net income after deducting expenses, but, as in the particular case that would result in the hall being treated as of no value at all, they stated that they were willing that value should be taken as £50. The valuation committee reduced the assessor's valuation to £80. The trustees having appealed, held that, in the circumstances, the committee were right.

Opinions as to the principle of valuation to be adopted in cases where the subjects are burdened with restrictions imposed by private persons.

Blyth Hall Trustees v Assessor for Fife, 1883, 10 R. 659; 20 S.L.R. 433.

[Cf. Dee Salmon Fisheries Co. v Assessor for Aberdeen, 1915 S.C. 790; 52 S.L.R. 178; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 457, No. 214, infra.]

(187)

—Road constructed by private proprietor for public use without power of making profit out of tolls.

A proprietor entered into an agreement with certain persons by which he agreed to construct, at his own expense, for their use and for that of the public, a private road passing through his lands, they contributing to the cost of its construction by paying for twenty-five years an annual sum to repay the cost of its construction and interest thereon. He had power to levy tolls for the upkeep of the road, but he was not to be entitled to "make any personal profit" out of such tolls. The road was duly made, and was entered by the assessor in the valuation roll at a rent equal to the annual payments. In an appeal, the proprietor maintained that no valuation should enter the roll. The Court sustained the valuation, holding that although by the agreement the proprietor had voluntarily placed himself under restrictions which prevented his deriving personal profit from the road, it was not thereby exempt from assessment.

Duke of Montrose v Assessor for Perthshire, 1890, 17 R. 854; 27 S.L.R. 632.

(188)

—Public park.

Though a person puts his lands under restrictions so that they cannot be made a source of profit, by making them a public park for behoof of the inhabitants of a burgh for all time, these lands are nevertheless liable to assessment, and should be entered in the valuation roll; and in ascertaining their value for the purposes of the valuation roll such restrictions must be disregarded.

Carnegie Dunfermline Trustees v Dunfermline Assessor, 1909 S.C. 678; 46 S.L.R. 451; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 286.

See also Glasgow Abstiners' Union v Assessor for Argyllshire, 1906, 8 F. 500; 43 S.L.R. 320; 13 S.L.T. 765, No. 363, infra.

(189)

Insanitary houses—Occupiers ordered by proprietors to quit—Occupiers remaining under Increase of Rent (Restrictions) Acts—No rent accepted by proprietors.

The proprietors of a number of miners' houses, being of opinion that the houses were insanitary and unfit for habitation, suggested to the local authority that they should either take over the houses as part of a housing scheme or pronounce a closing order with regard to them. The local authority, while admitting the bad condition of the houses, took no action in the matter, and the proprietors then issued notices to the occupiers of the houses requesting them to quit, and intimating that no rents would be accepted. These notices were disregarded, and, owing to the provisions of the Increase of Rent (Restrictions) Acts, the proprietors were debarred from ejecting the occupiers. The houses having been entered in the valuation roll at the rents formerly payable, the proprietors appealed, contending that the subjects should not be entered in the roll at all, or, alternatively, that they should be entered at the value of nil. Held that the fact that the houses were occupied by persons who were legally entitled to occupy them and legally bound to pay rent showed that the houses had a lettable value at which they must be entered in the roll; and the valuations of the assessor sustained.

Alexander's Trustees v Assessor for Ayrshire, 1922 S.C. 453; 59 S.L.R. 343; 1922 S.L.T. 275.

Subjects unfinished or unfit for occupation.
[See 3 (2) (n), infra.]

2. SUBJECTS LET.

(1) WHETHER AGREEMENT IS LEASE.

(190)

Lease or joint-adventure with landowner.

The proprietor of a slate quarry entered into a lease for fifteen years, under which the tenant was to pay a fixed rent of £1000, or alternatively, in the option of the bankrupt, "a lordship or royalty" of one-half of the free profits of the tenant, after deducting interest on the capital which he had advanced for carrying on the works, and after paying the necessary expenses of working, and in addition to pay the sum of £400, provided that the profits of the tenant were not thereby reduced below the sum of £1000. One-half of the working plant was to be supplied by the proprietor and one-half by the tenant. The proprietor in one year elected to take the lordship, &c., by which he received £1870, which sum was entered as the value of the quarries in the valuation roll instead of the £1000 of fixed rent entered in previous years. The proprietor and the tenant took a case for the opinion of the Valuation Appeal Judges, maintaining (1) that the contract was partly a contract of lease at a fixed rent of £1000, which was to be taken as the value whether the landlord drew it or not, and partly a contract of joint-adventure; and (2) that, in any event, if a share of profits was regarded as rent, deduction must be allowed for tenants' profits, depreciation of plant, &c. The judges were of opinion that the contract was a proper contract of lease, and that £1870 had been rightly entered as the annual value.

Beresford's Trustee, &c. v Assessor for Argyllshire, 1884, 11 R. 818; 21 S.L.R. 544.

(191)

Agreement between town council and electricity supply company for construction and carrying on of electricity supply works—Whether annual payment by company to corporation was rent.

The town council of Bo'ness entered into an agreement with a company to construct and maintain suitable works for the supply and distribution of electricity, the company for a specified period of years to have the management and control of the undertaking, and to pay to the town council a sum of 6 per cent. per annum on the amount of the capital expenditure by the town council. Held that the agreement did not, on a construction of its provisions as a whole, import a lease between the town council and the company, and that the annual payment made thereunder was not rent.

Bo'ness Magistrates v Assessor for Linlithgowshire, 1907 S.C. 774; 44 S.L.R. 437; 14 S.L.T. 888.

(192)

Lease for twenty-eight years with breaks—Duration of lease—Act 1854, sec. 6.

The Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Act, 1854, sec. 6, enacts that where heritable subjects are let for more than twenty-one years the yearly value shall be ascertained irrespective of the rent in the lease, and the lessee shall be deemed to be the proprietor. Where a shop was let for twenty-eight years, the lease providing (1) a break in favour of the tenant at the expiry of each period of seven years, (2) an increase of the annual rent periodically every seven years, held that until the tenant took advantage of a break, the lease must be regarded as one of more than twenty-one years' duration, and that the assessor was justified in disregarding the rent in the lease in valuing the premises.

Bishop v Assessor for Paisley, 1910 S.C. 821; 47 S.L.R. 372; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 158.

(2) WHETHER LEASE BONA FIDE.

[See also (3) (c), infra.]

(193)

Lease by pro indiviso proprietors to one of themselves as tenant—Public-house.

The pro indiviso proprietors of a public-house let it to one of their number at a rent of £16, and the tenant, without any obligation on him to do so, executed at his own expense any alterations and repairs required by the Licensing Court. The valuation committee disregarded the rent paid, and fixed the valuation at £34. Held that the committee were entitled to disregard the rent paid, not because the tenant executed all the repairs himself, which was not per se a ground for disregarding the rent, but because the position of the tenant as one of the pro indiviso proprietors gave him an undue influence in the fixing of the rent.

Higgins v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1911 S.C. 931; 48 S.L.R. 357; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 135.

(194)

Tenant a company of which landlord a partner—Hotel—Adequacy of rent—Act 1854, sec. 6.

Where a hotel was bona fide let to a firm consisting of the owner and two other partners having equal interests in the profits of the hotel, held that the mere fact that the owner was one of the partners did not displace the rule that the rent stated in the lease was the measure of value.

M'Lachlan v Assessor for Ayr, 1897, 24 R. 734; 34 S.L.R. 618; 4 S.L.T. 297.

(195)

Lease to company of which landlords had controlling interest.

A firm, consisting of two partners, leased premises to a joint-stock company for a rent of £360. The capital of the company consisted of 2599 shares, of which each of the lessors held 1288 shares, the remaining 23 shares being held among five other persons. The assessor entered the subjects in the valuation roll at the yearly value of £730, and the magistrates confirmed the valuation, holding that the lease was not a bona fide lease. Held that the magistrates were right.

Bell v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1904, 6 F. 501; 41 S.L.R. 490; 12 S.L.T. 18.

(196)

Lease to nominee for behoof of landlord.

A public-house, let to a tenant at a rent of £130 on a lease current till 1913, was purchased in 1903 by a firm of wine merchants and a firm of brewers jointly, under burden of the lease. Subsequently the lease was assigned by the sitting tenant, with consent of the proprietors, to a new tenant, the rent being afterwards (in consideration of certain improvements on the premises) increased to £180. There was an agreement between the proprietors and the new tenant, the terms of which were not fully disclosed, but it appeared that the former advanced funds to enable the latter to purchase the goodwill, and in return received a share of the profits and interest on the advances; and also supplied the spirits and beer required, and controlled the banking of the tenant's drawings. Held that in these circumstances the assessor was entitled to disregard the lease and the stipulated rent in fixing the entry for the valuation roll, as the tenant appeared, on the information before the Court, to hold merely for behoof of the landlords.

Usher v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1911 S.C. 912; 48 S.L.R. 354; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 200.

(197)

Lease by husband to wife.

Heritable subjects were let by the proprietrix to her husband at a rent of £40. It appeared that this was not a bona fide letting at a rent conditioned as the fair annual value of the subjects, and the Court affirmed a valuation of £140, which the commissioners of supply, after inspecting the subjects and comparing them with those of a similar character immediately adjoining, had placed upon them.

Thomson v Assessor for Upper Ward of Renfrewshire, 1884, 21 S.L.R. 546.

(198)

Lease by father to son.

Held that the value of a farm let by a father to his son should be entered at the rent stated in the lease.

Bruce, 1868, 11 M. 978.

(199)

The proprietor of an estate let one of his farms to his son on a fifteen years' lease from Martinmas, 1896, at £133 of rent.

The assessor entered the farm in the valuation roll for 1901-1902 at £165. The proprietor appealed, pleading that the valuation ought to be £133—the rent in the lease. The assessor maintained that, as the lease was between near relatives, it could not be taken as conclusive as to rent, and he adduced the evidence of two valuers to the effect that £165 was the true yearly value. The valuation committee, while not doubting the bona fides of the lease, sustained the assessor's valuation. Held that the valuation committee were wrong.

Reid v Assessor for Orkney, 1902, 4 F. 543; 39 S.L.R. 854; 9 S.L.T. 508.

(200)

Sub-lease at increased rent.

A father let to his son for nineteen years, from Martinmas, 1873, lands which were at the time in the possession of many small tenants. The lease gave the son power to raise the rents, remove tenants, and generally to exercise all the powers of the landlord, subject to his father's approval. In return the son became bound to pay his father a rent of £1199, which at the date of the lease was £50 under the collective rents due by the small tenants, and in 1881 was £725 below the annual value. Held that the lands had not been let to the son at a "yearly rent conditioned as the fair annual value thereof without grassum or consideration other than the rent."

Bruce v Assessor for Zetland, 1882, 10 R. 34; 19 S.L.R. 590.

See also Lawson's Representatives v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1883, 10 R. 663; 20 S.L.R. 432, No. 218, infra.

(201)

Lease by father's trustees to son.

A deceased farmer's testamentary trustees (consisting of his widow, who was the life-rentrix, and her two sons) let the farm and shootings, which for many years had been entered in the roll at £235, to one of the sons at a rent of £175, without advertisement or any attempt to get another tenant. The lease contained, inter alia, a clause by which the tenant renounced any claims competent to him at the outgoing under the Agricultural Holdings (Scotland) Act, 1908, or at common law. The assessor having entered the subjects at £235, the trustees contended that the entry should be £175—the actual rent in the lease. The Court sustained the valuation of the assessor, holding that the relationship of the parties (though not in itself conclusive) was, in conjunction with the other facts narrated, sufficient to show that the rent stipulated in the lease was not the true annual value of the subjects.

Assessor for Dumfriesshire v Kirk's Trustees, 1912 S.C. 780; 49 S.L.R. 168; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 18.

(202)

Oral lease between brothers.

Held that the rent stipulated in an oral lease between two brothers fell to be entered in the valuation roll as the annual rent or value of the subjects. Observed that the fact that the parties to a lease are near relatives may be an element for consideration when other circumstances go to show that the rent stipulated is not the true annual value of the subjects, but that by itself it is not important.

Bowman v Assessor for Inverberrie, 1900, 2 F. 607.

(203)

Lease to nephew.

A farm was let by a proprietor to his nephew, as tenant, at a rent which was fixed in the lease. Held (1) that the relationship between them did not per se constitute a "consideration other than the rent"; (2) that the rent stipulated in the lease must enter the valuation roll, unless in addition to the fact of relationship substantial evidence of its inadequacy was adduced; and (3) that the opinion of a valuator appointed by the valuation committee was not sufficient evidence that the stipulated rent was inadequate.

Alexander v Assessor for Kirkcudbrightshire, 1890, 17 R. 835; 27 S.L.R. 630.

(204)

Lease to nephew—Lease to son-in-law—Alleged inadequacy of rent—Failure to exact increase permitted under Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920.

Where lands or heritages are let upon a bona fide lease, the rent payable under the lease cannot be displaced as the measure of the yearly rent or value of the subjects for the purposes of the Valuation Acts merely because the landlord and the tenant are related. To effect this result, it must be further shown that the rent is substantially inadequate, in respect that the subjects could in fact have been let to another tenant at a substantially higher rent than that obtained from the relative. So held where a dwelling-house was let in one case by a nephew to his uncle, and in another by a father-in-law to his son-in-law. Held, further, that the fact that the landlords had not increased the rents for the year 1921-1922, although, owing to the provisions of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920, there had been a general increase of 33½ per cent. on similar rents in the neighbourhood, was not per se sufficient proof that the rents exacted from the relatives for the year 1921-1922 were substantially inadequate.

Smith v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1922 S.C. 441; 59 S.L.R. 290; 1922 S.L.T. 131.

(205)

Lease to old servant.

A proprietor granted a lease of a farm to an old servant at a rent of £50. After the proprietor's death the assessor entered the farm in the valuation roll at its true value, £71. The trustees of the proprietor appealed, on the ground that they only received £50 under the lease. Held that the entry was right.

Kerr's Trustees, 1871, 11 M. 983; 44 J. 431; 9 S.L.R. 444.

(206)

Lease to servant—Over-valuation objected to by third parties.

A house was let to a gardener by his master at £14 per annum. Objection at the instance of persons whose names were not on the valuation roll, that the entry was an over-valuation to give the gardener a vote, sustained.

M'Gregor, &c. v Menzies, 1874, 4 R. 1144.

(3) WHETHER RENT REPRESENTS "FAIR ANNUAL VALUE."

(a) Generally.

(207)

Absence of open competition—House let between terms—Criterion of value.

A company, having advertised and let a house at £14 a year, appealed to have the valuation of five similar houses which were occupied by their own workmen reduced from £20 to £14. The magistrates acting on their own knowledge fixed the value at £17. Held that the rent of £14 was not a fair criterion of value, in respect that the house was let between terms and not after open competition.

Cadzow Coal Co. v Assessor for Hamilton, 1905, 7 F. 413; 42 S.L.R. 502; 12 S.L.T. 828.

(208)

Shootings—Shootings let at nominal rent in consequence of war.

Where Highland shootings had been let for one year at a merely nominal rent, in consequence of the difficulty of finding tenants for such subjects due to the war, held that this rent, although "bona fide," was not "conditioned as the fair annual value" of the subjects in the sense of sec. 6 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854, and accordingly could not be taken as representing the yearly rent or value of the subjects; and valuation fixed at one-half of the previous valuation.

Assessor for Inverness-shire v Grant, 1918 S.C. 608; 55 S.L.R. 236; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 139.

(209)

Where Highland shootings were bona fide let for the season at a nominal rent owing to the difficulty of finding tenants for such subjects due to the war, held that the nominal rent could not be taken as representing the yearly rent or value of the subjects; which the Court fixed at one-half of the previous valuation.

Assessor for Inverness-shire v Macpherson's Trustees, 1918 S.C. 615; 55 S.L.R. 241; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 139.

(210)

Shootings let for season only.

Where shootings are let for the season only, and not for the year, the rent payable under the lease is not per se conclusive of the yearly rent or value to be entered in the valuation roll.

Assessor for Inverness-shire v Macpherson's Trustees, 1918 S.C. 615; 55 S.L.R. 241; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 139.

(211)

Lease for part of year—Grass parks let for eight months of year.

Grass parks were entered in 1877 at £135. The proprietors and occupiers sought to have them entered at £119 10s., being the rent obtained for the parks by public roup in 1877. The average of the rents obtained by such letting for seven years ending with 1877 was £126 7s. 10d. The proprietors stated that £135 was about 27s. 6d. per acre, and that two adjacent farms were let for cropping, one for about 28s. (considered high), and the other for about 21s. 6d., and these had extensive farm steadings, &c. The lettings for the seven years ending 1887 were for eight months of the year. When the parks were let for a complete year, as they had been from 1863 to 1870, the rent was £160; but, as the appellants stated, that was for cropping purposes. Held that the entry was right.

Ker's Trustees, 1878, 9 R. 1236.

(212)

—Farm let for part of year as grazings and otherwise unlet.

A farm which was entirely laid out in grass was let annually for part of the year—from Whitsunday to Martinmas—as grazings, and during the rest of the year was in the proprietor's own hands. For the year 1887 the rent of the grazings was £301, and the valuation of the farm as fixed by the valuation committee £400. On appeal, held (per Lord Lee) that the valuation of the valuation committee was right; (per Lord Fraser) that the valuation ought to be reduced to £301, the rent received for the grazings. The judges being divided in opinion, the valuation stood.

Berwick v Assessor for Fife, 1888, 15 R. 629; 25 S.L.R. 460.

(213)

—Grass parks let for season only—Permanent pasture let for course of four years' cropping—Act 1854, sec. 6.

A farm laid out in pasture was, prior to 1918, entered in the valuation roll as a unum quid at the yearly rent or value of £170. In 1918 the proprietor let a portion of the farm as grass parks for the grazing season of six months, and the remainder in five separate lots on leases for four years which provided for a crop being taken off the ground every year. For the year 1918-19 the assessor made six separate entries in the valuation roll, assessing the value of the grass parks at the grazing rental and the values of the remaining lots at the yearly rents stipulated in the leases. The total values amounted to £386 10s. The proprietor contended that no alteration should have been made upon the previous entry in the roll. Held that the assessor was right—(1) With regard to the grass parks, because the rent obtained for the grazing season was, in the circumstances, the best criterion of their annual value; (2) with regard to the remaining lots, because the rents were bona fide rents of the subjects in their actual state, and no deductions could be made in respect of the fact that, owing to the unusual and destructive course of cropping, the subjects could not be restored to their former condition without considerable outlay on the part of the proprietor.

Duffus v Assessor for Aberdeenshire, 1919

S.C. 484; 56 S.L.R. 115; 1919, 1 S.L.T. 59.

(214)

Fishings restricted to rod fishing in interest of upper proprietors and let at nominal rent—Lands and heritages "from which revenue is actually derived" — Act 1854, sec. 42.

Held that in the list of "lands and heritages" given in sec. 42 of the Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Act, 1854, the qualifying words "from which revenue is actually derived" do not apply to "fishings." Fishing by net on the salmon fishings in the tidal waters of a river was discontinued in the interest of the proprietors of the salmon fishings on the upper reaches. The rod fishing on the tidal waters, which was almost valueless, was thereafter let for a merely nominal rent. Held that the assessor was right in disregarding this rent and in continuing to enter the fishings at a figure which represented the rent at which they might reasonably be expected to let to a person exercising the full rights of salmon fishing in the ordinary way. Observations (per Lord Salvesen) on the right of the proprietors of upper salmon fishings, who incur expense in removing nets from lower fishings, to treat for purposes of valuation such expense as part of the expense incurred by them in obtaining the rents for their fishings.

Dee Salmon Fisheries Co. v Assessor for Aberdeen, 1915 S.C. 790; 52 S.L.R. 178; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 457.

(215)

Oyster fishing—Interest on value of stock of oysters.

A landed proprietor had under his titles a grant from the Crown of the right to cultivate, and to fish, drag, or dredge for oysters in Lochryan, an arm of the sea, the solum of which remained the property of the Crown. By lease, dated 19th December, 1899, the proprietor let these rights to a fishery company for a period of twenty-one years, at an annual rent of £350. By a separate agreement, dated 27th December, 1899, on the narrative that he had sold to the company "the whole stock of oysters which, on 1st July, 1899, were, or have since been, or are now in the loch of Lochryan," the company agreed to pay him annually the sum of £350 "as and by way of interest on the value of the stock of oysters in the said loch and sold to the company by these presents." Held that as the proprietor had no right of property in the oysters, and simply a right of taking them, the fishery was "lands and heritages," and that £700, being the amount annually payable by the company for the exercise of this right, had properly been entered in the roll as the annual rent or value of the subjects.

Wallace v Assessor for Wigtownshire, 1902, 4 F. 515; 39 S.L.R. 570; 9 S.L.T. 515.

(216)

Houses let by railway company to employees—Flat rate for rents—Act 1854, sec. 6.

The Caledonian Railway Company let houses by agreement to their employees at a rent fixed upon a general scale for their whole system, and having no relation to the values of similar houses in the locality. Held that the rent was not "conditioned as the fair annual value" of the houses, and that the assessor was justified in disregarding it and in fixing the valuation by comparison with the rent of similar houses in the locality.

Caledonian Railway Co. v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1896, 23 R. 691; 33 S.L.R. 521; 3 S.L.T. 333.

(217)

Houses—Sub-let to workmen.

Held that the rent paid by the principal tenant was to be entered.

Buchanan, 1874, 4 R. 1145.

(218)

—Sub-let at increased rents.

Houses were let, under a lease for less than twenty-one years, at a rent of £80 for the whole, and were in part sub-let at increased rents. The assessor entered the whole at a value which included the increase, but he did not allege that the principal lease was not bona fide, or that the rent of £80 was not conditioned as the fair annual value of the subjects. The magistrates confirmed the assessor's valuation. Held the magistrates were wrong, and that the value should be entered at £80.

Lawson's Representatives, &c. v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1883, 10 R. 663; 20 S.L.R. 432.

See also Hay & Co., 1869, 11 M. 981.

Cowdenbeath Coal Co. v Assessor for Fife, 1891, 18 R. 948; 28 S.L.R. 622, No. 77, supra.

(219)

Crofter—Fair rent—Crofter proprietor—Crofters Holdings (Scotland) Act, 1886, sec. 6.

A crofter, the rent of whose farm had been fixed at a fair rent by the Crofters' Commission, purchased his holding. The assessor, assuming that the fair rent represented only the landlord's interest in the croft, added thereto, in fixing the valuation, a sum representing the annual value of permanent improvements on the holding. Held that the valuation was right.

Mackay v Assessor for Sutherlandshire, 1897, 24 R. 737; 34 S.L.R. 621; 4 S.L.T. 296.

See also Ferguson v Assessor for Invernessshire, 1912 S.C. 768; 49 S.L.R. 158; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 505, No. 66, supra.

(220)

Renewal of lease.

Before the expiry of an improving lease, under which the rent of a farm was fixed at £11, a renewal of the lease was taken at £15. Held, in the special circumstances, that the farm was properly entered in the valuation roll at £15, and not at the assessor's valuation of what it was worth by the year.

Fraser, 1867, 11 M. 976.

(221)

Market dues.

Held that the rent of market dues leviable by a burgh which were let to a tacksman, and not the estimated value of the area of the market, must be taken as the annual value of the subject.

Magistrates of Inverness, 1874, 4 R. 1144.

Magistrates of Inverurie, 1875, 4 R. 1147.

(b) Rent or Lordship in Mineral Leases.

(222)

Lease for less than thirty-one years — Sub-lease—Different fields worked by one pit—Wayleave.

The appellant was proprietor of certain mineral seams and also had leases for less than thirty-one years of adjacent seams at a fixed rent of £240 or a lordship. He let the whole to a company for £700, or a lordship. After deducting what he paid for lordship to the proprietors of the leased seams there remained £1275 15s. as rent of his own minerals and the surplus rent of the others. The assessor contended and the commissioners held that the valuation should be upon the basis of the lordships. The appellant contended that the valuation should be on the basis of the fixed rents, viz., for the seams owned by him the rent (£700) paid by the company less the rent (£240) paid by him to the owner of the seams which he leased. Held that the commissioners were wrong. The valuation of minerals and pits owned by the appellant was fixed at £460.

Wallace, 1880, 9 R. 1238.

(223)

Wasting subject — Mode of valuation for year in which minerals exhausted—Royalties or fixed rent—Subjects valued for series of years at royalty paid for last completed year.

A lease of a blaes heap for nineteen years from Martinmas, 1890, was renewed by tacit relocation until Martinmas, 1916, when it terminated, the blaes having been exhausted by 30th September of that year. The rent under the lease was a fixed sum per annum, or, in the option of the landlord, a royalty on the output. For a number of years the subjects were entered in the valuation roll for the valuation year (viz., Whitsunday to Whitsunday) at the amount of the royalty paid under the lease for the last completed year of the lease (viz., Martinmas to Martinmas). When the assessment for the year Whitsunday, 1916, to Whitsunday, 1917, fell to be made, it was known that the blaes would be exhausted in the course of the year, and it was ascertainable as a fact that the amount of royalties payable thereon would not exceed £160. The assessor, continuing the former practice, entered the subjects in the roll at £312 3s., being the amount of royalty paid for the year Martinmas, 1914, to Martinmas, 1915, and his decision was upheld by the valuation committee. Held that, notwithstanding the previous practice, the figure of £160, as being the actual rent exigible for the year of assessment, fell to be entered in the roll.

Hurll v Assessor for Glasgow, 1917 S.C. 494; 54 S.L.R. 242; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 106.

(224)

Wayleave.

Where adjacent mineral fields, though separately owned, were let as one undertaking, and the minerals from one field were carried through and brought to the surface within the other, held that wayleave was an interest which fell to be taken into account in valuing the fields through which the wayleave was granted.

Barr, Higgins & McCulloch, 1881, 9 R. 1245.

(225)

Minerals let, but not wrought—"Mine" and "minerals"—Valuation Act, 1854, sec. 42.

Minerals belonging to three different proprietors were let by one lease at a cumulo fixed yearly rent, or, in the option of the proprietors, at a lordship, the rent being payable whether the tenants worked or refrained from working the minerals. One of the mineral fields had never been opened up, and the assessor in consequence did not enter it in the roll. On an appeal to the Valuation Appeal Court, held that the portion in question was also to be entered in the roll at the fixed rent, on the ground that the rent paid in respect of the unwrought minerals was to be regarded as the rent of "minerals" in the sense of the Act, and not of a "mine," and consequently that the exemption contained in the 42nd section did not apply. Opinion (per Lord Lee) that the subjects let under the lease were to be regarded as a whole for the purposes of the Valuation Acts. Minerals which had been let on lease for a fixed rent or lordships had been worked during the first part of the lease, but had for some years not been wrought. The tenant continued to pay the fixed rent. Held that, as there was no evidence that the minerals had been exhausted, the tenant was to be regarded as paying rent for "minerals," and not for a "mine," and that consequently the subjects were to be entered in the valuation roll at the fixed rent.

Blantyre Parochial Board v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1883, 10 R. 773; 20 S.L.R. 511.

(226)

Fixed rent or royalty—No return from minerals.

A company were tenants of minerals under a lease at a fixed rent, and, in the event of the minerals being worked, on payment of stipulated royalties. Prior to the commencement of the year of valuation, owing to depression in trade, the company had ceased to work the minerals, and there was no likelihood of working being resumed during the year. The assessor entered the company as tenant of the minerals at the amount which had been paid by them as royalties in the previous year. Held that, it being admitted that no royalty would be paid during the year of valuation, the fixed rent stipulated in the lease fell to be taken as the annual value of the minerals.

Hermand Oil Co. v Assessor for Midlothian, 1893, 20 R. 633; 30 S.L.R. 662; 1 S.L.T. 30.

(227)

Commencement of lease of freestone quarry after valuation roll for year made up—Whether quarry to be entered for year succeeding termination of lease during which no working—Act 1854, sec. 42.

A freestone quarry was let on a lease for eight years from Martinmas, 1885, with a break in favour of the tenant at any term of Whitsunday or Martinmas after Martinmas, 1886, at a fixed rent of £100, or a lordship in the option of the landlord. The tenant did not enter into possession till after the valuation roll for 1885-6 had been made up, and the quarry was not entered for that year. It was entered at £100 for 1886-7, in terms of the landlord's return. The lordship paid at Whitsunday, 1886, was £92 10s., and at Martinmas, 1886, £89 10s. The quarry ceased to be worked at Martinmas, 1886, but the tenant remained in possession till Whitsunday, 1887, when he took advantage of the break and brought the lease to an end. The excavations were filled up, and the ground restored. At Whitsunday, 1887, the tenant paid the half-yearly fixed rent of £50. He had thus paid in all £232, but only £100 of that having been entered in the valuation roll, the assessor entered the balance of £132 in the roll for 1887-8, although the quarry had not been worked and nothing had been paid during that year. Held that under the Lands Valuation Act, 1854, sec. 42, the valuation was wrong.

Lord Elphinstone v Assessor for Middle Ward of Lanarkshire, 1888, 15 R. 637; 25 S.L.R. 466.

(228)

Where lease terminates at Martinmas—Exhausted minerals.

Mineral tenants gave up possession at Martinmas, 1883, under a power to break their lease. The minerals were then exhausted. Held that the subjects were to be entered in the valuation roll for the year 1883-84 at the annual value of £359 16s. 4d., being the amount of the half-year's rent payable at Martinmas, 1883.

Coltness Iron Co. v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1884, 11 R. 513; 21 S.L.R. 395.

(c) Considerations Other than the Rent.

(i.) Method of Valuation.

(229)

Addition of yearly value to rent.

Where a lease contains in addition to the rent considerations of a comparatively trifling character and capable of valuation, and where the rent added to those considerations is bona fide conditioned as the fair annual value of the lands, the proper mode of valuing the lands is not to disregard the lease altogether and value the subjects as they stand, but to value the considerations and add their yearly value to the rent.

Macdonald, Fraser & Co. v Assessor for Glasgow, 1893, 20 R. 624; 30 S.L.R. 615.

(230)

Value of additional considerations difficult to estimate.

Where a lease contained stipulations binding on the tenant of an unusual character, and of a kind difficult to estimate with precision in money value, held that the rent in the lease fell to be disregarded altogether in fixing the valuation of the subjects, and that the subjects had rightly been valued by a comparison with the letting value of similar subjects in the neighbourhood.

Clark v Assessor for the Middle Ward of Lanarkshire, 1901, 3 F. 455; 38 S.L.R. 489.

(ii.) Obligation on Tenant to Execute Repairs or Repay their Cost.

(231)

Obligation to execute repairs.

Question, whether an obligation by a tenant to execute all necessary repairs was a consideration other than rent.

Morrison's Trustees v Assessor for Coatbridge, 1893, 20 R. 616; 30 S.L.R. 610.

See also Lowson's Judicial Factor v Assessor for Arbroath, 1900, 2 F. 608; 7 S.L.T. 466, No. 279, infra.

(232)

Obligation to erect buildings—Restrictions imposed upon use of buildings—Power of landlord to resume possession if restrictions contravened.

In a lease of a plot of building ground it was stipulated, inter alia, that the buildings to be erected by the tenants should be of a certain height, and that the tenants should not use the subjects for the sale of cattle, or as depots for manure, or as a place of amusement, or for purposes of trading on Sundays. Buildings were erected. Held that the assessor was wrong in disregarding the rent as conclusive of the valuation, and in taking into consideration in his valuation the yearly value of the whole buildings upon the ground, since these conditions showed no "consideration other than rent."

Magistrates of Dundee v Assessor for Dundee, 1886, 23 S.L.R. 611.

(233)

Agreement by tenant of farm to erect farmhouse.

The tenant under the lease of a farm agreed to rebuild the farmhouse and offices which the landlord was to take over at a valuation at the termination of the lease. The lease was broken during its currency and a new lease was entered into, under which the landlord bound himself to take over the buildings at the end of the second lease. The Court held that the stipulation was a consideration other than the rent, and that the rent in the lease was to be disregarded; and affirmed a value fixed by the valuation committee in the light of their local knowledge.

Davidson v Assessor for Peeblesshire, 1905, 7 F. 422; 42 S.L.R. 504; 12 S.L.T. 829.

(234)

Meliorations by tenant to be repaid at ish of lease.

The value of a farm fixed at the rent in the lease with the addition of interest at 5 per cent. on £150 expended by the tenant on the house and offices for which he had a claim of repetition from the landlord at the end of the lease.

Skene, 1867, 11 M. 976.

(235)

Tenant undertaking repairs—Obligation to keep houses wind and water tight.

An agreement for the lease of certain property consisting of dilapidated miners' houses contained a stipulation that, in the event of underground workings rendering any of the houses "unsafe for habitation or uninhabitable with ordinary repairs . . . ordinary repairs being ordinary wear and tear," the annual value of such house or houses should be deducted from the annual rent of the property. It was further provided that the lessor should not be "bound to incur any expenses whatever" in connection with the property, and that the lessee should "keep the houses wind and water tight where necessary, where the defects are caused by ordinary wear and tear." Held (1) that, as the lessee had undertaken to relieve the lessor of the common law obligations of a landlord as to repairs, the lease was for a consideration other than the rent; (2) that the proper method of valuing the subjects was to ascertain the actual annual value to the lessor of the lessee's obligation, and to add it to the stipulated rent; but (3) that, as the lessor and lessee had failed to furnish the assessor with materials for valuing this obligation, the assessor was justified in taking it to be the difference between the rent paid to the lessor by the lessee and the amount of the rents obtained by the latter from his subtenants.

Forrest's Factor v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1920 S.C. 496; 57 S.L.R. 563; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 194.

(236)

Alterations by tenant—Conversion of shop for purposes of a café—Decorations.

The lease of a shop stipulated that the tenants should fit up the subjects as a café at their own expense, and that the alterations should become the property of the landlord at the end of the lease without compensation.

Held (1) that the stipulation was a "consideration other than the rent," and (2) that the yearly value had been rightly fixed by dividing the cost of the alterations by the number of years in the lease, and adding the dividend to the rent.

Held further that the cost of decoration, not being expenditure which the tenants were bound by the lease to incur, fell to be deducted in calculating the cost of the alterations.

Liverpool, China, and India Tea Co. v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1905, 7 F. 415; 42 S.L.R. 500; 12 S.L.T. 854; 1906, 8 F. 493; 43 S.L.R. 303; 13 S.L.T. 768.

(237)

Public-house — Obligation by tenant to carry out at his own expense alterations required by licensing authority.

The lease of a public-house took the tenant bound "to carry out any alterations or improvements which the licensing authority may from time to time require to be made upon the premises" at his own expense. Held that this obligation constituted a consideration other than the rent incapable of being estimated in money value; and consequently that the valuation committee were justified in disregarding the rent stipulated in the lease altogether, and in fixing the annual value according to their personal knowledge of the lettable value of such property in the locality.

Angus v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1905, 7 F. 411; 42 S.L.R. 499; 12 S.L.T. 767.

(238)

Obligation on tenant to execute alterations.

Held that the assessor was not justified in disregarding the rent fixed by a lease, under which the tenant was obliged to execute alterations, but that the proper mode of valuation was to take the rent and add to it the cost of the alterations, spreading this latter sum over the years which the lease had to run.

Shiel v Assessor for Hawick, 1898, 25 R. 592; 35 S.L.R. 665; 5 S.L.T. 331.

(239)

Tenant bound to execute repairs—Money advanced by landlord.

The lease of a public-house provided that all alterations and repairs (the landlord's consent being always required) should be executed by the tenant, and should thereupon become the property of the landlord without compensation. At the time the lease was entered into the landlord lent £6000 to the tenant at 5 per cent., for which the latter granted a bill at three months, to be renewed till the money was repaid. This loan was to enable the tenant to purchase the goodwill. The rent in the lease was £99 per annum, but the assessor entered the subjects in the roll at £150. Held that in the let of the subjects there were considerations other than the rent, and that the assessor was right in disregarding the stipulated rent. Opinions as to whether or not the aforesaid loan was an element to be taken into account in valuing the premises.

Mackay & Co. v Assessor for Leith, 1911 S.C. 935; 48 S.L.R. 367; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 145.

(240)

Payment by tenant towards cost of alterations—Transfer of licence conditional on alterations.

The tenant of a public-house sold the goodwill, but the magistrates refused a transfer of the licence unless certain structural alterations were made. The incoming tenant undertook to contribute to the landlord £100 towards the alterations on condition of getting a renewal of the lease at the old rent.

Held that the £100 was a consideration other than rent to be taken into account in valuing the subjects.

Assessor for Greenock v Bullen, 1901, 3 F. 452; 38 S.L.R. 499; 8 S.L.T. 410.

(241)

Alterations by tenant to meet licensing requirements—No alteration in rent.

The tenant of a public-house, to meet objections by the licensing court, executed an alteration on the premises at the cost of £25. The rent remained unaltered. The assessor continued the previous valuation, but added a new entry in respect of the alterations—"Part of public-house, £60."

Held that the new entry fell to be deleted from the roll in respect that there was no evidence that the alterations had increased the letting value of the premises.

Observed (per Lord Stormonth-Darling) that under sec. 4 of the Act of 1895 the mere fact that alterations had been made on the subjects did not open the way to revision on general grounds.

Peggie v Assessor for Kirkcaldy, 1901, 3 F. 462; 38 S.L.R. 492; 8 S.L.T. 409.

(242)

Obligation to erect additional buildings.

In a lease of urban subjects for twenty-one years, it was stipulated that the tenant should have "power and liberty" to erect buildings on a vacant piece of the ground. It was further provided that "the buildings so to be erected shall be erected within two years from the date hereof, . . . and shall be of the value of at least £500 sterling, . . . and shall be the property of" the landlord. Buildings were erected. Held that the assessor was right in disregarding the rent set forth in the lease, and taking as his valuation the yearly value of the whole subjects actually on the ground.

Gosnell, &c. v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1885, 12 R. 571; 22 S.L.R. 367.

(243)

During the currency of a mineral lease for thirty-one years, under which the rent payable by the tenants was a royalty on the output of coal, the landlord and tenants entered into an agreement with a view to extend the mineral workings, under which the tenants were to erect certain additional miners' houses upon the lands belonging to the landlord, but then let to an agricultural tenant. The mineral tenants were to be entitled to repay themselves the cost of erection by retaining the royalties over and above a certain sum per annum, on condition of erecting an equal number and value of houses on ground belonging to themselves. The houses on the landlord's property were to be maintained and insured against fire by the tenants, who were also to settle the claims of the agricultural tenant for the land taken for the houses, and to relieve the landlord of certain assessments. At the termination of the lease the houses, so far as paid for out of the royalties, were to be left to the landlord, and quoad ultra he was to have the right to take them over at a valuation, and, failing his doing so, the tenants were to be entitled to remove the materials. Houses were erected on the landlord's lands under this agreement, and were in the occupation of miners, who paid a rent to the tenants. The assessor entered them at that rent as the property of the tenants. The Court held that the entry was wrong, being of opinion (1) that the agreement fell to be read as part of the lease; (2) that it contained no consideration other than the rent, with the exception of the sum paid for insurance; and therefore. (3) that with the exception of the latter sum the subjects were covered by the royalty payable under the mineral lease.

Cowdenbeath Coal Co. v Assessor for Fife, 1891, 18 R. 944; 28 S.L.R. 622.

(244)

Obligation on tenant to erect a chimney-stalk—Additional buildings erected under liberty to build—Obligation on tenant to insure buildings.

A lease of a printfield let at a fixed rent contained obligations on the tenants forthwith to erect "a suitable and substantial chimney-stalk," and to keep the buildings, &c., insured against loss by fire on behalf of the proprietor. If the tenants failed to pay the premiums, the proprietor was authorised to pay them, and to charge them against the tenants as additional rent. Any additional buildings erected by the tenants were to be insured by them in name of the proprietor, and were to become his property at the expiration of the lease without charge, but the tenants during its currency might, for the exigencies of their trade, take down, alter, or remove such additional buildings. The tenants erected an additional building in the shape of a store. Held (1) that the obligations to erect a chimney-stalk and to insure were "considerations other than the rent," and fell to be taken into account in fixing the annual value of the subjects; but

(2) that the store did not fall to be taken into account, as it was not erected under obligation, was not in any event to become the property of the landlord until the expiration of the lease, and might never become so.

Patrick v Assessor for Renfrewshire, 1890, 17 R. 852; 27 S.L.R. 610.

(245)

Obligation to erect a wooden circus removable by tenant.

A lease of a plot of ground at a fixed rent contained an obligation on the tenant, within two months of his entry, to erect and complete a wooden circus upon the ground. The tenant was further to be entitled to remove his buildings at the termination of his lease, but he was bound to leave the site clear and free from all rubbish and debris. Held that the obligation to erect the circus, although a security to the landlord for the rent, was not a "consideration other than the rent" within the meaning of the Act.

Martin v Assessor for Leith, 1889, 16 R. 799; 26 S.L.R. 531.

(246)

Power to tenant to erect buildings or make improvements.

In the lease of a shipbuilding yard it was stipulated that the landlord (harbour trustees) should be entitled to make erections into the river during the currency of the lease without being liable to compensate the tenants, while the tenants were empowered to erect the necessary buildings, which the landlord was entitled to take at a valuation. They were further bound to pay interest on the sum expended on a boundary wall. In a question which arose as to the valuation of the subjects after the expiration of the lease, the tenant holding by tacit relocation, and the buildings having been erected, held that the assessor was right in disregarding the rent as conclusive of the valuation, and in taking into account in his valuation the yearly value of the whole subjects actually upon the ground.

Observations by Lord Fraser as to the character of stipulations in a lease in favour of the landlord, which are to be regarded as considerations other than rent.

Dundee Harbour Trustees v Assessor for Dundee, 1886, 13 R. 829; 23 S.L.R. 607.

(247)

Terms of a lease conferring "power" on the tenant to make improvements on a harbour which was the subject of the lease, which were held to provide for a consideration other than the rent in the sense of the statute.

Prestongrange Coal and Firebrick Co. v Assessor for Haddingtonshire, 1887, 14 R. 589; 24 S.L.R. 452.

(248)

A lease of a vacant piece of ground at a rent of £50 contained stipulations to the effect that the tenant should be at liberty to erect buildings for the purposes of his business, and that the landlord should, on the expiration of the lease, be at liberty to acquire such buildings at a valuation, or to insist on the tenants removing them. The tenants were also taken bound during the lease to keep the ground properly fenced. Buildings were erected by the tenant, and the subjects were entered in the valuation roll at £120 as their value, including the buildings. In an appeal by the proprietor, held that the subjects should be entered at £50, the rent stated in the lease, as the other stipulations did not amount to a "consideration other than the rent."

North British Railway Co. v Assessor for Glasgow, 1890, 17 R. 846; 27 S.L.R. 608.

(249)

Buildings and plant erected by tenant—Obligation on landlord to take buildings over at end of lease.

A chemical manufacturing company held the site of their works as tenants of an iron foundry company, at a rent which was admitted to be the fair annual value of the site. The iron foundry company, in consideration of certain additional payments, supplied the chemical company with furnace gases used in their chemical processes. The tenants had erected valuable buildings and plant on the site, which on the termination of the lease were to be taken over at a valuation by the landlord. The assessor entered the iron foundry company as proprietors, and the chemical company as tenants of the "site and erections thereon." Held that the entry must be limited to the actual rent paid for the site exclusive of the works in respect that the iron foundry company derived no benefit from the buildings erected by the tenant, and that the payments other than the rent of the site were considerations for the use of the gases, and not for the use of the site.

Furnace Gases Co. v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1894, 31 S.L.R. 739; 2 S.L.T. 60.

(250)

Payment by incoming tenant of sum due by landlord to outgoing tenant for meliorations.

The incoming tenant of a farm let to him for nineteen years at a rent of £500 paid to the outgoing tenants a sum of money for meliorations payable to them by the landlord under the expiring lease. His lease contained the stipulation that he should be entitled at its termination to repayment from the landlord of the sum so paid by him, or of such other sum, not exceeding it, as the meliorations should then be valued at. Held that as the payment by the tenant relieved his landlord of an obligation which he would otherwise have had to meet, there was a consideration other than the rent, and that a sum equivalent to 4 per cent. on it fell to be added to the rent contained in the lease.

Duke of Fife v Assessor for County of Elgin, 1891, 18 R. 941; 28 S.L.R. 625.

(251)

Interest on landlord's outlay for sheep drains and wire fencing.

By the lease the rent of a farm was £205, with £160 as interest on outlay on wire-fencing and open sheep drains, and the tenant accepted the erections and fences and drains as in good repair, and bound himself to keep and leave them in like condition. The total sum of £365 was entered in the roll. The tenant contended that wire-fencing and sheep drains were only temporary improvements, and that the entry should be restricted to £205. Proof was led as to the duration of wire-fences. Held that the entry was right.

Hamilton, 1881, 9 R. 1245.

(iii.) Obligation to Insure.

(252)

Tenant bound to repay to landlord insurance premium—Landlord bound to expend insurance money on rebuilding.

Under the lease of a farm the landlord was bound to insure the buildings, and the tenant was bound to repay to the proprietor the premium on the insurance at the term of Whitsunday along with the rent then payable. In the event of the total or partial destruction of the buildings by fire, the landlord was bound to expend any sum recovered from the insurance company on restoring the buildings. Held that the tenant's obligation to repay the premium was a "consideration other than the rent" within the meaning of sec. 6 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854, and fell to be added to the rent in fixing the valuation.

Usher v Assessor for Roxburghshire, 1915 S.C. 768; 52 S.L.R. 119; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 426.

See also Cowdenbeath Coal Co. v Assessor for Fife, 1891, 18 R. 944; 28 S.L.R. 622, No. 243, supra.

Patrick v Assessor for Renfrewshire, 1890, 17 R. 852; 27 S.L.R. 610, No. 244, supra.

(253)

Tenant bound to insure.

Where in a lease of workmen's dwellings to a company the company were bound to slate certain of the houses, to put the whole subjects into habitable and tenantable repair, and to insure, held that these were considerations other than rent, and that the assessor had acted rightly in disregarding the amount of rent stipulated in the lease as conclusive of the value, and considering in his valuation the obligations laid upon the tenants of the lease.

Cunninghame v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1886, 23 S.L.R. 605.

(iv.) Payment for Goodwill.

(254)

General principles applicable.

Held that a sum paid by the tenant of a public-house to the landlord at the outset of the lease in name of goodwill is "a consideration other than the rent," and that the assessor is not bound in that case to take the rent as the yearly value of the subject.

Drummond v Assessor for Leith, 1886, 13 R. 540; 23 S.L.R. 385.

(255)

Opinions (per Lord Johnston and Lord Salvesen) that the method of dividing half the price of goodwill by the number of years in the lease was a useful rule of thumb, but not a fixed and exclusive rule of practice.

Mark v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1911 S.C. 974; 48 S.L.R. 379; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 241.

(256)

A public-house was let on lease for seven years from 1896, the landlord not being bound to admit assignees of the tenant. In January, 1898, the tenant transferred the business and received £3000 from the incoming tenant in name of goodwill and as the price of furniture and fittings. It was a condition of the purchase that the outgoing tenant should assign his right under the lease, and that the landlord should accept the incoming tenant. The outgoing tenant paid the landlord a sum of £750 in consideration of his accepting the incoming tenant and granting the assignation. The assessor valued the subjects by dividing the £750 by the number of the remaining years of the lease, and adding the dividend to the rent in the lease. In an appeal by the tenant, the magistrates, "having considered the whole circumstances," sustained the valuation. The Valuation Appeal Judges declined to alter the determination of the magistrates.

Paton v Assessor for Hamilton, 1899, 1 F. 588; 36 S.L.R. 601; 6 S.L.T. 326.

(257)

Value of similar premises in same district.

A public-house was let for ten years at a rent of £24 per annum, and upon payment to the proprietor and previous occupant of £550 in name of goodwill. The assessor, in fixing the valuation, took one-half of the £550 paid in name of goodwill as representing the goodwill attaching to the house as a heritable subject, and spread it over the period of the lease at the rate of £27 10s. a year, making with the rent stipulated in the lease £51 10s. as the annual value entered in the roll. In an appeal by the proprietor, held that, in fixing the valuation, there ought to be taken into consideration, not merely the amount paid for goodwill, but also the rents or valuations of similar licensed premises in the neighbourhood.

Crawford v Assessor for Haddington, 1896, 23 R. 685; 3 S.L.T. 278.

(258)

Obligation by landlord not to commence rival business.

In addition to a rent of £48 yearly named in the lease of a hotel for seven years, the tenant agreed to pay to the landlord a sum of £220 in name of goodwill, the landlord who had previously been in occupation of the hotel becoming bound not to commence business as a hotel-keeper in opposition to the tenant. Held that this obligation by the landlord was a valuable consideration, apart from the occupation of the premises, for which compensation was due by the tenant, and, consequently, that a proportion was to be deducted from the sum of £220 before making any addition to the rent named in the lease in terms of the above rule.

Observed (per Lord Fraser) that a sum of money paid by a tenant to his landlord in name of "goodwill," on obtaining a lease of premises previously occupied by the landlord, is in the general case to be regarded as "a consideration other than the rent," named in the lease paid for the occupation of the premises, and as such is to be divided by the number of years for which the lease is to run, and the quotient added every year to the rent.

Assessor for Lanark v Selkirk, 1887, 14 R. 579.

(259)

The proprietor of a public-house, who had carried on business there, let the premises to a tenant on a ten years' lease, the tenant paying a sum for goodwill, and the proprietor undertaking not to commence business as a spirit dealer in the same town during the currency of the lease. The assessor, in valuing the premises, took the rent stipulated in the lease, and added thereto the sum paid for goodwill divided by the number of years of the lease. The tenant appealed to the valuation committee, and stated that he was willing that the goodwill should be valued at half the sum taken by the assessor, and offered to prove that the valuation so arrived at was greater than the lettable annual value of the subjects, with all their advantages. The committee refused to hear evidence, and adopted the assessor's valuation. Held that their determination was wrong, in respect (1) that they had failed to ascertain duly what proportion of the sum effeired to the premises; and (2) that the obligation by the proprietor not to carry on a rival business was a valuable consideration in favour of the tenant, not effeiring to the premises, which should have been deducted from the value of the goodwill before any addition was made in respect thereof to the rent in the lease.

Observations upon the elements which may be assumed to enter into the goodwill of a publican's business formerly carried on by the proprietor of the premises and sold by him to his tenant under a lease.

Hughes v Assessor for Stirling, 1892, 19 R. 840; 29 S.L.R. 625.

(260)

Sum paid in name of goodwill to former tenant—Former tenant also joint proprietor.

A sum paid by the incoming to the outgoing tenant in name of goodwill is not to be taken into account in reaching the value of the subjects, even when the outgoing tenant is one of the joint proprietors of the subjects.

Assessor for Kilmarnock v Allan, 1887, 14 R. 581.

(261)

Sale by pro indiviso proprietrix, who was also tenant—Transaction between tenant and tenant.

N and L were pro indiviso proprietors of a tenement, part of which was let as a public-house to L's husband at an annual rent of £19 10s.; on his death L purchased the business from his trustees; on her death her trustees sold the business and tenant's fittings, goodwill, &c., to M for £1000; L's trustees and the other pro indiviso proprietor N then granted a lease to M for seven years at the annual rent of £40. Held that the transaction was a sale between tenant and tenant, that there was no consideration other than the rent, and therefore that £40, the amount of the rent, was to be taken as the annual value.

Nicolson v Assessor for Port-Glasgow, 1886, 23 S.L.R. 603.

(262)

Annual payment for goodwill over and above rent.

A store kept by an iron company in connection with their works was let at a rent of £90, with an additional annual payment of £60 for goodwill. Held that both sums fell to be included in the valuation as rent.

Glasgow Iron Co., 1873, 11 M. 989; 10 S.L.R. 661.

(263)

Payment to landlord—Assignment of lease—Payment of same sum by assignees to original tenants.

A took a lease of licensed premises from B at a certain stipulated rent, and at the same time paid B a sum in respect of the goodwill of the business. Subsequently A assigned the lease to C, who paid A the same sum for the goodwill. Held that the stipulated rent did not represent the true annual value of the premises.

Livingston v Assessor for Paisley, 1909, 46 S.L.R. 433; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 230.

(264)

Break in lease — Sale of public-house—New proprietor taking advantage of break to raise rent.

The proprietor of a public-house sold the goodwill of the business in 1897 to Ostler for £650, in consideration of which he granted to Ostler a lease of the premises for fifteen years at a rent of £39 per annum, with a break in the option of either party at Whitsunday, 1905. From the date of the lease down to Whitsunday, 1905, the subjects were entered in the roll at £59, that sum being made up of the rent in the lease, £39, and an annual sum of £20, arrived at by deducting £50 for shop fittings from the sum of £650 paid for goodwill, and spreading half of the remaining £600, viz., £300, over the fifteen years of the lease. The premises were purchased by Ormston in 1899, under burden of the lease. In 1905 Ormston availed himself of the break to enter into an agreement with Ostler, the tenant, whereby the rent was raised to £49, but the lease was not terminated, the only term of it modified by the agreement being the rent. The assessor entered the subjects in the roll at £69, being the amount of the rent as increased by the agreement, plus the sum of £20 arrived at as above explained. Ormston, the proprietor, appealed, and maintained that as he had not received any part of the payment made for goodwill, that payment was not a consideration other than the rent received by him, and that the subjects fell to be entered in the roll as of the annual value of £49, being the rent at which they were bona fide let to Ostler under the agreement. Held that the subjects having been acquired by Ormston under burden of the lease, and the lease not having been terminated by him at the break in 1905, the consideration of £650 for which the lease had been granted was still to be taken into account in valuing the subjects, and that they had rightly been entered at £69.

Ormston v Assessor for Greenock, 1906, 8 F. 497; 43 S.L.R. 318; 13 S.L.T. 766.

(265)

Death of landlord — Reduction of valuation.

A proprietor let a shop in which his wife had a life interest if she survived him to a tenant on a seven years' lease with the consent and concurrence of his wife, at the rent of £39 per annum, but the tenant paid on entering on his lease a sum of £700 for the goodwill of the business. The premises stood in the valuation roll at £89 per annum, being £50 additional to the stipulated rent, on the ground that this was the proportion of the sum of £700 that was applicable yearly to the heritable subjects. On the death of the proprietor the commissioners of supply reduced the valuation to £39. Held that the commissioners were wrong, as the £700 was a grassum or consideration other than the rent, and the widow must be held to have shared in the benefit of it.

Wilson v Assessor for Lower Ward of Renfrewshire, 1884, 21 S.L.R. 545.

(266)

Sum paid as goodwill to representatives of former proprietor and occupier.

The proprietor and occupier of a public-house having died intestate leaving a son and daughter, both in minority, his law agents, acting generally in the interests of the heir and executor, accepted an offer of £660 for the goodwill of the business, shop fittings, &c., made on condition of the offerer obtaining a transfer of the licence and a five years' lease of the premises at £80 per annum. The rent of £80 was a full rent for the premises when used as a licensed public-house, the value of the premises without the licence being about £30. The value of the shop fittings, &c., was £150. The £510 paid for goodwill had not been apportioned between the heir and the executor, and there was no evidence that any part of it belonged to the heir. Held that as it had not been proved that any part of the £510 belonged to the heir, the latter sum could not be regarded as a consideration other than the rent stipulated for in the lease, and therefore that the premises fell to be valued at £80.

M'Farlane & Dailly v Assessor for Dundee, 1891, 18 R. 939; 28 S.L.R. 621.

(267)

Payment to landlord for grant of new lease of public-house.

M offered to take the premises of which Mrs. B was tenant, under lease of which three years were yet to run, and to pay her £400 in name of goodwill, provided the proprietor would cancel her lease and grant him a new one for seven years. The proprietor would consent only if he received £50 from M and £70 from Mrs. B. M and Mrs. B agreed to these terms, and a new lease for seven years was granted at the old rent. Held that both the £50 and the £70 so received by the proprietor were considerations other than the rent, to be taken into account in reaching the valuation of the subjects.

Assessor for Kilmarnock v M'Nally, 1887, 14 R. 582.

(v.) Tied Houses.

(268)

Tenant bound to buy stock of liquor from landlord.

Where the tenant of an inn, let at a rent of £14, was bound to purchase her stock of ale and beer from the proprietors, who were brewers, held that the annual value was properly fixed at £20.

Jerdan, 1876, 4 R. 1148.

(269)

A public-house was verbally let at a rent of £14 15s., the tenant being bound to take all his liquor from the landlord. Held that this obligation was a consideration other than the rent, and that the premises fell to be valued at their proper value.

Assessor for Peterhead v Milne, 1890, 17 R. 851; 27 S.L.R. 611.

(270)

A public-house was let on lease at a certain rent, and the tenant was also bound to take part of his supplies of wine, spirits, and beer from firms in which the landlord was a partner, "but that only so long as the said goods are of good quality and are supplied at the most favourable current prices, and on the usual trade terms." Held that this obligation formed a consideration other than the rent, which displaced the rent in the lease altogether as a criterion of annual value, and that the magistrates had rightly ascertained that value by reference to the rents of similar premises, and by forming their own judgment as to the probable rent which the public-house would fetch in the open market.

Annan v Assessor for Leith, 1899, 1 F. 586; 36 S.L.R. 600.

(271)

Tenant not under obligation to buy stock of liquor from landlord, but in fact buying it.

A had for many years occupied a public-house in Edinburgh, belonging to U & Son, a firm of brewers, as a yearly tenant, without a written lease, at the rent of £49. In 1904 the public-house was rebuilt under a municipal improvement scheme, and another public-house which had stood next door was abolished. A was allowed to enter into possession of the new public-house as a yearly tenant under U & Son, without a written lease, and at the old rent of £49. A was not under any obligation to take beer from U & Son, but as a matter of fact he did receive a good deal of beer from them. Held that the rent of £49 was not the "yearly rent conditioned as the fair annual value" of the public-house within the meaning of sec. 6 of the Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Act, 1854, and that the magistrates were justified in disregarding that rent in fixing the value of the subjects.

Usher & Son v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1906, 8 F. 488; 43 S.L.R. 310; 13 S.L.T. 761.

See also Usher v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1911 S.C. 912; 48 S.L.R. 354; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 200, No. 196, supra.

(272)

A public-house belonging to a firm of brewers was let for a term of years at a yearly rent of £90 to a new tenant, who paid £3000 in name of goodwill to the outgoing tenant. The new tenant took some of his supply of beer from the landlord, but it was not proved that he was under any obligation to do so.

Held that the magistrates were wrong in disregarding the lease, and that the valuation should be £90—the rent in the lease.

Mackay & Co. v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1907 S.C. 766; 44 S.L.R. 435; 14 S.L.T. 817.

(273)

A public-house, owned by a firm of brewers, was let by them on a lease for a term of years at a rent of £45. The lease expired at Whitsunday, 1905, but the tenant continued to occupy by tacit relocation. From the beginning of the lease the subjects had been entered in the roll as of the yearly value of £45, but the assessor, disregarding the lease, entered them in the roll for the year ending at Whitsunday, 1909, at £90. It was proved that the tenant was under no obligation to take his supplies from the landlords, but that in fact he did so to some extent.

Held that the assessor was not justified in disregarding the lease, and that the subjects ought to be entered in the roll at £45.

Mackay & Co v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1909, 46 S.L.R. 430; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 225.

(vi.) Special Stipulations in Lease.

(274)

Lump sum paid at commencement of lease for surface damage.

At the commencement of their tenancy the lessees of minerals, in accordance with a provision of the lease, paid to the lessors a lump sum in full of possible damage to surface and non-restoration thereof at the termination of the lease. The rent or royalties had not been fixed at an unduly low figure in consideration of this payment. Held that the payment was not a grassum or consideration other than rent, and did not fall to be taken into account in fixing the annual value of the subjects let.

Duke of Hamilton's Trustees v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1918 S.C. 624; 55 S.L.R. 248; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 172.

(275)

Payment by mineral tenant for right to bring down surface.

The proprietor of a colliery who had acquired from the proprietor of the surface the right to bring down the surface in consideration of an annual payment on the output, assigned this right to the tenant of the mine, who undertook in future to relieve him of the payment. Held that the annual payment thus made by the tenant constituted a consideration other than rent, and fell to be added to the lordships received by the proprietor from the tenant in estimating the annual value to be entered in the valuation roll, and there being nothing to show how much of the payment represented surface damages, for which the tenants would have been liable, no deduction could be made on that account.

Harvie v Assessor for Upper Ward of Lanarkshire, 1894, 21 R. 803; 31 S.L.R. 731.

(276)

Tenant entitled to sub-let — Sub-rents greater than rent under the lease.

In a lease of a farm it was agreed that the tenant should have the privilege of sub-letting plots of ground on the farm as fishing stations on payment of a small rent for each to the proprietor. He sub-let such plots at rents considerably above those that he paid to the proprietor, and in addition he received a royalty on each cran of herrings cured on each plot. Held that the assessor was entitled to disregard the lease and assess the fishing stations at a fair annual value.

Nicolson v Assessor for Zetland, 1884, 21 S.L.R. 547.

(277)

Obligation on tenant to cede possession without compensation.

A piece of ground was let for ten years at an annual rent, with liberty to the landlord to resume possession at any term of Whitsunday without compensation, and to the tenant to erect buildings on the ground, for which buildings no additional rent was to be payable. Buildings having been erected, they were entered in the valuation roll at their admitted value as being lands and heritages, the property of the landlord. The magistrates confirmed the valuation. On appeal, Lord Lee was of opinion that the determination of the magistrates was wrong, and that the valuation ought to be the rent payable under the lease, and Lord Fraser was of opinion that the determination was right, on the ground that the obligation on the tenant to remove without compensation formed a "consideration other than the rent" within the meaning of the 6th section of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854. The judges being thus divided in opinion, the determination of the magistrates stood.

North British Railway Co. v Assessor for Leith, 1884, 11 R. 558; 21 S.L.R. 398.

(278)

Obligation on tenant to remove at any time.

A piece of ground belonging to a railway company was let for £2 a year, on the condition that the tenant should be bound to remove at any time on one month's notice. The magistrates held that £97 10s. was the fair annual value. Held that the ground was not bona fide let for a yearly rent conditioned as its fair annual value, and that the lease consequently fell to be disregarded.

Glasgow and South-Western Railway Co. v Assessor for Greenock, 1898, 25 R. 1229; 35 S.L.R. 943; 6 S.L.T. 148.

(279)

Lease terminable on three months' notice — Tenant to uphold machinery.

Opinions reserved as to how far either stipulation displaced the rent in the lease as the criterion of value.

Lowson's Judicial Factor v Assessor for Arbroath, 1900, 2 F. 608; 7 S.L.T. 466.

(280)

Annual payment from previous tenant for being allowed to renounce lease.

A tenant who paid a rent of about £600 renounced his lease under an agreement with the landlord, by which he paid him £100 a year as part of the difference between that rent and the rent paid by the succeeding tenant. Held that this sum could not be taken into consideration in assessing the value of the subjects.

Sharp v Assessor for Caithness-shire, 1887, 24 S.L.R. 313.

(281)

Club—Landlord appointed clubmaster at a salary.

Subjects, consisting of three rooms and a bar, were let to a working man's club for six months, at the rate of £30 per annum of rent. The landlord was appointed clubmaster and manager of the club at £2 a week, provided that there was profit to that amount. Held that the payment of £2 weekly was a consideration other than the rent.

Rintoul v Assessor for Dunfermline, 1902, 4 F. 532; 39 S.L.R. 568; 9 S.L.T. 420.

(281a)

In December, 1899, Stevenson let to the Kelty Workmen's Club, at £15 a year, part of certain premises belonging to him. He resided in the flat above, also belonging to him. The club premises were entered by the assessor in the valuation roll for 1901-1902 at £40. The flat above was separately entered. Stevenson appealed against the valuation of the club premises at £40, contending that it should be £15, the rent in the lease. He deposed that £15 a year was all that he had received from the club, until three months before the date of the appeal, when he was appointed clubmaster at £2 a week. The valuation committee sustained the assessor's valuation, being satisfied that the club had from the first been managed by Stevenson, and being of opinion that he could get a rent of £40 for the club premises. The Judges refused to alter the determination of the valuation committee.

Stevenson v Assessor for Fife, 1902, 4 F. 534; 39 S.L.R. 585; 10 S.L.T. 6.

(4) ABATEMENTS AND DEDUCTIONS.

(282)

Deduction from rent for tenant's outlay on drainage.

Held that deductions from the rent of a farm allowed to the tenant to be spent in drainage fell to be included as part of the rent in the valuation roll.

Udny, 1872, 11 M. 987; 44 J. 432; 9 S.L.R. 446.

(283)

Diminished rent stipulated for first two years of lease.

A farm was let for nineteen years, the rent for the first two years being one-half of the rent for the remaining years. It was stated that the farm was in bad order. Held, in regard to the second year of the lease, that the rent actually paid fell to be entered in the roll.

Buchan Hepburn, 1876, 4 R. 1148.

(284)

Abatements stipulated by the lease not to be deducted, the lease not stating that the farm was in bad condition, and the assessor being therefore justified in assuming that the abatements were to be spent on permanent improvements.

Kinloch, 1876, 4 R. 1148.

(285)

Abatement of rent for two years.

A farm was let on lease for fifteen years from Whitsunday, 1874, at £340. In consequence of the low price of agricultural produce, an agreement was entered into reducing the rent from Martinmas, 1879, to Martinmas, 1881, to £300 per annum. The assessor entered £340 for 1880-81. Held that the entry was wrong.

Maxwell, 1881, 9 R. 1243.

(286)

Voluntary reduction of rent.

A landlord is not entitled to have a farm entered in the valuation roll at a lower rent than that stipulated for on the ground that he has granted a reduction of the rent, unless he can produce conclusive evidence to show that he has bound himself to grant the reduction.

Menzies v Assessor for Perthshire, 1889, 16 R. 805; 26 S.L.T. 688.

(287)

Landlord's outlay of year's rent for improvements.

A landlord bound himself, within the first year of the currency of a lease of a farm, to expend £1065 (the amount of one year's rent) on buildings. Held that in the valuation of the farm deduction should be made from the first year's rent of a year's interest of £1065, as the first year's rent must be regarded as a payment in excess of the value of the farm without the improvements.

Maitland v Assessor for Midlothian, 1893, 20 R. 628; 30 S.L.R. 618.

(288)

Repairs at mutual expense of landlord and tenant.

In a lease of a farm it was provided that the buildings and fences should be kept in repair at the mutual expense of the landlord and tenant. Held that in valuing the farm a deduction fell to be made from the rent payable under the lease in respect of the amount paid by the landlord as his share of the expense of keeping the buildings and fences in repair.

Macpherson v Assessor for Berwickshire, 1895, 22 R. 594; 32 S.L.R. 434; 2 S.L.T. 569.

(289)

Sum paid by landlord to tenant for lime applied to farm.

Where the landlord of a farm, in implementation of an obligation in the lease, repaid to his tenant one-half of the cost of the lime put upon the land by the latter in a certain year, held that in entering the farm in the valuation roll for the succeeding year the assessor was bound to deduct the sum so repaid from the rent specified in the lease.

Miller's Trustees v Assessor for Berwickshire, 1911 S.C. 908; 48 S.L.R. 352; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 199.

(290)

Resumption of land for planting.

A farm was let at £3 per acre, the landlord to allow £5 for each acre he might resume for planting. The landlord having resumed and planted eleven acres, held that the tenant's rent should be entered in the roll at the rent actually paid, and that the land which had been resumed should be entered as woodland at £3 only per acre, contrary to the contention of the assessor, which was that the rent of the farm should only be reduced by £3 per acre for the land resumed, or the full sum of £5 per acre given as the value of the woodland.

Mitchell Innes, 1875, 4 R. 1147.

(291)

House rents not exceeding £5—Rates laid on owners without relief from tenants—Deduction claimed of rates from rents.

A proprietor was assessed for houses at rents above £4 and not exceeding £5. By the General Police Act, 1862, sec. 81, and the Greenock Police Act, 1877, sec. 49, the owners in place of occupiers were to be assessed for police rates in the cases of houses at or under £5, a deduction of one-fourth being allowed from the assessment. No right of relief was given to the owner against the tenants. The proprietor claimed deduction of the police and local rates from the rents. Held that the entry was wrong.

Hamilton, 1881, 9 R. 1244.

(292)

Lease of furnished houses—Deduction in respect of use of furniture.

Observed (per Lord Trayner)—“It is the custom of assessors—and it appears to be so reasonable a custom that I should be sorry to disturb it—that where furnished houses are let, one-half of the rent is taken as the rent of the house and the other half as the rent of the furniture.”

Maxwell Scott v Assessor for Roxburghshire, 1890, 17 R. 833; 27 S.L.R. 606.

(293)

House let furnished — Comparison with other houses.

A house in Glasgow was let furnished at £200. It was entered at £130. The assessor stated facts to show that the entry was warranted by the average floorage rent of let houses in the district. The appellant stated that in the case of furnished houses it was usual to take half of rent for the house and half for the furniture. The commissioners reduced the valuation to £100. Held that the commissioners were wrong.

Skinner, 1879, 9 R. 1237.

(294)

Abatement of rent — Lease of hotel and furnishings — Apportionment of abatement between hotel and furnishings.

A furnished hotel in Nairn was let to a tenant from March, 1912, to May, 1917, at a yearly rent of £350, £200 of which was described as rent of the premises, and £150 as rent of the furnishings. In October, 1914, the tenant was interned as an alien enemy, and, although released in January, 1915, he was not permitted to reside in Nairn. For the year ending Whitsunday, 1916, the landlord granted an abatement of £115, a memorandum, endorsed on the lease and signed by both parties, bearing that the abatement from the stipulated rent of the premises was granted because of the special circumstances affecting the hotel consequent upon the war. In the valuation roll for that year the assessor entered the hotel at the yearly rent or value of £200, the rent stated in the original lease.

Held (1) that the assessor ought to have given effect to the abatement, there being no evidence to show that it had been granted in view of extraneous considerations, and not in view of market value; but (2) that the whole abatement did not fall to be attributed to the rent of the premises, but must be divided proportionately between the rent of the premises and the rent of the furnishings.

M'Gregor v Assessor for Nairn, 1916 S.C. 659; 53 S.L.R. 478; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 73.

(295)

Mansion-house—Deductions for furniture and keeping up of garden.

Duke of Richmond, 1868, 11 M. 978.

(296)

Use of furniture and upkeep of garden.

In a lease of a mansion house, garden, and grounds to a yearly tenant at a cumulo rent, it was provided that the tenant should have the use of the furniture in the house and the garden produce, but the wages of the gardeners and the expense of keeping up the garden were to be paid by the proprietor. The assessor having entered the subjects at the value at which they had stood in the valuation roll for fifteen years, while unlet and in the occupation of the proprietor, the proprietor appealed and maintained that the house, garden, &c., having been actually let, the rent ought to be taken as the basis of valuation, under deduction of the annual cost of the services provided by him. The valuation committee sustained the assessor's valuation. In an appeal, held that as it was admitted that the services of the gardeners supplied by the proprietor were required for other parts of the estate as well as for the garden and grounds let to the tenant, and as it was impossible to ascertain precisely to what extent they were given to the let and to the unlet parts of the estate, the valuation committee were justified in the circumstances in adhering to the former valuation, and the assessor's valuation affirmed.

Colville's Trustees v Assessor for Fife, 1894, 21 R. 799; 31 S.L.R. 470; 1 S.L.T. 533.

(297)

Mansion-house let with deer forest—Rent—Deductions—Use of furniture—Servants' labour—Horses—Carriages.

A proprietor appealed against the valuation of a deer forest and mansion house which he had let for one year without a written lease. The tenant had the use of the proprietor's establishment of horses, furniture, and the labour of the outdoor and indoor servants, and there was no evidence that this establishment was in excess of the tenant's requirements. Held that the valuation of the deer forest and mansion house was to be taken at the sum paid by the tenant, under deduction of the cost of the establishment to the proprietor, as for the whole year, and not merely for the shooting season.

Lord Middleton v Assessor for Ross-shire, 1882, 10 R. 28; 19 S.L.R. 564.

(298)

Deductions from rent—Grass parks—Grass parks let for season—Expenses of roup—Discount for prepayment of rent.

In assessing the yearly value of grass parks let for the grazing season, it is not legitimate to make deductions from the rent payable by the tenant either in respect of the expenses of the roup of the grass parks or in respect of discount paid by the landlord to the tenant for prepayment of the rent.

Lockhart v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1922 S.C. 450; 59 S.L.R. 295; 1922 S.L.T. 212.

(299)

Sum paid for right to cause surface damage—Deduction from mineral rent.

The proprietor of a colliery objected to its being entered in the valuation roll at the royalty received by him from his tenants, and claimed deduction of a royalty paid by him to the proprietor of the surface for liberty to bring down the surface, or otherwise deduction of the sum which he received from his tenants as their contribution thereto. Held that no deduction fell to be made.

Harvie v Assessor for Upper Ward of Lanarkshire, 1893, 20 R. 630; 30 S.L.R. 613.

(300)

Public-house—Increase in licence duty—Decrease in profits—Revision of valuation—Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910, secs. 43, 44, sched. I. (c).

Mark and Scott were respectively tenants of two public-houses leased for a term of years at stipulated rents. The tenant in each case paid his landlord a sum for goodwill, and Mark was also taken bound to take his supply of spirits from the landlord. In each case the assessor had, in valuing the premises at the commencement of the leases, divided the sum paid for goodwill equally between landlord and tenant, and after dividing the landlord's half by the number of years in the lease, had added the figure thus arrived at to the stipulated rent. The valuations so brought out were appealed against (the leases being still current) on the ground that an increase in the licence duty and a decline in drawings had reduced the profits. Held (1) that such a valuation could be competently reconsidered during the currency of the lease if there was a material change of circumstances; (2) that the diminution in drawings was not traceable to any permanent cause and did not afford ground for a revision of the valuation, but that the increase in licence duty was a material and presumably permanent change of circumstances which did afford such ground; (3) that the valuation in each case should be reduced by an amount equal to half the increase in the licence duty; and the appeals sustained.

Mark v. Assessor for Edinburgh—Scott v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1911 S.C. 974; 48 S.L.R. 379; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 241.

[See also 3 (2) (f), infra.]

3. SUBJECTS IN OWNER'S OCCUPATION.

(1) METHODS OF VALUATION.

(a) Contractor's Principle.

Shops and offices.

[See Nos. 315-318, infra.]

Theatres and public halls.

[See No. 321, infra.]

Schools.

[See Nos. 322, 323, infra.]

Hotels and public-houses.

[See Nos. 324, 326, infra.]

Factories and other industrial subjects.

[See (2) (g) (i), infra.]

Asylums and hospitals.

[See Nos. 357, 359-363, infra.]

Harbours and piers.

[See Nos. 375, 376, infra.]

Gas and electric light undertakings.

[See Nos. 384, 385, infra.]

Waterworks and sewers.

[See No. 400, infra.]

(b) Revenue Principle—Tenant's Profits.

Theatres and public halls.

[See Nos. 320, 321, infra.]

Hotels and public-houses.

[See Nos. 326, 329, 331, infra.]

Factories and other industrial subjects.

[See No. 335, infra.]

Cemeteries.

[See No. 365, infra.]

Harbours and piers.

[See Nos. 367-369, 372-379, infra.]

Gas and electric light undertakings.

[See Nos. 380-393, infra.]

Waterworks and sewers.

[See Nos. 394-396, infra.]

Tramways.

[See No. 436, infra.]

Canal.

[See No. 448, infra.]

(c) Comparison with Similar Subjects.

Dwelling-houses.

[See Nos. 302, 303, infra.]

Shops and offices.

[See Nos. 315, 317, 318, infra.]

Hotels and public-houses.

[See Nos. 327, 328, infra.]

Asylums and hospitals.

[See No. 358, infra.]

(2) PARTICULAR SUBJECTS.

(a) Dwelling-houses.

(301)

Tenant purchasing subjects.

Held that when a tenant becomes proprietor of the subjects let, and improves them, the rent stated in the lease cannot be taken as the annual value.

Grant, 1873, 11 M. 989; 10 S.L.R. 661.

(302)

Dwelling-house in town—Comparison with houses of same class in neighbouring street.

Macfarlane, 1872, 11 M. 985; 44 J. 432; 9 S.L.R. 445.

Binning, 1872, 11 M. 988; 44 J. 433; 9 S.L.R. 497.

(303)

—Comparison with subjects let for a period of years.

Houses in the occupation of their owners were entered at £155 and £140. Two houses in the same terrace were let on lease for three and three and a half years at £140, and one on three years' lease at £145. The owners contended that the Act required unlet houses to be entered at the rent at which they might be expected to be let on yearly sets, and that this would be less for houses of this class than where there were leases for a lengthened period, on account of considerations as to carpets and furnishings. The commissioners restricted to £135 and £120 respectively. Held that the commissioners were wrong.

Muir, 1878, 9 R. 1237.

(304)

Official residences—Professors' houses.

University of Glasgow, 1872, 11 M. 985; 44 J. 432; 9 S.L.R. 445.

(305)

Mansion-house.

Gladstone, 1872, 11 M. 986; 44 J. 432; 9 S.L.R. 446.

(306)

—Special value to proprietor.

An assessor, in valuing a mansion-house in the country occupied by the proprietor, based his valuation on the view that it must be held to have a peculiar value to the proprietor which it would not have to a stranger, and that therefore it fell to be valued at what, with all its surroundings, it was worth to the proprietor, and not at what an outsider would pay for it unfurnished. Held that the assessor's basis of valuation was unsound, and that the house fell to be valued at the rent which it would fetch if put into the market in its present condition.

Forbes Irvine v Assessor for Aberdeenshire, 1893, 20 R. 626; 30 S.L.R. 617.

(307)

Mansion - house with shootings attached.

A large mansion-house, with expensive gardens and policies attached, was situated on an estate which was small in comparison with the size of the house, and on which the shootings were not of much value. The house was occupied by the proprietor, and had never been let. It had cost £17,000 to build, and was valued by the valuation committee at a yearly rent or value of £190. The proprietor sought to have this valuation reduced to £115, and led evidence to show that, owing to the expense of upkeep and the unattractiveness of the shootings, the house, if lettable at all, could not be let at such a rent as would give a net return of anything approaching £190. The Court sustained the valuation of the committee. Observations on the methods of arriving at the valuation of mansion-houses which are unlet; and on the regard to be had to enhanced rents obtainable for country houses which have valuable shootings attached. Opinion (per Lord Johnston) that, as one of the factors in valuing a mansion-house which has not been let, an assessor is entitled to take the proprietor as a potential tenant, and to consider what rent he would have to pay for a residence appropriate to the size and rental of his estate.

Scott v Assessor for Kincardineshire, 1914 S.C. 655; 51 S.L.R. 172; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 8.

(308)

Land adjoining villa—Owner occupier of both.

The proprietor and occupier of a house and grounds, and entered as such at £87, owned and occupied about 3 acres of land adjoining, which were separately entered at £51. He also owned another portion of land, also adjoining, which was let and entered at £9. He claimed that the valuation of the adjoining land in his own occupancy should be restricted to £11 7s. 6d., as being the same valuation in proportion to extent as the let portion. Held that the entry was wrong, and that the adjoining lands in the proprietor's occupancy should be valued at £5 per acre.

Laird, 1881, 9 R. 1245.

(b) Farms, Shootings, and Fishings.

(309)

Increase in valuations of farms—General rise in agricultural rents—Farms recently bought and occupied by owners—Purchase prices.

Increases in the valuations of two farms in East Lothian, which had been purchased in recent years and were occupied by the purchasers, were sanctioned for the year Whitsunday, 1921-1922, by the valuation committee. Held that the increases were justified having regard (1) to the fact that in every case in which a farm had been let in the county during 1921 and 1922 an increase of rent, averaging 20 per cent., had been obtained; and (2) to the prices paid by the present owners of the farms when they purchased them in 1915 and 1921 respectively.

Wyllie v Assessor for East Lothian, 1922 S.C. 445; 59 S.L.R. 293; 1922 S.L.T. 214.

(310)

Shootings—Unlet deer forest—Whether lands to be entered also at their value as grazing ground—Act 1886, secs. 6 and 7.

Lands in the occupation of the proprietor were used as a deer forest only, there being neither other game nor farm stock thereon. Held (per Lord Fraser, agreeing with the determination of the valuation committee) that the lands fell to be entered in the valuation roll at their value as a deer forest only; (per Lord Lee) that looking particularly to the terms of the Sporting Lands Rating Act, 1886, secs. 6 and 7, there ought to be a double entry of the lands at their value as grazing ground, and at their value as a deer forest. The judges being divided in opinion, the determination of the valuation committee stood.

Assessor for Argyllshire v Stuart, 1888, 15 R. 588; 25 S.L.R. 315.

(311)

—Shootings unlettable in consequence of war.

Where Highland shootings were unlet in consequence of the difficulty of finding tenants for such subjects due to the war, the Court confirmed the valuation of the assessor by which the subjects had been entered in the roll at one-half of their previous valuation.

Perrins v Assessor for Ross-shire, 1918 S.C. 602; 55 S.L.R. 258.

(312)

—Shootings unlettable in consequence of war.

Where Highland shootings were unlet in consequence of the difficulty of finding tenants for such subjects due to the war, the valuation committee entered the subjects in the roll at one-half of their previous valuation. The Court, in the circumstances, confirmed the decision of the committee; but observed that the case of Perrins did not lay down a hard-and-fast rule for fixing the rate of reduction to be allowed in consequence of depreciation due to the war. Opinion (per Lord Johnston), that, although the subjects were for the time being unlettable, they nevertheless had a capital value which fell to be considered in fixing the yearly value. Opinion contra (per Lord Salvesen).

Grant v Assessor for Inverness-shire, 1918 S.C. 620; 55 S.L.R. 244; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 146.

(313)

Deer forests.

The valuation committee for the county of Argyll fixed the value of an unlet deer forest at a sum equal to £20 per stag on the average number of stags killed in the season. The proprietor founded on previous decisions as settling the valuation as at £15 per stag. The Court sustained the committee's valuation, and held that there was no general principle applicable to the valuation of all unlet deer forests in Scotland.

Marquis of Breadalbane v Assessor for Argyllshire, 1890, 17 R. 837; 27 S.L.R. 635.

(314)

Fishings.

Assessor for County of Elgin v Duke of Richmond and Gordon, 1905, 7 F. 424; 42 S.L.R. 512; 12 S.L.T. 831, No. 107, supra.

Assessor for Aberdeenshire v Lady Cowdray, 1911 S.C. 970; 48 S.L.R. 395; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 231, No. 104, supra.

Dee Salmon Fisheries Co. v Assessor for Aberdeen, 1915 S.C. 790; 52 S.L.R. 178; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 457, No. 214, supra.

Don District Fishery Board v Burnett, 1918 S.C. 37; 55 S.L.R. 90; 1917, 2 S.L.T. 183, No. 105, supra.

Wallace v Assessor for Wigtownshire, 1902, 4 F. 515; 39 S.L.R. 570; 9 S.L.T. 515, No. 215, supra.

(c) Shops and Offices.

(315)

Offices in city owned and occupied by statutory body—Comparison of rentals.

Held that the proper method of valuing a large building centrally situated in Glasgow, the property of the parish council of Glasgow and occupied by them as their offices, was by a comparison with the rentals of premises of a similar character in the neighbourhood; and that the mere fact that the owners and occupiers were a statutory body, in whose place it might not be possible to find a similar tenant, was not a reason for adopting the "contractor's principle" of valuation. Observed that the "contractor's principle" could only be legitimately adopted if the method of comparison were wholly inapplicable, or for the purpose of checking a valuation otherwise arrived at.

Glasgow Parish Council v Assessor for Glasgow, 1914 S.C. 651; 51 S.L.R. 148; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 435.

(316)

Co-operative store—Separate industries in same range of buildings—Whether to be taken as unum quid.

Premises belonging to a co-operative association consisting of a range of buildings which included a bakery, workshops, stables, and a refrigerator, were valued by the assessor as a unum quid, by taking a percentage on the cost of erection. There was no other building within the burgh of a similar construction and applied to similar purposes. The proprietors maintained that the several portions of the premises fell to be valued as separate subjects by comparison with the value of similar subjects in the burgh. Held that the assessor was right in valuing the premises as a unum quid by taking a percentage of their cost.

St. Cuthbert's Co-operative Association v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1896, 23 R. 681; 33 S.L.R. 487; 3 S.L.T. 278.

(317)

Valuation by floorage area—Rate based on comparison with rent of neighbouring shops let—Re-valuation where no change of circumstances.

Jenner & Co. were the owners of a large block of buildings in Princes Street, Edinburgh, occupied in connection with their business of drapers, &c., the main floors being used as shops and saloons, and the upper floors as workrooms and a boarding residence for the employees. For two years after their completion the buildings had been entered in the valuation roll at the yearly rent or value of £7250. In 1907 the assessor entered the buildings at £8780, a sum reached by taking the floorage area of each floor and applying thereto a varying rate per square foot, the rates being based upon an analysis of rents actually paid for neighbouring shops in Princes Street. Jenner & Co. appealed and maintained that the re-valuation was not justified by any change of circumstances. The magistrates reduced the valuation to £8000. Held that the magistrates were wrong, and that the valuation should be reduced to £7250.

Jenner & Co. v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1908 S.C. 601; 45 S.L.R. 493; 15 S.L.T. 917.

(318)

Insurance office—No similar office in same street—Valuation by comparison with shops.

A large recently built office in Princes Street, Edinburgh, belonging to and occupied by an insurance company was entered by the assessor at £5500, a sum reached by taking the floorage area, and applying thereto varying rates per square foot, the rates being derived from an analysis of rents actually paid for shops in Princes Street. There was no similar insurance office in Princes Street. The company appealed and maintained that the valuation ought to be on the basis of the valuation of other insurance offices in Edinburgh, e.g., in George Street or St. Andrew Square. The magistrates reduced the valuation to £5000. On appeal the judges declined to interfere with the determination of the magistrates, as it was not shown to be unreasonable.

North British and Mercantile Insurance Co. v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1908 S.C. 601; 45 S.L.R. 493; 15 S.L.T. 917.

(319)

Insurance company's premises.

In the valuation of shops in Princes Street, Edinburgh, the assessor was in the practice of valuing the front part, extending 50 feet back from the street, at the rate of 10s. per square foot of floorage, and the back part at half that rate. In the case of an insurance office where the street floor was above the level of the street, the assessor fixed the rate for the front part at 7s. 6d., and the same rate for the back part. In an appeal by the insurance company held that the back part should have been valued at one-half the rate fixed for the front part.

North British and Mercantile Insurance Co. v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1910 S.C. 814; 47 S.L.R. 368; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 169.

(d) Theatres and Public Halls.

(320)

Theatres in occupation of owners—Increase in valuations — Attendance — Drawings—Profits.

The theatres of a city were all occupied by the companies which owned them, so that valuation by the method of comparison with the rentals of other theatres in that area was impossible. An increase in their valuations was made by the assessor based upon a large (and probably permanent) increase in the attendance and drawings at the theatres, and in the profits of the companies or the value of their shares, taken in conjunction with the fact that, owing to the great increase in the cost of building, the erection of new theatres was improbable in the near future. Held that the assessor's increase was justified. Observations as to the circumstances in which profits derived from the occupation of heritable subjects may be taken into consideration as a factor in determining their yearly value for valuation purposes.

Howard & Wyndham v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1920 S.C. 502; 57 S.L.R. 246; 1920, 1 S.L.T. 195.

(321)

Masonic halls—Halls let for social purposes—Revenue-producing capacity—Floorage area.

A masonic institution owned premises consisting, inter alia, of two halls, which were let out for balls and social functions and were also occasionally used for masonic meetings. The assessor, upon a calculation based solely upon a comparison of the floorage area with that of similar premises in the neighbourhood, valued the premises at £450 per annum, which was sustained by the valuation committee. Held upon appeal that the committee should also have considered the revenue-producing capacity of the premises; that their determination was wrong; and that £350 was a fair valuation. Observations upon the reliability of valuation by floorage area when applied to such premises, and as to how far revenue-producing capacity should be considered.

Supreme Grand Royal Arch Chapter of Scotland v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1911 S.C. 962; 48 S.L.R. 375; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 227.

See also Blyth Hall Trustees v Assessor for Fife, 1883, 10 R. 659; 20 S.L.R. 433, No. 186, supra.

(e) Schools.

(322)

Proprietary secondary schools—Accommodation—Pupil space—Hypothetical tenant—Playgrounds—Prospective feuing value—Charitable and educational trust.

The education board of the Merchant Company of Edinburgh were proprietors of four large day schools, which gave chiefly secondary education, though each had elementary classes. The board charged fees, and earned grants, to obtain which latter they had to conform to the regulations of the Scotch Education Department. The receipts from fees and grants were insufficient to meet the expenditure, the annual deficit being met from the educational trust endowments of the company. Under the regulations of the Education Department the number of pupils permissible per room, and consequently the available pupil space, had been since 1892 compulsorily and progressively reduced. The previous assessments having been increased, held (1) that the prime factor in valuing such schools was the available pupil space, which regulated the probable rent which the local education authority, regarded as a hypothetical tenant, would be likely to offer for the schools in question; (2) that the method of taking a percentage upon structural value was misleading in the case of such schools; (3) that in dealing with the playgrounds attached to such schools, the whole subjects must be taken as a unum quid, and the estimated feuing value of such playground areas could not be considered in assessing the annual value; and assessments reduced.

Merchant Company Education Board v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1911 S.C. 948; 48 S.L.R. 387; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 233.

(323)

New high-class school for girls—Pupil space—Fees paid by pupils—Contractor's principle.

A non-profit-earning company, which conducted a high-class school for girls, left their old premises and built a new school upon land which they acquired. While no expenditure was incurred upon mere ornament or architectural embellishment, the building and grounds were planned and equipped upon the most modern and approved principles, and afforded much better accommodation than that required by the Education Department. There was no other school of a similar character in the neighbourhood. Held that, in the absence of any similar school for comparison, the yearly rent or value fell to be ascertained on the "contractor's principle" by charging a percentage on the capital cost of each pupil space; and the valuation of the valuation committee, which was equivalent to somewhat less than 4 per cent. on such capital cost, but was considerably higher than the corresponding figure for board schools in the district, approved. Opinion that the scale of fees paid in a school is a factor which falls to be taken into consideration if it is necessary to estimate the rent which might be obtained from a hypothetical tenant.

St. George's School v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1916 S.C. 675; 53 S.L.R. 487; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 99.

(f) Hotels and Public-houses.

(324)

Railway hotel—Floorage area—Profits—Accommodation.

The North British Railway Company's hotel in Edinburgh was entered in the valuation roll at the yearly rent or value of £11,950. The assessor reached this sum by taking the floor space and applying thereto varying rates per square foot, and comparing the accommodation with that of other hotels in the city. The railway company maintained that the basis of valuation should be the profits of the hotel business, or alternatively the number of lettable bedrooms. Held that no single method of valuation was reliable, and in the whole circumstances that the valuation should be reduced to £7000.

North British Railway Co. v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1905, 7 F. 435; 42 S.L.R. 508; 12 S.L.T. 859.

(325)

Special value to railway company—Recent valuation—Prospective success overestimated—Revision of valuation.

The valuation of the North British Railway Hotel, Edinburgh, was fixed by the Court upon appeal in 1905 at £7000. In 1911 the company again appealed, maintaining that the prospective success anticipated when that valuation was fixed had not been realised; that the hotel was not fairly comparable with others owing to disadvantages of structure; and that the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910, had greatly increased the burdens on the premises. The annual gross profit of the hotel (exclusive of manager's salary, or any sum for tenant's profits or for rent) amounted on an average to £4496 only. The company proposed a valuation of £5500. The valuation committee fixed it at £7000. Held that the valuation of 1905 should be revised, and that, in the circumstances, and keeping in view the consideration that the hotel was an important adjunct to the company's system, the valuation should be fixed at £6000.

North British Railway Co. v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1911 S.C. 939; 48 S.L.R. 369; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 203.

(326)

Hydropathic establishment—Contractor's principle—Comparison with similar establishments—Compelling disclosure of profits—Act 1854, sec. 10.

The valuation (on the basis of capital cost) of a hydropathic establishment in the occupation of its proprietor reduced, on a comparison with the valuation of similar establishments throughout Scotland, from £1120 to £850. Opinion (per Lord Fraser) that the proper method of valuing such an establishment, when in the occupation of its proprietor, was to ascertain the profits which he made, and that under the 10th section of the Lands Valuation Act, 1854, he might be compelled to disclose these profits, and to produce his books. Opinion on this point reserved by Lord Lee.

Philp v Assessor for Rothesay, 1888, 15 R. 627; 25 S.L.R. 462.

(327)

Public-house.

A publican transferred his business to new premises, which he had purchased, and which were a few yards distant from his old premises. He made considerable alterations on the new premises to fit them for the business. The assessor valued the new premises by comparing them with similar premises within the burgh in respect of rental per superficial yard. The publican maintained that the premises ought to be valued on the basis of the cost of the property and of the alterations. The magistrates, "taking the whole circumstances, with the situation of the premises, into consideration and from their knowledge generally," affirmed the assessor's valuation. Held that the determination of the magistrates was right.

Noble v Assessor for Leith, 1899, 1 F. 584; 36 S.L.R. 599.

(328)

Observations on the valuation of licensed premises by means of comparison with the rentals for similar adjoining premises.

Scouller v Assessor for Glasgow, 1912 S.C. 757; 49 S.L.R. 152; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 491.

(329)

Revenue principle.

The magistrates of a burgh fixed the yearly rent or value of a public-house, occupied by the owner, at 7 per cent. of the drawings, of which a statement had been voluntarily tendered by the owner. Neither he nor the assessor adduced any evidence as to the rents paid for leased public-houses in the neighbourhood; but it was proved that the method applied by the assessor had been adopted by him under agreement with about sixty other publicans in the burgh who owned and occupied their own premises. Held that, in the particular circumstances of the case, the magistrates' decision fell to be sustained. Observations as to the valuation of public-house premises on a basis of drawings or turnover.

Haggart v Assessor for Leith, 1912 S.C. 784; 49 S.L.R. 163; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 502.

(330)

Increased licence duty—Onus of proof as to value.

Two appellants, each of whom was both proprietor and occupier of licensed premises, claimed reductions of the former valuations of their respective premises on account of the increased licence duty imposed by the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910, sec. 43. Held that the increase in the duty established a prima facie case for reduction of the valuations, and that as the assessor had not discharged the onus of proving that the annual letting value of the premises had not been diminished, the valuations should be reduced. In the circumstances the Court reduced each valuation by half the amount of the increase in the duty.

Deards v Assessor for Edinburgh—Clark v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1911 S.C. 918; 48 S.L.R. 360; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 148. See also Mark v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1911 S.C. 974; 48 S.L.R. 379; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 241, No. 300, supra.

(331)

Increased licence duty—Presumption as to value—Onus of proof—Refusal to produce statement of drawings.

Held that the presumption that the increased licence duty imposed by the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910, had reduced the annual letting value of licensed premises could not be pleaded by a publican who refused a request by the assessor for the production of a comparative statement of his drawings for the three previous years, in respect that the request was a reasonable one to enable the assessor to prove that the value of the premises had not been diminished.

Scouller v Assessor for Glasgow, 1912 S.C. 757; 49 S.L.R. 152; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 491.

(332)

Change of circumstances—Statutory curtailment of hours of business—Onus of proof as to value.

Held that the curtailment of the hours during which licensed premises may be open introduced by the Temperance (Scotland) Act, 1913, did not per se establish a prima facie case for reduction of the valuation of a public-house, or throw upon the assessor the onus of proving that the annual letting value of the premises had not been diminished.

Maxwell v Assessor for Galashiels, 1915 S.C. 765; 52 S.L.R. 117; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 18.

For cases of public-houses let to tenants, see V. 2 (3) (c) (ii.) (iv.) and (v.), supra.

(333)

Licensed grocer's premises — Increased licence duty—Presumption as to value.

Held that the increased licence duty imposed on a grocer's shop by the Finance (1909-1910) Act, 1910, established a prima facie case for the reduction of the valuation, and the valuation reduced by half the amount of the increase of the duty.

Robertson v Assessor for Perth, 1912 S.C. 761; 49 S.L.R. 154; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 460.

(g) Factories and other Industrial Subjects.

(i.) Contractor's Principle.

(334)

Contractor's principle.

The cost of construction should be taken only as a basis for valuation subject to modification by other considerations, and not as a final test of value.

M'Vitie v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1898, 25 R. 601; 35 S.L.R. 666; 5 S.L.T. 385.

(335)

Contractor's principle — Observations on revenue principle.

In oil works retorts and other apparatus for the treatment of shale and for the refining of crude oil are subject to rapid deterioration, and require to be frequently renewed to keep the works in an efficient state. Held that such works, when in the occupation of the owners, should be entered in the valuation roll at the annual rent or value brought out by taking $10\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the capital value of the works and adding thereto feu-duty, insurance, and landlord's taxes.

Observed (per Lord Kyllachy) that to fix the rent of ordinary trading or manufacturing premises by reference to the profits of the trade or business would be wrong in principle, but that in a limited class of cases, such as railways, harbours, or waterworks, where there was a monopoly or quasi-monopoly, the returns or profits might reasonably be treated as really revenue from the heritable subjects, and their valuation fixed accordingly.

Oakbank Oil Co. v Assessor for Midlothian, 1902, 4 F. 520; 39 S.L.R. 581; 9 S.L.T. 471.

(336)

—New factory built with special regard to comfort and welfare of employees — Rate of interest on unremunerative portion of expenditure.

A firm of manufacturers erected a new factory in the neighbourhood of Glasgow upon enlightened and modern lines. Its equipment and accommodation were superior to the standards required by the Factory Acts, and in addition it contained, on a generous scale, accommodation for the rest, recreation, and refreshment of the employees.

Held (1) that, in the absence of any other factory built upon a similar plan which might have been used for the purpose of comparison, the factory had been rightly valued upon the "contractor's principle"; but (2) that, although such items of the expenditure as had been incurred in raising the factory above the standard of an ordinary well-equipped factory could not be regarded as wholly unremunerative, a lower rate (in the circumstances of the case approximately one-half) ought to be charged upon these items.

Wallace, Scott & Co. v Assessor for Glasgow, 1916 S.C. 670; 53 S.L.R. 484; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 70.

(337)

—Grain mill.

Held that the value of a grain mill was rightly entered in the valuation roll at $8\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the price.

Thomson, 1871, 11 M. 984; 44 J. 431; 9 S.L.R. 444.

(338)

—Profits of business—Paper mills—Revaluation.

A large paper mill in Fife had appeared in the valuation roll at the same yearly rent or value from 1911 to 1920, although during that period extensive additions had been made to the buildings and machinery. The subjects had last been valued as a whole in 1884, and between that date and 1911 the valuation had been increased from time to time on the basis of the cost of additions and improvements made upon the subjects. In 1920 no paper mill in Scotland was the subject of a lease; and the other paper mills in Fife had likewise not been revalued for a long period of years. Held (1) that in making up the roll for the year 1920-1921 the assessor was justified in revaluing the whole subjects, including the machinery, de novo; (2) that, as comparison with the rentals of other paper mills was impossible, and comparison with the existing valuations of similar mills was useless in the circumstances, the contractor's principle fell to be applied; and the valuation fixed at a figure representing 6 per cent. upon the capital value of the buildings, and $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the capital value of the machinery, as ascertained at pre-war rates and prices. Opinion (per Lord Hunter) that, where comparison with the rents obtained from similar subjects was impossible and the valuation proceeded upon the contractor's principle, profits, as affecting the rent obtainable from a hypothetical tenant, were an element which might legitimately be taken into account in fixing the valuation. Opinion contra (per Lord Salvesen), except in a case where the main profits of the business depended upon the situation and character of the heritable subjects.

Guardbridge Paper Co. v Assessor for Fife, 1921 S.C. 634; 58 S.L.R. 425; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 360.

(339)

—Revaluation—Steel works—Collapse of trade consequent on war—Reduction granted on ascertained values.

In making up the valuation roll for the year 1921-22 the assessor for Lanarkshire made a complete revaluation of the steel, bar-iron, and sheet works in the county, none of which had been subjected to a complete detailed valuation since 1901, the values of the individual works having been merely varied from year to year as the subjects were added to or altered. All of these works being occupied by the owners, and there being no example in Scotland of any such works being let to a tenant, the assessor, following the principles laid down in Guardbridge Paper Co. v Assessor for Fife, 1921 S.C. 634, proceeded upon the contractor's principle, applying pre-war rates and prices. As a result of the revaluation the works were entered in the roll for the year 1921-1922 at approximately three times the value at which they had hitherto been entered. Held (1) that the assessor was justified in making a revaluation of the whole subjects, and that the principle upon which he had proceeded and the method of its application were correct; but (2) that the valuation committee were justified in reducing the figures at which he had arrived by 30 per cent., it having been established that, as a result of the abnormal conditions produced by the war, the steel and iron industries were, owing to over-capitalisation and increased competition at home and abroad, suffering from a collapse of trade which must inevitably continue for a prolonged period. The case of a merely temporary depression in an industry distinguished.

Colville & Sons v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1922 S.C. 460; 59 S.L.R. 347; 1922 S.L.T. 294.

(340)

—Flax mill.

Valuation of several flax-spinning mills in Arbroath, in the occupation of their owners, which had been reached by taking $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the capital value of the buildings (as ascertained on the basis of a rate of from 1d. to 2d. per cubic foot of the contents), and on the capital value of the heritable machinery—sustained.

Webster & Sons v Assessor for Arbroath, 1902, 4 F. 539; 39 S.L.R. 578; 9 S.L.T. 445.

(341)

—Linen manufactory—Value of buildings and steam-power.

Valuation on the basis of 5 per cent. on the cost price and steam-power, the latter being capitalised at £45 per horse-power. Shields, 1875, 4 R. 1146.

(ii.) Comparison with Similar Subjects.

(342)

Comparison with similar subjects.

Circumstances in which the Valuation Appeal Judges refused to interfere with the valuation of a distillery in the hands of its proprietors, which had been reached by comparison with the valuations of other distilleries in the country.

Observations (per Lord Fraser) on the modes of valuing manufactories in the occupation of the proprietor.

Assessor for Argyllshire v Islay Distillery Co., 1884, 11 R. 841; 21 S.L.R. 563.

(343)

—Recent sales of similar property in vicinity.

In fixing the capital value of spinning mills, in the occupation of their owners, as the basis for reaching the yearly rent or value of the mills, it is legitimate to take into consideration the prices obtained at a number of recent sales of these and similar mills in the same town.

Webster & Sons v Assessor for Arbroath, 1908 S.C. 613; 45 S.L.R. 508; 15 S.L.T. 996.

(344)

Two mills, one empty, the other with machinery in it, but not going.

Two cotton mills were entered, the one at £90, and the other at £800. The machinery, &c., were removed from the former. When worked it was entered at £120. The appellant contended that, as the mill at present consisted only of bare walls, £20 was the full annual value. The other mill contained the whole machinery, a man being employed to oil and keep it, as far as possible, from deteriorating. It could be set in motion at any time. £800 was the sum at which it had stood while being worked. The appellant stated the mill could not now be worked to profit, as the machinery wanted the modern improvements, and for other reasons, and that attempts had been made to sell or let it without success. He contended that it should be valued as a storehouse for machinery, and that £80 would be a full value as such. The commissioners refused the appeal as regarded the first-mentioned mill, and reduced the other to £400, as fair and reasonable in the whole circumstances. Both parties appealed. Held that the commissioners were right.

Barbour, 1878, 9 R. 1236.

(345)

Recent sale of subjects.

In the case of a flax mill which in the previous year had been sold privately at the upset price after being thrice exposed to public sale, held that the value to be entered was $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the price paid for the subjects (deducting the value of the moveable machinery) plus the feu-duty.

Andrew Lowson, Limited v Assessor for Arbroath, 1901, 3 F. 466; 38 S.L.R. 496; 8 S.L.T. 470.

(346)

Forced sale—Price obtained on test of market value—Valuation based on capacity of machinery—Local knowledge.

After a mill had been exposed four times unsuccessfully for sale, it was sold by private bargain by a trustee for creditors at a much reduced figure. Held that the price so obtained could not be taken as the basis of valuation upon which to assess the true yearly value, and valuation for one year fixed at a figure arrived at by taking £1 per loom as the yearly value.

Craiks, Limited v Assessor for Forfar, 1909 S.C. 658; 46 S.L.R. 438; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 269.

(iii.) Output Basis.

(347)

Output.

Held that in the case of distilleries occupied by their owners it is a lawful mode of ascertaining the annual value to fix a rate per bushel of mashing capacity.

Sheriff v Assessor for Argyllshire, 1885, 12 R. 919; 22 S.L.R. 608.

(348)

The valuation of a distillery was appealed against on the ground that a comparison of its output with that of other distilleries formed the proper basis of valuation, and that upon that basis it had been overvalued.

Held that the output was not a proper basis of valuation, and appeal dismissed.

North British Distillery Co. v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1890, 17 R. 845; 27 S.L.R. 617.

(349)

Probable rent.

Held that a paper mill in possession of the proprietor should be valued at the probable rent, and not exclusively according to either output or cost of erection.

Annandale & Son, 1867, 11 M. 977.

(iv.) Miscellaneous Questions.

(350)

Increased licence duty—Distillery.

Where a distillery company's premises had been entered in the valuation roll at the same figure as in previous years, although the Finance (1909-10) Act, 1910, had largely increased the licence duty payable by the company, held, upon appeal by the company, that the increased licence duty did not fall to be taken into account in valuing the subjects, the circumstances of a distillery being different from those of public-house premises.

North British Distillery Co. v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1911 S.C. 927; 48 S.L.R. 365; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 144.

(351)

Compulsory stoppage of manufacture—Distillery—War.

Distilleries, occupied by the proprietors, were entered in the valuation roll for the year ending Whitsunday, 1919, at the yearly rents or values at which they had been assessed since 1910, and which were based upon their productive capacities. The proprietors appealed, and claimed a two-thirds reduction, on the ground that the Government had, for the present, imposed a total prohibition upon distilling. Most of the distilleries held large stocks of whisky, which had greatly increased in value. No accounts of profits or losses were produced by the appellants. The valuation committee dismissed the appeals, on the ground that the appellants had failed to establish that the temporary stoppage of distilling had reduced the amounts for which, one year with another, the distilleries might be reasonably expected to let. Held that the decision of the committee was right.

Bulloch, Lade & Co. v Assessor for Argyllshire, 1919 S.C. 478; 56 S.L.R. 119; 1919, 1 S.L.T. 56.

(352)

Floor area.

An assessor valued the buildings of a paper mill at a uniform rate per square yard of floor space. Held in an appeal by the proprietor, that, as he did not propose to give information as to the profits of his business, but merely stated the alternative of valuation by cost of construction, the assessor's valuation was right.

Cowan & Sons v Assessor for Midlothian, 1894, 21 R. 812; 31 S.L.R. 733; 2 S.L.T. 48.

(353)

Mill temporarily silent.

The proprietor of a weaving factory kept a spinning mill, which formed part of the factory, standing from reasons of temporary expediency, and made no attempt to obtain a return from the mill by letting it, or otherwise. Held that it was properly entered in the valuation roll by the assessor at its full yearly value as a going mill.

Fraser & Sons v Assessor for Arbroath, 1889, 16 R. 796; 26 S.L.R. 545.

(354)

Factory not fully completed.

Where a chocolate factory was almost completed, but could have been let in its incomplete state, the assessor valued the premises as a completed factory. Held, on appeal by the proprietor, that the valuation of the assessor was wrong, and that the factory fell to be entered at the rent it would probably fetch in its incomplete condition.

Schulze v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1910 S.C. 804; 47 S.L.R. 376; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 159, No. 412, infra.

(355)

Necessity for revaluation—Depreciation—Additions to plant—Act 1902, sec. 1.

Oil works for the distillation of shale oil, belonging to and in the occupation of an oil company, were for the year 1901-2 directed by the Valuation Appeal Judges to be entered at the yearly value of £4264. This sum was reached by taking 10½ per cent. on the capital value of the works and adding thereto feu-duty, insurance, and landlord's taxes. The 10½ per cent. consisted of 4½ per cent. as reasonable interest on the capital value and 6 per cent. as being the average sum which the owners, if the works were let, would require to spend annually in order to fulfil the landlord's obligation to keep the works in an efficient state of renewal, such works being subject to rapid deterioration. In 1904 the company added largely to the number of the retorts in their works, and the assessor in consequence raised the valuation to £6700. The assessor reached this sum by taking the value as fixed for 1901-2 by the judges, and adding thereto a sum to cover the value of the new retorts. The company appealed, and maintained that the value should be £3000, in respect (a) that the original works having depreciated in value they ought to be re-valued; (b) that the assessor had much over-estimated the value of the new retorts; and (c) that portions of the plant included in the valuation fell to be excluded under the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1902. The valuation committee adopted the principle on which the assessor had proceeded, but reduced the valuation to £5800. The committee found that the works had been kept in a not less efficient state than they were in 1901. In an appeal by the company the judges held that the valuation committee were right, in respect that the original works having been kept in an efficient state of renewal, there was no necessity for a revaluation; that the sum fixed by the committee as the value of the new retorts was reasonable; and that there was not sufficient evidence to show what, if any, portions of the works fell to be excluded under the Act of 1902.

Pumpherson Oil Co. v Assessor for Linlithgowshire, 1905, 7 F. 438; 42 S.L.R. 505; 12 S.L.T. 851.

(356)

Discretion—Annual cost of water supply—Paper mill.

Paper mills, in the occupation of the owners, were entered at an annual value reached by taking a percentage on the capital value. The owners claimed to deduct £150, being the rent which they paid under a lease with a neighbouring proprietor for their water supply. Held that the owners were not entitled to the deduction claimed.

James Alexander Weir, Limited v Assessor for Clackmannanshire, 1901, 4 F. 513; 38 S.L.R. 853.

See also Fleming, Reid & Co. v Assessor for Greenock, 1884, 11 R. 857; 21 S.L.R. 594, No. 172, supra.

(h) Asylums and Hospitals.

(357)

Lunatic asylum—Principle of valuation—Valuation fixed on the basis of £4 per bed—Valuation based on accommodation.

Barony Parochial Board, 1877, 4 R. 1149.

(358)

Asylum established by private mortified funds, and managed with the object of making it merely self-supporting, but not to return a profit—Valuation fixed by comparison with the accommodation in similar institutions elsewhere.

Directors of Murray's Royal Lunatic Asylum, 1875, 4 R. 1145.

(359)

Valuation on basis of number of beds.

A valuation committee in valuing an asylum in a burgh took £900 to be the value of the asylum and certain outbuildings. They reached this value having regard to the normal accommodation of 224 beds, and the value of £4 per bed, such value appearing to the committee to be in no way out of proportion to the capital expenditure on the asylum, including outbuildings. The outbuildings being separately entered at £120, the committee deducted that sum from the £900, and entered the asylum at £780. During the year of valuation the accommodation of the asylum had been temporarily increased to 276 beds by converting the chapel into a dormitory. The burgh commissioners appealed against the entry, maintaining that the valuation ought to be £1600, on the basis of the actual bed accommodation, including that in the chapel, and that the whole value reached on that basis ought to be taken as the value of the asylum proper. Held that no ground had been shown for increasing the valuation.

Melrose Burgh Commissioners v Roxburgh, Berwick, and Selkirk District Lunacy Board, 1898, 25 R. 586; 35 S.L.R. 662.

(360)

Contractor's principle—Accommodation—Floorage.

In fixing the valuation of an asylum for pauper lunatics recently completed according to the best principles of construction, a county valuation committee took into account, on the one hand, the character of the building as shown by the structural cost, the dormitory accommodation, and the floor space; while on the other hand, they had regard to the fact that the administrative block of buildings had been built on a larger scale than was necessary for the present dormitory accommodation with a view to the future extension of the dormitory accommodation. In an appeal, held, rejecting the view that dormitory accommodation was to be taken as sole guide, that these elements were all proper considerations in arriving at the rent which such an establishment might be expected to bring if let from year to year, and appeal refused.

Govan District Lunacy Board v Assessor for Renfrewshire, 1899, 1 F. 591; 36 S.L.R. 603.

(361)

Asylum built on "segregate" or "villa" system—Contractor's principle—Accommodation.

A pauper lunatic asylum was constructed on a new system called the "segregate" system, i.e., the asylum consisted of a number of separate villas or residences. The assessor entered the asylum in the valuation roll for the year ending Whitsunday, 1907, at the yearly rent or value of £3250. The valuation committee sustained the assessor's valuation. Held that the committee were wrong, and that the valuation should be £2400, which was approximately £5 per bed, or 2 per cent. on the cost of construction, £5 per bed being a fair rate, keeping in view that, owing to the system of construction adopted, a rent higher than in the case of an asylum constructed on an older system might reasonably be expected.

Aberdeen District Lunacy Board v Assessor for Aberdeenshire, 1907 S.C. 737; 44 S.L.R. 429; 14 S.L.T. 792.

(362)

Sanatorium — Contractor's principle — Revenue principle.

A sanatorium for the treatment of pulmonary diseases was erected in 1901, and was sold to a company for £53,000. The assessor entered the sanatorium at the yearly value of £1300, proceeding either on the principle of taking a percentage on the cost of construction, or on the principle of taking the profits earned by the company, as the basis of valuation—the two methods in the particular case bringing out substantially the same result. The company appealed, and maintained that the value should be reached by comparison with other sanatoria and with hydropathics, and should be £500. The judges held that, having regard to all the circumstances, the valuation should be reduced to £800.

Nordrach-on-Des Sanatorium v Assessor for Kincardineshire, 1905, 7 F. 419; 42 S.L.R. 503; 13 S.L.T. 23.

(363)

Convalescent home—Valuation per bed or at a percentage on cost of erection.

A convalescent home was erected on ground held under a feu disposition containing conditions which precluded it from being let to a tenant or used for any other purpose than the erection thereon and maintenance of a home for the convalescent poor. The home, as originally erected, cost £3000, and was capable of accommodating sixty-four patients; and it was entered in the valuation roll for over twenty years at the annual value of £120, which was at the rate of about £2 per bed, or of 4 per cent. on the cost of erection. In 1904 additional accommodation was provided, at a cost of £750, for seven additional patients, and the assessor increased the annual value from £120 to £150, or at the rate of £2 2s. per bed, or a little over 4 per cent. upon the cost of erection. The proprietors appealed, and maintained that, in view of the restrictions, and in the whole circumstances, the valuation should be £80. The valuation committee, with personal knowledge of the buildings, reduced the valuation to £140. Held that the restrictions were to be disregarded in ascertaining the annual value, and that the valuation committee had rightly valued the subjects at £140.

Glasgow Abstiners' Union v Assessor for Argyleshire, 1906, 8 F. 500; 43 S.L.R. 326; 13 S.L.T. 765.

See also Glasgow Association for the Relief of Incurables v Assessor for Dumbartonshire, 1907 S.C. 769; 44 S.L.R. 441; 14 S.L.T. 878, No. 164, supra.

(i) Cemeteries.

(364)

Hypothetical rent.

A cemetery company bought land which they laid out as a burial-ground. They derived an annual income from giving off lots for burial purposes, the right of the allottees being one of perpetual use. Held that the valuation of the land ought to be based upon the rent at which in its actual state it might be expected to let to a tenant to be used by him as it had been used by the company, and not at its agricultural value.

Craigton Cemetery Co. v Assessor for Lower Ward of Lanarkshire, 1889, 16 R. 802; 26 S.L.R. 527.

(365)

Revenue principle.

Held that one-half of the net profits of a cemetery company was a reasonable sum to take as representing the annual value of the land belonging to the company and used as a cemetery.

Aberdeen Cemetery Co. v Assessor for Aberdeen, 1891, 18 R. 936; 28 S.L.R. 619.

(366)

Cemetery owned by public authority for discharge of statutory duty—Subjects not in fact yielding profit—Burial Grounds (Scotland) Act, 1855.

A cemetery was owned and carried on by the magistrates of a city in fulfilment of a statutory duty imposed by the Burial Grounds (Scotland) Act, 1855. Under statute they had power to sell lairs and to receive fees in respect of interments, but the expenditure on the cemetery, as a rule, exceeded the income. Held that the cemetery had an annual lettable value in respect that the possession of it enabled the magistrates to discharge a statutory duty, and accordingly that it fell to be entered in the roll at that value and not at a merely nominal figure.

Edinburgh Parish Council v Edinburgh Magistrates, 1912 S.C. 793; 49 S.L.R. 307; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 129.

(j) Harbours and Piers.

(367)

Revenue principle.

The value of a harbour fixed at the gross revenue, less 20 per cent. for collection and maintenance, and 20 per cent. for tenants' profits.

Clyde Navigation Trustees, 1868, 11 M. 979.

(368)

Allowance for tenants' profits—Interest upon mortgages.

The trustees of a harbour, which under its statute could not be let for profit, were entered in the roll at a sum which was made up by taking the gross revenue, and deducting therefrom taxes and current expenses, and expenses of management. The trustees claimed that in addition interest on the mortgages over the harbour and 20 per cent. on the balance for tenants' profits should be allowed. Held that the entry was right.

Kirkwall Harbour Trustees, 1881, 9 R. 1243.

(369)

Deductions—Tenants' profits.

The trustees of Ayr harbour were 'by statute empowered to administer the harbour, and to levy rates upon vessels and cargoes using the harbour, and were bound to apply the revenue derived from the rates, (1) in payment of costs of management and maintenance; (2) in payment of interest on borrowed money; (3) in prescribed payments to a sinking fund; and (4) the surplus, if any, in paying off borrowed money, or in improving or otherwise for the benefit of the undertaking. The assessor, in estimating the annual value of the harbour for the valuation roll, deducted from the gross revenue derived from the harbour rates the charges and expenses necessary to earn that revenue, including interest on moveable plant and floating capital, together with the expenses of collection and management. The trustees maintained that they were entitled to a further deduction in name of tenants' profits. Held that as the whole surplus revenue was devoted by statute to other purposes, there could be no tenants' profits.

Ayr Harbour Trustees v Assessor for Ayr, 1894, 21 R. 807; 31 S.L.R. 726; 2 S.L.T. 47.

(370)

—Deductions — Waterway — Whether part of dues to be deducted in respect of waterway.

Harbour trustees claimed a deduction from the valuation of a harbour, in respect that part of the dues received were received in respect of an incorporeal right of waterway. The Court, without expressing any opinion as to whether a deduction ought to be made from the valuation of a harbour, refused any deduction in the present case, in respect the case did not furnish any materials for deciding what proportion of the gross harbour dues should be deducted, assuming that the deduction fell to be made.

Inspector of Poor for Dundonald v Irvine Harbour Trustees, 1893, 30 S.L.R. 660; 1 S.L.T. 31.

(371)

—Deductions — Waterway—Proportion of dues to be deducted in respect of waterway.

In 1866 the Valuation Appeal Court held that the waterway of the river Clyde was not an assessable subject, and that in respect thereof one-third of the harbour dues fell to be excluded from the valuation applicable to the two lower stages of the river, and one-third of the remainder of the dues from the valuation applicable to the remaining or uppermost stage. In a question raised in the Valuation Appeal Court in 1910, held (1) that with regard to the uppermost stage, in view of a material change of circumstances in an increased area of the waterway having been converted into harbour works, the former deduction for waterway of 33½ per cent. had become inequitable and should be reduced to 15 per cent.; (2) that as regards the two lower stages no sufficient cause had been shown for altering the proportion of dues deducted.

Clyde Navigation Trustees v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1910 S.C. 840; 47 S.L.R. 384; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 265.

(372)

Revenue—Sum paid by tenant as penalty for failure to implement condition of lease.

The commissioners of a harbour leased a portion of the subjects belonging to them under a condition that, if the lessees had not, by a certain date, formed a company for the purpose of constructing a graving dock thereon, the lease should be null and void, and the lessees should forfeit a certain sum to the lessors. The lessees failed to form the company, and paid the forfeit.

Held that the assessor, in determining the yearly value of the harbour undertaking for the following year upon the revenue principle, was not entitled to include in revenue the sum paid as forfeit to the harbour commissioners.

Burntisland Harbour Commissioners v Assessor for Burntisland, 1913 S.C. 697; 50 S.L.R. 91; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 386.

(373)

—Statutory restrictions as to application of revenue—Profit-earning—Deductions—Tenant's floating capital — Leith Harbour and Docks Act, 1892, sec. 80.

The commissioners of the harbour and docks of Leith were the proprietors and occupiers of Leith harbour and docks. By their private Act the commissioners were empowered to levy dock rates on shipping up to certain prescribed limits, and the revenue so obtained was directed to be applied, after payment of the expense of maintaining the harbour and docks "in or towards the expense of executing further improvements on or additions to and extensions of the harbour and docks, and works connected therewith." The rates actually levied were much below the statutory limits, but were in excess of the cost of maintenance. In valuing the undertaking the assessor proceeded according to the "revenue" method. Held that the undertaking was to be valued as a profit-earning subject; that consequently the only expenditure to be deducted from the gross revenue was tenant's expenditure; but that a sum in name of tenant's profits ought also to be deducted. Held that in the circumstances the sum allowed by the magistrates as tenant's profits, viz., 10 per cent. on tenant's capital, was fair and reasonable.

The commissioners claimed that the whole expense of dredging the harbour and docks ought to be deducted from the gross revenue. The magistrates, being of opinion that the expense of dredging the waterways and accesses to the docks was landlord's expenditure, held that only the expense of dredging inside the docks was to be deducted. The magistrates further allowed as deductions 60 per cent. of the expenses of management and half of the expenses of an inquiry by the Home Office with a view to regulations as to loading. The commissioners maintained that 80 per cent. of the expenses of management and a larger proportion of the expenses of the inquiry ought to be deducted. The magistrates further fixed the tenant's floating capital at one-third of the tenant's expenditure. The commissioners maintained that two-thirds ought to be taken. Held that there was no ground for altering the determination of the magistrates on any of these points.

Leith Docks Commissioners v Assessor for Leith, 1907 S.C. 751; 44 S.L.R. 444; 14 S.L.T. 930.

(374)

—Profit-earning undertaking — Statutory restrictions on appropriation of profits—

Clyde Navigation Acts—Deductions—Dredging.

Under their private Act the Clyde Navigation Trustees may make profits, though they are restricted in the application thereof. Out of profits they have not only expended on their undertaking much more than has been raised as capital, but have also made payments into a sinking fund and a reserve fund. Held (1) that the undertaking fell to be treated as profit-earning, and (2) that a deduction in respect of tenants' profits, being the proportion of expenditure applicable to a tenant, ought to be allowed, which allowance, quoad dredging, was fairly represented by a deduction of the cost of dredging the river for 75 feet out from the quays.

Clyde Navigation Trustees v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1910 S.C. 840; 47 S.L.R. 384; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 265.

(375)

Contractor's principle.

In 1863 it was held by the Court of Session that the Clyde Navigation Trustees were not assessable as proprietors of the waterways of the port and harbour of Glasgow, the incorporeal right of harbour not being vested in them, and that they were assessable only as proprietors of the wharfs, quays, and other structures in the harbour. In 1866 the Valuation Appeal Judges in fixing the yearly value of the undertaking of the Clyde Trustees gave effect to the judgment of the Court of Session by deducting from the dues payable to the trustees a proportion as being applicable to the waterways of the port and harbour. The undertaking continued to be valued on that basis for more than forty years. In 1908 the assessor for Lanarkshire proposed to value the portion of the undertaking within the county either (a) on the basis of taking into account the whole or a much larger proportion of the dues paid to the trustees, or (b) on the "contractor's" principle, i.e., by taking a percentage on the structural cost of the quays, &c. Held (a) that there was no such change of circumstances as to warrant a change in the method of dealing with the dues, and (b) that the contractor's method was inapplicable.

Assessor for Lanarkshire v Clyde Navigation Trustees, 1908 S.C. 620; 45 S.L.R. 501; 15 S.L.T. 970.

(376)

Contractor's principle—Harbour and docks undertaking—Undertaking habitually valued at revenue of preceding year—Proposed change of method where preceding year showed no revenue.

A harbour and docks belonging to commissioners were for over thirty years valued by the assessor upon the revenue principle, by entering the value of the subjects each year at a figure equal to the net revenue of the undertaking for the preceding year. In valuing the subjects for the year 1920-21 the assessor found that, during the preceding year, the undertaking had been carried on at a loss. He, however, refused to enter the subjects at a value of nil, but entered them at a substantial figure, which he sought to justify by an application of the contractor's principle, or, alternatively, by an application of the revenue principle, taking as his basis, not the net revenue of the preceding year, but the average net revenue of a number of years. Held (1) that the revenue principle was the proper method of valuation for such subjects; (2) that the assessor was not entitled to depart from his former method of ascertaining the revenue from the net revenue of the preceding year; and, accordingly, that the subjects fell to be entered in the roll at a value of nil.

Burntisland Harbour Commissioners v Assessor for Burntisland, 1921 S.C. 609; 58 S.L.R. 294; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 263.

(377)

Pier with refreshment bar.

The proprietors of a pier, which had upon it a saloon, stage, refreshment bar, and cafe, objected to the subjects being entered in the valuation roll at a value above £40 per annum, and produced to the valuation committee profit and loss accounts for the two preceding years, showing that no profit had been realised. For many years the valuation had stood at £250, a sum originally fixed as being the average rent for which the pier had been previously let for sixteen years, and as being also rather less than $7\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on the cost of construction. The pier had been unlet for some years. The magistrates having found that it was a lettable subject, and having fixed the valuation at £200, the Court on appeal affirmed the valuation, holding that the mere fact that the profits for two years had been much below that sum was insufficient to show that the magistrates' valuation was wrong.

Question, whether the proper mode of valuing such a pier was not by profits.

Galloway Saloon Steam Packet Co. v Assessor for Portobello, 1895, 22 R. 584; 32 S.L.R. 427; 2 S.L.T. 569.

(378)

Private pier—Deductions for non-heritable subjects—Carting business—Tenants' profits.

Where a private pier was in the possession of its proprietors, held (1) that sums received by the proprietors for carting goods to and off the pier, and commission received from railway companies and steamboat proprietors for collecting freights and selling tickets, did not fall to be reckoned as revenue derived from the pier; and (2) that 20 per cent. on the net revenue from the pier was to be regarded as tenants' profits, to be deducted in estimating its value as a heritable subject.

Hunter's Trustees v Assessor for Argyllshire, 1882, 10 R. 36; 20 S.L.R. 435.

(379)

A private pier was entered in the valuation roll on the principle of taking as the value the difference between income and expenditure, deducting also 20 per cent.

for tenants' profits. As part of the income the assessor included "dues on carts using the pier, £156 10s. 0d." The assessor's valuation was, on appeal, confirmed by the valuation committee, who granted a case. From the case it appeared that the proprietors of the pier carried on the business of carting, and had under their bye-laws the exclusive right of bringing carts with horses upon the pier; that the public generally might, and, in point of fact, frequently did, bring upon the pier, for the purpose of removing goods, carts without horses, and other vehicles; and that no charge was in fact made for this use of the pier. The assessor contended that, in these circumstances, the proprietors had such a practical monopoly of the carting business attached to the pier that the revenue which they might exact from other persons sending carts on to the pier (which he estimated at £156 10s.) ought to be taken into account in assessing the value of the pier. Held that the valuation committee were wrong, and that the valuation of the pier ought to be reduced by £156 10s.

Hunter's Trustees v Assessor for Argyllshire, 1883, 10 R. 666; 20 S.L.R. 435.

(k) Gas and Electric Light Undertakings.

(380)

Revenue principle—Statutory gasworks—Non-profit-earning undertaking—Tenants' profits—Repairs and replacements—Floating capital.

The commissioners administering the Dundee gasworks were constituted by statutes, under which they were required to fix the price of gas &c. for the year, so that the revenue for the year should, as nearly as possible, meet the expenditure. There was to be a sinking fund, and also a contingent fund, to meet risks and losses by fire, &c., and for permanent additions and improvements. The assessor entered the total valuation at £14,907 11s. 8d. This was arrived at by taking the revenue of the previous year, not including therein meter rents, and deducting the expenditure, exclusive of repairs of buildings and meters, annuities, interest on mortgages and loans, and payments toward the sinking fund and contingent fund; also exclusive of the salaries of the clerk and the auditor, and premiums of insurance to the extent of £100. The magistrates allowed a further deduction of $\frac{4}{4}$ per cent. on the floating capital, £15,000, necessary to carry on the concern (that having ultimately been conceded by the assessor). The judges affirmed the determination of the magistrates, but reserved their opinion as to whether the $\frac{4}{4}$ per cent. on the floating capital had been properly deducted.

Dundee Gas Commissioners, 1881, 9 R. 1240.

(381)

Non-profit-earning undertaking—Deductions—Expenses of management—Edinburgh and Leith Corporations Gas Acts, 1888 to 1902.

Gas commissioners were empowered by their private Acts to supply gas at a price which would cover expenses, and provide a reserve fund to meet any deficiency of income or extraordinary claims or renewals, but no more. In assessing on the "revenue principle," the assessor allowed as a deduction the share of expenses of management applicable to a tenant, but not that applicable to a landlord. Held that the undertaking fell to be valued as a non-profit-earning subject, and that the whole expenses of management ought to be deducted.

Edinburgh and Leith Gas Commissioners v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1909 S.C. 664; 46 S.L.R. 442; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 307.

(382)

Non-profit-earning undertaking—Deductions—Fen-duities—Landlords' taxes.

Held that, in valuing on the "revenue principle" a gasworks undertaking carried on by statutory commissioners under a prohibition against making profit, although the whole expenses of management fell to be deducted, fen-duities and landlords' taxes could not be deducted.

Edinburgh and Leith Gas Commissioners v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1912 S.C. 790; 49 S.L.R. 311; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 132.

(383)

Non-profit-earning undertaking—Deductions—Income tax.

In valuing upon the revenue principle the non-profit-earning undertaking carried on by statutory gas commissioners, held that it was not permissible in ascertaining the revenue to deduct the amount paid as income tax.

Edinburgh and Leith Gas Commissioners v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1916 S.C. 667; 53 S.L.R. 481; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 69.

(384)

Contractor's principle—Gasworks belonging to private company.

In an appeal as to the valuation of gasworks belonging to and in the occupation of a private gas company Lord Lee thought that, except in unusual cases, as where it had been shown that the capital had been unprofitably expended, the annual value of the subjects was to be determined by taking such a percentage on the capital sunk in the heritable property as a prudent speculator would charge against himself before beginning to estimate profits; and Lord Fraser thought that the value was to be taken at the income of the company, under deduction of (1) the annual expenditure; (2) a percentage on capital invested in moveable property; and (3) a sum for tenants' profits, to be estimated at a percentage on the net income after deducting expenditure. The two methods, in the particular case, brought out substantially the same results.

Assessor for Falkirk v Falkirk Gas Co., 1883, 10 R. 651; 20 S.L.R. 427.

(385)

Allowance for tenants' profits.

Gasworks, the property of a gas company, were valued by the assessor on the principle of taking the cost of the company's works, less an allowance for depreciation, and assessing the annual value at a percentage on the balance. The company maintained that the works ought to be valued on the principle of taking the revenue of the company for their preceding financial year, and deducting therefrom the expenses (excluding capital expenses), and also deducting 5 per cent. on the expenses in name of tenants' profits—the balance being taken as the value of the subjects. The magistrates confirmed the assessor's valuation. The company appealed. The judges being divided in opinion (in accordance with their respective opinions in the Falkirk case, 1883, 10 R. 651), the valuation stood.

Edinburgh Gas Light Co. v Assessor for Leith, 1887, 14 R. 583; 24 S.L.R. 420.

(386)

Allowance for tenants' profits.

Held that the annual value of the works of a gas company had been properly fixed by ascertaining the amount of excess of revenue over working expenses, under deduction of an allowance for tenants' profits.

Kinross and Milnathort Gas Light Co. v Assessor for Kinross-shire, 1890, 17 R. 850; 27 S.L.R. 631.

(387)

Deductions—Income tax—Tenant's capital—Meters—Cooking stoves.

Gasworks belonging to and in the occupation of a private company were entered in the valuation roll at an annual value brought out on the principle of taking the income of the company and deducting (1) the annual expenditure; (2) 5 per cent. on a sum in name of tenant's capital for carrying on the business; and (3) a sum for tenant's profits, estimated at 20 per cent. on the net income after deducting expenditure and the percentage on tenant's capital. Held that the value of gas meters, owned by the company and hired out to customers, was to be regarded as tenant's capital, such meters being necessary for carrying on the business; but (2) that the value of cooking stoves, owned by the company and hired out to customers, was not to be regarded as tenant's capital, the hiring out of cooking stoves being a branch of business which a hypothetical tenant might or might not find it expedient to carry on. Held further, that a deduction from the net income did not fall to be made in respect of income tax on tenant's profits.

Kirkcaldy Gas Light Co. v Assessor for Kirkcaldy, 1905, 7 F. 430; 42 S.L.R. 510; 12 S.L.T. 844.

(388)

Deductions—Tenants' capital—Depreciation.

Where the works of an electric supply company were valued on the revenue principle, held (1) that the expenses of obtaining the company's provisional order and licence, under the Electric Lighting Acts, was not to be included in tenants' capital; and (2) that an overhead rate of 10 per cent. on tenants' capital fell to be allowed for interest and repairs and depreciation of tenants' machinery.

Coatbridge and Airdrie Electric Supply Co. v Assessor for Coatbridge, 1907 S.C. 780; 44 S.L.R. 454; 14 S.L.T. 937.

(389)

Whether income to be taken on an average of years.

In valuing a gas company's undertaking the assessor adopted the "revenue" principle, and took as the revenue the average income for the preceding five years, in one of which the income was exceptionally large. Held that the assessor had rightly estimated the income by taking an average of years; that five years was a fair period to average; and that the circumstance that the income for one of the five years was exceptionally large was not a ground for treating the case exceptionally.

Melrose Gas Co. v Assessor for Roxburgh-shire, 1908 S.C. 600; 45 S.L.R. 500; 15 S.L.T. 892.

(390)

Whether profits of last year or average of three years to be taken.

Circumstances in which the Court affirmed the valuation of an electric light undertaking based upon the profits of one year. Opinion that assessors, in valuing on the "revenue" or "profits" principle, are not bound to base their valuation on the average profits of a series of years, but may proceed on the profits of the preceding year only.

Arbroath Electric Light and Power Co. v Assessor for Arbroath, 1915 S.C. 816; 52 S.L.R. 252; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 53.

(391)

Deductions—New plant instead of repairs.

A gas company, whose works were valued for assessment on the revenue principle, and who had hitherto been allowed deductions from profits in respect of repairs, erected a new bench of retorts at a cost of £2117, and demolished their existing bench of retorts. The company claimed a deduction of £700, as the proportion of said expenditure which it would have cost to repair the old retorts. Held that the company were not entitled to the deduction claimed.

Bellshill Gas Co. v Assessor for Lanark-shire, 1909 S.C. 652; 46 S.L.R. 432; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 228.

(392)

Electric lighting works belonging to a trading company.

Electric lighting works in a burgh, and mains connected therewith, belonging to a trading company, were valued on the "revenue" or "profits" principle of valuation. The undertaking had been in operation for only two and a half years. Held that the revenue or profits principle was the proper method of valuation.

Hawick Parish Council v Urban Electric Supply Co., 1906, 8 F. 504; 43 S.L.R. 448; 13 S.L.T. 931.

(393)

—Electric light undertaking belonging to municipal corporation—Deductions—Depreciation—Tenant's capital.

The electric light undertaking of the city of Edinburgh was carried on by the corporation under a provisional order. The corporation owned the power stations, the whole machinery and plant therein, and the mains, &c., throughout the burgh. Under the provisional order the corporation were entitled to make profit, subject to certain limitations, and had power, subject to certain conditions, to let or transfer the undertaking. The assessor, proceeding on the "contractor's method," entered the corporation as the proprietors and occupiers of the undertaking at the yearly value of £45,269. Held (1) that the proper method of valuation was the "revenue method"; (2) that an allowance for depreciation of heritable subjects ought not to be made; (3) that interest at 6 per cent. ought to be allowed on tenant's capital partly consisting of floating capital and partly invested in moveable chattels; and (4) that a deduction of 10 per cent. on the balance obtained after deducting expenditure and interest upon tenant's capital from the gross revenue should be allowed for tenant's profits. The valuation was increased to £61,923. Opinions that were the undertaking to be valued on the "contractor's method," the value of wayleaves should be included.

Edinburgh Parish Council v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1906, 8 F. 521; 43 S.L.R. 435; 13 S.L.T. 891.

(1) Waterworks and Sewers.

(394)

Revenue principle—Waterworks—Deductions.

Held that public waterworks erected under a statute which conferred powers of assessing for outlay only fell to be valued at the net income, after deduction of the expenses of management and interest on such part of the capital expended as would have had to be provided by a tenant had the subjects been let.

Police Commissioners of Dalbeattie v Assessor for Kirkcudbrightshire, 1882, 10 R. 23; 19 S.L.R. 568.

(395)

—Waterworks yielding no profit—Deductions—Tenant's rates and taxes—Working expenses—Law charges.

Held that in valuing waterworks which belonged to a corporation who were by their statutes debarred from making a profit out of the undertaking, deduction ought to be allowed of (1) a proportion of the rates and taxes paid in respect of the subjects, such proportion being that which would be payable by a tenant; (2) a deduction of working charges, such as salaries of officials, &c., and expenses of maintenance; but (3) that deduction of law and parliamentary charges ought not be allowed, these being prima facie landlord's and not tenant's charges.

Inspector of City Parish of Glasgow v Assessor of Railways and Canals, (O.H.) 1885, 24 S.L.R. 3.

(396)

—Deductions.

Held that waterworks erected by a corporation under a statute which gave powers of assessment to the extent of the annual outlay only, were to be valued, and that the value to be taken was the amount of the rate levied under the statutory power, with deduction of all necessary outlays for management, maintenance and repairs, but without deduction either of the sum of perpetual annuities paid by the corporation to the shareholders of companies whose undertakings they had by this statute acquired, or of a sum apportioned to a sinking fund for discharge of debt.

Magistrates of Glasgow, (O.H.) 1884, 12 R. 3; 22 S.L.R. 10.

(397)

—Annual revenue—Interest on structural cost.

Held that, in fixing the yearly rent or value of corporation waterworks for the purpose of the valuation roll, the assessor of railways and canals was not entitled to include in his computation of the yearly revenue of the undertaking a sum representing interest on the structural cost of the works and pipes which had been paid off.

Aberdeen Magistrates v Assessor of Railways and Canals, (O.H.) 1919 S.C. 739; 56 S.L.R. 480; 1919, 2 S.L.T. 33.

(398)

—Unfinished waterworks—Partial supply.

Held that unfinished waterworks did not fall to be entered in the roll, although water was being supplied to a limited extent within the district and charged for, and a public water rate was being levied, the Court being of opinion (1) that the charge for water supplied was not shown to exceed the cost of the necessary connections, and (2) that the public water rate was a contribution towards the cost of construction.

Avondale Parish Council v Middle Ward District Committee of Lanarkshire County Council, 1898, 25 R. 594; 35 S.L.R. 668; 5 S.L.T. 384.

(399)

Public sewer—Burgh sewer passing through adjacent county.

An underground sewer, belonging to and serving a burgh but yielding no profit, was laid for a portion of its length in the adjoining county. Held that the portion so laid fell to be entered in the valuation roll of the county at its fair yearly value, fixed, in the circumstances of the case, at a figure representing 5 per cent. of the cost of construction plus a sum of £50 payable for wayleave.

Magistrates of Dundee v Assessor for Forfarshire, 1912 S.C. 848; 49 S.L.R. 333; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 175.

(400)

Public sewers—Method of valuation—Contractor's principle.

Held that sewers, owned and occupied by a statutory body of commissioners, fell to be entered in the valuation roll at the yearly rent which a hypothetical statutory tenant would give for the sewers; and that that rent was represented by a sum made up by taking $\frac{3}{4}$ per cent. on their total capital cost, and adding thereto, in addition to landlord's rates and the average annual charge which would fall on a landlord for maintenance, such a percentage on the cost of the sewers (as distinct from land and wayleaves) as, paid annually into a sinking fund, would provide for their complete renewal in 100 years. Held further (1) that, in calculating the capital cost of sewers constructed by the commissioners under their statutory powers, lands purchased by the commissioners were to be taken at the full prices paid, and that there also fell to be included the legal and engineering expenses incurred in acquiring the lands, but not the parliamentary expenses of obtaining the Act, nor sums paid as compensation for disturbance; (2) that the capital cost of existing sewers acquired and utilised by the commissioners was to be taken as the additional sum which would have had to be expended on new sewers by the commissioners had the existing sewers not been available.

Water of Leith Sewerage Commissioners v Assessor for Midlothian; 1914 S.C. 664; 51 S.L.R. 177; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 24.

Assessor for Aberdeen v Magistrates of Aberdeen; Assessor for Lanark v Magistrates of Lanark, 1913 S.C. 712; 50 S.L.R. 244; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 38, No. 94, supra.

Inveresk Paper Co. v Assessor for Musselburgh, 1907 S.C. 747; 44 S.L.R. 433; 14 S.L.T. 790, No. 96, supra.

(m) Public Parks.

(401)

Hypothetical rent — Deduction for servitudes.

Where a municipal corporation allows land held by it to be used for public recreation, it should be entered in the valuation roll at an annual value equal to the rent which might be obtained if the lands were let and the public excluded, but if the land is held subject to servitudes of way or other restrictions which are binding on the corporation, the land should be valued at the rent which might be obtained for its use subject to these restrictions.

Ferrier v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1892, 19 R. 1074.

See also Carnegie Dunfermline Trustees v Dunfermline Assessor, 1909 S.C. 678; 46 S.L.R. 451; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 286, No. 188, supra.

(402)

—Dedication by statute to public use — Lands yielding no profit.

Held (1) that public parks in Edinburgh and Glasgow dedicated by statute to public use, which yielded no profit, fell to be entered in the valuation roll at a nominal figure; and (2) that the fact that the corporation holding a public park dedicated to public use had power to sell it, when no longer required for this purpose, did not affect its non-rateability so long as it was used as a park.

Parish Council of Edinburgh v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1910 S.C. 823; 47 S.L.R. 414; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 290.

(403)

—Parks owned and regulated by corporation under statutory powers — Lands yielding no profit.

The corporation of Glasgow were empowered by certain statutes to lay out and maintain, on lands already acquired, or to be acquired, by them under the statutes, parks for the use of the public of Glasgow. The statutes, which contained no express dedication of the lands to the use of the public generally or of the public of Glasgow in particular, empowered the corporation to make rules and bye-laws regulating the use of the parks, and also to sell, feu, or lease such portions as they considered unnecessary for the purposes of the Acts. Held that parks, both within and without the limits of the city, owned and maintained by the corporation in terms of these statutes and yielding no profit, fell to be entered in the valuation roll, not at a merely nominal figure, but at the rent which a hypothetical tenant might be expected to give for them in their actual condition, irrespective of any limitations on their use in the hands of their present proprietors. Opinion that the proper entry in the valuation roll under the head "occupier" was "the corporation" and not "the public."

Glasgow Parish Council v Assessor for Glasgow, 1912 S.C. 818; 49 S.L.R. 315; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 157, 171.

(404)

—Land leased by burgh authorities for golf course—Lands yielding no profit.

The magistrates of a burgh, acting under statutory powers, obtained a forty years' lease of a piece of ground outside the burgh at a rent of £523, and laid out and maintained the ground as a golf course for the use of the inhabitants of the burgh. They levied charges for playing golf, but these did not cover the cost of upkeep. Held that the subjects fell to be entered in the valuation roll at their fair annual value, and not at a merely nominal figure. Opinion that the magistrates and not the general public were the "occupiers."

Edinburgh Parish Council v Magistrates of Leith, 1912 S.C. 812; 49 S.L.R. 336; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 173.

(405)

Public buildings in public parks—Art galleries—Museums—Winter palace—Private house in public park—Official residence of superintendent.

Where the public parks of Glasgow were severally entered in the valuation roll at a nominal value of £1 each per annum, as being dedicated by statute to public uses, the assessor included in that nominal value, as adjuncts of the parks in which they were situated, (1) certain municipal museums, art galleries, and a winter palace; (2) a house used as the official residence of the superintendent of all the city parks. Upon a complaint and appeal by the parish councils of Glasgow and Govan, held (1) that the museums, art galleries, and winter palace fell to be separately entered at their fair annual value in respect that, though no charges for admission were actually made, the corporation was entitled to levy reasonable charges; (2) that the superintendent's residence did not fall to be separately entered, but was properly to be regarded as a unum quid with the park in which it stood, and included in the relative nominal value of £1 per annum.

Parish Council of Glasgow v Assessor for Glasgow, 1911 S.C. 988; 48 S.L.R. 677; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 453.

(n) Subjects Unoccupied, Unfinished, or Unfit for Occupation.

(406)

House unoccupied, and partially unfinished internally.

An unoccupied house was entered at £280. The appellant pleaded it was in an unfinished state. The assessor stated he could not get access to the house, but it had the appearance of being ready for occupation, and was in the roll last year, and it was a common practice to leave the internal decoration of such houses incomplete, to allow the purchaser to exercise his own taste. The commissioners reduced the value to the nominal sum of £20. Held that the commissioners were wrong, and the value fixed at £230.

Paterson, 1878, 9 R. 1237.

(407)

Buildings unlet and unfit for occupation.

A piece of ground in the neighbourhood of a large manufacturing town was let to the Crown for ninety-four years, and buildings thereon were occupied as military barracks. On the expiration of this lease the buildings reverted to the proprietor, and were unoccupied. They were entered in the roll at £305, the rent at which they were entered when occupied by the Crown. It was proved that they could not be let without considerable outlay being made to alter their condition. The Court reduced the valuation to £100, consented to by the proprietor.

Observed (per Lord Wellwood) that the valuation might fall to be increased if the proprietor delayed in the future to render the subjects fit for occupation.

Earl of Home v Assessor for Dundee, 1891, 18 R. 934; 28 S.L.R. 827.

(408)

House hitherto let on repairing lease—Tenant's failure to keep subjects in repair—Renunciation of lease—Whether rent under lease still the measure of value.

A house and grounds were let for ten years, the tenant being bound to maintain them in the state in which she received them. During the earlier part of the lease she did so, and executed improvements, but subsequently left the premises and allowed them to fall into disrepair. While the lease had some years to run, the landlord accepted a renunciation thereof, on payment of a sum in respect of his claims for rent and damages for the disrepair, and the premises stood empty. The assessor valued the premises for a year subsequent to the renunciation at the rent in the lease. The landlord appealed, maintaining that the rent at which the premises would let in their actual state was the proper valuation. Lord Lee held that the valuation was right in respect of the circumstances attending the renunciation of the lease. Lord Fraser held that the valuation should be reduced, on the ground that the rent at which the subjects would let in their present condition was alone conclusive of the valuation. The judges being thus divided in opinion, the valuation stood.

Craufurd v Assessor for Cunningham District of Ayrshire, 1886, 23 S.L.R. 606.

(409)

Vacant workmen's houses.

An oil company having ceased to do business, a range of houses which had been erected for the use of the employees became, with a few exceptions, unoccupied, and from their position it was improbable that they would be again fully let. Held that they fell to be valued by taking the actual rent received for the houses which were let, and adding a nominal sum of £1 per house for those which were unlet.

Burntisland Oil Co. v Assessor for Fife, 1895, 23 R. 683; 33 S.L.R. 488; 3 S.L.T. 279.

(410)

Ground belonging to a railway company not yet occupied for the purposes of the undertaking, and not included in the railway assessor's valuation.

A railway company appealed against the entries relating to two pieces of ground acquired by them but not yet occupied for the purposes of their undertaking. The ground was not let to tenants. In the one case the magistrates stated that, from their own knowledge, they were of opinion that the ground might be reasonably expected to let at £153 15s. The appellants maintained that the ground was in its present state unlettable, but no facts were stated in the case to support the contention. Decision of the magistrates affirmed.

In the other case, from evidence led, it appeared that the ground had been recently let in the open market for £16 a year, and there was no counter evidence; but the magistrates affirmed the assessor's valuation of £207 as the fair rent which it might be expected to fetch. Held that the rent of £16 was prima facie its true value in its actual state, and that, in the absence of counter evidence, the magistrates were not justified in disregarding it; and valuation reduced to £16.

Glasgow and South-Western Railway Co. v Assessor for Greenock, 1898, 25 R. 1229; 35 S.L.R. 943; 6 S.L.T. 148.

See also Forth Bridge Railway Co. v Assessor for Linlithgowshire, 1888, 15 R. 595; 25 S.L.R. 320, No. 429, infra.

(411)

Unfinished waterworks.

A district committee, who were erecting waterworks under statutory authority, had completed several miles of the main pipes of the system, and were supplying water to several hundred houses through connections with their pipes. The water so supplied was not taken from the reservoir authorised by the statute, the reservoir not being finished, but from a temporary source during the pleasure of a riparian proprietor. The district committee made a charge for the water so supplied; and they also levied a public water rate. Held that the unfinished waterworks did not fall to be entered in the valuation roll, in respect that the charge made for the water supplied was not shown to exceed the cost of the necessary connections, and that the water rate was a contribution towards the cost of construction.

Avondale Parish Council v Middle Ward District Committee of Lanarkshire County Council, 1898, 25 R. 594; 35 S.L.R. 663; 5 S.L.T. 384.

(412)

Factory not fully completed.

Where a chocolate factory was almost completed, but could have been let in its incomplete state, the assessor valued the premises as a completed factory. Held, on an appeal by the proprietor, that the valuation of the assessor was wrong, and that the factory fell to be entered at the rent it would probably fetch in its incomplete condition.

Schulze v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1910 S.C. 804; 47 S.L.R. 376; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 159.

(413)

Buildings unfinished at date of valuation.

Buildings unfinished at the date when the valuation roll is made up do not fall to be entered in the roll, except where in ordinary course they will be completed within the year, in which case it is the duty of the assessor to estimate their rental value for the period during which they will be available for occupation.

Guardbridge Paper Co. v Assessor for Fife, 1921 S.C. 634; 58 S.L.R. 425; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 360.

(414)

Premises unoccupiable owing to closing order—Premises in course of demolition.

Held that premises in a burgh, which at Whitsunday, 1915, could not be occupied owing to a closing order of the magistrates, and which by September were in course of demolition, and could not reasonably be expected to earn any rent before Whitsunday, 1916, had no value for the year ending Whitsunday, 1916, and fell to be entered in the valuation roll for that year at nil.

Bouik's Trustee v Assessor for Glasgow, 1916 S.C. 686; 53 S.L.R. 490; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 80.

(415)

Houses unfit for occupation—Insanitary houses—Occupiers ordered to quit—Occupiers remaining under Increase of Rent (Restrictions) Acts.

Alexander's Trustees v Assessor for Ayrshire, 1922 S.C. 453; 59 S.L.R. 343; 1922 S.L.T. 275, No. 189, supra.

4. ALLOCATION OF VALUE.

(416)

Waterworks in various parishes.

Where waterworks, consisting of piping, reservoirs, &c., for the supply of water for a town, are partly situated within and partly outside the area of distribution and assessment, the proper mode of allocating the annual value of the whole undertaking among the various parishes is to give to each parish the proportion of the total annual value which the structural cost of the works in that parish bears to the total structural cost.

Dundee Water Commissioners v Dundee Road Trustees, &c., 1883, 11 R. 390; 21 S.L.R. 261.

(417)

Held that the total value must be allocated among the different parishes in which the undertaking was situated, according to the proportion which the structural cost of the works, including the cost of the solum, in each parish bore to the structural cost of the whole undertaking.

Magistrates of Glasgow, &c., (O.H.) 1884, 12 R. 3; 22 S.L.R. 10.

(418)

Ferry between two counties.

A ferry between two counties entered in the valuation rolls of both counties, the value being allocated between the two.

Lord Blantyre, 1877, 4 R. 1150.

(419)

Harbour in two parishes—Quayage.

In apportioning the cumulo valuation of a harbour between two parishes within which it was situated, the assessor did so according to the lengths of quayage in the two parishes respectively. One of the parishes maintained that it should be first credited with revenue derived from certain fixed machinery locally situated within its bounds, and that only the remaining revenue should be apportioned according to quayage. Held that the harbour fell to be regarded as a unum quid, and that the allocation by quayage was right.

Ayr Harbour Trustees v Assessor for Ayr, 1894, 21 R. 807; 31 S.L.R. 726; 2 S.L.T. 47.

(420)

Mineral field situated partly in county, partly in burgh—Entry in burgh valuation roll—Valuation as between county and burgh—Minerals hitherto worked situated wholly within county—Act 1854, secs. 1 and 42.

A coal company leased the minerals in a portion of an estate. The consideration was a fixed rent of £500, or, in the option of the landlord, certain specified royalties. Part of the minerals included in the lease was within the burgh of Musselburgh, and the remainder was within the county of Midlothian. The part in the county was alone being worked. No part of the minerals in the burgh had hitherto been worked. The assessor for the burgh entered the part of the subjects within the burgh in the burgh roll as of a value (£215) proportional to the surface acreage of the mineral field within the burgh. The assessor for the county entered the full rent of £500 in the county roll, on the ground that the whole of the minerals which had been worked were within the county. The company appealed against the entry of £215 in the burgh roll, and craved that the same should be deleted, or that the valuation should be entered as nil. Held that the minerals in the burgh having been let were, although unworked, lands and heritages within the meaning of the Lands Valuation Acts, and that they had rightly been entered in the burgh valuation roll at £215.

Edinburgh Collieries Co. v Assessor for Musselburgh, 1906, 8 F. 484; 43 S.L.R. 307; 13 S.L.T. 763.

(421)

Mineral field situated in two valuation districts.

In an appeal against the valuation of a mineral field, situated partly in one valuation district and partly in another, which was let on a lease providing for a fixed rent with the alternative of royalties, held that the equitable rule for apportioning the valuation between the two districts was as follows:—(1) Where the minerals were not being worked—On the basis of the fixed rent, apportioned according to the surface area of the minerals in each district. (2) Where the minerals were being worked—On the basis of the royalties actually earned, apportioned according to the amount earned from the minerals won in each district, with the addition of any sum by which the fixed rent might exceed the total royalties, that sum being apportioned according to surface area.

United Collieries v Assessor for Lanarkshire, 1912 S.C. 800; 49 S.L.R. 301; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 177.

(422)

Gas undertaking in three rating areas—Allocation according to structural cost—Way-leaves for gas mains and pipes.

Where the total valuation of a gas undertaking, extending into three different rating areas, had to be allocated for rating, held (1) that it must be allocated according to the capital cost, and not the value, of the works in each area; and (2) that consequently the value of wayleaves for gas pipes was not to be taken into account in the allocation when no price had been paid therefor.

Edinburgh and Leith Gas Commissioners v Assessor for Edinburgh, 1909 S.C. 664; 46 S.L.R. 442; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 307.

(423)

Sewer between burgh and county.

Inveresk Paper Co. v Assessor for Musselburgh, 1907 S.C. 747; 44 S.L.R. 433; 14 S.L.T. 790, No. 96, supra.

Magistrates of Dundee v Assessor for Forfarshire, 1912 S.C. 848; 49 S.L.R. 333; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 175, No. 399, supra.

(424)

Farm partly within a special water district.

Forbes Irvine v Assessor for Aberdeenshire, 1897, 24 R. 741; 34 S.L.R. 622, No. 153, supra.

(425)

Water for mill obtained from adjacent county—Claim for deduction in county where mill situated.

James Alexander Weir, Limited v Assessor for Clackmannanshire, 1901, 4 F. 513; 38 S.L.R. 853, No. 130, supra.

(426)

Cumulo valuation of railway—Allocation between counties—Act 1854, sec. 22.

County Council of Argyllshire v Assessor of Railways and Canals, (O.H.) 1895, 32 S.L.R. 518, No. 434, infra.

VI. VALUATION OF RAILWAYS AND CANALS.

(427)

Whether assessment should be by assessor of railways or burgh assessor—Portion of line of railway within a police burgh where no separate valuation of that portion.

The commissioners of police of a burgh which had adopted the Police and Improvement Act, 1850, imposed an assessment for the years ending Whitsunday, 1866, 1867, and 1868, upon a portion of a line of railway within the burgh, fixing the value at a proportion of the value appearing in the valuation roll for the parish. No separate valuation of property within such police burghs was required by the Valuation Act, 1854. Objection by the railway company that the assessment was illegal, as the value had not been fixed by the railway assessor in terms of the Valuation Act, repelled.

Templeton v Glasgow and South-Western Railway Co., 1870, 9 M. 57; 43 J. 24; 8 S.L.R. 55.

(428)

Houses occupied by railway employees.

Houses, the property of a railway company, within the limits of a station but with entrances from a public street in a burgh were occupied by railway employees who paid rents to the company. Held that these houses fell to be entered in the valuation roll of the burgh and not in that made up by the assessor of railways, in respect that they did not form part of the undertaking of the railway.

Dundee and Arbroath Joint Line Committee, 1883, 11 R. 396; 21 S.L.R. 540.

(429)

—Lands acquired for purposes of a railway but not yet so used.

In an appeal against a determination of the valuation committee sustaining a valuation by the assessor for the county of certain ground which had been acquired by a railway company (whose line was partly constructed) for the purposes of their undertaking, but which was still in grass and in no way used for these purposes, held (per Lord Lee) that the ground had rightly been valued by the county assessor and not by the assessor for railways and canals, notwithstanding a provision of the company's Act of Parliament that the lands from time to time acquired by the company should, "for all purposes of tolls, rates, and charges, and for all other purposes whatsoever, be the undertaking, railway works, and property of the company"; held (per Lord Fraser) contra that the ground in question ought to have been valued by the assessor for railways and canals as part of the undertaking of the company. The judges being divided in opinion, the valuation stood.

Forth Bridge Railway Co. v Assessor for Linlithgowshire, 1888, 15 R. 595; 25 S.L.R. 320.

(430)

A plot of ground lying within a burgh had been acquired by a railway company, whose Act of Parliament provided that the lands from time to time acquired by the company should, "for all purposes of tolls, rates, and charges, and for all purposes whatsoever, be the undertaking, railway works, and property of the company." Part of the ground had been used in the construction of a railway embankment, the remainder being covered with the debris caused by the formation of the embankment. The burgh assessor included the subjects in his valuation on the ground that they were not "wholly occupied by the railway and works," and that the railway was still unfinished. In an appeal against the determination of the valuation committee sustaining the assessment, the Court held that, as the ground in question formed part of the undertaking of a railway company within the meaning of secs. 20 and 21 of the Lands Valuation Act, 1854, the burgh assessor had no duty in regard to it, and that the determination was wrong.

Forth Bridge Railway Co. v Assessor for Queensferry, 1889, 16 R. 797; 26 S.L.R. 533.

(431)

Railway bookstall.

Held that the bookstall in a railway station, in the occupation of newsagents who paid the company a fixed sum annually for the privilege of supplying newspapers and books within the station, but who supplied not only passengers travelling on the railway but inhabitants of the town with newspapers and books, had been properly valued by the assessor of railways and canals as part of the undertaking of the company, and did not fall to be separately entered by the burgh assessor in his roll.

Callander and Oban Railway Co. v Assessor for Oban, 1888, 15 R. 634; 25 S.L.R. 464.

(432)

Tobacco stall in railway station.

A railway company let to a lessee the exclusive right of selling tobacco, cigars and cigarettes at a stall erected by the company in a railway station, reserving to the company the right to remove the stall and terminate the lease "should the site be required for railway purposes." Held that the stall was rightly included by the assessor of railways as part of the undertaking of the railway company and did not fall to be separately valued by the burgh assessor.

Glasgow Corporation v North British Railway Co., (O.H.) 1899, 7 S.L.T. 9.

(433)

Foreshore acquired for purposes of railway—Ground lying waste and unoccupied.

Held that certain lands originally foreshore which a railway company had acquired for the purposes of their railway, but not used, and which were lying waste and unoccupied and in a partially reclaimed condition, did not fall to be regarded as part of the undertaking of the company within the meaning of sec. 21 of the Lands Valuation Act.

Magistrates of Greenock v Glasgow and South-Western Railway, (O.H.) 1899, 7 S.L.T. 9.

(434)

Cumulo valuation of whole undertaking—Allocation between counties—Act 1854, sec. 22.

Held that when a railway or canal, constituting a single undertaking for the purpose of assessment, but passing through two or more counties, has no annual value or is worked at a loss, the assessor is not bound to apply the provisions as to allocation of the cumulo valuation between the counties contained in sec. 22 of the Valuation of Lands Act, 1854, although the effect may be, as regards one county, to cancel the loss and bring out a substantial value.

County Council of Argyllshire v Assessor of Railways and Canals, (O.H.) 1895, 32 S.L.R. 518.

(435)

Tramway—Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1867, sec. 3.

Held in construing sec. 3 of the Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1867

(which deals with the valuation of railways by the assessor of railways and canals), that the word "railway" includes "tramway."

Glasgow Corporation v Assessor of Railways and Canals, (O.H.) 1911 S.C. 1364; 48 S.L.R. 4; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 383.

(436)

————— Tenant's profits — Percentage on value of plant and stock.

In an appeal by a tramway company from the valuation put upon their property by the assessor of railways and canals under the valuation statutes on the ground that the principle adopted by the assessor was erroneous, held to be a settled rule that the amount of tenant's profits should be estimated at a percentage on the value of plant and rolling stock.

Vale of Clyde Tramway Co. v Munro, (O.H.) 1883, 21 S.L.R. 273.

(437)

Plant and tools—Fixed or attached to lands or heritages.

Held that the annual value of plant and tools not physically fixed or attached to lands or heritages should not enter the valuation roll.

North British Railway Co. v Assessor of Railways and Canals, (O.H.) 1887, 25 S.L.R. 4.

(438)

Deductions — Railway company working lines which do not belong to them.

The ordinary method of fixing the valuation of railways is to take the net revenue of the company, and from that to allow, inter alia, a deduction of 25 per cent. on the value of the rolling stock and plant of the company. In fixing the valuation of a railway belonging to a company which, besides its own lines, worked several other lines belonging to separate companies, the assessor included in the net revenue a sum of £21,000, being the sum received from the other companies for working these lines, but deducted only 5 per cent. on the value of the plant and rolling stock used in working them. Held that if the assessor found it necessary, from the way in which the accounts of expenses were stated, to take the revenue of these other lines into account to enable him to value the undertaking of the working company, the deductions to be allowed must be made at rates similar to the deductions allowed in the case of their own lines and rolling stock, and that 18 per cent. ought to have been allowed; but opinion that the revenue derived from those other lines ought not to enter the valuation, in respect that it did not represent the rent of heritable property belonging to the company whose undertaking was being valued.

North British Railway Co. v Wallace, &c., (O.H.) 1884, 12 R. 6; 22 S.L.R. 114.

(439)

————— Materials in store for future use—Act 1867, sec. 3.

Sec. 3 of the Valuation of Lands Act, 1867, provides that a deduction shall be allowed of one-half the expenses truly expended in maintaining and repairing the permanent way of a railway. Held that this section does not warrant any deduction in the value of rails, chairs, and other materials purchased and kept in store for the purpose of future use in maintaining the permanent way.

North British Railway v Assessor of Railways and Canals, (O.H.) 1884, 22 S.L.R. 114.

(440)

————— Insurance on goods in transit.

Circumstances in which a deduction allowed (in respect of previous practice to that effect) from the gross revenue in respect of insurance on goods in transit.

Question, whether the claim was well founded in principle.

North British Railway v Assessor of Railways and Canals, (O.H.) 1884, 22 S.L.R. 114.

(441)

————— Expense of repairs—Act 1867, sec. 3.

Held that sec. 3 of the Valuation of Lands Amendment Act, 1867, does not authorise a deduction to be made in fixing the cumulo rent or value of a railway in respect of rails, chairs, &c., purchased by the company, and stored by them for future use in repairing their railway.

North British Railway Co. v Wallace, (O.H.) 1884, 12 R. 6; 22 S.L.R. 114.

(442)

Lands belonging to railway company—Docks—Method of Valuation—Act 1854, sec. 4.

Held that the assessor of railways and canals in valuing the lands and heritages belonging to a railway company in the manner prescribed by sec. 22 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854, as amended by sec. 4 of the Valuation of Lands (Scotland) Amendment Act, 1867, should treat the entrance channel, sea walls, piers, and jetties connected with docks belonging to the railway company as part of the general undertaking of the railway company, and not as part of the "docks" for which a different method of valuation is provided.

Magistrates of Buckhaven v North British Railway Co., (O.H.) 1915 S.C. 1123; 52 S.L.R. 709; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 454.

(443)

Assessment under special Act or general Act.

In a question as to valuation of the Crinan Canal, held that the valuation fell to be made in accordance with the Valuation of Lands Act, 1854, and not under the special Act of 1799.

Commissioners of Supply for Argyllshire v Commissioners of Caledonian Canal, 1872, 10 M. 639; 44 J. 355; 9 S.L.R. 398.

(444)

Special provision as to assessment in Railway Act—Duty of assessor for railways and canals—West Highland Railway Guarantee Act, 1896, sec. 2.

The West Highland Railway Guarantee Act, 1896, sec. 2 enacts—"The railway shall not be assessed to any local rate at a higher value than that at which the land occupied by the railway would have been assessed if it had remained in the condition in which it was immediately before it was acquired for the purpose of the railway." Held that the section gave no warrant to the assessor of railways and canals to value the railway on any other principle than those applicable to railways generally.

West Highland Railway Co. v Assessor of Railways and Canals, (O.H.) 1903, 6 F. 1050; 41 S.L.R. 37.

(445)

Whether "company" includes commissioners—Act 1854, secs. 20 and 21.

Held that the words "canal company" in sec. 21 of the Act of 1854 applied to a body of statutory commissioners who were charged with the administration of a canal when the Act was passed.

Commissioners of the Caledonian Canal v County Councils of Inverness-shire and Argyllshire, 1894, 21 R. 1045; 31 S.L.R. 830; 2 S.L.T. 162.

(446)

Separate canals under same commissioners.

Held that the Caledonian Canal and Crinan Canal form parts of one undertaking, and therefore fall to be assessed by the assessor of railways and canals in terms of sec. 21 of the Lands Valuation (Scotland) Act, 1854.

Commissioners of the Caledonian Canal v County Council of Argyllshire, 1894, 22 R. 149; 32 S.L.R. 108; 2 S.L.T. 349.

(447)

Competency of proof as to value—Jurisdiction of Court of Session—West Highland Railway Guarantee Act, 1896, sec. 2.

The county council and other rating authorities having imposed assessments on the basis of the railway assessor's valuation as shown in the immediately preceding rubric, in an action by the railway company against the county council and the other rating authorities, and also against the county assessor and the assessor of railways and canals, held (1) that the railway company was entitled to declarator that the valuation at which the railway had been entered in the railway valuation roll was not the valuation on which the company was liable to be assessed to local rates; (2) that the Court had no jurisdiction to order either the railway assessor or the county assessor to enter any other valuation in their respective valuation rolls; and (3) that the Court had no jurisdiction to ascertain, by proof or otherwise, the valuation on which the railway company was liable to be assessed in terms of sec. 2 of its Act.

West Highland Railway Co. v County Council of Inverness-shire, 1904, 6 F. 1052; 41 S.L.R. 795; 12 S.L.T. 225.

(448)

Revenue principle—Deductions—Statutory disability to make profit from revenue—Maintenance and management charges.

The commissioners of the Caledonian Canal were under their Acts forbidden to make profit out of the revenue from tolls, dues, &c., levied thereon. Held, in a question as to the valuation of the canal, that in fixing the annual value, deduction should be allowed from the gross revenue of all necessary outlays for management, maintenance, and repairs properly chargeable against revenue, and quoad ultra that no deduction should be made.

Caledonian Canal Commissioners v Assessor of Railways and Canals, (O.H.) 1886, 24 S.L.R. 80.

(449)

Deductions from revenue—Landlord's or tenant's charges.

Opinion (by Lord Moncreiff) that in the case of undertakings in which the proprietors are, by the terms of their constitution, prohibited from making profit, the distinction between landlord's and tenant's charges is inapplicable, and that accordingly a deduction must, in the case of such undertakings, be allowed from gross revenue of all necessary outlays for management, maintenance and repairs which are properly chargeable against revenue.

County Council of Argyllshire v Assessor of Railways and Canals, (O.H.) 1895, 32 S.L.R. 518.

For Valuation of Waterworks by the Assessor of Railways and Canals, see V. 3 (2) (1), supra.

VII. VALUED RENT.

(450)

Principle of division of cumulo valued rent.

Held that in dividing a cumulo valued rent the division ought to proceed on the relative value of the several subjects at the date of the original valuation, and that in the case of a railway the best mode of approximating to such relative value was to take the real rent of the land valued as an agricultural subject.

Deeside Railway Co. v Pitfodels Land Co., 1869, 7 M. 1068; 41 J. 602; 6 S.L.R. 703.

VIII. OFFENCES.

[See JUSTICIARY V. 31.]

VALUED RENT. See VALUATION.

VERBAL INJURY. See SLANDER.

VERITAS. See SLANDER.

VESTING.

I. POSTPONED PAYMENT—

	COL.
1. Payment at Dies Certus, - - - - -	1235
2. Payment at Dies Incertus (Majority or Marriage), - - - - -	1237
(1) Postponed Vesting, - - - - -	1237
(2) Vesting a Morte Testatoris, - - - - -	1238
3. Construction of "Term of Payment," &c., - - - - -	1242
(1) Where Payment Due but not yet Made, - - - - -	1242
(2) Express Declaration as to Vesting, - - - - -	1245
See VI., infra.
(3) Clause of Survivorship, &c., expressly referring to Time of Payment, - - - - -	1245
See II. 1, infra.

II. SURVIVORSHIP CLAUSES—

1. Vesting Postponed until Distribution, - - - - -	1245
2. Vesting at Majority of Beneficiary, - - - - -	1250
3. Vesting a Morte Testatoris, - - - - -	1254
4. Vesting in Last Survivor, - - - - -	1258
See IX. 2, infra.
5. Construction—Whether "Survivors" equivalent to "Others," - - - - -	1258
See SUCCESSION IX. 8 (1) (i).

III. EFFECT OF DESTINATION OVER—

1. Generally, - - - - -	1258
2. No Gift apart from Direction to pay at Postponed Date, - - - - -	1262
3. Conditions of Vesting in Institute and in Conditional Institute respectively, - - - - -	1264
4. Destination over to Heirs, - - - - -	1267
5. Destination over to Issue, - - - - -	1269
(1) Vesting in Institute subject to Defeasance, - - - - -	1269
See VIII. 3, infra.
(2) Vesting Postponed, - - - - -	1270
(3) Vesting a Morte Testatoris, - - - - -	1273

IV. VESTING OF CLASS GIFTS—

1. Class Closed at Testator's Death, - - - - -	1275
2. Vesting subject to Partial Defeasance in favour of New Members, - - - - -	1276
3. Vesting on Payment of Share to any Member, - - - - -	1281
4. Vesting as each Member attains Majority, - - - - -	1284
5. Vesting on Youngest Member attaining Majority, - - - - -	1285
6. Vesting Postponed until period of Payment, - - - - -	1286

V. GIFTS SUBJECT TO BURDENS OR CONDITIONS—

1. Gifts subject to Annuities, - - - - -	1288
2. Gifts subject to Other Burdens, - - - - -	1291
3. Gifts subject to Conditions, - - - - -	1292

VI. EFFECT OF DECLARATION AS TO VESTING, - - - - - 1293

VII. EFFECT OF DISCRETION GIVEN TO TRUSTEES—

1. Discretion or Direction as to Period of Division, - - - - -	1301
2. Power to withhold Payment from Particular Beneficiary, - - - - -	1304
3. Where Payment Due but not Made, - - - - -	1307
See I. 3 (1), supra.

VIII. VESTING SUBJECT TO DEFEASANCE—

COL.

1. Gift to Legatee Failing Issue of Liferenter, - - - 1307
2. Gift of Fee Restrictable to Liferent on Birth of Issue, - - - 1314
See FEE AND LIFERENT I. 5 (1) (b).
3. Gift over to Issue of Institute, - - - 1314
4. Vesting subject to more than one Contingency, - - - 1316
5. Vesting in Class subject to Defeasance in favour of New Members, 1318
See IV. 2, supra.
6. Miscellaneous, - - - 1318

IX. ACCELERATION OF VESTING—

1. Surrender or Forfeiture of Liferent, - - - 1321
2. Vesting in last Survivor of Class, - - - 1325
3. Condition attached to Gift becoming impossible, - - - 1326
4. Exercise of Power of Appointment, - - - 1327
5. Divorce, - - - 1329

X. VESTING OF DIRECT GIFTS OF HERITAGE, - - - 1331

XI. VESTING OF INTER VIVOS GIFTS, - - - 1333

XII. VESTING UNDER MARRIAGE CONTRACTS IN CHILDREN OF MARRIAGE, - 1335

I. POSTPONED PAYMENT.

1. PAYMENT AT DIES CERTUS.

(1)

First term after testator's death—
Direction to pay.

A testator conveyed his estates in trust for certain purposes and, inter alia, "for payment of the legacies and bequests at the first term of Martinmas or Whitsunday that shall happen six months after my decease to the persons afternamed," "viz., to A B the sum of £100," &c. Held that the legacies vested a morte testatoris.

Hood's Executors, 1869, 7 M. 774; 41 J. 402; 6 S.L.R. 503.

(2)

First term after death of liferenter—
Direction to pay.

A testator gave his wife the liferent of his estate. The trust settlement contained the following clause:—"I appoint my trustees to make payment of the legacies following, at the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas after the death of A B, my spouse, in case she shall happen to survive me," "to W R £100." The truster was survived by his widow and by the legatees. Held that the legacies vested a morte testatoris.

Rattray's Trustees v Rattray, 1868, 6 M. 476; 40 J. 245; 5 S.L.R. 302.

(3)

A testator directed his trustees to pay certain legacies to named persons at the first term after the death of the survivor of himself and a liferenter. One of the legatees survived the testator but predeceased the liferenter. Held that the legacy vested in him a morte testatoris.

Hendry's Trustees v Patrick, (O.H.) 1905, 13 S.L.T. 503.

(4)

Legacy payable to A on marriage or death of B.

Held that a legacy directed to be paid to A on the marriage or death of B vests a morte testatoris.

Mackintosh v Wood, 1872, 10 M. 933; 44 J. 512; 9 S.L.R. 591.

(5)

Death of liferenter—Direction to divide.

A testator left the liferent of the residue of his estate to his widow, and further directed that on the termination of the liferent "I desire that all of which I am possessed be divided among my cousins the Blackwells (leaving out Mrs. Buckle) and among the children of my uncle, James Hay, Esq., of Belton." Held that the fee of the residue vested a morte testatoris.

Hay Cunningham's Trustees v Blackwell, 1909 S.C. 219; 46 S.L.R. 175; 16 S.L.T. 592.

(6)

Direction to pay.

A testator by his will, after giving the liferent of his estate to his sisters in certain shares, provided as follows:—"After the death of each and all of them (the sisters)" the estate "shall be given over to the provost and town council in trust" for rebuilding an old bridge. Held that the bequest to the provost and town council vested a morte testatoris.

Magistrates of Ayr v Shaw, (O.H.) 1904, 12 S.L.T. 126.

(7)

Death of liferenter and annuitants.

A testator directed his trustees to pay certain legacies and annuities, and to pay the interest of the residue, "after deducting the foregoing bequests and annuities," to his widow during her life, "and at the death of the said" widow and other annuitants "I request my trustees to divide the said residue into nine equal shares, and to pay one-ninth share to A B," a nephew, and the remaining shares to other persons. The nephew predeceased the widow. Held that the share of residue had vested in the nephew at the testator's death.

Home's Trustees, 1891, 18 R. 1138.

2. PAYMENT AT DIES INCERTUS (MAJORITY OR MARRIAGE).

(1) POSTPONED VESTING.

(8)

No gift apart from direction to convey.

A trust disposition and settlement contained the following provision:—"Upon my son William attaining the age of thirty years, I direct my trustees to convey to him the properties of A and T." William survived his father, but died before attaining the age of thirty. Held that as there was no gift except the direction to convey to William on his attaining the age of thirty, his right to the properties of A and T was conditional on his attaining that age.

Graham's Trustees v Graham, 1899, 2 F. 232; 37 S.L.R. 163; 7 S.L.T. 283.

(9)

A testator directed his trustees to convey to his eldest son, "on his arriving at the age of twenty-five years complete, so as effectually to vest the same in his person," certain lands in India, "with their balances and obligations." Held, on a construction of the whole terms of the deed, that the Indian properties did not vest in the son a morte testatoris, but only when he attained the age of twenty-five.

Brodie v Brodie's Trustees, 1893, 20 R. 795; 30 S.L.R. 713; 1 S.L.T. 71.

(10)

Legacy payable to A on marriage of B— Legacy payable to A on marriage or death of B.

A testatrix by her will left the liferent of the residue of her estate to her daughter until her marriage. On the marriage of the daughter the testatrix appointed her executors to pay certain sums to her two sons. By a codicil the testatrix left an additional legacy to each of her two sons, but provided that the additional sum should be paid to them only in the event of the daughter's marriage or death. Held that the legacies under the will did not vest in the sons until the marriage of the testator's daughter, but that the legacies under the codicil vested a morte testatoris.

Mackintosh v Wood, 1872, 10 M. 933; 44 J. 512; 9 S.L.R. 591.

(11)

Fund divisible on marriage or death of either of two liferenters.

A testator left his whole estate to two of his daughters in liferent, but, in event of either or both being married, he directed that their liferent should cease, and the funds be divided between them and certain other beneficiaries. Further, the deed provided that, in the event of the death of either of the daughters unmarried, "then the share which would have belonged to the decessor, had she married, shall accresce and be divided equally among the whole beneficiaries." Neither of the daughters married, and, on the death of one, held (1) that there was no vesting a morte testatoris; (2) that either the marriage or death of one of the sisters terminated the liferent; and (3) that a like event vested the fee in the beneficiaries.

Ritchie's Trustees, 1873, 11 S.L.R. 108.

(2) VESTING A MORTE TESTATORIS.

(12)

Gift of income for behoof of legatee during minority—Direction to pay fee to legatee on majority.

A testator by the sixth purpose of his trust disposition and settlement provided as follows:—"I direct my trustees to invest the sum of £1500 and pay the annual interest or produce thereof to my grand-niece Jessie White. . . . And I provide and declare that during the years of her pupilarity and minority the said interest be paid to her legal guardian; and on the said Jessie White attaining her majority my said trustees shall pay over to her the said sum of £1500." The settlement contained a residuary clause. Jessie White survived the testator, but died before attaining majority. Held that the gift to Jessie White was a gift of the capital of the legacy of £1500, vesting in her a morte testatoris.

White v Gow, 1900, 2 F. 1170; 37 S.L.R. 895; 8 S.L.T. 127.

(13)

Direction to divide among children, born or to be born, at majority.

A testator directed "that the residue of my funds be divided among the children lawfully begotten, or who shall be lawfully begotten of my cousins T A and J, share and share alike, on each of them attaining the age of twenty-one years"; and appointed executors. Held that the residue vested a morte testatoris in the children of T A and J in existence at the date of the testator's death, children born thereafter not being entitled to participate.

Hayward's Executors v Young, 1895, 22 R. 757; 32 S.L.R. 559; 3 S.L.T. 54.

(14)

A testator directed that the residue of his estate should be held applied and paid to and among his six named children and any other thereafter born, who might survive him, each being entitled to his share, or so much thereof as the trustees might be in a position to divide, on attaining twenty-five years of age. He directed that payments to children should be made on the footing of the trustees retaining the full amount of capital they might think prudent to meet provisions in favour of his wife; and that the trustees should have power to make advances to the children at an earlier period than the attainment of twenty-five, such advances to form deductions from the ultimate shares of the children receiving them. The trustees were also directed to apply so much of the income as they thought necessary for the maintenance of the children until payment of their shares. The testator was survived by the said six children. Held that a share of residue vested in each child a morte testatoris, although such child had not reached twenty-five, and that the executor of a child dying before reaching twenty-five years of age was entitled to receive immediate payment of the child's share.

Mackintosh's Trustees v Mackintosh, 1907, 44 S.L.R. 911; 15 S.L.T. 272.

(15)

Direction to preserve estate for behoof of children—Power to advance from capital.

A testator directed his trustees to manage and preserve his estate for behoof of his children with power to make advances from capital, and on the youngest child attaining majority to convey the residue to children who might be alive at his death, and the issue of any child dying before his share became payable. In a codicil executed when he had only one child, a boy of six, the testator directed his trustees, in case of the death of his only surviving child and any other children he might have and their issue, to convey the residue to a nephew. The testator's son survived him and died at the age of seventeen. Held that the residue vested in the son a morte testatoris.

Peacock's Trustees v Peacock, 1885, 12 R. 378; 22 S.L.R. 588.

(16)

Liferent to A—Direction to convey fee to heir of A's body at majority.

A testator directed his trustees to pay over yearly to J W, jun., on his attaining the age of twenty years complete, the free rents and produce of an estate, and, after his decease, "they shall be bound to denude themselves and convey and dispone the same to the lawful heirs of his body on his or her attaining majority." J W, jun., enjoyed the liferent for some years and died, leaving a pupil son. Held, on a consideration of the whole deed, that the right of fee had vested in the son, and was not contingent on his attaining majority, though he was not entitled until then to a conveyance of the estate.

Hewat v Grant, 1867, 6 M. 47; 40 J. 33; 5 S.L.R. 44.

(17)

Direction to pay to children on death of liferenter and on children respectively attaining majority — Gift of immediate income.

A testator directed his trustees to make payment to his nephew, D M, of a legacy of £60,000, "and that in liferent for his liferent use only, and on his death I direct the said sum of £60,000 to be paid to and among his children equally among them, share and share alike, on their respectively attaining the age of twenty-one, payable as such children, after their father's death, respectively attain majority, the interest or annual produce being, however, in the meantime, available for their maintenance and education, the issue of any of the said children who may have predeceased taking their parent's share." D M predeceased the testator. Held that the fee of the £60,000 vested equally in all D M's children at the testator's death, irrespective of their attainment of majority.

Mackinnon's Trustees v MacNeill, 1897, 24 R. 981; 34 S.L.R. 742; 5 S.L.T. 67.

(18)

Direction to pay to children at majority or marriage and at death of liferenter—Destination over in general terms.

A testator directed his trustees to set aside and hold a specified sum for behoof of two grandsons and a grand-daughter in liferent, and upon the death of any one of his said grandchildren, or at any later period of division which he or she might appoint, to pay over his or her share of the said funds to or among his or her children "when and as they arrive at majority or are married, whom failing, to his or her assignees, whom failing, to my own nearest heirs." Held that on the death of a liferenter leaving children, the fee of the share liferented vested in the existing children, although they were in minority and unmarried.

Normand's Trustees v Normand, 1900, 2 F. 726; 37 S.L.R. 517; 7 S.L.T. 430.

(19)

Residuary bequest—Direction to hold heritage in trust to convey to G on majority—Appointment of G as residuary legatee—Vesting a morte testatoris.

A testator, on the narrative of being indebted to the family of J G, directed his trustees to hold his heritable estate "in trust to convey and make over the same to R G, the second son of J G, upon his attaining the years of majority, his heirs and assigns for ever." The testator further appointed R G his residuary legatee, and directed the trustees, upon R G attaining the age of twenty-one, to convey to him, his heirs, and assigns the whole residue not otherwise specifically disposed of by the deed. Held that both the heritable and the moveable estate vested in R G a morte testatoris, and that the trustees were bound to pay the whole proceeds of the estate to the minor, with the consent of his administrator in law.

Alves' Trustees v Grant, 1874, 1 R. 969; 11 S.L.R. 559.

(20)

Revocation of destination over.

A testatrix directed her trustees to hold one-half of the residue of her estate for her nephew, payable on his attaining the age of twenty-five, with power to expend the interest for his behoof; and to make advances out of capital, and a destination over to A in the event of the nephew failing to attain twenty-five. By a codicil the testator recalled all the provisions in her settlement in favour of A. Held that the destination over being thus recalled, the nephew's interest vested a morte testatoris.

Johnston's Trustees v Johnston, 1891, 18 R. 823; 28 S.L.R. 634.

(21)

Gift to become absolute property of A on expiry of life interest, whom failing, to B and C.

A testatrix, by a holograph will, disposed her whole estate to her mother in life interest, and after the death of her mother she directed certain legacies to be paid, and then followed this direction—"After these legacies are paid the whole residue of my means and estate aforesaid to become the absolute property of my brother A B, whom failing, to X, Y, and Z." Held that the bequest to A B vested a morte testatoris.

Davidson's Executors, 1900, 8 S.L.T. 239.

(22)

Gift payable when claim made.

Under a trust disposition and settlement the trustees were directed to set aside a sufficient portion of the trust estate to secure an annuity to the truster's widow and certain other life interest provisions, "and on the eldest of my children reaching twenty-three years of age complete," to have the remaining trust estate valued, and to pay over a pro rata share according to the number of children then in life to the child who had attained twenty-three. The child or children so paid were at the termination of the annuity and life interest provisions "to have an eventual right to receive subsequently his or her share of that part of the estate which shall have been set aside for satisfying annuities or life interests thereon." On each of the remaining children attaining twenty-three, a similar share was to be successively paid over to them respectively "at the several times when they have right thereto and claim the same." The truster died in 1855 survived by his widow and by several children. As these children respectively attained twenty-three a share of the residue not required to secure the annuity, &c., was paid to each. The widow died in 1878. A, one of the children who had attained twenty-three, died unmarried and intestate in 1892 without having made any claim to a further payment from the estate. In 1902, held that a right to a share of the estate required to secure the widow's annuity had vested in A on his attaining twenty-three.

Watson's Trustees v Watson, 1902, 4 F. 798; 39 S.L.R. 628; 10 S.L.T. 64.

(23)

Gift of residue—To son "after these payments are made"—Annuity to wife—Legacies payable on wife's death—Destination over "failing" son.

A testator directed that his son should have three of his farms, with the stocking, on attaining the age of twenty-three, and a fourth farm on the death of the testator's wife. The testator further directed that his wife should receive £500 a year if the income of his estate could afford it. He also left legacies to each of his daughters, payable after their mother's death. He further declared that his son was "to succeed to whatever may remain of my estate after these payments are made, whom failing, to" his daughters. The wife, the son, and the daughters all survived the testator, the son having attained the age of twenty-three prior to his father's death. The son predeceased his mother and sisters. Held that the words "after these payments are made" did not refer to a point of time, but meant "subject to these payments," and that the residue vested in the son a morte testatoris.

Scott's Trustees v Scott, 1891, 18 R. 1194; 28 S.L.R. 896.

3. CONSTRUCTION OF "TERM OF PAYMENT," &c.

(1) WHERE PAYMENT DUE BUT NOT YET MADE.

(24)

Gift over in event of death "previous to payment"—Payment at majority—Death after attaining majority, but before payment.

One of twelve shares of the residue of an estate was, under a mutual settlement by two spouses, bequeathed, on the death of the survivor, to a grandson "payable on his attaining the age of twenty-one years." It was further provided that in case he "should die previous to payment" the share was to be divided amongst certain other beneficiaries. The grandson attained twenty-one, but died (eighteen days after the survivor of the spouses) before receiving payment. Held that the share had vested in him.

Chalmers' Trustees, 1882, 9 R. 743; 19 S.L.R. 493.

(25)

Gift over in event of death "before receiving payment."

A testator directed the trustees under his trust disposition and settlement to pay an alimentary annuity to his wife in the event of her surviving him, and, subject to payment of the annuity, to hold the residue of his estate for behoof of his son and any other children that might be born to him or the survivors equally among them or their issue per stirpes, under declaration that the residue, "subject to such part of my estate being retained as may be necessary to meet the foregoing annuity, shall be payable to my children as they respectively attain majority." He further directed that, in the event of his son and any other children that might be born to him all "dying before receiving payment" of their shares of his estate without leaving issue, the residue should be held by his trustees and paid or conveyed to a charity which he named. The testator was survived by his widow and by his son, his only child. The son attained majority, but died, unmarried, a year later, leaving a general disposition and settlement in favour of his mother, and without having received payment of any part of the residue, the whole of which the trustees had found it necessary to retain in their hands to meet the widow's annuity. Held that the words "dying before receiving payment" meant dying before the term of payment, and that, as the son, by attaining majority, had survived that term, the residue of the estate had vested in him, and was, accordingly, carried to his mother by his settlement.

Howat's Trustees v Howat, 1922 S.C. 506; 59 S.L.R. 411; 1922 S.L.T. 382.

(26)

Division directed twelve months after testator's death or "so soon thereafter" as trustees could realise—Survivorship clause referring to death before receiving payment.

A testator executed a mortis causa settlement conveying his estates to trustees, with directions, at the expiry of "twelve months after my decease, or so soon thereafter as my trustees may be able to realise said estates, and upon my youngest child attaining twenty-one years of age," to divide the residue equally among his children. It was provided that in the event of any of the children predeceasing the testator, or dying before receiving payment leaving lawful children, such children should succeed to their parent's share, and that in the event of any of the children predeceasing the testator, "or dying before receiving payment of their share" without leaving lawful children, the share of such child should accrete to the survivors. All the children attained majority before the testator's death, and survived him for more than twelve months, but one of his sons died two years after his father's death, before any division of the residue had been made by the trustees. Held that the share of this son had not vested, the trustees not having unduly delayed to realise and divide the estate.

Howat's Trustees v Howat, 1869, 8 M. 337; 42 J. 116; 7 S.L.R. 157.

(27)

Direction to divide on death of liferentrix, or as soon thereafter as deemed proper—Destination over applying to death before period of payment and division.

Trustees under a settlement were directed to divide the residue of the trustor's estate on the death of a liferentrix, "so soon thereafter as deemed proper," with the further provision that if any of the residuary legatees should predecease "the said term of payment and division among them," the share of such predeceaser should be held as lapsed. A residuary legatee survived the liferentrix, but died before the trustees had made payment and division. Held that the share of residue destined to the residuary legatee had vested on the death of the liferentrix.

M'Call's Trustees v Murray, 1901, 3 F. 380; 38 S.L.R. 292; 8 S.L.T. 299.

(28)

Trustees to pay when convenient—Survivorship clause applying to event of death before receiving share—Effect of payment to one beneficiary.

Where trustees are directed to hold a fund for behoof of children, and to divide and pay the same when it can be conveniently done, and it is declared that in the event of a child dying without issue before receiving his share under the trust the same shall be divided among the survivors, payment to one beneficiary of his share fixes the period of vesting for all.

Sutherland's Trustees v Clarkson, 1874, 2 R. 46; 12 S.L.R. 19.

(29)

Bequest to be paid as soon as convenient after deaths of testator and a liferenter—Destination over in event of death before period of payment.

A testator by trust disposition and settlement directed his trustees to pay to his sister A the interest of a sum of money, and "after the death of my said sister A, or after my own death in the event of the said A predeceasing me, that my said trustees shall, as soon thereafter as my trustees shall find it convenient, pay the capital of the said sum . . . to my nephew." B, "whom failing, to the lawful issue of his body equally; and in the event of the said" B "dying before the period of payment of the said sum without leaving lawful issue," the testator made a different bequest of the sum of money. A predeceased the testator. B survived the testator for nine months, and died before any of the estate had been realised. Held that the legacy vested in B at the death of the testator.

Ferrier v Ferrier, 1872, 10 M. 711; 44 J. 390; 9 S.L.R. 459.

(30)

Direction to convey heritage—Property declared to vest a morte, but not to be transmissible to heirs.

A testator, inter alia, directed his trustees, after realising his moveable estate, to convey a heritable property to his eldest son as part of his share. It was declared that the shares "shall vest at the period of my death, so as to be subject to the deeds, but not to the effect of transmitting to the heirs of the beneficiaries then existing by legal or intestate succession until the conveyances are granted in their favour as after specified." The trustees retained the whole estate undivided for eighteen years, when the eldest son died without having received any conveyance of the property destined to him by his father's settlement. Held that, as the eldest son had survived the date when division should have taken place, and when he ought to have received a conveyance of his share, a tripartite division had taken effect, and the eldest son's share had vested in him.

Love's Trustees v Love, 1879, 7 R. 410; 17 S.L.R. 260.

(31)

Direction to divide—Beneficiary disappearing and legally presumed to have died after testator.

A testator directed his trustees to divide the residue of his estate into seven equal parts, and to bestow one share on each of his seven children nominatim, and, failing any of these "by decease and without having received payment of their provisions and without leaving lawful issue," the share of such child should fall and belong to the surviving brothers and sisters equally. A son who disappeared did not receive payment of his share. He was presumed to have survived the testator, but to have died intestate and without issue. Held that the maxim, Quod fieri debet infectum valet, applied, and that the son's share vested a morte testatoris.

Yuill's Trustees v Yuill, (O.H.) 1900, 8 S.L.T. 324.

(32)

Gift over in event of death previous to payment—Payment at majority—Beneficiary attaining majority, but dying before actual payment—Vesting in beneficiary.

Chalmers' Trustees, 1882, 9 R. 743; 19 S.L.R. 493, No. 24, supra.

(2) EXPRESS DECLARATIONS AS TO VESTING.

[See VI., infra.]

(3) CLAUSE OF SURVIVORSHIP, &c., EXPRESSLY REFERRING TO TIME OF PAYMENT.

[See II. 1, infra.]

II. SURVIVORSHIP CLAUSES.

1. VESTING POSTPONED UNTIL DISTRIBUTION.

(33)

Gift to grandnieces in liferent and issue in fee—Failing issue, gift to survivors of grandnephews and grandnieces in liferent and their issue in fee.

A testator gave the liferent of his estate to his wife, and the fee to six grandnephews and grandnieces nominatim. He further directed his trustees to pay the share bequeathed to grandnieces to them and their husbands in liferent allenarly, and the fee to the issue of the grandnieces, "whom failing, to the survivors of them and my grandnephews, also named in the foregoing settlement or codicils, equally in liferent and their issue also equally in fee, after the death of the longest liver of me and my wife." One of the grandnieces survived the testator, but predeceased his wife without issue. One of the grandnephews survived the grandniece, but predeceased the testator's widow, having a son who survived the widow. Held that the persons entitled to a liferent under the destination over were the survivors of the grandnieces and the survivors of the grandnephews as at the death of the testator's widow, and that the son of the predeceasing grandnephew was not entitled to participate in the fee.

Richardson v Macdougall, 1868, 6 M. (H.L.) 18; 40 J. 466; 5 S.L.R. 454.

(34)

Payment at first term following death of liferentrix—Legatee surviving liferentrix, but dying before term.

A testator left a legacy to A and B equally and failing either of them to the survivors, and directed the legacy to be paid at the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas after the death of a liferentrix. A survived the liferentrix, but predeceased the first term after the liferentrix's death. Held that the legacy did not vest in A.

Hendry's Trustees v Patrick, (O.H.) 1905, 13 S.L.T. 503.

(35)

Payment at death of liferenter.

A direction to trustees on the expiry of a liferent to pay a part of an estate to A and B equally between them, share and share alike, and the survivor of them, held to postpone vesting until the death of the liferenter.

Ferguson's Trustees v Readman's Executors, (O.H.) 1903, 10 S.L.T. 697.

(36)

Gift over to issue, whom failing, to survivors.

A testator directed his trustees, on the death or second marriage of his wife, to pay the residue "to such of my children as have arrived at the age of twenty-one years, or as they respectively reach that age." "If any child shall die, either before or after me, leaving lawful issue, and without having acquired a vested interest" in his provision, there was a destination over to issue, and failing issue, to the surviving children and the issue of predeceasers. A, one of the testator's sons, survived the testator and attained twenty-one, but predeceased the widow, who never remarried. Held that the survivorship clause prevented vesting until the death of the widow, and that the share destined to A had never vested in him.

Banks' Trustees v Banks' Trustees, 1907 S.C. 125; 44 S.L.R. 121; 14 S.L.T. 471.

(37)

By antenuptial marriage contract A bound himself to "make payment to the child or children that may happen to be procreate of this marriage" of £8000 "to be payable at the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas after the death of the longest liver of him" and the wife, "which sum, in the event of there being more children than one, shall be divisible in such proportions as "A shall appoint by a writing under his hand at any time of his life, and, failing such appointment, to be divided equally amongst the survivors of them and the issue of such as may have predeceased leaving issue, such issue succeeding always only to the shares to which their parents would have been entitled had they been in life." The testator was survived by his wife and by four children. Held that the right to the sum of £8000 did not vest in the children until the death of the surviving spouse.

Blackburn's Trustees v Blackburn, 1896, 23 R. 698; 33 S.L.R. 505; 3 S.L.T. 331.

(38)

———"Predeceasing the period at which they would have been entitled to the benefit of the provision."

A testator directed his trustees to set apart the sum of £5000 and to hold the said sum for behoof of his sister, A, in liferent allenarly and for behoof of her children in fee, the provision to be payable to the children on the decease of their mother in the event of their having then attained the age of twenty-five years; but if not, then as soon after such decease as they should respectively attain that age. Between the period of A's decease and the arrival of the term of payment, power was conferred on the trustees to apply the income of a child's provisions towards the proper upbringing of such child. In the event of any of the children "predeceasing the period at which, had they survived, they would have been entitled to the benefit of the said provision," there was a destination over to their issue, and, failing issue, to the survivors and the issue of predeceasers. One child predeceased the mother after attaining twenty-five. Held that no part of the provision had vested in him.

Bogle's Trustees v Cochrane, 1892, 20 R. 108; 30 S.L.R. 128.

(39)

A testatrix directed her trustees to hold the residue of her estate for behoof of her grandniece, Janet, in liferent, "and in case the said Janet shall marry and have children, then the fee of the residue of my estate hereby provided to her shall belong to her lawful children"; she declared "that in the event of the said Janet . . . predeceasing me, or dying without lawful children, the whole residue hereby provided to her shall in any or either of these cases fall and belong to" Janet's sister and four brothers, nominatim, "equally" amongst them; and in the event of any of them dying without leaving lawful issue the share of the predeceaser should "go and be equally divided among the survivors," but should the predeceaser leave issue, "then such issue shall be entitled to succeed to their parent's share equally among them, in the same manner and as fully as if such parent had survived." Janet, her sister, and brothers, all survived the testator. Janet died unmarried. Held that until the death of the liferentrix no share of residue vested in her brothers or sister.

Cumming's Trustees v White, 1893, 20 R. 454; 30 S.L.R. 459.

(40)

A left half the residue of her estate to her niece B in liferent, directing that on B's death the fund was to be divided among her children in equal shares, one share to each daughter in liferent allenarly and her issue in fee, and one share to each son "and to the survivors of the said" children "at my decease, and the children of such as may have then predeceased leaving lawful issue." One of B's daughters survived A, but predeceased her mother without issue. The other children of B survived their mother. Held that the predeceaser's share fell to the surviving children of B.

Roper, 1871, 43 J. 546; 8 S.L.R. 639.

(41)

———Trustees exercising power to withhold payment of legacy.

Walker v Buchanan, 1905, 8 F. 201; 43 S.L.R. 176; 13 S.L.T. 568, No. 213, infra.

Russell v Bell's Trustees, 1897, 24 R. 666; 34 S.L.R. 497; 4 S.L.T. 338, No. 219, infra.

(42)

Division at completion of certain contracts.

A testator, who at the time of his death had certain contracts in course of execution, directed his trustees to carry them on, and on the completion of them to value and then "fix and determine, divide and apportion" his estate "among the whole of my children, or the survivors of them, or their issue—declaring that in case of any of my children having predeceased the period of apportionment leaving lawful issue, the issue of such predecessor or predecessors shall be entitled equally among them per stirpes" to their parents' share. Two sons having died without issue while the contracts were still uncompleted, held that no right under the settlement had vested in them.

Scott's Executor v Scott's Trustees, 1881, 18 S.L.R. 436.

(43)

Express reference to period of payment.

A testator directed his trustees twelve months after the death of the longest liver of himself and his wife to pay a share of his estate to the children of his son A, which share should not be paid to his grandchildren but should be invested by the trustees, and the annual income paid to A, his wife, and the survivor. On the death of the survivor the testator directed his trustees to divide the share among A's children. In the event of the decease of any grandchildren "before the period of payment of their shares" without issue, the shares were to be divided equally among their brothers and sisters, but if the predeceasers left issue, the issue were to take their parent's share. The testator died in 1863, his wife in March, 1871, his son A in October, 1871, and A's wife in 1904. A left children, some of whom predeceased their mother. Held that A's children did not take a vested interest until their mother's death in 1904.

Macfarlane's Trustees v Macfarlane, 1906, 8 F. 787; 43 S.L.R. 494; 13 S.L.T. 915.

(44)

Express reference to opening of succession.

A testator, after directing his trustees to pay the income of the residue of his estate to his widow, in the fifth place directed them, upon the death or second marriage of his wife, to divide the residue among nine persons named, "share and share alike, and the lawful issue of such of my said residuary legatees as may have predeceased leaving lawful issue" per stirpes—"And it is hereby provided and declared that in the event of any of my said residuary legatees or their issue being abroad or in this country and their addresses not being known to my trustees at the time of the succession opening to them, and not claiming their respective provisions under this deed within the period of one year from and after the death or second marriage of my said wife, whichever of these events shall first happen, or within one year from the date of my death in the event of my surviving my said wife, my trustees shall be entitled and shall pay after the lapse of said period such unclaimed shares of residue to and equally among my other residuary legatees and their lawful issue, such issue always taking per stirpes, and the share to which they may become entitled going equally among them, declaring that any forfeited share or shares (if any) of my residuary legatees shall be paid to his, her, or their issue, in preference to my other residuary legatees on the lapse of the period foresaid, provided such issue claim the same in same way as if their parent or parents were dead." The testator was survived by his wife and by all the residuary legatees named. Two of the residuary legatees named predeceased the widow, one leaving issue and the other without issue. Held that the fifth purpose, taken as a whole, was to be read as directing division of the residue among the residuary legatees named who survived the widow, and the issue per stirpes of such as predeceased her, and that vesting did not take place until the death of the widow.

Sword's Trustees v Main, 1902, 4 F. 1005; 39 S.L.R. 846; 10 S.L.T. 209.

(45)

Liferent to daughters—Fee to heirs of their bodies, whom failing, to surviving children of testator.

By a mutual settlement spouses directed their trustees to divide their estates on the death of the survivor among six of their children. They further directed that daughters' shares should be vested in trustees, and the annual produce paid to the daughters with fee to the heirs of their bodies. Failing heirs of the body of any daughter, her share was to belong to the before-named children "then surviving." I, a daughter, predeceased the surviving spouse without issue, and H, a son, predeceased I leaving a son who survived the longest liver of the spouses. Held that the son of H was not entitled to participate in the share which would have been liferented by I had she survived the testators.

v 40

Graham's Trustee v Graham, 1868, 6 M. 820; 40 J. 452; 5 S.L.R. 402.

(46)

Successive liferents—Vesting on expiry of first liferent.

A testator by his testamentary settlement bequeathed the residue of his estate on the death of a liferentrix to his children as a class, the shares of daughters to be held for their respective liferent alimentary uses and their issue in fee. In the event of the death of a daughter without issue, part of her share was to fall back into residue. A daughter survived the liferentrix, but died unmarried. The scheme of the settlement treated the residue as one fund. Held that the whole of the residue, including the daughter's share, vested at one and the same time, viz., at the death of the liferentrix.

Collins' Trustees v Collins, (O.H.) 1910, 2 S.L.T. 193.

2. VESTING AT MAJORITY OF BENEFICIARY.

(47)

Direction to divide on youngest child attaining majority—Power to make advances.

A testator directed his trustees to divide the revenue of his estate among his children in certain proportions, with power to make advances out of the share of each to meet the expense of his or her maintenance or education; and "so soon as the youngest child born or to be born" of his marriage "shall attain the age of twenty-one years complete, to divide the whole estate amongst the whole of the children born or to be born" of the marriage, "in the same proportions as is directed in regard to the revenue of my estate." The trustees were empowered to advance to any child a sum necessary and expedient to forward him in business, and it was declared that the child "of any of my said children deceasing shall have right to the share which would have fallen to the parent equally as if the parent had survived, but if there shall be no such issue, then the share of the party so deceasing shall be divided equally among his or her surviving brothers and sisters." One son attained majority, but died childless before the youngest of the testator's children attained majority. Held that no right to a share of the capital had vested in him.

Fyfe's Trustees v Fyfe, 1890, 17 R. 450; 27 S.L.R. 329.

(48)

Payment at first term after beneficiary attained twenty-five.

A father, in his settlement, made provisions for his son and daughter, the provision to the son being payable at the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas after the son attained twenty-five. The testator declared that if any of his children should predecease him, or die "before their provisions shall become payable," without issue, his whole estate should be conveyed to the survivors. Held that a son who survived his father, but died under twenty-five, had no vested right.

Walker's Trustees, 1870, 8 M. 870; 42 J. 509; 7 S.L.R. 541.

(49)

Direction to divide on death of widow, provided youngest child attained twenty-five—Power to make advances to children on their respectively attaining twenty-five, subject to payment of interest until period of division.

A testator directed his trustees to pay to his widow an annuity of £1300, subject to the burden of maintaining and educating the children of the marriage. In the event of the widow entering into a second marriage, her annuity was restricted to £200, and the trustees were directed to provide for the maintenance and education of the children; and on the death of his widow, the testator directed his trustees, provided his youngest child had attained the age of twenty-five, to divide the residue of his estate amongst his children equally, with power to the trustees to pay to any of his children, on their respectively attaining the age of twenty-five, a sum equal to one-third of their prospective shares, interest on the advances being payable by the children until the arrival of the period of division. In the event of his widow dying before the youngest child attained the age of twenty-five the testator empowered his trustees to pay any of his children who had attained that age their full shares of his estate. With regard to the balance of the yearly income of the trust estate, after providing for the widow's annuity of £1300, the trust directed that it should be accumulated and form part of the residue. The widow entered into a second marriage, and gave up all rights except to her restricted annuity of £200, and the trustees set apart a sum sufficient to secure to her payment thereof. In a special case, presented during the widow's life and when the three children of the marriage were under twenty-five years of age, held (1) that no share vested in a child of the marriage till the youngest child had reached the age of twenty-five; (2) that in the circumstances the survivance of the widow would not prevent vesting when the youngest child reached the age of twenty-five.

Ross's Trustees v Ross, 1902, 4 F. 840; 39 S.L.R. 678; 10 S.L.T. 163.

(50)

Direction to pay on death of annuitant and majority of beneficiary.

A testator directed his trustees, from the income of his trust estate, and if necessary from capital, to expend not less than £36 per annum on the maintenance of his widow, and upon her death, and upon the youngest of his children attaining twenty-one years of age, whichever of these events should last happen, to make an equal division of the residue among his children. In the event of the death of any children before the period of division, there was a destination over to issue, and failing issue, to survivors. The trustees were given power to make advances to the children before the period of division. The testator was survived by only one son, who attained majority, but died before his mother, leaving a widow but no issue. Held that the provision in favour of children lapsed on the son's death, nothing having vested in him under the trust settlement during his life.

Smith v Wighton's Trustees, 1874, 1 R. 358; 11 S.L.R. 177.

(51)

Survivorship clause applicable to event of death before or after liferenter—Payment on death of liferenter or children attaining twenty-five.

A testator by his trust settlement directed his trustees to pay the interest of £20,000 to his sister during her life, and upon her death to pay over the said interest, to the extent of £300 a year, to his sister's husband in the event of his surviving her. Further, upon the decease of his sister (but subject to the annuity of £300 provided to her husband) he directed his trustees "to hold and apply the said principal sum of £20,000 and the income" thereof for behoof of the children of his brother B, "procreated or to be procreated," in equal shares, "payable, the several children's shares, to the sons on their attaining twenty-five years of age." Power was given to the trustees to expend the children's shares of income and to advance part of their shares of capital during minority. In the event of the death of any of the children before or after the liferentrix there was a destination over to issue, and failing issue, to survivors. The testator's sister died in 1875, survived by her husband. At that time the testator's brother B was alive, and two of his children had attained the age of twenty-five. Held that no right vested in any child of B before the death of the liferentrix, or until his share became payable by his attaining the age of twenty-five; and that on that event the trustees were not entitled to withhold payment on the ground that other children might be born to B.

Buchanan's Trustees v Buchanan, 1877, 4 R. 754; 14 S.L.R. 503.

(52)

Direction after death of liferenter to pay on majority of beneficiary.

A testatrix, one of three sisters, conveyed her whole estate to her sisters, and the survivor in liferent. After bequeathing certain legacies, to be paid on the death of the last liferenter, she provided, with regard to the residue of her estate, thus, viz.:—"I hereby, after the death of the longest liver of me and my said sisters, appoint my said executors or trustees . . . to pay, assign, and dispose the same to and in favour of my nephews, Walter, Charles, and John M'Alpine, equally between them, share and share alike, and that on their respectively attaining the age of twenty-one years; and I hereby declare that if any one or more of my said nephews shall depart this life before he or they shall attain the age of twenty-one years, then the share or shares of him or them so dying shall go and accresce to the survivors or survivor, equally amongst them; providing, nevertheless, that if any of my said nephews so dying shall have left lawful issue, then such issue shall have right to the share or respective shares which their deceased parent or parents would have been entitled to." All the nephews attained twenty-one and survived the testatrix, but only one survived the last of the liferenters. Held that the shares of the residue vested in each nephew on his attaining the age of twenty-one.

M'Alpine, 1883, 10 R. 837; 20 S.L.R. 551.

(53)

A testator provided for his wife (who survived him) by giving her an annuity of £50, increased by a codicil to £100, and directed his trustees to give to his son, John, a liferent of one-fourth of the residue of his estate. The residue was to be divided amongst the other children of his present marriage equally amongst them, "their respective shares thereof being payable on their respectively attaining majority, but subject always to the said annuity to my wife, in regard to which I give my trustees full power to make all necessary arrangements in the event of her surviving all or any of the periods of majority of my said children, born or to be born." One of the sons, William, who had attained majority, died intestate, survived by his mother, his wife, and two children, having meantime assigned his interest in the trust estate for value. There was a declaration in the will to the effect that in case of any child dying and having lawful issue, such issue should be entitled to the parent's share. In a question between William's children and the parties to whom he had assigned for value, held that the conditional institution of survivors lapsed on William attaining majority, and that his share was consequently carried by the assignation.

Stirling's Trustees v Stirling, 1896, 34 S.L.R. 80; 4 S.L.T. 147.

(54)

Survivorship clauses referring to majority of beneficiary—Marriage contract provision payable to children on death of surviving spouse.

By antenuptial marriage contract the husband conveyed £5000 to trustees as an alimentary fund for behoof of the family establishment, with power to them to pay the income to either spouse or the survivor; "and upon the death . . . of the said survivor the principal sum . . . shall belong and be made over" to the children of the marriage equally. It was provided that, in the event of the predecease of any of the children before majority, their share should belong to their issue, and failing issue, should accresce to their surviving brothers and sisters. "In the event of the failure of issue" of the marriage, the £5000 was to be at the disposal of the spouses. The provisions in favour of the children were declared to be in full of their legal rights. Held that a share of the fund vested in a child who survived the dissolution of the marriage and attained majority, but predeceased the survivor of the spouses.

Boyd's Trustees v Boyd, 1905, 7 F. 576; 42 S.L.R. 435; 12 S.L.T. 798.

(55)

Certain property was conveyed to trustees to be held by them for behoof of two spouses, and the survivor in liferent allenarly, and with a direction that "after the death of the longest liver" the "trustees shall hold the trust estate for behoof of the whole children," in equal shares, payable at majority or marriage, the share of any child predeceasing the respective terms of payment without issue to accresce to the survivors. The deed further provided that in case there should be no children alive at the death of the husband, the trustees should, on the death of the longest liver of the spouses, make over the estate to such persons as might be named by him, or to his heirs and executors whomsoever. The only issue of the marriage was a posthumous son, who predeceased his mother. Held that the fee had not vested in him.

Melrose v Melrose's Trustees, 1869, 7 M. 1050; 41 J. 593; 6 S.L.R. 679.

(56)

Destination over if legatee die before majority or survive that event and die before receiving payment without testing.

Cairns v Cairns' Trustees, 1901, 3 F. 545; 38 S.L.R. 364; 8 S.L.T. 474, No. 266, infra.

(57)

Payment at majority of share so far as not required to provide for annuity.

Stewart's Trustee v Stewart, 1875, 13 S.L.R. 5, No. 174, infra.

3. VESTING A MORTE TESTATORIS.

(58)

Direction to pay to A, B, and C and survivors—Destination over if A, B, and C all predeceased testator.

A testator, by his settlement, directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate for payment of the revenue thereof to his widow, and on her death or re-marriage, to pay the residue to A, B, and C, the three children of his brother, "and the survivors and survivor of them, equally between them, share and share alike; and should the said three children all predecease me, then I direct my trustees to pay the said residue to the Reverend the Presbytery of Edinburgh." Held that the words of survivorship referred not to the period of division, but to the death of the testator, and that a share of the residue then vested in each of the three children.

Webster's Trustees v Neil, 1900, 2 F. 695;
37 S.L.R. 493.

(59)

Gift on expiry of liferent to surviving children and issue of those "predeceasing me."

A testator directed his trustees to pay to his widow an annuity out of the free income of his estate and to divide any surplus of the income amongst his whole children, and on the widow's death to realise the whole estate and divide it "among my five children and the survivors or survivor of them equally among them and share and share alike, . . . and in the event of my children predeceasing me and leaving issue, the share of such deceased child or children shall go to such issue." Held that vesting took place a morte testatoris.

Cathcart's Trustee v Ewart, (O.H.) 1902,
10 S.L.T. 101.

(60)

Survivance of period of division—Death of annuitant who predeceased testator.

By a testamentary settlement trustees were directed, on the death of two annuitants (who predeceased the testator), to hold a share of residue "for behoof of" J H and his family, as follows, viz.:—For payment of the interest of said share to said J H to the extent of one-half thereof, and the interest of the other half thereof to his children, and if the said J H and his children "stand in need thereof" the trustees were directed "to expend the capital of said share for and in behalf of the said J H and his said children in such proportions as they may think proper." The settlement further declared that, in the event of J H "dying before the division of the residue," the share which he would have been entitled to if alive was to go to his issue, but, failing issue, then to the survivors of the beneficiaries equally. There was no further disposal of the share. Held that the power to advance capital was a power to advance to the extent of one-half only to J H, and to the extent of the other half to the children, and that there was a gift of the fee of the share to the extent of one-half to J H, and, as regards the other half, to the children, which vested a morte testatoris.

Gillies' Trustees v Hodge, 1900, 3 F. 238;
38 S.L.R. 150; 8 S.L.T. 320.

(61)

No gift till period of distribution—Special direction regarding one beneficiary.

A testator directed his trustees on the expiry of a liferent to divide the fee of the residue of his estate equally among his whole surviving nephews and nieces, "declaring that in the event of my brother surviving me and having no children he also shall have an equal share with my said surviving nephews and nieces." Held that vesting took place a morte testatoris, because, as the brother was made a member of the class benefited, and it was expressly provided that survivance in his case should mean survivance of the testator, the survivance applicable to the class generally was survivance in the same sense.

Duncan's Trustees v Kennedy, (O.H.)
1897, 4 S.L.T. 358.

(62)

Gift on death of liferenter to "my surviving children."

A testator, dealing with the residue of his estate after providing for certain legacies and provisions, provided as follows:—"The portions of all my children in case of marrying to vest in them as annuity for life, and in case of issue at the death of their parents to be the property of such issue to one all, or more than one, share and share alike; but if no issue, the entire portion to revert back to my estate and become the property of my surviving children, share and share alike." Held that a share reverting back to the estate fell to the children of the testator surviving at his death, and not to the children of the testator surviving at the death of the liferenter.

Watson's Trustees v Watson, (O.H.) 1902,
10 S.L.T. 388.

(63)

Gift to A and B—Gift over to survivor on predecease of either without issue.

By mutual disposition and settlement two sisters disposed their whole estates to each other and the longest liver, and on the death of the longest liver to their nieces H and M, declaring that the survivor of their nieces should succeed to the share of her sister predeceasing without issue. M died before the last survivor of the granters, leaving a daughter, who survived both granters. Held that the survivorship clause did not take effect, M not having predeceased without issue.

Main v Lamb, 1880, 7 R. 688.

(64)

Gift to issue "then" surviving—Postponed payment.

By an assignation in trust made in contemplation of marriage the wife conveyed her estate to trustees in trust (1) for herself in liferent; (2) after her death, if there was no issue of the marriage, for the husband in liferent, so long as he remained unmarried; (3) for behoof of the issue, if any, of the marriage then surviving, and the issue per stirpes of predeceasers, payable at majority or marriage, whichever of these events should first happen, after the decease of the surviving spouse if the wife should survive, but after the death or second marriage of the husband if he should survive. The wife died survived by the husband and by two children who were both major. Held that the fee vested in the children on the wife's death.

Bate's Trustees v Bate, 1906, 8 F. 861; 43 S.L.R. 660; 14 S.L.T. 95.

(65)

Survivorship clause expressly referred to date of vesting—Legacy payable on death of liferenter—Destination over referred to testator's death.

A testatrix directed her trustees to hold certain funds for the liferent alimentary use of her husband, and after his death for behoof of four persons named, including A, "in absolute fee and property." In the event of any of the persons named "dying before the vesting" of the provisions in their favour there was a destination over to their children, and failing children, to the survivors and the issue of predeceasers. In the event of A "not having more than three children at the date of my death," one-half of his provision was to belong to another of the persons "and his issue, in like manner as the provisions hereinbefore provided to him." A survived the testatrix and had more than three children at her death. He predeceased the liferenter. Held that the clause of survivorship referred to the death of the testatrix and that one-fourth of the residue vested in A a morte testatoris.

Alston's Trustees v Alston, 1902, 4 F. 654; 39 S.L.R. 438; 9 S.L.T. 512.

(66)

Payment at first term occurring after testator's death, or so soon thereafter from time to time as estate realised—Survivorship clause referable to testator's death.

A testator directed his trustees "at the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas making twelve months after my death, or as soon thereafter from time to time as the same may be realised" to pay the residue of his estate to his four children and their heirs and assignees. There was a destination over to issue "in the event of any of my said children dying leaving lawful issue," and a destination over to survivors and the issue of predeceasers "should any of my children die without being married or leaving lawful issue." Held, on a construction of the whole terms of the will, that the clause of survivorship was referable to the date of the testator's death, and that the children took a vested interest at that date.

Wood v Neill's Trustees, 1897, 24 R. 105; 34 S.L.R. 107; 4 S.L.T. 138.

(67)

Trustees empowered to postpone division of estate.

Maclean's Trustees v Maclean, 1897, 24 R. 988; 34 S.L.R. 746; 5 S.L.T. 81, No. 205, infra.

Henderson's Trustees v Henderson, 1876, 3 R. 320; 13 S.L.R. 181, No. 206, infra.

4. VESTING IN LAST SURVIVOR.

[See IX. 2, infra.]

5. CONSTRUCTION—WHETHER "SURVIVORS" EQUIVALENT TO "OTHERS."

[See SUCCESSION IX. 8 (1) (i).]

III. EFFECT OF DESTINATION OVER.

1. GENERALLY.

(68)

Gift over in event of institute predeceasing liferenter—Institute predeceasing both testator and liferenter.

A testator directed his trustees to pay the income of the residue of his estate to his sister during her life, and at her death to pay £6000 to each of his nephews whom he named. The deed then provided that "if any of my said nephews . . . die before my sister" leaving issue, the issue should take the parent's share, "and if any of my said nephews . . . die without issue, the share of such deceiver or deceasers shall fall to their surviving brothers and sisters, equally among them . . . the issue of any deceased brother or sister taking the share which would have fallen to their parent." H M, one of the nephews, predeceased the testator without issue, but survived by brothers and a sister, and by the liferentrix. In a special case it was maintained that the destination over took effect only in the event of a nephew surviving the testator but predeceasing the liferenter without issue. Held that the surviving brothers and the issue of a predeceasing brother of H M were entitled as conditional institutes to equal shares of the £6000 bequeathed to him.

Earl of Dalhousie's Trustees v Young, 1889, 16 R. 681; 26 S.L.R. 525.

(69)

Destination over in case institute die without issue.

A testatrix, by her holograph will, bequeathed a sum of £8000 to a nephew, "his heirs, executors and administrators absolutely, provided always that in case my nephew shall die without issue I appoint the said sum of £8000" to be paid to certain charities. Held that the charities were conditional institutes in the event of the nephew predeceasing the testator without issue.

Crumpton's Judicial Factor v Barnardo's Homes, 1917 S.C. 713; 54 S.L.R. 596; 1917, 2 S.L.T. 100.

(70)

Destination over failing liferenter and her issue—Gift of liferent on attaining twenty-one.

A testator directed his trustees to convey the liferent of the residue of his estate to his daughter J S for her liferent use alienably when she should attain the age of twenty-one, and to the heirs of her body in fee. The deed proceeded—"And failing my said daughter . . . and the issue of her body . . . I direct my trustees to convey the fee of the residue" to trustees for charitable purposes. Held that the trustees for the charities were conditional institutes who were entitled to take only in the event of J S dying in minority and without issue.

Simpson's Trustees v Simpson, 1889, 17 R. 243; 27 S.L.R. 175.

(71)

Gift over in the event of beneficiary predeceasing the testator—Direction to hold for behoof of beneficiary in liferent and issue in fee—Beneficiary surviving testator but dying without issue.

A testator, in disposing of the residue of his estate, directed his trustees "to hold and apply, pay and convey the same as follows, viz.:—one-fifth thereof to be paid and conveyed to my son . . . one-fifth thereof to be held and applied for behoof of the children of my daughter, the deceased Mrs. C . . . and the remaining one-fifth to and for behoof of my daughter E—the shares effeiring to the children of my daughter, the deceased Mrs. C . . . and to my said daughter E to be held for their behoof in liferent for their liferent use only and for behoof of their respective children and the survivors and survivor, equally among them in fee—payable and to be conveyed to them on their respectively attaining the age of twenty-five, and on the death of their parent." In the event of his daughter E, or any of the foresaid grandchildren, "predeceasing me without leaving issue," or of such issue not surviving to take under the destination, he directed, with regard to E, that the sum destined to her in liferent and her issue in fee should fall and accresce to the other residuary legatees, and, with regard to any grandchild, that the share destined to him or her should fall and accresce to his or her surviving brothers and sisters. The testator further empowered his trustees, in certain events, to pay and convey to E, or to any of the grandchildren, such portions of the share of residue provided for his or her liferent, not exceeding in all one-half, as the trustees should think fit. The daughter, E, and a grandson, a child of Mrs. C, survived the testator and died without issue. The grandson was survived by two brothers. Held (1) that neither the daughter nor the grandson had a vested right of fee in the shares of residue liferented by them respectively; (2) that, as they had not predeceased the testator, the clause of accretion was inoperative with regard to their shares; (3) that the share liferented by the daughter had fallen into intestacy; but (4) that the terms of the gift to the children of Mrs. C imported a joint bequest of liferent, and, accordingly, that the share liferented by the grandson fell to be held by the trustees for the life-rent use of his surviving brothers.

Smith's Trustees v Clark, 1920 S.C. 161; 57 S.L.R. 196; 1920, 1 S.L.T. 88.

(72)

Destination over to certain parties along with issue of others—Existence of issue not a condition.

A testator directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate and to divide the annual proceeds among three of his five children—Robert, Margaret, and Agnes, and on the death of the longest liver of the liferenters to convey the residue in equal portions among their children respectively. In the event of the death of any of the liferenters without issue, the testator provided that "my . . . son John . . . and my . . . daughter Susan . . . or in the event of their death leaving lawful issue their said issue shall be entitled to an equal share along with the issue of my other children . . . per stirpes" of the share liferented by the child deceasing without issue. John left a son who predeceased the last survivor of the liferenters; Robert, Agnes, and Susan left issue who survived the last survivor of the liferenters. Held that the issue surviving the last survivor of the liferenters were entitled to the share liferented by Margaret, in respect that the destination over in their favour was not contingent on both John and Susan leaving issue to share it with them.

Corbett's Trustees v Pollock, 1901, 3 F. 963; 38 S.L.R. 723; 9 S.L.T. 105.

(73)

Casus improvisus.

A and B, two brothers, pro indiviso proprietors of heritable subjects, executed a disposition, bearing to be granted for "certain good and onerous" causes, by which they conveyed the subjects to trustees, to be held by them for behoof of certain liferenters, and for the six children nominatim of A in fee. There was, further, a declaration that, in the event of any more children being born to A, "and in the event of me, B, becoming married and leaving issue," then the trustees were to convey to the six children of A, and to any children that might subsequently be born to him, one-half of the subjects disposed in fee, and the other half to B's children; "but in the event of there being no such issue of us, A and B, this declaration at our deaths, eo ipso, becomes void and null, and the said trustees shall make over to the said" six children of A, nominatim, "the absolute fee of the whole subjects after disposed." A subsequently entered into a second marriage, and by it had one child, but B died unmarried and without issue. Held that the child of A's second marriage was entitled to share with his surviving half-brothers and sister in the half of the estate which had belonged to his father, though according to the literal interpretation of the deed he was only entitled to participate therein in the event of B marrying and having children.

Dunlop v M'Crae, 1884, 11 R. 1104; 21 S.L.R. 752.

(74)

A testator directed his trustees to divide the income of his heritage between his two sons; and in the event of one of his sons dying leaving issue, to sell the half and hold the proceeds for behoof of his issue equally; and in the event of the survivor dying leaving issue, to sell the remaining half, and hold the proceeds for behoof of his issue; in the event of the first deceiver dying without issue, to apply his share for the use of the survivor or his issue equally; and in the event of both dying without issue to divide the property among charities. He did not expressly provide for the event which happened of the predeceasing son leaving issue and the survivor dying without issue. Held that there was no intestacy, that the charities took only on the failure of both sons without issue, and that the children of the predeceasing son were entitled to the whole estate.

Aberdein's Trustees v Aberdein, 1870, 8 M. 750; 42 J. 387; 7 S.L.R. 433.

(75)

Liferent to widow with power of appointment—Direction to make over fee to certain persons and survivors.

A truster directed his trustees to pay the free yearly interest of the residue of his estate to his widow, and on her death to make over the fee to his two sisters and three nephews, and the heirs of their bodies, in such proportions as his widow should appoint, and failing such appointment, to the beneficiaries equally, the share of any nephew dying without issue, or of either sister who should die without settling the same, or should predecease the testator, to be divided equally among the survivors and their issue. One of the sisters survived the testator but predeceased the widow, leaving a settlement of, inter alia, her share of the fee of her brother's estate. Held (1) that the fee did not vest till the death of the testator's widow; and (2) that the terms of the trust deed did not authorise the testator's sister to settle her share of the fee until it had vested.

Smith's Trustees v Graham, 1873, 11 M. 630; 45 J. 399; 10 S.L.R. 426.

(76)

Effect of residue clause—Legacies.

A testator, under the sixth purpose of his testament, bequeathed to his brothers Thomas and Alexander "the sum of £500 sterling each, payable at the first term . . . after the decease of my said spouse." By the residue clause he appointed the residue, including "any legacy that may have lapsed by the legatees predeceasing her, to be equally divided," &c. The legacies of £500 to his brothers Thomas and Alexander, who had survived the testator, but predeceased his widow, were the only legacies under the testament to which the above reference to lapse could apply. Held that the legacies of £500 to the testator's brothers Thomas and Alexander vested in them a morte testatoris, in terms of the sixth purpose of the testament, and that the direction as to lapsed legacies in the residue clause did not suspend vesting, but only provided for the possibility of lapse by reason of there being no one to take.

Yeats v Paton, 1880, 8 R. 171; 18 S.L.R. 116.

2. NO GIFT APART FROM DIRECTION TO PAY AT POSTPONED DATE.

(77)

Direction to pay on death of liferenter—No other words of gift.

A testator directed his trustees to pay to his wife a liferent of his whole estate, so long as she remained a widow, and "within twelve months after the death of the longest liver of my said wife and me, or as soon thereafter as conveniently may be," to convey certain heritable subjects to his wife's nephew, "A, and the heirs of his body, whom failing, to B," A's brother, "whom failing," &c. A predeceased the testator's widow, who had not married again. Held that as the deed conferred no right upon A, apart from the direction to convey to him, no right vested in him prior to the date when the conveyance fell to be made.

Bryson's Trustees v Clark, 1880, 8 R. 142; 18 S.L.R. 103.

(78)

Destination of heritage—Direction to convey on death of liferentrix to B, whom failing, to the heirs of his body, whom failing to testator's heirs-male.

A testator directed his trustees to hold heritage for his widow in liferent, and on her death to convey it to G B, "whom failing, to the heirs of his body, whom failing, to my own heirs-male and the heirs of their body, whom failing, to my own nearest heirs whomsoever, excluding heirs-portioners." When the testator died G B was his heir-male, but he predeceased the widow without issue. In a special case presented after the death of the testator's widow, held that the testator's heir-male was to be ascertained at the death of the testator's widow (1) because, there being no words of gift except the direction to convey on that event to the institute, whom failing, to the heirs, vesting was postponed till that event; and (2) (per Lord President Dunedin and Lord Kinnear) because the trustees were bound to insert in their deed of conveyance the destination in the trust disposition and settlement, and a destination of heritage in such terms meant that the heir called on the failure of the institute was to be ascertained at the opening of the succession.

Baillie's Trustees v Whiting, 1910 S.C. 891; 47 S.L.R. 684; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 23.

(79)

Payment at first term following death of liferentrix—Legatee surviving liferentrix, but marrying and having no issue alive at her death.

A testator by trust disposition and settlement directed his trustees to give to his wife the liferent of his whole estates, and then directed them, as soon as convenient after her death, to convey a specific heritable property to his daughter M, "but in the event of her marrying and having no issue alive at the time of her death, the same shall revert to and belong to my surviving children, share and share alike." The testator was survived by his wife, by his daughter M, and by other children. Held that no fee vested in M at the testator's death.

Groat v Stewart's Trustees, 1894, 21 R. 961; 31 S.L.R. 797; 2 S.L.T. 135.

(80)

A testator directed his trustees to invest in their names one-third of the residue of his estate, and to pay the interest to his daughter, A B, during her life for her aliment and support. The deed then proceeded—"Upon the death of the said A B, I appoint the said third part of said residue" to be divided among A B's children, declaring that it should be payable to each as they respectively attained majority. In the event of a child dying before receiving payment of his or her share leaving lawful children, such children were to succeed to the share, and if a child should die before receiving his or her share, but leaving no lawful children, such child's share was to be equally divided among the surviving children and the lawful children of other predeceasing children. Held that no right vested in the children until the death of their mother.

Forbes v M'Condach's Trustees, 1890, 18 R. 230; 28 S.L.R. 188.

(81)

Direction to divide at death of annuitant "and not earlier."

A testator, after directing payment of two annuities, and providing a liferent of the remainder of his estate to his wife if she survived him, directed his trustees that the residue of his estate should, upon the death of his wife, or upon the death of the longest liver of the two annuitants "whichever of these events shall last happen, but not earlier, be divided equally, share and share alike, among" certain beneficiaries. The testator's wife predeceased him. Held that the residue did not vest till the death of the last survivor of the annuitants.

Sloane v Finlayson, 1876, 3 R. 678; 13 S.L.R. 448.

(82)

A testator by trust disposition and settlement directed his trustees to pay an annuity to his wife, and the whole residue of income to his son, with power to the son to test upon the fee of the estate. If the son predeceased his mother, the whole income of the estate was to be paid to her during her life. On the death of the wife the trustees were to convey the whole estate to the son, if then alive, and if dead to his issue, if he left any. Failing issue of the son, the estate was to be conveyed to such persons as the son might direct by any writing under his hand, and failing such direction to certain persons named in the trust deed. Held that vesting did not take place till the death of the widow.

Young's Trustees, 1877, 14 S.L.R. 235.

3. CONDITIONS OF VESTING IN INSTITUTE AND IN CONDITIONAL INSTITUTE RESPECTIVELY.

(83)

Destination, with vesting postponed, to institute, whom failing, to issue—Failure of institute before period of vesting—Date of vesting in issue.

A testator directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate for behoof of his children equally, to vest in and be payable to them at the age of thirty, and not sooner, the issue of any who might predecease that age being entitled to their parent's share. A son died at the age of twenty-eight, leaving issue. Held that the son's share vested in his issue at his death.

Cattanach's Trustees v Cattanach, 1901, 4 F. 205; 39 S.L.R. 154; 9 S.L.T. 284.

(84)

Gift subject to contingency—Issue to take predeceasing parent's share—Whether gift-over subject to contingency—Independent or substitutional bequest.

Under a trust disposition and settlement trustees were directed, on the death of the last of three liferentices, "to divide the whole estates and effects hereby conveyed, and to pay the free proceeds thereof among and to the whole of my sons and daughters that may then be in life, share and share alike, and failing any of them by death, to any child or children they may have respectively left, also in equal portions." All the testator's children predeceased the last liferentrix, three of them leaving issue, some of whom also predeceased the last liferentrix. Held that the gift to the testator's grandchildren vested in them on their survival of their parents, and was not contingent on their being alive at the death of the last liferentrix.

Campbell's Trustee v Dick, 1915 S.C. 100; 52 S.L.R. 78; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 326.

(85)

A testator's trust disposition and settlement conveyed his estate to trustees for behoof of his widow in liferent and certain persons named in fee, share and share alike, "the provisions of any of them dying and leaving lawful issue to be divided equally among his or her issue." Held that the share of any heir who predeceased the life-renter vested in his or her issue alive at his or her death whether or not such issue predeceased the life-renter.

Davidson's Trustees v Davidson, (O.H.) 1909, 2 S.L.T. 20.

(86)

A testator by his trust disposition and settlement directed his trustees, on the death or second marriage of his widow, to pay the residue to such of the children as had arrived at the age of twenty-one, or as they respectively reached that age, declaring that the issue of children dying leaving issue should be entitled "to the shares, original and accruing, which their parent would have taken by survivorship," and that the share of any child dying without leaving issue should be divided among the surviving children and the issue of such children as might have died leaving issue, equally per stirpes. A, a son of the testator, survived the testator, but predeceased the widow, leaving a pupil child, B. It was found that no right had vested in A. Held that the share destined to A did not vest in B on the death of her father, the issue of children predeceasing the period of payment being substituted to their parent and being subject to the contingencies as regarded survivorship which qualified his right; and that vesting in B was postponed until the death or second marriage of the widow, but not until B attained twenty-one.

Banks' Trustees v Banks' Trustees, 1907 S.C. 125; 44 S.L.R. 121; 14 S.L.T. 471.

(87)

A testator directed his trustees to hold a share of the residue of his estate for his eldest son in life-rent and his issue, if any, in fee, declaring that, in the event of the death of that son without issue, the capital of his share should fall and belong to the testator's two other sons and his three daughters "equally among them, and the survivors and survivor of them, the issue of any of them predeceasing being entitled equally among them, if more than one, to their deceased parents' share." The life-renter died without issue predeceased by two of his sisters, who, however, left issue, some of whom, though surviving their parent, predeceased the life-renter. Held that, as the issue were called in place of their deceased parents and not as original legatees, the gift to them was subject to the same conditions as the gift to their parents; and accordingly that no vesting had taken place in the issue who predeceased the life-renter.

Addie's Trustees v Jackson, 1913 S.C. 681; 50 S.L.R. 586; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 394.

(88)

A testatrix directed her trustees to invest a certain fund for a son in life-rent, and on his death to pay and divide the fund among her four other sons and the survivors or survivor of them equally, share and share alike, "declaring always that the children of a predeceasing parent shall in every such case take equally amongst them the share which would have fallen to his father had he been in life at the time." The life-renter survived his brothers. Three of the brothers left issue. Some of the issue, though surviving their parent, predeceased the life-renter. Held that the gift to the children of predeceasing sons was not an original and independent gift, but was a substitutional gift and was subject to the condition as to survivorship which affected the gift to their parents; and, accordingly, that no vesting had taken place in grandchildren of the testatrix who had predeceased the life-renter.

Todd's Trustees v Todd's Executrix, 1922 S.C. 1; 59 S.L.R. 2; 1921, 2 S.L.T. 235.

(89)

Institute predeceasing testator.

A testatrix directed her trustees to hold the residue of her estate for her children, the issue of a predeceasing child being entitled to the interest which such child would have taken had it survived, "and to retain the capital in their own hands under the trust hereby constituted until they can pay it over to trustees under a marriage contract, or otherwise, appointed by my children respectively, under trust which shall prescribe that the said income and produce shall be alimentary for my said children and the capital provided to their issue." The testatrix left three daughters. One of them predeceased her, leaving a son and daughter, who were in pupilarity. Held that the share which would have belonged to the predeceasing daughter if she had survived vested in her children at the death of the testatrix.

Murray's Trustees v Bloxson's Trustees, 1887, 15 R. 233; 25 S.L.R. 191.

(90)

Gift on expiry of life-rent to A and on re-marriage or death of A to B—A predeceasing life-renter—Date of vesting in B.

A testatrix by her trust settlement directed her trustees, on the expiry of certain life-rents, to divide one-half of the residue of her estate between her brother's present children, one of whom was a widow, and destined over the widow's share to her daughter in the event of the widow's re-marriage or decease before payment. The widow survived the testatrix but predeceased the last of the life-renters. Held that a share of the residue vested in the daughter on the death of the widow.

Fraser's Trustees v Fraser, (O.H.) 1913, 1 S.L.T. 254.

(91)

Right of child taking under condition—Vesting postponed until time when parent could have taken.

Dixon's Trustees v Duneher, 1918 S.C. 60; 55 S.L.R. 131; 1917, 2 S.L.T. 243. SUCCESSION, No. 1062.

4. DESTINATION OVER TO HEIRS.

(92)

Opinions (per Lord Watson and Lord Davey) that there is no reason why a different construction as regards the time of vesting should apply to a direction to trustees to pay to A, whom failing to his heirs, and a direction to pay to A, whom failing to B.

Bowman v Bowman, 1899, 1 F. (H.L.) 69; [1899] A.C. 518; 36 S.L.R. 959; 7 S.L.T. 159.

(93)

Destination, on expiry of liferent, to a person named "or his heirs in heritage."

A testator, who died survived by his wife, directed his trustees to hold his dwelling-house, the furniture therein, and a sum of £3000, for his wife in liferent, and on the death of the survivor of himself and his wife to convey the house and furniture, and to pay the sum of £3000, to his cousin, A B, "or his heirs in heritage." A B survived the testator, but predeceased the widow. He was survived by his eldest son, who also predeceased the widow without leaving issue. A B's second son survived the widow. Held (by the whole Court) that the destination to the heirs in heritage of A B was a conditional institution which suspended vesting until the death of the testator's widow.

Wylie's Trustees v Bruce, 1919 S.C. 211; 56 S.L.R. 156; 1919, 1 S.L.T. 41.

(94)

Destination to A and his heirs and/or assignees.

Question, whether a destination over to heirs or assignees is suspensive of vesting.

Thompson's Trustees v Jamieson, 1900, 2 F. 470; 37 S.L.R. 346; 7 S.L.T. 340.

(95)

A testator directed his trustees, on the death or second marriage of his widow, and in certain events to dispose a house to his son "and his heirs and assignees." Held that notwithstanding the use of the word "and" and the introduction of assignees the destination was a conditional institution suspending vesting.

Montgomerie-Fleming's Trustees v Carre, 1922 S.C. 688; 59 S.L.R. 492; 1922 S.L.T. 520.

(96)

Held that a destination in favour of a liferenter . . . and to A, B, C, and D "and their heirs and assignees" in fee postponed vesting till the death of the liferenter.

Corstorphine's Trustees v Corstorphine, (O.H.) 1903, 11 S.L.T. 294.

(97)

A testator directed his trustees to hold a sum of money for behoof of W C in liferent only, and for behoof of his issue, whom failing J C and his heirs in fee. J C having survived the testator but predeceased the liferenter, held that the destination over to J C's heirs had the effect of postponing vesting until the death of the liferenter, when the legacy vested in the heirs in mobilibus of J C ascertained as at that date.

Anderson v Cunningham's Trustees, (O.H.) 1906, 14 S.L.T. 588.

(98)

Gift to A B or his heirs at law.

A testator directed his trustees, after the death of his wife, on whom he conferred a liferent of his whole estate, to pay and convey his estate to R C "or to his heirs at law." Held that vesting was postponed until the death of the liferentrix notwithstanding the terms of a codicil which provided for a different destination of the estate in the event of R C predeceasing the testator.

Cordiner v Duffus, (O.H.) 1909, 2 S.L.T. 164.

(99)

Held that a direction to trustees to pay a share of the trust estate on the expiry of a liferent to each of A and B or their heirs postponed vesting until expiry of the liferent.

Highet's Judicial Factor v Hamilton, (O.H.) 1912, 1 S.L.T. 474.

(100)

Gift to two nieces and their respective heirs.

A testator directed his trustees after the death of the survivor of himself and his sister M, to whom he gave the liferent of his whole estate, to convey to his nieces A and B "equally between them, and their respective heirs" a certain heritable property. A survived the testator but predeceased M. Held that the gift over to heirs must be treated as a proper conditional institution, with the result that A took no vested right in the property.

Hendry's Trustees v Patrick, (O.H.) 1905, 13 S.L.T. 503.

(101)

To persons named with conditional institution of their heirs in heritage and executors in moveables.

Two spouses conveyed to trustees the estates which should belong to them "respectively" at their deaths, (3) in order that the trustees should pay the income to the survivor, and "(7) in order that the trustees may and shall, at the death of the longest liver" of the spouses, convey certain property, heritable and moveable, to A, B, and C, "their heirs and assignees," providing that if any of the said A, B, or C should have predeceased, their heirs should be entitled to take their share of the heritage, and their executors their share of the moveables. Held (1) that the legacies did not vest till the death of the survivor of the spouses.

Stodart's Trustees, 1870, 8 M. 667; 42 J. 330.

(102)

Destination over to heirs of institute, whom failing to heir of testator.

By his trust disposition and settlement a testator directed his trustees to convey certain lands at the first term occurring not less than six months after his decease to "his son and the heirs-male of his body, whom failing to my own heirs-female." The son having died before the appointed date of conveyance, held that whatever might be the effect of the destination over to the son's heirs, the destination over to the testator's heirs-female was a proper destination over, which had the effect of postponing vesting in the son until the date of conveyance.

Bell's Trustees v Bell, (O.H.) 1916, 2 S.L.T. 250.

(103)

Specialties held to displace general rule.

Terms of a trust settlement where trustees were directed, after the death of the testator's widow, to divide the estate "equally among my whole children and their respective heirs, share and share alike, as they respectively attain the age of twenty-one years complete," under which held that vesting took place a morte testatoris.

Cairns v Cairns' Trustees, (O.H.) 1902, 10 S.L.T. 364.

(104)

Destination to "A" and his heirs.

Hay's Trustees v Hay, 1890, 17 R. 961; 27 S.L.R. 771.

(105)

Destination to A "and her heirs and successors" — Destination to A "and her heirs and representatives."

A testator by his trust disposition and settlement conveyed his whole estate to trustees, and directed them to pay to his wife during her lifetime the whole income thereof, and, on her death, inter alia (1) to convey a certain heritable subject to his daughter "and her heirs and successors whomsoever," and (2) to pay to the daughter "and her heirs and representatives" a sum of £300. The daughter survived the testator but predeceased the liferentrix. Held that both bequests vested in the daughter a morte testatoris.

Marshall's Trustee v Campbell, 1914 S.C. 443; 51 S.L.R. 397; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 266.

(106)

Payment "not sooner" than expiry of a lease.

A trustee directed that his trustees should, on the expiry of a certain lease, "in or about the year 1892 as I think, or whenever that may be, but not sooner, pay and convey" the residue of his estate to certain nephews and nieces and their heirs, equally among them, share and share alike. Held that the residue had vested a morte testatoris.

Archibald's Trustees v Archibald, 1882, 9 R. 942; 19 S.L.R. 709.

5. DESTINATION OVER TO ISSUE.

(1) VESTING IN INSTITUTE SUBJECT TO DEFEASANCE.

[See VIII. 3, infra.]

(2) VESTING POSTPONED.

(107)

Direction to trustees to pay at postponed period.

A testator directed his trustees to pay the free income of the trust estate to his widow, and after her death or second marriage to "pay to or apply for behoof of my children until the youngest attain the age of twenty-one years complete the free income of my said estates." The testator further directed his trustees—"So soon as convenient after my youngest child attains the age of twenty-one years complete, and after the interest of my said spouse has ceased by her decease or having entered into another marriage, my said trustees shall either convey or pay over the whole of the free residue of my estates to my children equally, the issue of any child who may have predeceased leaving issue coming in place of and taking the share which would have been taken by the predeceasing parent if in life." Held that vesting of the residue was postponed until the youngest child attained twenty-one years of age.

Adams' Trustees v Carrick, 1896, 23 R. 828; 33 S.L.R. 620; 4 S.L.T. 49.

(108)

By his trust settlement and codicil a testator provided that on the death of his son David his estate should be divided and paid to and among his daughter and two other sons equally, share and share alike, "declaring always that the issue of any of them predeceasing the period of payment to be entitled equally to the share which would have fallen to their parent." Held that vesting was suspended by the conditional institution of issue until the date of payment.

Parlane's Trustees v Parlane, 1902, 4 F. 805; 39 S.L.R. 632; 10 S.L.T. 48.

(109)

General rule — Substitution of issue to parents is prima facie suspensive of vesting.

A mutual trust disposition and settlement executed by husband and wife provided for payment, on the death of the survivor, of the interest of £1000 to each of three of the wife's sisters, and on the death of each of the sisters, or on the death of the survivor of the spouses, if any of the sisters predeceased the spouses, for payment of the fee of the three several principal sums among the children of the three sisters and of a deceased sister, in such proportions, at such times, and under such conditions as the wife, without the concurrence of her husband, might appoint, and, failing appointment, equally among them, "the issue of such of the said children as shall predecease the foresaid respective terms of payment being entitled to the share which would have fallen to their predeceasing parent." Held that vesting in the children of the sisters was suspended—by the conditional institution of their issue—until the term of payment.

Forrest's Trustees v Mitchell's Trustees, 1904, 6 F. 616; 41 S.L.R. 421; 11 S.L.T. 820.

(110)

Terms of a will on which held that the conditional institution of the children of beneficiaries predeceasing was referable to the time of payment, and had the effect of postponing vesting in the beneficiaries until that date.

Warden's Factor v Warden, (O.H.) 1905, 12 S.L.T. 670.

(111)

Gift to children "and their descendants."

A testator gave to his son A a liferent of his whole estate, and directed his trustees in the event of A dying without issue "to divide the whole estate among the children of" his deceased sister B "and their descendants." Held that vesting in the children of B was postponed until the death of A.

Gauden's Trustee v Jamieson, (O.H.) 1902, 10 S.L.T. 326.

(112)

Legacies to daughters payable on death or marriage of all daughters but one—Destination over to issue referred to period of payment.

A testator directed his trustees to pay the liferent of his estate to his widow, under burden of maintaining his unmarried daughters, and after her death to pay an annual sum equally to his sons and the balance of income equally among his unmarried daughters, while two remained unmarried. By a codicil, the testator directed his trustees to pay "to each of my daughters, married or unmarried, without restriction, and not exclusive of the ius mariti of their husbands, the sum of £1500 sterling at the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas after the death of my wife, and after the death or marriage of all my daughters but one; and it is hereby specially provided and declared that the issue of a daughter predeceasing the period for payment of the aforesaid provision of £1500 shall have right equally among them to their mother's provisions." The sons were appointed residuary legatees. The testator was survived by his widow, one son, and three daughters. After the death of the widow one daughter died leaving issue, and a second daughter, H, died unmarried; the third daughter, who survived, was unmarried. Held that a legacy or provision of £1500 had not vested in H.

Reeve's Executor v Reeve's Judicial Factor, 1892, 19 R. 1013; 29 S.L.R. 897.

(113)

Gift payable after deaths of two liferenters or on youngest child attaining majority.

A testator directed his trustees to pay the whole income arising from his estates, heritable and moveable, to certain beneficiaries, and after the death of his widow and his only son, and upon the youngest grandchild attaining majority, to close the trust and to divide the whole residue among his grandchildren and their issue, the issue of a deceased child taking the share which their parent would have taken if in life. The youngest grandchild attained majority, but predeceased the testator's son. Held that vesting was suspended until the death of the testator's son.

Morin's Trustees v Scott, 1872, 10 S.L.R. 65.

(114)

Several liferenters—Condition of none leaving issue.

A testator directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate, and to divide the annual proceeds thereof among three of his five children — Robert, Margaret, and Agnes; and on the death of the longest liver of the liferenters, to convey the residue in equal portions to and among the children respectively of the liferenters—"Declaring, however, that in the event of the death of any of my said children without leaving lawful issue, my said son John . . . and my said daughter Susan, . . . or in the event of their death leaving lawful issue, their said issue, shall be entitled to an equal share alongst with the issue of my other children, and that per stirpes and not in capita of the share of the residue of my said estates of which such child or children so deceasing without issue had or would have had the interest, and my said trustees are in that event directed so to divide, pay, or convey the same accordingly." Held that as it could not be known till the death of the last survivor of the three liferenters whether such survivor would leave issue, no vesting of the share of a deceased liferenter who left no issue could take place before that event.

Corbett's Trustees v Pollock, 1901, 3 F. 963; 38 S.L.R. 723; 9 S.L.T. 105.

(115)

Ultior destination to issue.

A testator directed his trustees to set aside and hold £7000 for behoof of his daughter Janet in liferent allenarly, and of her issue in fee; "and failing issue of the body of the said Janet White, or in case of such issue predeceasing before becoming entitled to or receiving payment of said provision, then the said sum of £7000 sterling, or property in which the same may be invested, shall fall and accrue to and be divided among the brothers and sister of the said Janet White equally and share and share alike, the issue of any brother or sister deceasing always succeeding to the same share as would have fallen to their parent had he or she been in life." Janet died unmarried. She was survived by one sister, Jane, and by one brother, Alexander, and predeceased by one brother, John, who left no issue, and by two brothers, James and Robert, who left issue. Held that the right to the fee vested at the date of Janet's death.

White's Trustees v Chrystal's Trustees, 1893, 20 R. 460; 30 S.L.R. 463.

(3) VESTING A MORTE TESTATORIS.

(116)

A postponed period of payment coupled with a destination to the issue of the children called primarily held not to postpone vesting.

Ogle's Trustees v Ogle, 1904, 6 F. 359; 41 S.L.R. 284; 11 S.L.T. 659.

Taylor's Trustee v Christal's Trustees, 1903, 5 F. 1010; 40 S.L.R. 738; 11 S.L.T. 190.

Matheson's Trustees v Matheson's Trustees, 1900, 2 F. 556; 37 S.L.R. 409; 7 S.L.T. 365.

Mellis v Mellis' Trustee, 1898, 25 R. 720; 35 S.L.R. 552; 5 S.L.T. 373.

Ballantyne's Trustees v Kidd, 1898, 25 R. 621; 35 S.L.R. 488; 5 S.L.T. 322.

Richard's Trustees v Roland, 1894, 22 R. 140; 32 S.L.R. 130; 2 S.L.T. 351.

Water's Trustees v Waters, 1884, 12 R. 253; 22 S.L.R. 176.

Ross's Trustees, 1884, 12 R. 378; 22 S.L.R. 232.

Jackson v McMillan, 1876, 3 R. 637; 13 S.L.R. 388.

Elliot v Bowhill, 1873, 11 M. 735; 45 J. 446; 10 S.L.R. 610.

Hendry's Trustees v Hendry, 1872, 10 M. 432; 44 J. 236; 9 S.L.R. 263.

Lord Advocate v Hotson, (O.H.) 1894, 31 S.L.R. 915; 1 S.L.T. 580.

Airth's Executor v Lord Advocate, (O.H.) 1886, 24 S.L.R. 165.

(117)

As a general rule, and in the absence of evidence of a contrary intention, a testamentary direction to pay to a person in liferent and on the death of the liferenter to pay the fee to another person named and his issue, does not import a suspension during the subsistence of the liferent of vesting in the person named as lifer if he survives the testator. The issue are presumed to be called not as persons independently favoured but from favour to the parent.

Ross's Trustees v Ross, 1897, 25 R. 65; 35 S.L.R. 101; 5 S.L.T. 202.

(118)

Direction to pay at majority—Income meanwhile available for maintenance and education.

A testator directed his trustee to make payment to his nephew of a legacy of £60,000 for his liferent use, "and on his death I direct the said sum to be paid to and among his children equally among them, share and share alike, on their respectively attaining the age of twenty-one, payable as such children, after their father's death, respectively attain majority, the interest or annual produce being, however, in the meantime available for their maintenance and education, the issue of any of the said children who may have predeceased taking their parents' share." The nephew predeceased the testator.

Held that the fee of the £60,000 vested equally in all the nephew's children at the testator's death, irrespective of their attainment of majority.

Mackinnon's Trustees v MacNeill, 1897, 24 R. 981; 34 S.L.R. 742; 3 S.L.T. 67.

(119)

Gift of fee to institutes—Subsequent clause containing destination over to issue.

A truster directed his trustees to hold a share of residue for behoof of his brother's children nominatim "equally between and among them in liferent and their lawful issues, born and to be born, equally among them in fee." There was a further declaration that, in the event of any of the issue predeceasing the term of payment, leaving lawful issue, such issue should come in place of the parent. Held that the first clause imported an absolute gift to the issue of the brother's children, that the subsequent clause did not control the absolute character of the gift, and that the fee vested in the issue a morte testatoris.

Byars' Trustees v Hay, 1887, 14 R. 1034; 24 S.L.R. 728.

(120)

Gift to testator's children — Destination over in the event of death of all children—Child surviving testator, but predeceasing date of payment.

A testator, in his trust disposition and settlement, directed his trustees to manage and preserve his estate for behoof of his children, with power to make advances from capital, and on his youngest child reaching the age of twenty-one to convey the free residue to his children who might be alive at the date of his decease. There was a destination over to issue in the event of any child dying before his share became payable. In a codicil executed when he had only one child alive, a boy of six, the testator, on the narrative that he had not provided for the disposal of his whole estate, "in the event of the death of my children or their issue," directed his trustees, in case of the death of his only surviving child, and any other children he might have, and their issue, to convey the whole residue to a nephew. The only son survived the truster, and died at the age of seventeen. Held that the residue had vested in the son.

Peacock's Trustees v Peacock, 1885, 12 R. 878; 22 S.L.R. 588.

(121)

Gift to testator's children payable on youngest attaining majority—Immediate gift of income to children—Power to trustees to make advances before the term of payment.

A testator directed his trustees after paying certain annuities to divide the free income of his estate equally among his children until the youngest child should attain majority, when the residue was to be divided equally among them, the issue of any predeceasing the period of payment to take their parents' share. There was also a power given to make advances out of capital to children before the term of payment, which were to be held as payments to account of residue. Held that the share of residue of a son who survived the testator but predeceased the period of division vested at the testator's death.

Wilson's Trustees v Quick, 1875, 5 R. 697; 15 S.L.R. 395.

IV. VESTING OF CLASS GIFTS.

1. CLASS CLOSED AT TESTATOR'S DEATH.

(122)

Bequest to vest a morte testatoris—Payment postponed—Express declaration as to vesting.

A testator directed his trustees on his wife's death to divide the residue of his estate among his grandchildren then surviving. The testator further declared that the interest of the residuary legatees should vest at his death, and that the shares should only be payable as the legatees attained twenty-one, the interest being in the meantime payable for their support and education. Held that a grandchild born after the testator's death, but before the death of the widow, was not entitled to share.

Davidson's Trustees v Davidson, 1871, 9 M. 995; 8 S.L.R. 646.

(123)

Legacy to children severally—To be placed by marriage trustees for their benefit while under age.

A testator, after a legacy to his daughter, bequeathed "to each of her children by this her present marriage £1000 each, free of duty, but to be placed at the discretion of the marriage trustees for their special benefit while under age." Held that the bequest was limited to children alive at the death of the testator, and did not extend to children born after the testator's death.

Stopford Blair's Executors v Heron Maxwell's Trustees, 1872, 10 M. 760; 44 J. 444; 9 S.L.R. 490 and 497.

(124)

"Children of A lawfully begotten or who shall be lawfully begotten"—Payable to children at majority—Vesting a morte.

A testator directed "that the residue of my funds be divided among the children lawfully begotten, or who shall be lawfully begotten of my cousins T, A, and J, share and share alike, on each of them attaining the age of twenty-one years," and appointed executors. Held that the residue vested a morte testatoris in the children of T, A, and J in existence at the date of the testator's death, and that children born thereafter were not entitled to participate.

Hayward's Executors v Young, 1895, 22 R. 757; 32 S.L.R. 559; 3 S.L.T. 54.

(125)

No provision for continuing trust.

A testatrix directed her trustees to hold her estate for her children, if any, in fee; and declared that the shares of her children should vest at majority. There was a gift over failing issue to the children of her brothers and sisters. She died without issue. Her brothers' and sisters' children were still in pupillarity. Held on a construction of the settlement that the testatrix did not intend to set up a continuing trust for the children of her brothers and sisters, and that accordingly her trustees must immediately pay over their shares to their respective fathers as their tutors.

Lietke's Trustees v Graham, 1907, 45 S.L.R. 257; 15 S.L.T. 660.

(126)

Bequest to grandchildren born before testator's death—Right of grandchild illegitimate at testator's death but subsequently legitimated.

Burns' Trustees v Burns, 1917 S.C. 117; 54 S.L.R. 111; 1916, 2 S.L.T. 318. SUCCESSION, No. 587.

2. VESTING SUBJECT TO PARTIAL DEFEASANCE IN FAVOUR OF NEW MEMBERS.

(127)

General rule.

Per Lord Davey—"It is an elementary principle in the construction of wills that a gift to a class after a life interest or liferent includes all persons within the description of the class who were alive at the testator's death, or have come into being during the lifetime of the life tenant or liferenter."

Hickling's Trustees v Garland's Trustees, 1898, 1 F. (H.L.) 7; [1899] A.C. 15; 35 S.L.R. 975.

(128)

Inter vivos trust deed—Liferent to A and his wife with fee to children.

Miller v Finlay's Trustees, 1875, 2 R. (H.L.) 1; 12 S.L.R. 630, No. 296, infra.

(129)

Member of class born after testator's death—To daughter in liferent and her issue in fee.

A testator directed his trustees, upon his death, to convey certain heritable subjects to his daughter in liferent and to her issue in fee. Held that a child of the daughter, born after the testator's death, was entitled to share in the fee.

Simpson v Marshall, 1900, 2 F. 447; 37 S.L.R. 314; 7 S.L.T. 195.

(130)

To children of A on termination of liferent.

A testator left the liferent of the whole residue of his estate to his widow, and directed that, on the termination of the liferent, "all of which I am possessed be divided among my cousins the Blackwells (leaving out Mrs. Buckle) and among the children of my uncle James Hay, Esq., of Belton." Held that the fee of the residue vested a morte testatoris; and that a member of the Hay family born after the testator's death was entitled to a share.

Hay Cunningham's Trustees v Blackwell, 1909 S.C. 219; 46 S.L.R. 175; 16 S.L.T. 592.

(131)

———To daughter in liferent and issue of her body in fee.

A testator directed his trustees to dispone the residue of his estate to his daughter in liferent allenary, "and to the lawful issue of her body in fee." The daughter was not married at the date of the will, but she married subsequently, and had one child prior to the testator's death. Five children were born subsequent to that event. Held that the children born subsequent to the testator's death were entitled to a share in the fee of the estate.

Christie v Wisely, 1874, 1 R. 436.

(132)

———Direction to hold residue for daughter and her children—Power of appointment.

A testator directed his trustees to hold and apply or pay a share of residue and the income thereof to or for behoof of one of his daughters and her children, or any of them, in such portions and at such times as his trustees might think most for the advantage of them or any of them. The daughter had two children at the date of the testator's death. Thereafter two other children were born to her before any apportionment of the share in question had been made. Held that the children born after the date of the testator's death were included among the objects of the power.

Potter's Trustees v Allan, 1918 S.C. 173; 55 S.L.R. 229; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 72.

(133)

———Direction to settle on J D in liferent and his children in fee—Gift over failing J D and his children.

By a codicil a testatrix directed her trustees with reference to a legacy left to J D by her settlement "to invest and settle" the legacy "in such manner as to secure the liferent to J D" and the fee to his children. . . . Failing the said "J D" and his children, the capital of the said legacy is to revert to "the next of kin of the testatrix." Held that the legacy vested in the child of J D alive at the death of the testatrix for behoof of himself and of any other children who might be born.

Scott's Trustees v Dunbar, 1900, 2 F. 516; 37 S.L.R. 375; 7 S.L.T. 346.

(134)

———Destination in liferent and fee—To A in liferent allenary and her children nascituri in fee.

Held that under a destination to a woman in liferent allenary and to the children to be procreated of her body in fee the children took a vested interest on coming into existence.

Douglas v Thomson, 1870, 8 M. 374; 42 J. 173; 7 S.L.R. 224.

(135)

———Direction to hold for A in alimentary liferent and issue per stirpes in fee.

Where a testator directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate for his children equally, and to hold and retain invested in their own names the shares of his daughters for their liferent alimentary use only, and for their children equally per stirpes in fee, held that a share of residue vested in each child of a daughter at birth.

Steel's Trustees v Steedman, 1902, 5 F. 239; 40 S.L.R. 202; 10 S.L.T. 440.

(136)

———Liferent to children—Fee to grandchildren per capita—Directions for disposal of income.

A testator conveyed his estate to trustees for behoof of his only son and his seven daughters nominatim equally among them in liferent allenary, and of their children in fee per capita and not per stirpes, but under burden of an annuity to his widow. The trustees were directed on the death of the survivor of his son and seven daughters and of his widow "to denude in favour of the persons who shall then have right to the different subjects hereby conveyed." In the event of any of the testator's son and daughters predeceasing the period of division leaving issue, such issue were to succeed per stirpes to their parent's life interest, and in the event of any of the testator's son and daughters predeceasing the period of division without leaving issue, or of such issue dying before the period of division, then the life interest of the son or daughter so predeceasing was to be divided among the whole grandchildren "surviving at the time" until the period of division should arrive. The testator died in 1830, the last survivor of his son and seven daughters in 1878, and his widow in 1880. At the latter date, of his fifty-two grandchildren, only twenty-three survived. Held that the fee of the trust estate vested a morte testatoris in those grandchildren who were then in existence for themselves, and for those who would afterwards be born.

Duncan's Trustees v Thomas, 1882, 9 R. 731; 19 S.L.R. 502.

(137)

———Vesting in class subject to birth of other members.

Terms of a will under which held that the residue of a trust estate vested subject to defeasance.

Cassels v Houston's Trustees, 1894, 2 S.L.T. 118.

(138)

———Gift in liferent to family, and failing issue to survivors and in fee to issue, whom failing to issue of survivors—Last survivor of liferenters dying without issue—Vesting in issue of predeceasers.

A testator directed his trustees to pay the free income of his estate, after deducting an annuity to his widow, in equal portions to his brother and four sisters, and failing them without issue, to the survivors and survivor. He further directed his trustees, on the death of any of his brother or sisters leaving issue, to pay to such issue (and the issue of any predeceasers) the capital sum liferented by their parents, so far as that could be done consistently with retaining enough to secure the widow's annuity; and on the death of his widow "to make over and settle my whole heritable and moveable means and estate . . . and that in equal shares, upon my said brother and sisters in liferent for their liferent use alienably, and the issue of their bodies respectively, whom failing to the issue of the survivors or survivor in fee." The testator was survived by his widow and his brother and four sisters. His brother and three sisters predeceased the widow, the brother and two of the sisters leaving issue. The remaining sister survived the widow, and died without issue. It having been held that the words, "survivors or survivor," were equivalent to "others or other," held (1) that the fee of the shares liferented by the brother and sisters who left issue vested in such issue a morte testatoris, or as soon thereafter as they came into existence; and (2) that the fee of the share of the last surviving sister, who died without leaving issue, vested only on her death in the issue of her brother and sisters, or their descendants who survived her.

Ramsay's Trustees v Ramsay, &c., 1876, 4 R. 243; 14 S.L.R. 168.

(139)

Conditional institution of parent in liferent and children in fee—Date of vesting in children.

A testator directed his trustees to hold heritage in trust for A in liferent, and A's issue in fee, whom failing for B in liferent and his issue in fee, whom failing to C and D (daughters of the testator) in liferent seriatim, and their issue in fee, whom failing to others in fee. The trustees were directed to convey the property accordingly. A and B died without issue. When the liferent opened to C she had a son and daughter; the daughter predeceased her, leaving issue. Held that the fee vested in C's issue at the date of the opening of her liferent.

Bowie's Trustees v Black, 1899, 36 S.L.R. 475.

(140)

Provision to children in liferent and their issue in fee — Children rejecting liferent — Right of issue to payment — Payment on caution.

A testator directed the residue of his estate to be divided at his death into five equal shares, one share to be paid to each of his children in liferent and their issue in fee. With regard to four of the children it was provided that in the event of the death of any one of them without issue, his or her share should revert to the general residue. With regard to the fifth child J, a daughter, there was no such provision. The children all repudiated their father's settlement and successfully claimed legitim. Held that the children of J, who had attained the age of fifty-three years, were entitled to immediate payment of the one-fifth share of residue directed to be paid to them upon their mother's death, upon finding caution to make forthcoming to any child or children to be hereafter born of their mother the share to which such child or children might be entitled.

Cameron v Young, 1873, 45 J. 272.

(141)

Children to receive income only—Gift of fee to grandchildren — Entail Amendment Act, 1868, sec. 17.

A testator first directed his trustees to hold his estate for behoof of his children. He then directed that they should only receive the income and gave the fee to his grandchildren. Held that the trustees held the estate for an existing grandchild and any further grandchildren who might come into existence, per stirpes, but subject to the provisions of sec. 17 of the Entail Amendment Act, 1868.

Downie's Trustees, 1901, 38 S.L.R. 755; 9 S.L.T. 142.

(142)

"Failing the said J D and children."

A testatrix, by a codicil, directed her trustees to invest and settle a legacy provided by her to J D, so as to secure the liferent to J D and the fee to his children. "Failing the said J D and children, the capital of the said legacy is to revert to my own next of kin." She was survived by J D and one child of J D. Other children were afterwards born. Two children predeceased J D. Held that the legacy vested in the child of J D alive at her death for behoof of himself and of any other children who might be born.

Scott's Trustees v Dunbar, 1900, 2 F. 516; 37 S.L.R. 375; 7 S.L.T. 346.

(143)

"Should institute die without issue."

Held (1) that where a testator directed his trustees to hold the whole residue of his estate for his children equally, and "to hold and retain invested in their own names" the shares of his daughters "for their liferent alimentary use only, and for their children equally per stirpes in fee," a share of residue vested in each child of a daughter at its birth; and (2) that a destination over to survivors to take effect "should any of my daughters die without issue," was to be construed as limited to the case where the daughter died without ever having had issue.

Steel's Trustees v Steedman, 1902, 5 F. 239; 40 S.L.R. 202; 10 S.L.T. 440.

(144)

Gift to issue of daughter in event of daughter "leaving issue"—Direction to divide amongst issue of each daughter.

A testator directed his trustees to pay the interest of a sum of £36,000 equally amongst his three daughters, and continued—"On the death of my said daughters respectively leaving lawful issue, I hereby direct my trustees to divide amongst the issue of each of my said daughters" one-third of the foresaid sum of £36,000. Held that although the gift to the daughter's issue was contingent on her leaving issue, it was not limited to the issue who survived her, and that the contingent right vested at the testator's death in the issue as a class, including all the children then alive.

Hickling's Trustees v Garland's Trustees, 1898, 1 F. (H.L.) 7; [1899] A.C. 15; 35 S.L.R. 975.

(145)

Gift over "failing issue."

A testator directed his trustees to lend out his daughters' shares of his estate and to take the securities to be granted therefor in such a way that the interest or annual-rent of such share should be paid to them during all the days of their lifetime, and the principal sum or share itself after their death be paid or divided equally, share and share alike, among the decedent's lawful issue, and failing issue, equally among the testator's own children surviving at the time. One of the testator's daughters married after his death, and had eleven children, five of whom predeceased her, leaving no issue. Held that a share of the provision liferented by the daughter vested in each of her children at birth.

Cunningham v Cunningham, 1889, 17 R. 218; 27 S.L.R. 106.

3. VESTING ON PAYMENT OF SHARE TO ANY MEMBER.

(146)

Member of class born after date of distribution—Bequest to children payable at majority or marriage.

A testator directed his trustees to "convey and make over" a sum of £10,000 to the "younger children" of his nephew John Scott, "equally share and share alike, on said children, if males, attaining the age of twenty-one years complete, and if females, on their attaining said age or being married," till which period it was declared none of the shares should vest. By a codicil the testator further directed his trustees to "hold, invest, pay, convey, and make over" the sum of £8000 to "the lawful issue of the body" of the same nephew equally, with the same provision regarding the period of distribution as in the previous bequest. Held in the case of both bequests (1) that the provisions were conceived only in favour of the children of John Scott alive at the date when the eldest of the respective classes attained majority (including a child born after the death of the testator but prior to that date), and (2) that the beneficiaries were entitled to payment of their respective shares as they respectively attained twenty-one years of age, or, if females, married before attaining that age.

Scott's Trustees v Scott, 1909 S.C. 773; 46 S.L.R. 719; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 504.

(147)

"Children born or to be born"—Vesting on majority.

Terms of a trust disposition and settlement and codicil under which held that a bequest to the children of a certain marriage "born and to be born," vesting as they attained majority, excluded children born after the date when the first payment out of the fund fell to be made to one of the then existing children.

Howden's Trustees v Macpherson, (O.H.) 1911, 2 S.L.T. 308.

(148)

Direction to "hold" fund "for behoof of the children of my nearest of kin if there any be."

A testator, after providing for two liferents of the residue of his estate, directed his trustees to "hold the said residue for behoof of the children of my nearest of kin if there any be." At the expiry of the second liferent his nearest of kin was his second son, whose eldest child was then in utero. Other children were subsequently born. Held that, in the absence of any provision in the settlement for a continuing trust, the child in utero succeeded at his birth to the whole fund, and was entitled to immediate payment.

Murray's Trustee v Murray, 1919 S.C. 552; 56 S.L.R. 503; 1919, 2 S.L.T. 47.

(149)

Successive distributions—Post natus—Born after interim, but before final distribution.

Where a testator directs a fund to be distributed in portions at various times among the children of a family, a child born after any of the distributions will be presumed, in the absence of any indication by the testator to the contrary, to be entitled to share in subsequent distributions, but in these only.

A testator directed his trustees to pay annuities of £2000 each to a brother and sister, and in order to secure these to set apart a sufficient sum of the residue of his estate. He directed eight one-hundredth parts of the residue to be divided among the children of J D. At the testator's death J D had eleven children. The trustees retained a sum to meet the annuities, and distributed the rest. A second distribution took place on the death of one of the annuitants, and thereafter another child was born to J D. Held that the post natus was entitled to share equally with his brothers and sisters in so much of the family's share as had not been distributed, but to no other share of the residue.

Ross v Dunlop, 1878, 5 R. 833; 15 S.L.R. 580.

(150)

Liferent to A—Fee to children of B.

A trustor left a liferent of his estate to his widow, and further provided that after her death it should be sold and the price divided in certain proportions between the children "born or to be born" of his only daughter. Held that the shares, being divisible among the children at the death of the liferentrix, vested at that date.

French, 1881, 18 S.L.R. 527.

(151)

Testamentary trustees were directed, after payment of debts, legacies, and certain annuities, to hold the residue of the testator's estate for behoof of his brother George, and failing him his cousin John, in liferent, and thereafter for "payment and delivery" thereof to the children of George, whom failing for payment of a special legacy and the balance to the children of the testator's brother Archibald, whom failing to the children of the testator's brother William. At the death of the survivor of the annuitants, Archibald was alive, but had no children, and William had an only son. Held that after payment of the special legacy William's only child was entitled to have the residue immediately made over to him.

Stewart's Trustees v Stewart, 1868, 7 M. 4; 41 J. 5; 6 S.L.R. 3.

(152)

Direction to convey to two daughters in liferent and their children, "any of whom failing," to the survivors in fee—Successive periods of distribution.

A testator by his trust settlement, inter alia, directed his trustees, so soon as they should see fit, to convey certain heritable property to two daughters—his only children—in liferent respectively, and to two grandchildren nominatim and other grandchildren nascituri, equally among them, share and share alike, "any of whom failing, the share or shares of the deceiver or deceasers to the survivors, equally among them, share and share alike, in fee." Held that the fee did not vest in the testator's grandchildren or their issue at the testator's death, but that on the death of each daughter the half liferented by her fell to be divided among the testator's grandchildren or their issue then in existence, exclusively.

Marshall v King, 1888, 16 R. 40; 26 S.L.R. 24.

(153)

Direction to pay to children on death of liferenter and attainment of majority — "Whom failing,"

A testator directed his trustees to set aside and hold a specified sum for behoof of two grandsons and a granddaughter in liferent, and upon the death of any one of his grandchildren, or at any later period which he or she might appoint, to pay over his or her share of the fund to and among his or her children "when and as they arrive at majority or are married, whom failing, to his or her assignees, whom failing to my own nearest heirs." Held that on the death of a liferenter leaving children the fee of the share liferented vested in his children.

Normand's Trustees v Normand, 1900, 2 F. 726; 37 S.L.R. 517; 7 S.L.T. 430.

4. VESTING AS EACH MEMBER ATTAINS MAJORITY.

(155)

Gift to issue of liferenter payable at majority and on death of liferenter—Gift over in event of issue not surviving to take.

A testator directed his trustees to hold and convey certain funds for behoof of his daughter in liferent only and her "children per stirpes in fee payable . . . to and among such children equally, and that upon their respectively attaining the age of twenty-one years, and on the death of their respective parents." It was also provided that in the event of the daughter "dying without leaving issue," or in the event of her "dying leaving issue, but of such issue not surviving to take in terms of the destination hereinbefore contained" the fund liferented by the daughter should devolve upon her surviving brothers and sisters. The daughter died leaving three sons. Held that vesting did not take place in the three sons as a class on the eldest attaining majority, but in each individual on his attaining majority.

Neill's Trustees v Neill, 1902, 4 F. 636; 39 S.L.R. 426; 9 S.L.T. 495.

(156)

Gift to issue of children—Destination over on failure of children without leaving issue who should attain majority.

A testator directed his trustees to "hold and invest" the residue of his estate "for behoof of the whole of my children equally among them in liferent, for their respective liferent alimentary uses allenarly, . . . and for behoof of the issue of my said children respectively, per stirpes, equally among them in fee, subject to the contingent exception and declaration after mentioned with regard to the issue of my sons, William Wilson and James Wilson; and failing any of my said children by decease without leaving issue who may attain to the age of majority or be married, then to the survivors or survivor of my said children and the issue of their bodies respectively, per stirpes, who may attain to majority or be married, in liferent and fee respectively as aforesaid subject to the said contingent exception and declaration after mentioned with regard to the issue of my said sons, William Wilson and James Wilson . . . declaring always, and providing by way of exception, that in the event of the issue of my son, William Wilson, who may attain to the age of majority, or be married, exceeding in number the issue of my son, James Wilson, who may attain to the age of majority or be married, the shares of said residue falling to the issue of my said two sons . . . shall not be divided per stirpes, but shall be slumped together, and then divided per capita equally among the issue of my son, William, and the said issue of my son James." William Wilson was survived by three children who attained majority, and was predeceased by two children, who also attained majority. James was survived by an only son, who attained majority. Held that the gift to issue being contingent, not only on the parent's leaving issue, but on such issue attaining majority or being married, the right did not vest in the issue as a class, but that the contingency affected each individual, so as to make it a condition of his taking (1) that he should survive the parent; and (2) that he should attain majority or be married.

Wilson's Trustees v Wilson, 1901, 3 F. 967; 38 S.L.R. 706; 9 S.L.T. 102.

(157)

Bequests to children payable after death of liferentrix, on children respectively attaining twenty-five.

A testator directed his trustees on the expiry of a liferent to hold and apply a principal sum of £20,000, and the interest thereof, for behoof of the children of his brother B, "procreated or to be procreated," in equal shares, "payable the several children's shares on their attaining twenty-five years of age," and at the expiry of the liferent the testator's brother was still alive and two of his children had attained the age of twenty-five. On the death of the liferentrix vesting took place in the children who had then attained twenty-five, and the other children took a vested interest as they respectively attained that age. Question, whether children born after the death of the liferentrix were entitled to share in the bequest.

Buchanan's Trustees v Buchanan, 1877, 4 R. 754; 14 S.L.R. 503.

5. VESTING ON YOUNGEST MEMBER ATTAINING MAJORITY.

(158)

Youngest beneficiary dying in minority.

A testator directed his trustees, "upon the youngest of my sons that may be born to me reaching the age of twenty-one years, to convey and make over to them" certain heritable estates belonging to the testator. The testator was survived by three sons. The youngest died in minority after the two elder sons had attained majority. Held that the share of the elder sons vested in them on the death of the youngest.

Roberts' Trustees v Roberts, 1903, 5 F. 541; 40 S.L.R. 387; 10 S.L.T. 642.

(159)

Gift to children—Vesting declared to take place on youngest child attaining twenty-five—Claim by sole surviving child at age of twenty-three.

Lawrie's Trustees v Lawrie, 1905, 7 F. 910; 42 S.L.R. 693; 13 S.L.T. 246, No. 200, infra.

(160)

Direction to divide on death of widow provided youngest child has attained twenty-five.

Ross's Trustees v Ross, 1902, 4 F. 840; 39 S.L.R. 678; 10 S.L.T. 163, No. 49, supra.

6. VESTING POSTPONED UNTIL PERIOD OF PAYMENT.

(161)

Gift to children alive at death of liferenters.

A testator directed his trustees to pay the yearly interest or produce of a sum of £6000 Bank of Scotland stock to his wife's niece, and in the event of her predeceasing her husband, which occurred, to pay the yearly produce to him during his life, and on the death of the survivor of them he directed "the capital of said stock to be paid or transferred to their child or children who may be then alive." The testator likewise gave directions for the disposal of the residue of his estate. There were two sons, one of whom predeceased both parents, and the other survived his mother and predeceased his father. Held (1) that the capital of the stock had not vested in the sons or either of them so as to be carried by their testamentary deeds; and (2) that it did not become intestate succession, but went to the residuary legatees of the testator.

Dymock's Trustees, 1873, 45 J. 289; 10 S.L.R. 263.

(162)

Direction to pay to various families on youngest attaining majority—Destinations over expressly referred to date of division—Survivorship clause in general terms.

A testator directed his trustees that one-half of the residue of his estate should be divided among his grandchildren, one-third to each family. The testator further directed that, on the youngest member of any family attaining twenty-five, the share falling to the members of such family "shall be divided amongst my grandchildren, the members of such family and the survivors equally," the issue of grandchildren dying before the period of division taking their parent's share. In the event of any part of the shares provided to any family not having been paid over to such family, "and of the members thereof and their issue all failing by death," the same was to be paid over to the members of the other families. Held that there was no vesting in grandchildren prior to the respective dates of division.

Begg's Trustees v Reid, 1899, 1 F. 498; 36 S.L.R. 382.

(163)

Destination over on liferenter's death without leaving issue.

A testator directed his trustees to retain the share of residue destined to a married daughter, paying her the income, and on her death to convey the capital to her issue as she might appoint, which failing, equally among them. In the event of her dying without leaving issue the trustees were directed to convey the capital to his other children. The daughter (who survived the testator) died leaving six children and predeceased by a son. Held that vesting of the fee of the share liferented by the daughter was postponed till her death, and accordingly that her predeceasing son had acquired no right in the fund.

Graham's Trustees v Lang's Trustees,
1916 S.C. 723; 53 S.L.R. 585; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 400.

(164)

Destination over "failing lawful issue."

A testator by trust disposition and settlement and codicil destined a share of his estate to his daughter A in liferent, and after her death to her children in joint liferent with fee to the issue of the children. The gift of fee in favour of the issue was to take effect on the failure of A's children "leaving lawful issue." There was a destination over to the other children of the testator "failing lawful issue" of A's children. Held that the fee did not vest in A's grandchildren until the death of the last survivor of the children of A.

Binnie's Trustees v Prendergast, 1910 S.C. 735; 47 S.L.R. 271; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 49; reversed on another point, 1911 S.C. (H.L.) 6; 48 S.L.R. 251; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 142.

(165)

Gift to children of daughter payable on daughter's death and as children attain majority—Destination over if daughter die without leaving a living child.

A testator conveyed an estate to his son under burden of payment of a provision of £500 to be equally divided among the children of the testator's daughter, payable six months after her death, with interest from the date of her death, to such of them as might then have attained majority and to the others on their attaining majority. There was a destination over in favour of the testator's son in the event of his daughter dying "without leaving any living child." The daughter had two children who predeceased her. Held that the provision did not vest in the daughter's children during her life.

Halliday, 1869, 8 M. 112; 42 J. 65; 7 S.L.R. 60.

(166)

Declaration that in the event of liferentrix dying "leaving lawful issue" "such" issue shall take.

A declaration by a testator in a trust settlement that "in the event of any of them (the liferenters of a fund) dying, whether before or after me, leaving lawful issue, such issue shall inherit their parent's share," held to exclude the representatives of a child of a liferentrix who predeceased his mother.

Crichton's Trustees v Bell, (O.H.) 1900, 8 S.L.T. 177.

(167)

Direction "to hold" — Gift to children attaining majority or marrying.

A testator directed his trustees "to hold" a fund in trust for all the children of A who, being sons, should attain twenty-one, or, being daughters, should attain that age or marry. During A's lifetime, certain of his children who had attained majority claimed payment of their shares. Held that as the class of beneficiaries could not be ascertained till after the death of A, no child was entitled to payment of a share before that event.

Hope Johnstone v Sinclair's Trustees,
1904, 7 F. 25; 42 S.L.R. 30; 12 S.L.T. 384.

V. GIFTS SUBJECT TO BURDENS OR CONDITIONS.

1. GIFTS SUBJECT TO ANNUITIES.

(168)

Annuity distinguished from liferent.

Observed (per Lord M'Laren)—". . . that in determining the point of distribution there is an important distinction where a general liferent of the estate is given with a destination of the capital at the time of distribution and the case . . . of an unlimited fee burdened with an annuity."

Scott's Trustees v Scott, 1891, 18 R. 1194; 28 S.L.R. 896.

(169)

Observed (per Lord Moncreiff)—"Lastly, where the sole interposed interest is not a liferent so as to exhaust the annual revenue but only a burden on the annual revenue, the presumption in favour of vesting becomes still stronger."

Henderson's Trustees v Henderson, 1886, 3 R. 320; 13 S.L.R. 181.

(170)

Part of estate retained to meet annuity—One period of vesting.

Muir's Trustees, 1869, 8 M. 53; 42 J. 25; 7 S.L.R. 24, No. 171, infra.

Henderson's Trustees v Henderson, 1876, 3 R. 320; 13 S.L.R. 181, No. 206, infra.

Ramsay's Trustees v Ramsay, 1876, 4 R. 243; 14 S.L.R. 168, No. 138, supra.

Watson's Trustees v Watson, 1902, 4 F. 798; 39 S.L.R. 628; 10 S.L.T. 64, No. 22, supra.

Coats' Trustees v Coats, 1903, 5 F. 401; 40 S.L.R. 330; 10 S.L.T. 585, No. 181, infra.

Allan's Trustees v Allan, 1918 S.C. 164; 55 S.L.R. 212; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 76, No. 245, infra.

(171)

Gift to children alive at testator's death on attaining majority—Sum retained to meet annuity.

A father directed his trustees to retain funds to secure an annuity for his widow, and to divide the whole remaining estate "equally among my whole children that may be alive at the date of my death," the provision to be payable on their attaining majority, and to be in lieu of legitim. He further directed that in case any of his children died before their share was payable, "the provisions of the children so dying shall be divided equally among the survivors, excepting the children so decessing shall have families of their own," &c. The funds to be retained for the widow's annuity were directed to be paid at her death among "my said children in the manner before specified." After the testator's death the trustees retained the whole estate to provide the widow's annuity, and no payment was made to any of the children until after her death. Before that date the whole children had attained majority, and some of them had died unmarried. Held (1) that by the deed the portion of the estate to be retained to secure the widow's annuity was destined to the same persons as the remainder of the estate; and (2) that the shares destined to the several children vested in the whole of them either a morte testatoris (subject to the condition of survivorship) or in regard to those who were then minors at majority.

Muir's Trustees, 1869, 8 M. 53; 42 J. 25; 7 S.L.R. 24.

(172)

Residue payable on death of liferenter and annuitant — Survivorship clause in general terms—Destination over to issue referred to liferenter's death—Annuitant surviving liferenter.

A testator bequeathed an annuity to one sister, and the liferent of the residue of his estate to another sister, and directed his trustees after the death of both sisters to divide his estate among the children of the liferentrix nominatim and the survivor of them, the issue of children predeceasing their mother taking their parent's share. The liferentrix predeceased the annuitant. Held that the residue vested on the death of the liferentrix, and that, due provision being made for the payment of the annuity, the balance could then be divided.

Jack, 1874, 12 S.L.R. 42.

(173)

Estate subject to annuity — Destination over—Beneficiary predeceasing annuitant.

A testator directed his trustees to pay his wife an annuity, and provided that his son A, his daughter B, and any children to be born of his marriage should have the rest of his estate equally amongst them, payable on majority, subject to the annuity to his wife, "and I direct that on the death of my said wife . . . my trustees shall divide the capital yielding the said annuity equally amongst my said children." He further declared that in case any of the children died without issue "before his, her, or their shares respectively become payable," such share should accresce to the survivors. A predeceased the annuitant. Held that his share vested in him on majority.

Stirling's Trustees v Stirling, 1896, 34 S.L.R. 80; 4 S.L.T. 147.

(174)

Fixed term of payment so far as not required for annuity—Vesting at term of payment.

Trustees were directed to make payment to the truster's wife, in the event of her surviving him, of a free annuity, and to hold the whole residue of his estate for the use of a son and three daughters, equally amongst them. The share of the son was declared to be payable on majority or marriage, except in so far as regarded the capital necessary for the security of the annuity to the truster's widow, as to which the shares were only to become payable upon her death, "if she shall survive the respective terms of payment." The trustees were also empowered to advance money to the children for maintenance and education "until the said respective terms of payment." Then followed a clause of survivorship, providing that if any of the children should die "before the terms of payment of their respective provisions," his or her share should go to the survivors or to lawful issue, if any. Held that the rights of the children in the whole estate vested on the majority of the son and the majority or marriage of the daughters.

Stewart's Trustee v Stewart, 1875, 13 S.L.R. 5.

(175)

Sum partially burdened with annuity — Payment to account.

Buchanan's Trustees v Buchanan, 1877, 4 R. 754; 14 S.L.R. 503, No. 51, supra.

(176)

Terms of trust settlement under which held that the residue had vested in the residuary legatees, and was divisible amongst them in the lifetime of an annuitant.

Cleland's Trustee, 1874, 12 S.L.R. 42.

(177)

Direction to divide at death of annuitants and "not earlier."

A testator, after directing payment of two annuities and providing a liferent of the remainder of his estate to his wife if she survived him, directed his trustees that the residue of his estate should upon the death of his wife, or upon the death of the longest liver of the two annuitants, "whichever of these events shall last happen, but not earlier, be divided equally, share and share alike, among the children of my said two sisters, and if any child or children shall have died either before the date of these presents or before the said period of division, then their issue shall, equally among them, succeed to their parent's share: Declaring that in the case of females, whether children or the issue of children, the provision in their favour shall be exclusive of the jus mariti or right of administration of any husbands whom they may have married or may marry; and as well in that case as in that of any of the other beneficiaries of the fee, even males, their provision shall be either paid to themselves upon their own receipt, or secured for their behoof by my said trustees and their aforesaid in such way as they in their sole discretion may think most fit for the interest of the beneficiaries." The testator's wife predeceased him. Held that the residue did not vest till the death of the last survivor of the annuitants.

Sloane v Finlayson, 1876, 3 R. 678, 13 S.L.R. 448.

2. GIFTS SUBJECT TO OTHER BURDENS.

(178)

Legacy to B—Power of encroachment conferred on A.

By mutual settlement dated in 1867, a husband conveyed to his wife, in the event of her survivance, the whole estate which might belong or be due to him at the time of his death, and the wife made a similar conveyance in favour of her husband. The husband reserved power, in the event of his predecease, to test on three-fifths of the estate remaining at the death of the survivor and it was also provided that the survivor should have full power "to use or encroach on" the estate conveyed on either side. In 1873 the husband, in exercise of the reserved power to test, executed a testamentary writing whereby he left certain legacies to the families of his late brother and of certain sisters and other sums to his other sisters. The husband died in 1876 survived by his wife, who died in 1887. Held that the power which the survivor had "to use or encroach on" the estate was limited to encroachments for her own use exclusively, and that it did not postpone vesting in the husband's legatees, which took place on his death.

Reddie's Trustees v Lindsay, 1890, 17 R. 558; 27 S.L.R. 514.

(179)

Terms of a trust settlement under which held in respect, inter alia, that the settlement conferred the very wide power to appropriate the capital of the residue, that the vesting of the residue of the estate was postponed until the death of the liferentrix.

Robertson's Trustees v White, (O.H.) 1903, 11 S.L.T. 566.

(180)

Mutual settlement.

By mutual settlement a husband and wife directed their trustees to value their whole estate at the death of the first deceiver, and thereafter to hold one-half thereof for behoof of the deceiver's relatives mentioned in the deed subject to the survivor's liferent. Held that the right of the relatives vested at the first deceiver's death.

Kerr v Ure, 1873, 11 M. 780; 45 J. 512.

(181)

Contingent liferent to widow of institute dying without a family.

A testator directed his trustees to pay an annuity of £4000 a year to his widow, and to divide the balance of the income among his children, and further provided—"On the death of my wife my estate to be divided equally among my four children.

In the event of the death of any of my children (being married) without leaving any family, the widow or widower to be liferented in their portion." Held that the fee of the testator's estate vested in the children a morte testatoris.

Coats' Trustees v Coats, 1903, 5 F. 401; 40 S.L.R. 330; 10 S.L.T. 585.

(182)

Gift to A—Obligation on executors to divide between B, C, and D in the event of them surviving A.

A testator, by his trust settlement, left his whole estate to trustees to hold for his wife in liferent and his son in fee, under burden of a payment by the son on the first term after the wife's death of a sum of money to each of the three daughters of the testator. By a codicil the testator, in the event of the daughters surviving the son, bound and obliged himself and his executors to pay to them equal portions of his estate. The son survived the testator, but predeceased the widow. Held that the fee vested in the son a morte testatoris.

Briggs' Trustees v Briggs, (O.H.) 1894, 2 S.L.T. 309.

3. GIFTS SUBJECT TO CONDITIONS.

[See also I. 2, supra.]

(183)

Conditional bequest—Bequest to lunatic to take effect on his recovering his reason.

A testator in his trust disposition directed that his trustees should maintain a lunatic son, but that, if he recovered his sanity, he was to receive payment of the provision thereinafter made; he then directed that his estate should be divided among his children equally, the shares being payable to sons on attaining majority, with power to the trustees to make advances and to apply for their maintenance the income of their respective shares, declaring that the provisions were not to vest until payment. On the death of a child before the term of payment, leaving issue, his provision was to be divided equally among his issue. The testator then declared that the lunatic son's share should not be payable unless in the event of his recovering his reason. On the death of the lunatic son, who survived the testator, but never recovered his reason, held that the bequest to him was a contingent bequest which never took effect, and that the portion of the estate retained to meet this bequest was carried by the original destination to the testator's other children.

Smith's Trustees v Smith's Trustees, 1908, 46 S.L.R. 19; 16 S.L.T. 403.

(184)

A testatrix directed her trustees to apply the free proceeds of her estate for behoof of her daughter, and declared that, although the daughter was restricted to a liferent, the trustees were to convey the fee to her in the event of her regaining sanity. In the event of the daughter dying insane, the testatrix bequeathed legacies in favour of named legatees. Held that the legatees did not take a vested interest until the death of the daughter.

Hood's Trustees v Jack, (O.H.) 1919, 1 S.L.T. 208.

VI. EFFECT OF DECLARATION AS TO VESTING.

(185)

Vesting not to take place until "period of payment"—Payment at the age of twenty-five after expiry of liferent.

A testator by his settlement directed his trustees to divide his estate into shares and to hold the shares for his children, and their respective spouses, in liferent, and for their respective children in fee. It was declared that the shares of any of his children dying without leaving issue should accresce "to my other children then surviving in liferent and to their respective issue in fee"; that the shares should not be paid to any of the fiars until they attained the age of twenty-five; and that the fee should not vest until "the period of payment" arrived. Held that no right in a share of the estate, whether original or accrescing, vested in a grandchild until he attained the age of twenty-five and the liferents of his parents terminated.

Swan's Trustees v Swan, 1912 S.C. 273; 49 S.L.R. 222; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 11.

(186)

—Payment on death or second marriage of widow and on youngest child attaining majority.

Gray's Trustees v Gray, 1907 S.C. 54; 44 S.L.R. 39; 14 S.L.T. 381, No. 261, infra.

(187)

Vesting not to take place until "respective terms of payment"—Payment on death of liferentrix and majority or marriage of children.

A testator directed his trustees to pay over to his wife, so long as she remained his widow, the income of his whole estate. He further directed that, in the event of his wife predeceasing him, or in the event of her entering into a second marriage, or on her death in the event of her surviving him, his trustees should as soon as convenient, after whichever of these events should happen first, realise his estate and make over the residue to his whole children who should survive him, in the case of sons, as they respectively attained majority, and, in the case of daughters, as they respectively attained majority or were married, whichever of these events should happen first, but "the said shares of said residue shall not vest until the respective terms of payment." There was a destination over to issue, and, failing issue, to survivors. The testator's wife survived him, and died without having married again. One of the testator's sons had attained majority at his father's death, and survived his father, but predeceased his mother. Held that the share of each son vested in him on his attaining majority, although he could not obtain payment while the liferent subsisted.

M'Kay's Trustees v Gray, 1903, 5 F. 1086; 40 S.L.R. 770; 11 S.L.T. 212.

(188)

—Payment postponed to allow of realisation.

A testator provided that the shares in his estate should vest at and only upon the arrival of the terms of payment, and directed that these should not be payable until the expiry of three years after his death, "said postponement being to allow of my estate being more fully realised." Held that a beneficiary having died before the expiry of the three years, a legacy bequeathed to him had not vested.

Smellie's Trustees v Glasgow Royal Infirmary, (O.H.) 1905, 13 S.L.T. 450.

(189)

Vesting declared not to take place until term of payment—Direction to "hold" for behoof of nephews "absolutely"—Shares of minors to be retained until they become major.

A testator directed his trustees to divide the residue of his estate into two equal portions, and to hold one of these for behoof of his sister, whom failing, of four nephews "absolutely," and of two nieces and their issue "in liferent and fee," and to divide the other half into sixteen equal parts, and "to hold three of the sixteenth parts for each of the four nephews absolutely, and two of the sixteenth parts for each of the two nieces in liferent, and of their issue, per stirpes, in fee." The three-sixteenth parts falling to nephews were to be payable at the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas occurring after the expiry of six months from the testator's death; and the trustees were directed to retain the shares falling to nieces and their issue, and pay the interest half-yearly, the first payment to be made at the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas occurring six months after the testator's death, the fee of these shares to be paid to the issue of the nieces at the first term after the death of their respective parents. The testator further provided—"And the interest in the said residue, whether in fee or liferent, of my said nephews and nieces and their issue, shall not vest in them till the term of payment shall have arrived; further, declaring that in case any of my said nephews or nieces, or their issue, shall be pupils, or minors and unmarried, at the time of my death, or when their interest in my means falls to be paid under the provisions of these presents, then the share of such pupils or unmarried minors shall be retained by my trustees till they shall successively become major or be married, whichever event shall first happen, the annual proceeds being, in the meantime, in the exclusive discretion of my trustees, either added to the principal and accumulated, or such interest, or a part, or even the whole of the fee or prinprincipal effecting to such pupils or unmarried minors shall, in the exclusive discretion of my trustees, be applied as my trustees shall in their judgment deem best for the support and education of such pupils or unmarried minors, and that although the said fee or principal should not then have vested in such pupils or unmarried minors." The trustees were directed to exercise their discretion as to the time of realising the estate. Held that by the time of payment the testator meant the time when the residue fell to be divided, viz., the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas six months after his death, and that vesting took place at that date and was not suspended by the direction that the shares of pupils and of unmarried minors should be retained till their marriage or majority.

Hunter's Trustees v Hunter, 1888, 15 R. 399; 25 S.L.R. 298.

(190)

Vesting declared to take place at term of payment—Payment at first term after death of life tenant.

A testator directed his trustees to pay the life tenant of the residue of his estate to his daughter and her husband, and at the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas after the death of the survivor, to divide the residue equally among their children, and the survivors and survivor of them, declaring that payment should not be made to any grandchild till the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas after reaching majority. It was further provided that grandchildren's provisions "shall vest at the said terms of payment so fixed by me." The testator was survived by his daughter and her husband. The latter outlived his wife, and died on 21st March, 1895, predeceased by four children, and survived by two children, of whom one, Mrs. N, died on 17th April, 1895, leaving issue. Held that no share of the residue vested in Mrs. N, in respect that she predeceased the term of Whitsunday, 1895, which was the term of payment.

Neville v Shepherd, 1895, 23 R. 351; 33 S.L.R. 248; 3 S.L.T. 226.

(191)

No time of payment specified.

Terms of a trust disposition and settlement in which it was provided that shares of residue should be deemed to vest as at the time of payment, and no time of payment was specified, on which held that the time of payment was the date of the testator's death.

Rutherford v Easton's Trustees, (O.H.) 1904, 12 S.L.T. 184.

(192)

Provision not to vest "till actual payment and conveyance."

A testator conveyed his whole estates to trustees, directing that, "upon the death of me and my wife, my trustees . . . shall, upon my youngest child attaining the age of forty years, divide my whole means and estate among those of my children who shall be then alive, and the children of any who may have died, . . . declaring that the provisions to my children under these presents shall not vest in them until actual payment and conveyance, and if any one or more of my children shall die before receiving payment or conveyance of their share, and without leaving issue, such share shall be divided among my surviving children. . . ." The youngest child who survived the testator did not attain the age of forty, and the next youngest, who attained the age of forty, died less than six months thereafter without having obtained a conveyance of his share. Held that no right had vested in him.

Macdougall v MacFarlane's Trustees, 1890, 17 R. 761; 27 S.L.R. 638.

(193)

Direction to apportion "within twelve months after death, or as soon thereafter as circumstances will permit" — Declaration that vesting to take place at period of payment.

A testator directed his trustees to pay over the free yearly income of his estate, both heritable and moveable, to his son; and in the event of his son dying without issue, within twelve months after that event, "or so soon thereafter as circumstances will permit," to convey his heritage, and his plate and pictures, to a nephew. As regarded the residue, he directed his trustees, "in the event of my son dying without lawful descendants of his body, and within twelve months after that event, or so soon thereafter as circumstances will permit, . . . to apportion and divide the said residue among" the testator's brother's "children . . . and it is hereby declared that the share of succession effecting to the said residuary legatees shall become vested interests in their persons at and only upon the period of payment above mentioned." The testator's personal estate amounted to £48,000, which was all capable of early realisation, except the stock, crop, and implements of two farms of the value of £5000. The testator's son died without issue. J, one of the nephews, survived him about six months, and died unmarried and intestate. At the date of his death the trustees had not apportioned and divided the residue. Held that a share of the residue had vested in J.

Maclean's Trustees v Maclean, 1889, 16 R. 1095; 26 S.L.R. 777.

(194)

Declaration that provisions should not become "vested interests until the respective terms of payment thereof."

A testator, in the second purpose of his trust settlement, directed his trustees to pay an annuity to his widow, and to set apart a capital sum to secure it, which sum he directed "upon the death of my said spouse" to be divided into six equal shares, of which one was to be held in trust for the use and behoof of his son J L, and they "shall retain the same, or such part thereof as they may think proper, in their own hands for such period after the death of my said spouse as they may deem expedient, and they shall pay the said share to him by such instalments or in such portions and at such times as they may think fit," paying him the interest of any part retained. The other three shares he directed to be held for his three daughters in life and their children in fee. In the fifth purpose he directed that division of the estate was to be made "as soon as my estate shall be realised." The deed then provided—"Declaring that the foresaid provisions to my said sons and the issue of my three daughters shall not become vested interests in them until the respective terms of payment thereof." Held that the terms of payment referred to by the testator in fixing the dates of vesting were in regard to the second purpose, the death of his widow, and in regard to the fifth purpose, the realisation of his estate, that vesting took place at these dates respectively, and that the special discretion given to the trustees to postpone payment of J L's share did not suspend vesting in his case.

M'Elmail v Lundie's Trustees, 1888, 16 R. 47; 26 S.L.R. 28.

(195)

Reform of beneficiary—Destination over.

A trustor directed his trustees to set aside half of the residue of his estate for his son, but only to pay it to him when they considered that he had so acted and reformed as to lead them to believe that the said share might be safely paid to him, but not otherwise, and of which they should be sole judges "... and until my said trustees shall pay to my son, his share shall not be assignable by him nor affected by his debts or deeds, nor shall it vest in him until the share is paid." It was further provided that, in the event of the son dying without issue, his share should be paid to his sister, and in the event of his dying leaving issue, his issue should succeed to his share. The son died without leaving issue. Held that the portion unpaid had not vested in the son.

Arkley v Paterson, (O.H.) 1893, 1 S.L.T. 336.

(196)

Declaration postponing vesting until twenty-five.

A testator directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate and to apply the same for behoof of his sister and her children, in manner following:— "... The trustees were directed to pay to sons their shares on attaining twenty-five years, and to daughters on attaining that age or being married, "but said provisions of residue in favour of the children of my said sister shall not vest until they respectively attain the said age, or being daughters respectively attain said age or be married; and ... in case any of said children shall predecease me or die before his or her share of residue becomes vested, leaving lawful issue alive at the period for vesting, such issue shall be entitled, and that equally amongst them if more than one, to the share or respective shares which his or her or their parent would have taken if alive." Held that the words "shall not vest" in the foregoing provision postponed vesting to all effects, in accordance with the ordinary meaning of the word "vest," and consequently that one of the daughters, who had died unmarried and without having attained the age of twenty-five, did not take any vested interest under the settlement.

M'Laren v M'Alpine, 1907 S.C. 1192; 44 S.L.R. 900; 15 S.L.T. 238.

(197)

Survivorship clause referring to death of A—Declaration that beneficiaries should not take a vested interest until majority.

A, by his antenuptial marriage contract, bound himself to pay to the children of the marriage the sum of £3000 "at the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas after his death to such of them as are then twenty-one years or married, and to such of them as are not then of that age or married at the first of these events of majority or marriage." There was a reserved power to divide the sum among the children, and failing apportionment the division was to be equally among them. The marriage contract provided that the children should not be deemed to have a vested interest until they "shall have attained the age of twenty-one years or been married," and also that if any children should die before the said A leaving lawful issue, the said issue who should be in life at the decease of the said A should have right to the share that would have belonged to their parent in the event that said parent had survived A. All the children of the marriage attained majority, but some of them predeceased A. A was survived by his wife. Held that the children did not take a vested interest until the death of A.

Gore Booth's Trustee v Gore Booth, 1898, 25 R. 803; 35 S.L.R. 606; 5 S.L.T. 381.

(198)

Vesting declared to take place at respective majorities of children—Payment on death of life tenant and majority of youngest child—Destination over referring to death before period of division.

A testator directed his trustees, after the death of the survivor of himself and his wife, to "set apart as a debt the sum which they shall judge necessary" for the maintenance and education of such of his children as should then be in minority until they should reach majority, "and the trustees shall pay over and divide the free proceeds of my moveable or personal estate and arrears or accumulations, if any, of the whole income of the trust estate, to and among, and shall disburse, assign, and convey my whole heritable or real estate to and in favour of" his children, "equally, share and share alike, and the survivors and survivor equally, and that at the term of Whitsunday or Martinmas immediately following the death of the survivor of my said wife and me, or the majority of my youngest child, whichever of these events shall last happen, on the following conditions:—The share of the premises of each child shall be a vested right at majority, though not payable till the youngest child reach majority; if any of my said children die before the said period of division leaving lawful issue, the latter shall succeed equally to the share of their parent." The testator's eldest son survived his father and attained majority, but predeceased his mother. Held that the shares of the testator's children vested in them as they respectively attained majority, although their mother might then be alive.

Carruthers' Trustees v Eeles, 1894, 21 R. 492; 31 S.L.R. 352; 1 S.L.T. 480.

(199)

Payment on youngest child attaining majority.

A trustee provided to his wife, in the event of her surviving him, a life rent of his whole means and estate till his youngest child alive should attain majority, upon which event the whole was to be realised and divided among his children. He expressly declared that the shares of his sons should become vested interests on their attaining majority, and those of his daughters on their being married or attaining majority, and that they should become payable to them at the first term after his youngest child should attain majority. He further provided a right of survivorship to the children, inter se, in the event of one or more of them dying before their share or shares should "have vested or become payable as above mentioned." One of the daughters attained majority and married before her father's death, but died before the youngest child attained majority. Held that the share vested in her during her life, and passed jure mariti to her husband.

Bowes' Trustees v Waddell, 1870, 42 J. 382; 7 S.L.R. 427.

(200)

Vesting declared to take place on youngest child attaining twenty-five—Claim by sole surviving child at age of twenty-three.

A testator directed his trustees to hold the residue for behoof of his children equally, payable on the youngest attaining the age of twenty-five, the lawful issue of children dying before that period being entitled to the share which their parent would have taken, and the share of children dying without issue being divisible among the survivors jointly with the issue of predeceasers. He also directed that until the period of division the income of each child's share should be applied for its education and to paying its mother for its maintenance between the ages of fifteen and twenty-five. It was declared that the period of vesting should be as at the date when the youngest child should attain twenty-five. The testator was predeceased by his wife, but survived by two children, one of whom died without issue before the period of payment. The surviving child when twenty-three years of age demanded payment of the residue from the trustees. Held that on a true construction of the settlement the clause of vesting was still applicable although only one child survived, and that consequently the residue had not yet vested in him.

Lawrie's Trustees v Lawrie, 1905, 7 F. 910; 42 S.L.R. 693; 13 S.L.T. 246.

(201)

Declaration that beneficiaries not entitled to sell, &c., before division.

A trustee, who died in 1877, by his trust deed bequeathed, inter alia, certain legacies to his children, and the residue of his estate to his sons and the heirs of their bodies equally, including per stirpes the lawful children of any son who might have predeceased, declaring as regarded the date of setting apart or payment of the legacies that his trustees should, at the first term after the expiry of six months from his death, pay or set aside for investment such a proportion of each of the pecuniary legacies as the personal estate should yield, the balance to be paid or set aside for investment at Martinmas, 1883, should he predecease that term, "declaring that none of my said children or of their issue shall have any right to sell, or dispose of, or assign, or alienate their share of or interest in the said fund before it is divided." One of the sons died in 1881. Held that both his legacy and his share of residue had vested a morte testatoris, and that they fell to be computed in ascertaining his widow's jus relictæ, the words quoted being applicable to deeds inter vivos, and not such as struck at mortis causa deeds, and therefore not such as to exclude vesting.

Craig v Craig's Trustees, 1886, 23 S.L.R. 647.

(202)

"Vest or be payable."

A testator, by trust disposition and settlement, provided that, "unless I otherwise expressly desire, no legacies left by me shall vest or be payable to the legatees till after the death of my wife, who, during her life, shall derive the benefit of all interest or income therefrom." He directed his trustees to pay various legacies to persons named, and appointed residuary legatees. By a holograph writing of the same date he declared that no legacy should be paid till after his wife's death, and by another holograph writing of the same date he referred to the legacies left by him "to be paid after my dear wife's decease." On the back of the trust settlement the trustee had written, "No legacy whatever left by me shall be payable until after the decease of my dear wife." Held that the legacies vested a morte testatoris.

Popham's Trustees v Parker's Executors, 1883, 10 R. 888; 20 S.L.R. 595.

(203)
"Take effect" — Whether equivalent to "vest."

Jamieson v Allardice, 1872, 10 M. 755; 44 J. 437; 9 S.L.R. 482, No. 212, infra.

VII. EFFECT OF DISCRETION GIVEN TO TRUSTEES.

1. DISCRETION OR DIRECTION AS TO PERIOD OF DIVISION.

(204)
Power to postpone payment—Payment on dissolution of testator's firm—Power to postpone dissolution of firm—Destination to person named "or his heirs."

A trustee, by his trust disposition and settlement, conveyed his whole estate, including his interest in a firm of coalmasters, of which he was a partner, to trustees, and empowered them to represent him in the firm, and to be parties to any new leases which the firm might enter into. The trustees were directed to allow his widow the liferent use of his house, and such allowance as they should consider necessary for the maintenance of herself and of such daughters and their children as might be living with her, and were empowered to make advances during the currency of the trust to his children out of the shares of his estate "effeiring" to them. They were also directed, on the dissolution of the firm, or on the death of his widow, if she then survived, to divide his estate into four equal shares, and to pay one share to each of his children A, B, C, and D, "or to their respective heirs." Held that the testator's intention in regard to the date of vesting of his children's shares of residue was to be gathered from the whole deed, and that the fact that he had given his trustees a discretionary power to enter into new leases with the effect of postponing the dissolution of the firm, and consequently the date of distribution, was to be held as showing his intention that the shares should vest at his own death, and that the conditional institution of the children's heirs should take effect only in the case of children predeceasing the testator.

Bowman v Bowman, 1899, 1 F. (H.L.) 69; [1899] A.C. 518; 36 S.L.R. 959; 7 S.L.T. 159.

(205)
Power to postpone division or to make interim divisions—Survivorship.

A testator, after directing his trustees to pay certain alimentary annuities, directed that "after the foregoing purposes are served" his trustees should divide the residue of his estate equally, share and share alike, among his remaining children nominatim, and the children of a deceased daughter, "such children coming in the place of their mother and receiving equally among them the share that would have fallen to her if she had survived me and formed one of my residuary legatees, and to the survivors of my said five children and grandchildren; declaring that, in the event of any of my children before named, or grandchildren before referred to, dying prior to the division of said residue, leaving lawful issue, such issue shall succeed equally, share and share alike, to that portion of my said means and estate which would have devolved on their parent under the destination above written, and as if such parent had survived said period of division." The testator empowered his trustees to sell all or any portion of his estates at such times as they might consider advantageous, and to set aside sufficient investments for payment of the annuities, if they thought proper. He further empowered them to postpone the division of the residue until the whole had been realised, or to make interim divisions as the realisation proceeded. Held that the whole residue vested in the children and grandchildren of the testator at the date of his death.

Maclean's Trustees v Maclean, 1897, 24 R. 988; 34 S.L.R. 746; 5 S.L.T. 81.

(206)
Power to fix date of division—Survivorship clause—Annuity to widow.

A testator directed his trustees to pay to his widow out of the free income of his estate an annuity of £150, and to divide the surplus annual income of his whole estate equally among his three sons nominatim, the lawful issue of any deceased being entitled to their parent's share. He further directed his trustees to divide the residue equally among his three sons "or the survivors of them, at such times and in such manner" as his trustees might think proper. Held that the residue vested in the sons at the testator's death.

Henderson's Trustees v Henderson, 1876, 3 R. 320; 13 S.L.R. 181.

(207)
Direction to divide on realisation of estate—Survivorship clause applying to death before period of division.

A testator directed his trustees to convey a heritable subject to his niece in liferent and her four children in fee. On the death of the niece the subject was to be sold or let in the discretion of the trustees, and when realised was to be divided among the four children in specified shares. There was a destination over to survivors "should any children die before division is made." Held that although the trustees had an absolute discretion with reference to the realisation of the subjects, vesting was suspended until they were realised.

Bleakley's Trustees v Johnston, 1907 S.C. 593; 44 S.L.R. 483; 14 S.L.T. 810.

(208)
Direction to sell heritage and divide estate on death of widow and extinction of debts—Power to trustees to sell under burden of debts—Survivorship clause referring to death before period of division.

A testator whose estate at his death consisted entirely of heritage, burdened with heritable debt, directed his trustees, on the decease of his widow, and after paying off the heritable debt, to sell and divide it in equal shares among his five children, substituting the issue of children dying before the period of division to their parents, and with a survivorship clause referring to the same period. The testator died in 1854 and his widow in 1867. The trustees sold the property in 1875. The testator's five children survived his widow, but four of them predeceased the resolution of the trustees to sell the property. Held that vesting took place at the date of the widow's death, being the earliest period at which the trustees might in the exercise of their discretionary powers have fixed the period of division, and was not postponed till the actual exercise of these powers.

Scott v Scott's Executrix, 1877, 4 R. 384; 14 S.L.R. 272.

(209)

Liferent of residue to widow with fee to children—Power to trustees to hold heritage or sell it or convey it to children—Heritage sold after widow's death—Survivorship clause in general terms.

A testator directed his trustees after his wife's death to divide the residue of his estate among his children equally, and after paying off sums advanced by a company, either to hold his heritable estate and divide the revenue among the children, or to sell the same and divide the price among the children or to convey the property to the children equally. If any child should die without leaving issue, the child's share was to revert to the estate and be divided among the other children; but if any of the children should die leaving issue, such issue should receive the share which the child would have taken, if alive. The testator was survived by his wife and by six children. The sums advanced by the company were paid off prior to the death of the widow, but the heritage was not sold until after. Held that vesting took place in the children on the widow's death, and was not postponed until the date of the sale.

Seton's Trustee v Seton, 1886, 13 R. 1047; 23 S.L.R. 770.

(210)

Direction to divide on death of liferenter—Power to trustees to postpone realisation of estate—Survivorship clause.

A testator provided that his trustees should as soon as convenient after the death of himself and a liferentrix, who survived him, divide the residue of the estate among certain residuary legatees or the survivor of them, the issue of these dying "before the residue becomes payable or before my trustees denude of the trust" to take their parent's share. The testator gave his trustees power to postpone the realisation of the estate for such length of time as they in their sole discretion should think proper. One of the residuary legatees survived the testator and the liferentrix, but died before the trustees had denuded of the trust. Held that the share of residue had vested in the residuary legatee on the death of the liferentrix.

Hendry's Trustees v Patrick, (O.H.) 1905, 13 S.L.T. 503.

(211)

Direction to purchase heritage and convey it to A in liferent and the heirs of his body, whom failing, other persons.

In a trust settlement the trustees were directed to lay out the residue of the trust estate (which amounted to £60,000) in the purchase of lands, and when the whole residue, or within £300 thereof, was so invested, to deliver a disposition of the lands to the brother of the testatrix (who predeceased her) in liferent, and his son and the heirs whatsoever of his body in fee, whom failing, certain other persons, the trustees being declared to be "the sole and exclusive judges of the lands which and the period when these should be purchased, free from the control of any of the heirs who may be interested therein." The trustees invested the residue as directed except £20,000. Held that the nephew's right as a beneficiary vested in him a morte testatoris.

Spens v Monypenny's Trustees, 1875, 3 R. 50; 13 S.L.R. 25, 45.

(212)

Power to accelerate payment—Payment to be made to son when thirty "or earlier if expedient."

The residue of a trust estate was bequeathed to the son of the testator, who directed that the bequest should not take effect till the son attained thirty years of age, "unless my trustees shall be of opinion that it should take effect sooner." The testator further stated his wish that the trustees should make over his landed property to his son on his attaining thirty years of age or "earlier if expedient," and he gave them power to sell the whole or part of his lands. Opinion that the bequest vested in the son a morte testatoris.

Jamieson v Allardice, 1872, 10 M. 755; 44 J. 437; 9 S.L.R. 482.

2. POWER TO WITHHOLD PAYMENT FROM PARTICULAR BENEFICIARY.

(213)

Power to withhold payment—Destination over to issue, or failing issue, to survivor of legatees in general terms.

A testator conveyed his estate to trustees, inter alia, "for payment at the first term" after his death, of £1000 to his nephews A and B equally, but with power to the trustees to withhold payment of this legacy in whole or part for such time as they might think proper, and to apply the income or such part of the capital as they might think proper for the benefit of the legatees; and providing that "in the event of either of the said A or B dying leaving lawful issue," the trustees should be entitled to apply such decesser's share of the legacy for behoof of such issue in any way they might think proper, and failing such issue, to hold the share of such deceiver for behoof of the survivor of A and B. He also directed his trustees to divide the residue among the legatees in proportion to the legacies bequeathed to them. The trustees retained the legacy and proportion of residue falling to A, and made regular payments to account of the income and capital to him during his lifetime. A died intestate, leaving a widow and children. On A's death there was still a balance in the trustee's hands. In a competition between A's widow claiming ius relicte and his children, held (1) that the word "dying" had reference to the death of A or B before complete payment of the legacy and share of residue; (2) that in respect of the ulterior destination to issue and the survivorship clause the balance unpaid had never vested in A.

Walker v Buchanan, 1905, 8 F. 201; 43 S.L.R. 176; 13 S.L.T. 568.

(214)

—Power to restrict to liferent —
Destination over.

In a trust settlement payment of the capital of a bequest was postponed until the death of a liferentrix, and the trustees were given an option to restrict the right of any child to a liferent, the unpaid capital of the share of any child who died without issue to go to the surviving brothers and sisters. Held that vesting did not take place a morte testatoris.

Maxton's Trustees v Henry, (O.H.) 1897, 5 S.L.T. 85.

(215)

Power to retain shares until trustees think proper to buy annuities.

A testator conveyed his estate to trustees and directed them to divide it into eight shares, one for each of his children. He directed two of the shares to be paid to A and F, two of his children, as soon after his death as his trustees should think proper, but the trustees were to retain the other shares until they judged it proper to invest them in annuities. In the event of any child dying before his or her share was paid or invested in an annuity as the case might be, there was a gift over to the issue of the deceasing child, and failing issue to the surviving children, accreting shares to be held subject to the same provisions as the original shares. The trustees had a power of sale of heritage, in order to carry out these provisions. After the testator's death the greater part of the heritage was sold, but no payment was made to the children entitled to receive payment of their shares, and no annuities were purchased. A predeceased the testator. On the death of the last surviving child, who had been entitled to have an annuity purchased for him, held that the whole estate vested in the last surviving child, excepting the share destined to F, including the proportions of accreting shares which fell to him, and that F's share fell to be paid to his heirs in moveables.

Sorley v Martin, 1890, 27 S.L.R. 880.

(216)

Power to make advances—Vesting in portion advanced.

A testator provided that his trustees should hold his estate for behoof of his wife, and should have power to expend and apply the estate or the revenue thereof, or so much only as they should think expedient for the maintenance of his wife, and, if they thought it would be for her benefit, to deliver the whole of it to her. During the lifetime of the widow the trustees paid over part of the principal. Held that the vested right in fee of the widow was confined to the sums paid to her during her lifetime.

Dun v Angus, (O.H.) 1893, 1 S.L.T. 158.

(217)

Gift dependent on exercise of powers by trustees.

A testator, who by his settlement committed large discretionary powers to trustees with reference to the maintenance and education of his illegitimate son, authorised them, inter alia, on the son's attaining majority, in accordance with their opinion of his character and behaviour, either to convey to him the whole, or such part as they might consider proper, of the residue of the trust estate in such terms as to destine the same to him and to his lawful issue, whom failing, &c., or to withhold the conveyance of the estate from him, either for a time or absolutely, and to pay him an annuity merely, disposing of the residue for the benefit of his issue, if any. The son died at the age of thirty-three, leaving a pupil child. He conducted himself to the satisfaction of the trustees, but he did not demand, nor did they execute, a conveyance in his favour of the residue of the estate, although they advanced to him large sums from capital as well as revenue. At his death he left a settlement in favour of his widow, who claimed the residue of the trust estate as having vested in her deceased husband. Held that no right to the residue had vested in him, and consequently that his pupil child was entitled to be preferred under the destination in the trust deed.

Paterson's Trustee v Paterson, 1870, 8 M. 449; 42 J. 198; 7 S.L.R. 247.

(218)

A testator provided in a holograph trust disposition and settlement — "I also appoint that one thousand pounds be invested or laid in stock of that value, and given in such sumes and way and times as the trustees may think best for J, my nephew; he is abroad, he having no controle or right to interfere with the trustees anent the same under forfeiture of all claim to the same." J survived the testator, but died without receiving anything from the trustees. Held that no right vested in him.

Smith's Trustees v Smith, 1883, 10 R. 1144; 20 S.L.R. 764.

(219)

Gift of fee in will—Codicil restricting beneficiary to liferent—Power to trustees to pay capital—Survivorship clause referred to date of payment.

A testatrix by her settlement directed her trustees, twelve months after her death, to pay the residue of her estate to her four children nominatim. Should any child die "before the said residue becomes payable," there was a destination over to issue and survivors. By a codicil dated some years later the testatrix provided that the portion falling to her son W should not be handed over to his own care, but that he should "only draw from my trustees the interest thereon weekly. If, however, at any time my trustees consider it would be for his true benefit to hand over to himself what might then be his share, I hereby empower them to do so." The trustees paid certain capital sums to W, but refused to pay the remainder. Held, on a construction of the settlement and codicil, that, in the case of the son the survivorship clause applied to the event of his predeceasing the date when the trustees saw fit to make payment to him, and that the unpaid portion of the son's share did not vest in him so long as it was retained by the trustees.

Russell v Bell's Trustees, 1897, 24 R. 666; 34 S.L.R. 497; 4 S.L.T. 338.

(220)

Declaration that provisions should not vest until the respective terms of payment.

M'Elmail v Lundie's Trustees, 1888, 16 R. 47; 26 S.L.R. 28, No. 194, supra.

3. WHERE PAYMENT DUE BUT NOT MADE.

[See I. 3 (1), supra.]

VIII. VESTING SUBJECT TO DEFEASANCE.

1. GIFT TO LEGATEE FAILING ISSUE OF LIFERENTER.

(221)

Conditional institutes ascertained — No ulterior destination.

Per Lord President Inglis—"Where in a testamentary deed a fund is settled on the children of the testator for their liferent use allenerly and their children, if any, in fee, whom failing, to another person or class of persons in absolute property, if the person or persons so called are known or the individuals composing the class are ascertained at the death of the testator, the fee will vest in them a morte testatoris, subject to defeasance in whole or in part in the event of the liferenters or any of them leaving issue; if they are not so known or ascertained, the fee will not vest until the occurrence of the event which will determine who are the persons called, or until the individuals composing the class are ascertained."

Steel's Trustees v Steel, 1888, 16 R. 204; 26 S.L.R. 146.

(222)

A testator directed his trustees to hold the whole residue of his estate for the liferent use allenerly of his son, and in the event of the son's leaving issue, to divide the residue among such issue on the death of the testator's widow and the son. He further directed his trustees on the death of the survivor of his widow and son (the latter without leaving issue) to convey a heritable property to A. B. Held that the heritable property vested in A. B. a morte testatoris subject to defeasance in the event of the son leaving issue.

Thomson's Trustees v Pringle, (O.H.) 1901, 9 S.L.T. 11.

(223)

Class conditionally instituted.

A testator who died in 1876 directed his trustees to hold certain property for the maintenance of his brother, Robert, in alimentary liferent, declaring that if Robert should be survived by lawful issue the trustees should hold the property for the maintenance and education of such issue, and should convey it to said issue equally on their attaining majority, but if the said Robert should not have lawful issue, or having lawful issue, if all of them should die before majority, the trustees should thereupon "sell and divide the property as follows, viz.:—One-fourth part thereof to the children of" the testator's brother James . . . Robert, the liferenter, died unmarried in 1904, having survived his brother James, who died in 1892. James had four children who survived the testator, but two of them predeceased Robert, the liferenter. No children were born to James after the testator's death. Held that the one-fourth share of the proceeds of the heritable property destined to the children of James vested a morte testatoris in the children of James alive at the death of the testator, subject to defeasance in the event of the liferenter, Robert, leaving issue who attained majority.

Corbet's Trustees v Elliott's Trustees, 1906, 8 F. 610; 43 S.L.R. 379; 13 S.L.T. 815.

(224)

A testator directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate for behoof of his daughter in liferent, for her liferent use only, and for her whole children equally among them in fee, with a separate direction, in the event of the daughter predeceasing or dying without leaving issue, to divide the residue in equal proportions amongst the families of B and C. The testator's daughter survived the testator, but died without leaving issue. Held that the residue vested in the families of B and C a morte testatoris, subject to defeasance in the event of the liferentrix leaving issue, the fact that the destination over was made the subject of a separate clause not being sufficient to take the case out of the application of the ordinary rule.

Searcy's Trustees v Allbuury, 1907 S.C. 823; 44 S.L.R. 536; 14 S.L.T. 898.

(225)

A testator directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate for his daughter in life-tenant and her issue in fee, and, in the event of his daughter not leaving issue, to divide the residue into three equal parts, and to pay one-third to the children of a deceased brother, one-third to the children of a deceased sister, and the remaining third, after providing for two life-tenants, equally to the same persons. The daughter survived the testator and the last-mentioned life-tenants, but died without issue. Held that vesting subject to defeasance in the event of the daughter leaving issue took place a morte testatoris in the representatives of all the nephews who survived the testator.

Smith's Trustees v Smith, (O.H.) 1893, 1 S.L.T. 355.

(226)

Ultior destination if no conditional institutes attain majority — Vesting at majority.

A testator directed his trustees "to hold and apply" the residue of his estate for behoof of his nieces and their children in the following proportions, viz.:—One-third for behoof of A in life-tenant and her children in fee, one-third for behoof of B in life-tenant and her children in fee, and the remaining third for behoof of C, D, E, and F in life-tenant equally, and their children in fee equally among them per stirpes. He further provided that in case of A and B dying without issue, or of such issue dying before attaining majority or being married, then the two one-third shares destined to them and their issue should fall and accrue to C, D, E, and F, and their children respectively, in life-tenant and fee, and equally among them per stirpes, as provided with respect to their own share of the residue. There was also a destination over in the event of C, D, E, or F dying without leaving children, or of their children not attaining majority. A and B died without issue. C left one son, who attained majority subsequent to the death of the testator, but predeceased A and B. Held that the children of C, D, E, and F had, from the dates of their respectively attaining majority or of their marriage, a vested interest in the fee of the shares life-tenanted by A and B, subject to divestiture in the event of A or B leaving issue who should attain majority or be married, and therefore that C's son had a vested interest from the date of his majority.

Taylor v Gilbert's Trustees, 1878, 5 R. (H.L.) 217; 3 App.Cas. 1287; 15 S.L.R. 776.

(227)

Two life-tenants—Defeasance quoad one-half if either left issue.

A testatrix directed her trustees to invest the sum of £1300, and divide the annual interest therefrom equally between her nieces Jane and Isabella during their joint lives, and on the death of either without lawful issue, to pay the whole annual interest to the survivor; but in case either should die leaving lawful issue, then such issue should be entitled to their parent's share of said interest; and upon the death of the survivor one-half of the said sum should be paid to the lawful issue of each of Jane and Isabella; "but declaring always, that if either or both of the said Jane and Isabella shall die without leaving lawful issue, then the half or the whole of said £1300, as the case may be, shall, on the death of the survivor, be paid by the said trustees to my brother, the said Robert Cumming." The testatrix was survived by the two nieces, who were not married, and by Robert Cumming. Held that the fee of the sum of £1300 vested at the death of the testatrix in Robert Cumming, subject to defeasance to the extent of one-half in the event of Isabella leaving issue, and to the extent of the other half in the event of Jane leaving issue.

Cumming's Trustees v Anderson, 1895, 23 R. 94; 33 S.L.R. 77; 3 S.L.T. 158.

(228)

Ultior destination to heirs or assignees.

A testator directed his trustees to invest in their names the sum of £3500, and to make payment of the annual interest thereof to Hannah, his daughter, and, in the event of her marrying and leaving issue, to divide the capital among her issue as soon after her death as possible, "and in the event of the said Hannah dying without leaving lawful issue I appoint my trustees to pay, make over, and denude of said sum of £3500 in favour of my said son Robert, and his heirs or assignees." Robert and Hannah both survived the testator. Robert predeceased Hannah, unmarried, and leaving a will. She married, but died without issue. Held (by a majority of the whole Court) that Robert's testamentary trustees fell to be preferred to the £3500.

Thompson's Trustees v Jamieson, 1900, 2 F. 470; 37 S.L.R. 346; 7 S.L.T. 340.

(229)

Ultior destination to survivors of conditional institutes—Vesting in last survivor.

Gardner v Hamblin, 1900, 2 F. 679; 37 S.L.R. 486; 7 S.L.T. 412, No. 253, infra.

(230)

Vesting in residuary legatees subject to defeasance.

A testator left a sum of £6000 to his son A in life-tenant only, and to A's issue in fee, the fee to fall into residue if A left no issue. The residue was divided into shares among the children who survived the testator. A survived the testator, but died without issue. Held that a fourth part of the sum of £6000 had vested in A as part of the residue.

Wright's Trustees v Wright, (O.H.) 1896, 4 S.L.T. 74.

(231)

Effect of conditional institution of heir of body of institute.

By general disposition and settlement A disposed a share of her heritable and moveable estate to B in liferent allennary, and to the heirs of B's body in fee, whom failing, to C, D, E, and F and the respective heirs of their bodies in fee. C survived the testator, and was survived by B, the liferentrix, who died unmarried. C left an heir of his body who survived the liferentrix. Held that no fee had vested in C, as the heir of his body was a conditional institute. Observations on the doctrine of vesting subject to defeasance.

Turner v Gaw, 1894, 21 R. 563; 31 S.L.R. 447; 1 S.L.T. 526.

(232)

Ultior destination to issue, and failing issue, to strangers.

Testamentary trustees were directed to hold a legacy in trust for H in liferent, and for her children or their issue in fee. Failing issue of the liferentrix the fee was destined to her brother R, whom failing to his issue, whom all failing to three members of the family of C nominatim and the survivors and survivor of them, the issue of predeceasers being entitled to the share which their parent would have taken on survivorship. A residuary clause in the testator's settlement was declared to include any legacy that lapsed. All the legatees named to whom the fee was destined survived the testator, but all predeceased the liferentrix without issue. On the death of the liferentrix without issue, the legacy was claimed by the representatives of R as having vested in him a morte testatoris subject to defeasance on contingencies which had not occurred; and it was also claimed by the representatives of the last survivor of the family of C as having vested in that party on the predecease of R and the other two members of that family. Held that the legacy had lapsed and had fallen into residue. Observations (per Lord President Strathclyde) on the doctrine of vesting subjects to defeasance.

Bannatyne's Trustees v Watson's Trustees, 1914 S.C. 693; 51 S.L.R. 605; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 469.

(233)

Ultior destination to issue and survivors.

A testator directed that the residue of his estate should be held for behoof of his children in specified proportions, the daughters' provisions to be held for their liferent alimentary use allennary, and for the heirs of the body of each of them in fee, and failing any daughter without leaving heirs, her share to form part of the residue. He further provided "that in case of the decease of any of my sons before receiving payment of their provisions, leaving heirs of their bodies, the provisions of such deceasers, so far as unpaid to them, shall fall and devolve to the heirs of their bodies respectively, in place of their parents, and in case of the decease of any of my sons before receiving payment of their provisions, without lawful issue, then the provisions of such deceasers, so far as unpaid, shall fall back into and make part of the residue of my estate divisible as aforesaid." The widow died, her death being followed, nine years after, by that of one of the sons unmarried. On the subsequent decease of one of the daughters without issue, held that the fee of the share liferented by her did not vest until the term of payment, and that no part of it therefore belonged to the representatives of the deceased son.

Steel's Trustees v Steel, 1888, 16 R. 204; 26 S.L.R. 146.

(234)

By his settlement, a testator directed his executors to pay the income of three-sixths of the residue of his estate to his three daughters, and declared that in the event of them dying without leaving lawful children, the share of such daughters should be divided amongst his surviving sons and daughters, that part of it which might thus fall to any of his surviving daughters to be lent out on security as aforesaid, and the interest thereof paid to them. Held that the shares which the executors were directed to pay over to the daughters vested in them subject to defeasance in the event of their leaving children.

Walker's Executor v Donald, (O.H.) 1895, 3 S.L.T. 95.

(235)

Ultior destination to children of W, whom failing to W, or his next of kin—W predeceasing liferentrix without issue.

A testator directed his trustees to hold a fund for behoof of his daughter F, and of any husband she might marry who should survive her in liferent, and on the death of the survivor, for behoof of their children. Failing children of F, then the trustees were directed at the death of F, or of her husband, if he survived her, to pay the fund to the children of the testator's son W, and failing such children, to pay one-half of the fund to W himself or his next of kin. W survived the testator, and died unmarried. At the date of his death F was his sole next of kin. In a question between F (who was unmarried, and seventy-five years of age) and the trustees, F contended that one-half of the fund had vested in her, subject to defeasance in the event of her having children. Held that vesting was postponed until the death of F.

Wright's Trustees v Wright, 1894, 21 R. 568; 31 S.L.R. 450; 1 S.L.T. 558.

(236)

Destination over to person named, whom failing, her children, whom failing, next of kin of testator.

A testator, by his testamentary writings, destined a certain sum to his grand-daughter in liferent and to her issue, if any, in fee. Failing issue of the liferentrix, he directed that the sum in question should be divided between his two daughters, whom he named, and failing either of them, he directed that her share should be paid to her issue, "whom also failing, to my nearest in kin." The liferentrix and the daughters survived him, but the daughters and their issue predeceased the liferentrix. The daughters were the testator's nearest in kin at the date of his death. On the subsequent death of the liferentrix, without issue, a competition arose as to the parties entitled to the sum liferented by her. Held that the vesting of the gift was suspended till the death of the liferentrix, the principle of vesting subject to defeasance being inapplicable owing to the fact that the gift was subject to further contingencies besides the contingency of the liferentrix leaving issue; and that the parties entitled to succeed were those who were the nearest in kin of the testator at the death of the liferentrix.

Johnston's Trustees v Dewar, 1911 S.C. 722; 48 S.L.R. 582; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 316.

(237)

Vesting declared to take place a morte—Vesting subject to defeasance in children then surviving.

A testator directed his trustees to divide the residue of his estate into six equal parts, and to hold three-sixths thereof for behoof of his three daughters equally among them in liferent allennarly. On the death of a daughter the trustees were to pay the interest of each daughter's share to her children equally until they respectively attained majority, when the fee was to be payable to them equally. The period of vesting was declared to be the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas after the youngest child of the testator had attained majority. In the event of the death of a child before the testator, or before the date of vesting, the share of such predeceaser was to go to increase the shares of the "surviving" children, and in the event of daughters dying after the said date without issue, the share of the daughter so deceasing was to go to increase the shares of the "surviving" children. In a codicil made after all the children had attained majority, and one of them, a daughter, A, had died leaving issue, the testator declared that the date of vesting should be the date of his death, and provided that if any of the testator's other children should predecease the period of vesting without having issue, the share of the predeceaser should go to increase the share of his "other" children, and in the case of either of his two surviving daughters dying after him without leaving children, the share liferented by such daughter should go to increase "not only the share of my remaining children, but the shares falling to the children of any of them who have died leaving children." He also declared that the shares of daughters' children should not vest till they attained majority. Held (1) that the words "surviving" and "remaining" referred to the periods of vesting specified in the trust disposition and codicil respectively; and (2) that the date of vesting under the codicil being the death of the testator, a right to a proportional part of the fee of a share liferented by a daughter B, who survived the testator and died without having issue, had vested at the testator's death in those of his children who survived the testator, but predeceased their sister B, subject to defeasance in the event of B having issue who attained majority.

M'Dougal's Trustees v M'Dougal's Trustees, 1902, 39 S.L.R. 375.

2. GIFT OF FEE RESTRICTABLE TO LIFERENT ON BIRTH OF ISSUE.

[See FEE AND LIFERENT I. 5 (1) (b).]

3. GIFT OVER TO ISSUE OF INSTITUTE.

(238)

Gift on death of liferenter.

A testator directed his trustees upon the death of his widow to invest in their own names three-fifths of the residue of his estate for behoof of his daughter and her husband in liferent for their liferent use allennarly, and for behoof of their children in fee; declaring that in the event of any grandchild dying without having received payment of his share and leaving issue, such share should fall to the issue. The testator was survived by his widow, and also by his daughter and her husband, and by several of the daughter's children, three of whom predeceased their mother and the testator's widow without leaving issue. Held that a right to a share of residue vested in each of the grandchildren at the date of the testator's death, subject only to the condition that in the event of any grandchild dying before the term of payment and leaving issue the share of such child should belong to such issue.

Snell's Trustees v Morrison, (O.H.) 1877, 4 R. 709.

(239)

A testator directed his trustees to pay the income of the residue of his estate to his sister during her life, and at her death to pay £6000 to each of his nephews named, including E B R. The deed then provided that "if any of my said nephews . . . die before my sister" leaving children, the children should take the parent's share, " . . . and with regard to the £6000 " directed to be apportioned to E B R, "I desire that, in the event of his predeceasing me without issue, the same shall go" to persons named. E B R survived the testator, but died leaving no issue. The liferentrix survived him. Held that the £6000 bequeathed to E B R vested in him at the testator's death, subject to defeasance in the event of his predeceasing the liferentrix leaving issue, and that, as he left no issue, it fell to the executor under his will.

Earl of Dalhousie's Trustees v Young, 1889, 16 R. 681; 26 S.L.R. 525.

(240)

A marriage contract provided that the trustees should pay to the wife or to the husband if he survived her the annual proceeds of the trust funds, and with regard to the capital that it should "belong to the child or children of the said intended marriage, share and share alike, and be payable at" (in the event which happened) the death of the wife, "declaring that if any child of the said intended marriage shall have predeceased the said term of payment leaving lawful issue, such issue shall succeed to the share of such child so predeceasing." The liferentrix survived her husband and died survived by several children and predeceased by a son A, who was survived by a daughter B. B survived the liferentrix. Held that a share of the capital vested in A, subject to defeasance in the event, which happened, of his predeceasing the term of payment leaving lawful issue, and therefore that B took in her own right as conditional institute.

Wylie's Trustees v Wylie, (O.H.) 1902, 8 F. 617; 43 S.L.R. 383; 13 S.L.T. 818.

(241)

A testator by his trust disposition and settlement gave his widow a liferent of his whole estate, and directed his trustees on her death to convey his whole estate to his four children nominatim equally among them, share and share alike, "the issue of any predeceasing child taking equally among them their parent's share." Held that the share destined to each child vested in him a morte testatoris, but liable to defeasance in the event of his predeceasing the liferent leaving issue.

Cairns' Trustees v Cairns, 1907 S.C. 117; 44 S.L.R. 96; 14 S.L.T. 509.

(242)

A testator directed his trustees to allow his wife the liferent of the residue of his estate, and on her death to pay the capital to his brother, whom failing to his issue. The brother survived the testator but predeceased the widow, dying unmarried. Held that on the death of the testator the fee of the estate vested in the brother, subject to defeasance in the event of his dying and leaving issue, and that on the death of the brother without issue, the fee passed to his heirs in mobilibus.

Nisbet's Judicial Factor v Nisbet, (O.H.) 1911, 2 S.L.T. 171.

(243)

Power to make advances before division.

A testator by his general settlement appointed his wife his sole trustee with power to advance for the purpose of setting up any of his children in business—all payments to children "being reckoned as part of their ultimate share"—and left his wife the liferent of his whole estate, "the same to be realised and divided equally on her death among" his "children, share and share alike, the issue of predeceasing children taking among them the share which would have fallen to their parents if in life." Held that the estate vested in the children of the testator a morte testatoris subject to defeasance in the event of their predeceasing the liferentrix leaving issue. Opinion reserved as to whether defeasance took place on a child's issue surviving their parent irrespective of whether or not they survived the liferentrix.

Penny's Trustees v Adam, 1908 S.C. 662; 45 S.L.R. 481; 15 S.L.T. 908.

(244)

Gift over to heirs of the body—Defeasance in favour of grandchildren.

A testator directed his trustees to hold his estate for his wife and sister successively in liferent, and after the death of the longest liver to pay a legacy to A "and the heirs to be procreated of her body." Held that the legacy vested in the legatee a morte, subject to defeasance in favour of children who survived the liferentrices, and of grandchildren per stirpes in the event of the death of children before the survivor of the liferentrices.

M'Kune's Trustees v M'Kerrow, (O.H.) 1908, 16 S.L.T. 18.

(245)

Direction to divide among children on youngest attaining majority.

A testator directed his trustees, after paying annuities to his two sisters, to pay one-third of the remaining income of his estate to his widow, and to pay or apply the other two-thirds of the income for behoof of his children until the youngest surviving child should attain the age of twenty-one. He further provided—"Upon the youngest surviving child attaining twenty-one years complete my trustees shall, after setting apart sufficient portions of my means and estate to meet the foregoing provisions in favour of my sisters and wife, divide the residue equally amongst my children, the lawful issue of any of them predeceasing being entitled equally among them to the share which would have fallen to their parent if alive." The testator was survived by his wife and by four children, one of whom died without issue before the youngest had attained twenty-one. Held that a one-fourth share of the estate had vested in the predeceasing child a morte testatoris, subject to defeasance only in the event of that child predeceasing the period of division leaving issue. Authorities on the doctrine of vesting subject to defeasance examined.

Allan's Trustees v Allan, 1918 S.C. 164; 55 S.L.R. 212; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 76.

4. VESTING SUBJECT TO MORE THAN ONE CONTINGENCY.

(246)

Opinion (per Lord Mackenzie) that "there is no reason in principle why a fee should not vest subject to divestiture upon one or more than one contingency."

Bannatyne's Trustees v Watson's Trustees, 1914 S.C. 693; 51 S.L.R. 605; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 469.

(247)

Divestiture on occurrence of alternative events.

A testator gave his widow a life interest of his whole estate, and provided that on her death, after payment of certain legacies to his sons, the residue of his estate should be divided among his children. Further, he declared that in the event of the death of a son before the time of payment of the legacies and shares of residue, either leaving issue, or without issue but survived by a widow, such son's share of the estate should be divided, in the first alternative among the son's issue, and in the second alternative, after providing an alimentary life interest for the son's widow, among the surviving children of the testator and the issue of decessors. Held that the legacies and shares of residue bequeathed to the testator's sons vested in them a morte testatoris, subject to defeasance in the case of such of them as should predecease the time of payment either leaving issue, or without issue, but survived by a widow.

Coulson's Trustees v Coulson's Trustees,
1911 S.C. 881; 48 S.L.R. 814; 1911, 2
S.L.T. 39.

(248)

Gift to A if in life, whom failing, gift to lifeinterests and to B, whom failing, to C in fee—Vesting in C subject to defeasance if A should be in life or B survive lifeinterests.

In 1816 a testator disposed her estate to A, his son, if in life, and the heirs of his body, whom failing, to the testator's daughters in life interest, and after the decease of the survivor of them to B, his grandson, and heirs of his body, whom failing by predecease without issue, to C, the testator's nephew and his heirs in fee. The testator died in 1823. It appeared from a proof that in 1802 the testator received information that his son, a sailor, had been drowned abroad, and that nothing had occurred to throw doubt on the correctness of this information. The testator was survived by his daughters, his grandson, and his nephew. The grandson predeceased the last survivor of the lifeinterests (who died in 1872) without leaving issue. In an action brought subsequent to 1872, held (1) that the son (who would have been ninety years old if alive) was dead without issue; (2) that on the testator's death the fee vested in his nephew, subject to defeasance in the event of its appearing that the son survived the testator or left issue, and also in the event of the grandson surviving all the lifeinterests; and (3) that as the grandson predeceased the last survivor of the lifeinterests the fee never vested in him.

M'LAY v Borland, 1876, 3 R. 1124.

(249)

Gift to A in life interest and her issue in fee, whom failing, to B, whom failing, to his children.

A testator, by his trust settlement, directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate for his daughter in life interest and her issue in fee, whom failing, to transfer half of it to his brother, whom failing, to the brother's surviving children. The brother survived the testator, but predeceased the life interest without leaving issue. Held that the half of the residue had not vested in the brother. Opinion that there is no reason in principle why a vested right of fee should not be conferred, subject to divestiture in any one of a number of events.

M'Donald's Trustees v Gordon, (O.H.)
1909, 2 S.L.T. 321.

(250)

Two lifeinterests of which one might become fee.

A testator directed his trustees to hold the residue of his estate for his wife in life interest, and on her death to hold one-half of it "for behoof of my said daughter, A B, absolutely and in fee if she be then married, but if then unmarried, then and in that case for her life interest use only, and on her decease for the behoof of the son or sons in equal proportions of my said nephew, C D, in fee." The widow survived the testator, but predeceased A B, who died unmarried. C D had two sons, E and F. E predeceased A B, but F survived her. Held that nothing vested in E, because there was no ground for the application of the doctrine of vesting subject to defeasance, since not only were two lifeinterests interposed, but one of them might in a certain event become a fee.

Craigie's Trustee v Thornhill's Executor,
(O.H.) 1896, 4 S.L.T. 95.

5. VESTING IN CLASS SUBJECT TO DEFEASANCE IN FAVOUR OF NEW MEMBERS.

[See IV. 2, supra.]

6. MISCELLANEOUS.

(251)

Gift to B in the event of A not recovering sanity.

A testator bequeathed an annuity to his widow, and directed that the remainder of the income of his estate should be applied in maintaining his son in an asylum. In the event of the son recovering the use of his mental faculties, the whole estate was to be made over to him. If he should not recover, then, on the death of his wife and son, the testator bequeathed certain legacies to named individuals and societies, and left the residue of his estate to an infirmary and other charitable institutions. Held that the legacies vested in the legatees a morte testatoris, subject to defeasance in the event of the testator's son recovering his mental faculties.

Yule's Trustees v Deans, 1919 S.C. 570; 56
S.L.R. 541; 1919, 2 S.L.T. 129.

(252)

Gift to children of marriage—Destination over to husband's next of kin.

In a postnuptial contract of marriage the spouses conveyed "each of them to the other, in case of his or her survivancy, in liferent," and to the children of the marriage in fee, their whole estate and effects, heritable and moveable. The deed further declared, "that in the event of the dissolution of the said marriage by the predecease of any of the said spouses without leaving children, or of the decease of all such children during the lifetime of the survivor," then "it shall be in the power of the said married parties severally to dispose by testament of the proper share of the said funds and effects belonging to the said parties severally . . . and failing any such disposition . . . the whole funds and estate" belonging to the husband "shall fall to and become the property of his own nearest of kin," and the wife's property to her nearest of kin. The husband died without leaving any further deed, and was survived by his widow and by one child. The latter died, leaving one child. Both predeceased the widow. Held that on the husband's death the fee of his moveable estate vested in the only child of the marriage, and that as he was his father's "nearest of kin," in the sense of the deed, his right was not subject to divestiture in the event (which happened) of his predeceasing his mother, the liferentrix.

Opinion (per Lord Watson) that if the child had not been his father's next of kin, the vesting of the child's right would have been subject to defeasance in the event of the child predeceasing the liferentrix.

Gregory's Trustees v Alison, 1889, 16 R. (H.L.) 10; 14 App.Cas. 124; 26 S.L.R. 787.

(253)

Destination of fee on death of liferenters without issue to three brothers or the survivor—Vesting in last survivor.

By a declaration addressed by two sisters to their three brothers, the sisters declared that certain bank stock (to the purchase price of which each of the five had contributed an equal part), although vested in the sisters' names, was held by them in trust (1) for their parents and the survivor of them in liferent; (2) after the death of their parents, for the liferent of the sisters jointly and the survivor of them, "subject to which liferents the fee of said stock shall fall and belong" one-half to the children of each sister, and "failing our having children, the fee of said stock shall fall and belong to you our brothers equally or the survivor of you." On the death of the parents the sisters and the survivor of them enjoyed the liferent. Neither of the sisters married, and the three brothers all predeceased both the sisters. In a special case presented after the death of the survivor of the sisters, held (1) that the deed fell to be construed as if it were a joint settlement of the fund, and (2) that the fee had vested on the death of the second brother in the last surviving brother, subject to defeasance in the event of the sisters having children, and that his representatives were entitled to the whole fund.

Gardner v Hamblin, 1900, 2 F. 679; 37 S.L.R. 486; 7 S.L.T. 412.

(254)

Gift to A and B in liferent and their children in fee—Failing children who should attain majority gift to C in liferent and her children in fee—Destination over in event of C leaving no children or of her children not attaining majority—C's son attaining majority subsequent to testator's death—Vesting at majority subject to defeasance.

Taylor v Gilbert's Trustees, 1878, 5 R. (H.L.) 217; 3 App.Cas. 1287; 15 S.L.R. 776, No. 226, supra.

(255)

Destination to R failing issue of liferenter—Failing R, destination to R's issue, whom failing, to persons named or survivor.

Testamentary trustees were directed to hold a legacy in trust for H in liferent, and for her children or their issue in fee. Failing issue of the liferentrix the fee was destined to her brother R, whom failing, to his issue, whom all failing, to three members of the family of C nominatim and the survivors and survivor of them, the issue of predeceasing taking their parents' shares. A residuary clause in the settlement was declared to include any legacy that lapsed. All the legatees named to whom the fee was destined survived the testator, but all predeceased the liferentrix without issue. On the death of the liferentrix without issue, the legacy was claimed by the representatives of the last survivor of the family of C as having vested in that party on the predecease of R and the other two members of that family. Held that the legacy had lapsed and had fallen into residue.

Bannatyne's Trustees v Watson's Trustees, 1914 S.C. 693; 51 S.L.R. 605; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 469.

(256)

Direct conveyance of residue to liferenters and to A, whom failing, to B, whom failing to C in fee—Direction that residue be divided among A, B, and C on death of last liferenter.

By mortis causa disposition and settlement the granter disposed and conveyed the residue of his whole means and estate, heritable and moveable, to his two sisters nominatim, jointly and to the longest liver of them in liferent, and to his nephew James, whom failing, to his nephew Thomas, whom failing, to his niece Isabella, in fee, "but divisible in the events and in the manner after mentioned," whom all failing, to his own nearest heirs in fee. Then followed the declaration that on the death of the longest liver of the liferenters the residue of the estate should "be divided into as many equal parts or shares as there shall then be existing in number of the said James, Thomas, and Isabella, and each of them then alive shall be entitled to an equal share," and if only one should be then alive he or she should be entitled to the whole. James predeceased the testator; Thomas and Isabella both survived him, but predeceased the longest liver of the liferenters. Thomas survived Isabella.

Held that the whole residue vested a morte testatoris in Thomas, subject to the condition that if Thomas and Isabella survived the liferenters the residue should be divided between them, and that if Isabella alone survived she should take the whole; and that neither of these events having happened the vesting of the fee a morte testatoris in Thomas had become absolute.

Bruce's Trustees v Bruce's Trustees, 1898, 25 R. 796; 35 S.L.R. 598.

(257)

Gift to family of children — Exclusion of child succeeding to entailed estate.

By antenuptial marriage contract the wife conveyed her estate to herself in fee, and, in the event of her predeceasing her husband, to him in liferent allanarly and the children of the marriage in fee, excluding the eldest child in the event of his succeeding to estate through the husband exclusively of the other children. The wife predeceased the husband, survived by four children, of whom the eldest son predeceased his father, and the second son succeeded to an entailed estate on his father's death. Held (1) that the wife's estate vested in the children at her death, (2) that one-fourth vested in the eldest son although as heir-apparent to his father he had the prospect of succeeding to the entailed estate, and (3) that the share of the wife's estate which vested in the second suffered defeasance on the second son succeeding to the entailed estate.

Robertson, 1869, 7 M. 1114; 41 J. 621; 6 S.L.R. 709.

IX. ACCELERATION OF VESTING.

1. SURRENDER OR FORFEITURE OF LIFERENT.

(258)

Vesting suspended until widow's death.

A testator directed his trustees to pay to his widow an annuity and to accumulate the balance of the income till her death, and thereafter to distribute his estate among his children in a certain manner, declaring that if any of them should predecease the term of payment their provisions should lapse and become part of the residue, unless in the event of the predeceaser leaving lawful issue, in which case the children of the predeceaser were to take their parent's share. The widow repudiated the annuity provided to her and took her legal rights. Held that the vesting of the children's interests was suspended until the widow's death, and that her repudiation of the annuity had no effect on the vesting.

Muirhead v Muirhead, 1890, 17 R. (H.L.) 45; 15 App.Cas. 289; 27 S.L.R. 917.

(259)

Vesting suspended until widow's death or second marriage.

A testator by his settlement left his widow an annuity of £50, to continue so long as she remained unmarried, and directed his trustees on her death or second marriage to pay the residue of his estate over to certain relatives in certain proportions, with a conditional institution of issue and a clause of survivorship, it being expressly declared that "their interests should vest only upon the arrival of the period for realisation and division." The widow repudiated the settlement and took her legal rights. Held that the widow's repudiation of the settlement did not accelerate the period of vesting of the residue.

Ross's Trustees v Ross, 1894, 21 R. 927; 31 S.L.R. 775; 2 S.L.T. 119.

(260)

A testator gave his wife the liferent of his estate and directed his trustees on her death or re-marriage to hold his estate for behoof of his children. One-half of the children's shares was to be payable to them on their becoming twenty-five, and the other half on their becoming twenty-eight. There was an express declaration that the children's shares should not become vested interests until the periods of payment. The widow repudiated her testamentary provisions and claimed her legal rights. All the children had attained the age of twenty-eight. Held that the vesting of the children's provisions was not accelerated by the widow's action, and that the trust estate could not be distributed until her death.

Dallas' Trustees v Dallas, (O.H.) 1905, 13 S.L.T. 332.

(261)

Vesting suspended until death or second marriage of widow and youngest child attaining majority.

A testator by his trust disposition and settlement directed his trustees, after the death or second marriage of his widow, to convey the residue to his children who should be alive when the youngest of them, or of the survivors of them, should attain the age of twenty-one, equally among them, declaring that the issue of children predeceasing the period of payment should be entitled to the share to which their parent would have been entitled if alive, and providing that these provisions should not vest until the period of payment. Held that upon the construction of the settlement vesting of the residue was postponed until the death or second marriage of the widow, and not merely until the date when the youngest of the children attained twenty-one, and that the period of vesting was not accelerated by the widow's having elected to claim her legal rights.

Gray's Trustees v Gray, 1907 S.C. 54; 44 S.L.R. 39; 14 S.L.T. 381.

(262)

Legacies conditional and unconditional payable on death of widow.

A testator in his settlement directed his trustees to pay to his widow the income of the residue of his estate in full of her rights, but with power to her "to consent to payment of all or one or more of the legacies" thereafter bequeathed, "... so as to admit of payment thereof during her life." He then directed the payment of a number of legacies "upon the death of my said wife, or should she surrender her life" over any part thereof so as to admit of payment, then for payment of such part on such surrender." Some of the legacies were unconditional, others were bequeathed subject to a clause of survivorship and conditions in favour of the issue of the legatees. He also directed that any surplus of residue after payment of legacies should be at the disposal of the trustees to apply in augmenting all or any of the legacies, or in helping institutions akin to those to which legacies had been given. After the husband's death, the widow elected not to accept the provisions of the settlement in her favour, and claimed her legal rights, and thereafter executed a formal deed in which she confirmed this election and surrendered her whole rights under the settlement, and consented, so far as she competently could in exercise of the power conferred upon her in the settlement, to the immediate payment of the whole of the legacies. Held (1) that the widow, having surrendered the whole of the provisions of the settlement in her favour, was debarred from exercising the power of consent; (2) that the unconditional legacies, having vested indefeasibly at the death of the testator, were, owing to the surrender of the life"ent, payable immediately, provided the trustees had sufficient funds to pay all the other legacies; (3) that the contingent legacies, in which vesting was postponed until the death of the widow, were not payable until that event, the period of vesting being in no way accelerated by the surrender of the life"ent.

Jacks's Trustees v Jacks, 1913 S.C. 815; 50 S.L.R. 536; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 341.

(263)

Postponement of payment solely for purpose of protecting provisions repudiated.

A testator directed his trustees to give his widow the life"ent of his furniture and an annuity of £70, and further directed that upon the death of his spouse, and the youngest of his children having attained majority, or the whole of them being married, his trustees were to "divide" the residue of the heritable and moveable estate into as many shares as the number of his children then surviving and of children who had died leaving issue surviving, and to pay one share to each surviving son and one share to the surviving children of each predeceasing child. The shares of daughters were to be held by the trustees for behoof of them in life"ent and of their children in fee. The testator was survived by a widow and by six daughters, all of whom were married. The widow renounced her provisions, and claimed terce and jus relictæ. The terce amounted to £160 per annum. Held that as it appeared from the deed that the truster had postponed the period of division to the date of the widow's death for no other purpose than to give effect to the provisions in her favour, which had now lapsed, the period had arrived for dividing the residue, and that the subsistence of the legal burden of terce was no impediment to the division.

Alexander's Trustees, 1870, 8 M. 414; 42 J. 193; 7 S.L.R. 240.

(264)

A testator directed his trustees, in the event of his leaving no issue, to pay to his widow a free yearly annuity of £200, and gave her the life"ent use of a house, "and whatever further interest and annual income my said estates shall yield . . . shall be accumulated during the lifetime of my said wife by my said trustees, and form part of my estates." The estate yielded a clear return of more than £300 a year, after paying the widow's annuity, which, in the event, which happened, of the testator leaving no issue, was the only provision to be paid or provided for during her life. On her death the trustees were to pay to the children of J M "surviving at said period the sum of £100 each," and an annuity of £100 a year to the brother of the truster's widow, "provided he return to this country and reside here, and provided my said trustees consider that he requires the same." The residue was to form a fund to be vested in certain persons ex officio for the establishment of a charitable foundation, to be styled after the truster, "The Lucas Trust." Held, on the widow's repudiation of the settlement, that the trustees and patrons of "The Lucas Trust" were entitled to an immediate conveyance of the residue, subject to existing and contingent interests.

Lucas's Trustees v "The Lucas Trust," 1881, 8 R. 502; 18 S.L.R. 363.

(265)

Son rejecting life"ent and claiming legitim—Gift to son's daughter in life"ent on son's death—No acceleration.

A testatrix directed her trustees to hold one-half of the residue of her estate for her son in life"ent, and, after his death, for his daughter in life"ent and her issue in fee, whom failing for certain other beneficiaries. The testamentary provisions were declared to be in full of legal rights. The son elected to claim legitim, and thereby lost all right to the conventional provisions in his favour. Held that, although the son had lost all right to his life"ent of one-half of the residue, the succession to that life"ent did not open immediately to his daughter, her right to it being dependent on his death and her survivance.

Rose's Trustees v Rose, 1916 S.C. 327; 53 S.L.R. 630; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 382.

(266)

Power of trustees to make advances.

A testator left his wife the life"ent of his estate and further directed his trustees "on the death of my said wife" to apply the residue for behoof of C, his adopted daughter, and to expend the income or part of the capital on C's education and maintenance until she should attain majority or be married, and that on either of these events happening the trustees should either pay over the estate to C or settle it on her. The testator was survived by his wife, who rejected her testamentary provisions and claimed her legal rights, and by C, who was a minor. On C attaining majority held (per Lord Young and Lord Trayner) that, whether the fee had vested in C or not, the trustees were entitled (1) to pay her part of the capital of the residue to enable her to repay advances made to her for maintenance and education, and (2) to make to her for the future an allowance out of income during the widow's survivance.

Cairns v Cairns' Trustees, 1901, 3 F. 545; 38 S.L.R. 364; 8 S.L.T. 474.

(267)

Liferent of whole capital — Liferent reducible to one-third on second marriage of liferenter—Effect of second marriage on vesting of remaining two-thirds — Survivorship clause referred to period of payment.

A testatrix directed her trustees to pay to her husband during his lifetime the net income of her whole means and estate, restrictable to one-third in the event of his entering into a second marriage. "Upon the death of my said husband, if he shall survive me, or at my own death if he shall predecease me," the trustees were to hold and apply, pay and convey, "the fee or capital of the residue of my said means and estate," to her children equally on majority, or, in the case of daughters, marriage or majority. "In the event of any of them predeceasing the period of payment and conveyance," there was a destination over to issue, and failing issue to survivors equally among them per stirpes of the share which their parent would have taken on survivance, and; further, in the event of any of them predeceasing the said period without leaving lawful issue, then the share of such predeceaser was to accrete to the other children surviving. The settlement did not contain any provision as to the disposal of the income which would be set free if the husband married. The testatrix was survived by her husband and by three children. In a special case, presented after the children had all attained majority, held that vesting as regarded the whole capital was postponed until the death of the liferenter.

Hunt's Trustees v Hunt, 1906, 8 F. 764; 43 S.L.R. 432; 13 S.L.T. 920.

2. VESTING IN LAST SURVIVOR OF CLASS.

(268)

Class reduced to one before period of survivorship.

A testator directed his trustees to pay the residue of his estate to two of his sons, A and B, on the younger, B, attaining the age of twenty-five. In the event of the death of either son "before the succession opens to him" without leaving issue, his share was to accrete to the survivor. B died in minority. At that date A, the elder son, had not attained twenty-five. Held that the whole of the residue vested in A on the death of B.

Mackie v Gladstone, 1876, 13 S.L.R. 368.

(269)

A testator directed his trustees to pay the whole annual produce of his heritable estate to his widow, and after her death "to denude, convey, and make over to my two sons, George and John, the whole heritable properties . . . declaring that if either of my said sons shall predecease my said spouse without lawful issue, then my said trustees shall denude and convey the said several subjects . . . to my surviving son; but should such predeceasing son leave lawful issue, then such issue shall come in their father's room and stead, and my said trustee shall denude and convey the father's share to such issue." Held that on the death of one of the sons without issue during the subsistence of the liferent, the fee of the heritage vested in the survivor, although the survivor also predeceased the liferentrix.

Lindsay's Trustees, 1885, 12 R. 964; 22 S.L.R. 638.

(270)

Express provision as to vesting.

Lawrie's Trustees v Lawrie, 1905, 7 F. 910; 42 S.L.R. 693; 13 S.L.T. 246, No. 200, supra.

(271)

Predecease of whole class — Vesting subject to defeasance.

Gardner v Hamblin, 1900, 2 F. 679; 37 S.L.R. 486; 7 S.L.T. 412, No. 253, supra.

(272)

Last survivor predeceasing liferenter—Legacy falling into residue.

Bannatynes's Trustees v Watson's Trustees, 1914 S.C. 693; 51 S.L.R. 605; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 469, No. 255, supra.

3. CONDITION ATTACHED TO GIFT BECOMING IMPOSSIBLE.

(273)

Suspensive condition.

A testatrix bequeathed to each of certain nieces, including one named Christina Purves, the sum of £600, and made similar bequests to her nephews, and bequeathed the residue of her estate to Christina Purves, "but there shall be no division of my estate till my niece Christina Purves attain the age of twenty-one . . . and should any one of my said nieces die unmarried before my niece Christina Purves attain the age of twenty-one their said share shall be divided equally between the surviving sisters." It was declared that all these provisions were to be alimentary. "When my niece Christina Purves reaches the age of twenty-one each one's share will become his or her absolute property, and can be disposed of by will or otherwise as the legatees desire." All the nieces survived the testatrix. Christina died unmarried before attaining twenty-one years of age. Held (1) that the survivorship clause above quoted applied to Christina as well as to the other nieces, and that it suspended vesting; (2) that therefore no right to the legacy of £600 or to the residue had vested in Christina, and that these provisions fell by her death to her surviving sisters; and (3) that the provisions in favour of nephews and nieces vested at the death of Christina, the condition which suspended vesting having become impossible.

Purves's Executor v Purves, 1898, 25 R. 1084; 35 S.L.R. 852; 6 S.L.T. 3.

(274)

Gift to sons payable on majority of youngest—Youngest son dying in minority.

A testator directed his trustees to convey certain heritable estates to his sons on the youngest attaining majority. The testator was survived by three sons, the youngest of whom died in minority at a date when the other had attained majority. Held that vesting took place in the two elder sons on the death of the youngest.

Roberts' Trustees v Roberts, 1903, 5 F. 541; 40 S.L.R. 387; 10 S.L.T. 642.

(275)

Gift to children payable on youngest attaining twenty-five—Express declaration that vesting should take place on youngest child attaining twenty-five—Claim by sole surviving child at age of twenty-three.

Lawrie's Trustees v Lawrie, 1905, 7 F. 910; 42 S.L.R. 693; 13 S.L.T. 246, No. 200, supra.

4. EXERCISE OF POWER OF APPOINTMENT.

(276)

Gift failing apportionment to children surviving a certain date—Exercise of power prior to date in question.

By his marriage contract, C, an heir of entail in possession, in exercise of a power under the entail, bound the succeeding heirs of entail to pay to the marriage contract trustees a sum equal to three years' rent of the entailed estate for behoof of the children of the marriage not succeeding to the entailed estate in such shares as C should appoint, and failing appointment for the younger children who should be alive at C's death equally or their issue. As a further provision for his younger children C assigned to his trustees certain policies of insurance on his life under similar conditions as to apportionment. In contemplation of the marriage of R, his third son, C executed a deed appointing to R or his lawful issue or assigns £1500 as his share of the total trust funds. This deed was declared to be delivered on execution and to be irrevocable, and R was taken bound to assign his rights under it to his marriage contract trustees. R predeceased his father. Held that R's right to the £1500 vested at the date of the appointment in his favour.

Chancellor's Trustees v Sharples' Trustees, 1896, 23 R. 435; 33 S.L.R. 313; 3 S.L.T. 250.

(277)

By antenuptial marriage contract the wife's estate was conveyed to trustees on trust to pay the income to the spouses and the survivor; "and after the death of the longest liver" the trustees were to be bound "to pay over or convey the said trust estate" to the children of the marriage "in such shares or proportions, if more than one such child, as may be appointed" by the spouses or the survivor, and failing appointment "the said trustees shall be bound to pay or convey the same to the said children equally, and to the issue of such child or children as may have predeceased." There was a destination over to the wife or her heirs and assignees in the event of there being no children or of their predeceasing their parents. The wife survived her husband and executed a deed of appointment of the whole fund in favour of two children of the marriage. Held that the persons entitled to the fee of the trust fund, failing appointment, were the children in life at the death of the surviving spouse and the issue of predeceasers; that these persons were the sole objects of the power; that under the marriage contract vesting was suspended until the death of the surviving spouse, and that it was not accelerated by the execution of the deed of appointment.

Cuming's Trustee v Cuming, 1896, 24 R. 153; 34 S.L.R. 77; 4 S.L.T. 146.

(278)

Direction to pay on death of liferentrix to children or survivors—Marriage contract.

By antenuptial marriage contract the husband assigned certain policies of insurance on his life to trustees, directing them to pay the income of the proceeds to his wife, if she survived him, until her second marriage or her death, and, upon her death or second marriage, to pay one-half of the fee to the children of his former marriage "and to the survivor or survivors of them," and the other half to the children of his intended marriage, reserving to himself and to his intended wife jointly, and to the survivor of them, power "to apportion the fee of the said provisions" amongst the children "of my former and present marriage according to the exact proportions hereby settled upon them respectively." After marriage and the birth of children the spouses executed a deed of apportionment whereby they apportioned the one-half of the proceeds of the policies falling to the children of the former marriage. One of the children predeceased the widow. Held that under the marriage contract the fee of the fund destined to the children of the former marriage vested at the death of the second wife, and consequently that the representatives of the predeceasing child took nothing.

Stirling's Trustees v Stirling, 1893, 1 F. 215; 36 S.L.R. 194; 6 S.L.T. 223.

(279)

Appointment in favour of predeceasing child.

A testator by his trust disposition and settlement left the residue of his estate to his sister and her husband in life-erent and to those of their children who should be in life at the death of the survivor of their parents in fee. He also directed that certain farm leases should be made over to his sister and her husband successively in life-erent and to such of her sons as his sister should appoint by any writing under her hand in fee; and, failing appointment, to her eldest son, and, if he would not accept, then to the next eldest son who should be alive at the death of the testator's sister and her husband, and so on to her sons in succession. After the testator's death a family arrangement was made under which the testator's sister and her husband renounced their rights of life-erent in the leases in favour of one of their sons, who took them over and entered into possession of the farms, renouncing all right to any share in the residue. This son died in his mother's lifetime, thus predeceasing the date at which the residue of the estate vested in her children. Held that the testator's sister had validly exercised the power of appointment in favour of the son who predeceased her.

M'Dougal's Trustee v Heinemann, 1918 S.C. (H.L.) 6; 55 S.L.R. 80; 1917, 2 S.L.T. 221.

5. DIVORCE.

(280)

Gift of fee to married woman on husband's predecease—Husband divorced.

By trust disposition and settlement a testator directed his trustees to hold the share of his estate falling to his married daughter for her alimentary life-erent use alienably and for her children in fee, but declared that in the event "of her husband predeceasing" her, the provisions of life-erent and fee should cease, and directed the trustees to "make payment to her of her whole share and interest in the estate absolutely." After the testator's death the daughter obtained decree of divorce against her husband, and thereafter required her father's trustees to pay over to her the capital of her share in her father's estate. Held that the decree of divorce was not equivalent to the "predecease" of the husband, and that the daughter was entitled to a life-erent only of the estate so long as he lived.

Taylor's Trustees v Barnett, 1893, 20 R. 1032; 31 S.L.R. 11; 1 S.L.T. 155.

(281)

The father of a woman who had been deserted by her husband executed three years after the desertion a trust disposition and settlement, whereby he directed his trustees to hold certain heritable subjects for her "during the subsistence of the marriage between her" and her husband "or otherwise during their joint lives" and to pay the rents to his daughter "until the dissolution of her marriage" by the death of one or other of them." If the daughter survived her husband the trustees were directed to convey the subjects to her "in absolute right," but in the event of the daughter predeceasing her husband the fee was to go to the children. Four years after the father's death the daughter divorced her husband, and called on the trustees to convey the subjects to her. Held that the daughter was not entitled to the fee of the subjects until the natural death of her husband.

Mason v Beattie's Trustees, 1878, 6 R. 37; 16 S.L.R. 6.

(282)

Marriage contract provisions to children—"Dissolution of marriage by death"—Provisions payable out of wife's estate—Wife obtaining divorce.

Under an antenuptial contract of marriage the spouses each contributed a sum to the marriage contract funds. The contract provided that "on the dissolution of the said marriage by the death of either of said contracting parties," if there were children of the marriage alive, the trustees should pay the annual proceeds of the whole fund to the surviving spouse, and "after the death of such survivor," the principal to the children. It was further provided that on the dissolution of the marriage by the decease of the said wife without issue, or leaving issue who should predecease their father, the trustees should pay to the husband the principal of his contribution, and the annual proceeds of his wife's contribution to the fund, and at his death the principal of the latter sum to the wife's heirs and assignees whomsoever. There was a similar provision with regard to the funds applicable to the case of the predecease of the husband in like circumstances. The wife obtained decree of divorce against the husband on the ground of adultery, and thereafter died before him, leaving a daughter of the marriage. Held that the capital of the wife's contribution to the fund would not vest in her daughter until the death of the divorced husband, and that the annual proceeds thereof fell into the wife's executors.

Harvey's Judicial Factor v Spittal's Curator ad litem, 1893, 20 R. 1016; 31 S.L.R. 13; 1 S.L.T. 155.

(283)

Payable on death of spouses—Wife obtaining divorce—Daughter not entitled to payment till death of surviving parent—Opinions on vesting reserved.

Dawson v Smart, 1903, 5 F. (H.L.) 24; [1903] A.C. 457; 40 S.L.R. 879; 11 S.L.T. 321. HUSBAND AND WIFE, No. 345.

X. VESTING OF DIRECT GIFTS OF HERITAGE.

(284)

Vesting subject to defeasance.

Observed (per Lord Watson)—“The vesting and divestiture of a proper feudal fee, as distinguished from a heritable jus crediti, is . . . alien to the principles of the law of Scotland.”

Studd v Cook, 1883, 10 R. (H.L.) 53; 8 App.Cas. 577; 20 S.L.R. 566.

(285)

Observations on the doctrine of vesting subject to defeasance and its application to direct destinations of heritage.

Turner v Gaw, 1894, 21 R. 563; 31 S.L.R. 447; 1 S.L.T. 526.

(286)

Fee in pendente—Defeasance.

A testator, by a holograph will, left a heritable estate by direct destination to his two sisters equally between them and to the survivor; and he provided that, should neither of them have children, the destination of the estate should be to them in life-rent only, and to a charitable institution in fee; but that, should either of them have a child, the life-rent destination should lapse, and the estate should vest in his said sisters or sister in fee. Held that, as the proviso involved a feudal impossibility, viz., a suspended fee of heritage, it was of no effect, and could not qualify the original gift of fee to the sisters; and, accordingly, that the estate vested in them in fee a morte testatoris. Observations (per Lord Johnston) on the application of the doctrine of vesting subject to defeasance to destinations of heritage.

Young's Executrix v Gray's Hospital, 1917 S.C. 707; 54 S.L.R. 554; 1917, 2 S.L.T. 91.

(287)

—Gift to A if in life—Failing A, destination to life-renters and to B, whom failing, to C in fee—Vesting in C, subject to contingencies of A being in life and of B surviving life-renters.

M'Lay v Borland, 1876, 3 R. 1124, No. 248, supra.

(288)

Destination to heirs of body of life-rentrix—Whom failing, to persons named and the respective heirs of their bodies in fee.

By general disposition and settlement A disposed a share of her heritable and moveable estate to B in life-rent allenerly and to heirs of B's body in fee, whom failing, to C, D, E, and F, equally between them and the respective heirs of their bodies in fee. C survived the testator, and was survived by B, the life-rentrix, who died unmarried. C left an heir of his body, who survived the life-rentrix. Held that no fee had vested in C, as the heir of his body was a conditional institute.

Turner v Gaw, 1894, 21 R. 563; 31 S.L.R. 447; 1 S.L.T. 526.

(289)

Destination to A and B, and on the death of either without issue, to survivor—Mixed estate.

A testator assigned and disposed to A and B equally between them, and in the case of the death of either without heirs of his or her body to the survivor of them, his whole real and personal effects whatsoever. A and B both survived the testator, and A predeceased B without leaving issue. Held that A and B each took a vested interest in one-half of the testator's estate a morte testatoris.

Paul v Home, 1872, 10 M. 937; 44 J. 519; 9 S.L.R. 594.

(290)

No gift till death of life-renter.

A testator left to his wife, who survived him, “for her sole use and enjoyment during the term of her natural life” certain lands, “and after the death of my said wife, I hereby dispose, convey, and make over my said lands . . . to C, and the heirs whatsoever of his body; whom failing,” to the brothers and sisters of C in their order; whom failing, to a certain series of heirs. C survived him. Held that a right had vested in C a morte testatoris.

Fraser v Croft, 1898, 25 R. 496; 35 S.L.R. 420.

(291)

Direct disposition to A in life-rent only and “after his death” to trustees.

Edmond v Lord Provost of Aberdeen, 1898, 1 F. 154; 35 S.L.R. 193; 5 S.L.T. 230. SUCCESSION, No. 184.

(292)

Destination to C, D, and E, or survivors or survivor—Heritage—Mutual settlement.

Five ladies, who were vested equally in heritable subjects, granted a mortis causa disposition, whereby they disposed the subjects to “C, D, and E, or the survivors or survivor of them.” D predeceased the longest liver of the granters. Held that, on the death of the last survivor of the granters, the subjects vested in C and E as the survivors of the dispositive at that date.

Chancellor v Mosman, 1872, 10 M. 995; 44 J. 557; 9 S.L.R. 646.

(293)

Life-rent of residue to widow—Gift of fee to nephew—Destination in event of nephew dying without heirs-male of his body—Clause of reversion.

A testator left the life-rent of his whole estate to his widow. With regard to the fee, he provided, inter alia, “I leave to my nephew, J F W, my estate of B, but . . . in the event of my said nephew dying without leaving any lawful heir-male of his body, then and in that event my said lands, A B, are to revert back to my nephew, J F B.” J F W survived the testator, but predeceased the widow unmarried. Held that the estate, A B, vested in him a morte testatoris.

Hamilton v Ritchie, 1894, 21 R. (H.L.) 35; [1894] A.C. 310; 31 S.L.R. 934; 2 S.L.T. 91.

(294)

Destination in lease.

Certain subjects were leased for 950 years to P "and his heirs as after-mentioned," and, failing him, "then the whole subjects to and in liferent only to the present wife of the said A P . . . and after the death of the said spouses . . . then to the children of their marriage equally between them, share and share alike, in fee." A P was survived by his wife. Three children of the marriage were alive at the date of the lease, two of whom survived their father. Held that the right to the lease, subject to the widow's liferent, vested on the death of the father in the two children then alive to the extent of one-half each.

Marquis v Prentice, 1896, 23 R. 595; 33 S.L.R. 415; 3 S.L.T. 314.

(295)

To A in liferent and B, C, and D and issue and survivors in fee.

A testator made a direct disposition of his whole estate to A in liferent, and "after her decease" to B, C, and D, her children, in fee. If any of the children, B, C, and D, predeceased the testator leaving issue, the share accruing to such child was to belong to the issue, and, failing issue, was to go to the surviving children and the issue of any predeceasing child. B, C, and D all predeceased A without leaving issue, B being the last survivor. Held that vesting took place a morte testatoris, subject to the survivorship clause, and that the representatives of B were entitled to the fund.

Christie's Trustees v Lawson's Executor, (O.H.) 1919, 1 S.L.T. 106.

XI. VESTING OF INTER VIVOS GIFTS.

(296)

Trust deed—Liferent to A and his wife, with fee to children.

A took the title to heritable subjects which he had purchased in the names of certain persons, who granted a declaration of trust bearing that they held the subjects in trust, inter alia, for the payment of the free yearly proceeds to A during his life, and after his death to his wife, if she survived him, for their liferent uses allanarly; and after the determination of the foresaid liferents, in trust for A's children, in such shares and proportions as might be fixed by A, and failing apportionment, share and share alike; declaring that the fee of the shares should be payable after the determination of the said liferents, and after the whole children who should have survived A and his wife, and who should be alive, had attained majority, or at such other times after the determination of the said liferents as should be fixed by A. A died, survived by his wife and without fixing the shares of the children.

Held that the children's shares of the estates vested at the execution and registration of the deed of declaration of trust in the children then born, and in the others as they came into existence.

Miller v Finlay's Trustees, 1875, 2 R. (H.L.) 1; 12 S.L.R. 630.

(297)

Disposition of heritage.

A and B, two brothers, executed a disposition bearing to be granted for certain good and onerous causes, whereby they disposed certain heritable subjects of which they were pro indiviso proprietors in trust for certain liferenters and for the six children of A nominatim in fee. The deed was not delivered at its date, but several years afterwards, when three of A's six children were dead, infetment in the subjects was taken in name of the trustees. Held that no vesting took place in the beneficiaries under the deed until the date of infetment.

Dunlop v M'Crae, 1884, 11 R. 1104; 21 S.L.R. 752.

(298)

Bank stock conveyed by owner to herself in liferent allanarly and her children in fee.

A lady, by her antenuptial contract of marriage, conveyed certain bank shares to herself in liferent, and, failing her, to her husband in liferent and to the children of the marriage equally in fee, but with power to her husband, and, failing him, to herself, to apportion the provisions thereby made for children, and, failing such apportionment, equally, the issue of a child dying before receiving its provisions having right to the parent's share. After the death of the husband, without exercising the power of apportionment, the wife, by a deed of transference, conveyed the shares to herself in liferent allanarly, and to the four children of the marriage nominatim equally in fee. The transfer bore that acceptance thereof was not to affect the rights and interests of the children under the marriage contract inter se. The children accepted the transfer. The wife died survived by all the children. Held that a right to the shares vested in the children upon their acceptance of the transfer.

Whyte v Robertson, 1890, 17 R. 708; 27 S.L.R. 555.

(299)

Gift after liferent to A, B and C—Survivorship clause taking effect "if one of them dies"—Inter vivos trust.

A letter addressed by an uncle to his niece bore that he had resolved to put into her hands, on trust for her three daughters, a sum of £1500, to be divided as specified, and continued, "My desire is that the half of the yearly interest of these sums shall be yours and your husband's, the other half of it to be paid to my wife during her life, then to fall to you. My wish is, that if one of your daughters dies, then her portion to be divided between the other two, and if a second dies, the survivor inherit the whole. If all your daughters are taken from you by death, then this money to be divided equally between" other persons. The money was at the same time paid to the niece or her husband. Held that by the letter of trust a joint liferent of the whole sum was conferred upon the niece and her husband and the survivor, and that no portion of the capital vested in any of the daughters till the death of both liferenters.

Spence v Paterson's Trustees, 1873, 1 R. 46.

(300)

Disputed succession—Compromise subject to special Act of Parliament being obtained—Date of vesting—Bankruptcy.

A person whose estates had been sequestrated obtained his discharge in 1863. In 1862 his wife and other heirs-portioners of a deceased relative obtained decree of reduction in absence, setting aside on the ground of uncertainty the settlement of the deceased, which excluded them. A suspension of the decree was brought by alleged beneficiaries, but no judgment was pronounced, the parties having agreed to a settlement subject to the condition that a special Act of Parliament should be obtained giving effect thereto. A special Act was obtained in 1866, whereby the bankrupt's wife became entitled to a share of the succession. Held that no right had vested in the bankrupt or his wife prior to the date when the special Act was passed, and therefore that the trustee was not entitled to have the wife's share transferred to him.

Turner's Trustee v Turner, 1868, 7 M. 6; 41 J. 6; 6 S.L.R. 5.

(301)

Addition to trust funds—Beneficiary predeceasing date of addition.

A man by inter vivos deed assigned two life policies to trustees for behoof of his wife in liferent and his children in fee, but excepted from the assignation all bonuses on the policies. Some years after he executed a further assignation renouncing the exception contained in the earlier deed and conveying the bonuses to the trustees for the purposes set forth in the first assignation. Two of the children predeceased the date of the second deed and two survived it. Held on the death of the liferentrix, who survived all her children, that although a share of the bonuses could not vest in the children who predeceased the second deed, the bonuses fell to be distributed in the same way as the remainder of the trust estate as provided by the first deed.

Arklay's Trustees v Arklay's Trustees, (O.H.) 1909, 2 S.L.T. 120.

XII. VESTING UNDER MARRIAGE CONTRACTS IN CHILDREN OF MARRIAGE.

(302)

Obligation to provide and secure—Provision payable after death of surviving spouse—Vesting at birth.

By an antenuptial contract of marriage the husband bound himself to provide to the children of the marriage a sum varying with the number of children, payable at the first term after the decease of the longest liver of the spouses, and further bound himself in security thereof to take out an insurance policy on his life in favour of the marriage contract trustees. A power of apportionment was given to the father, whom failing, to the mother. There were two children born of the marriage. The wife predeceased the husband. One of the children predeceased the wife, and the other survived the wife and predeceased the husband. Held that each child had a vested interest in the provision from its birth.

Walkinshaw's Trustees v Walkinshaw, 1872, 10 M. 763; 44 J. 439; 9 S.L.R. 484.

(303)

Provision by father to self in liferent and children in fee—Predecease of only child—Right of child's issue.

By an antenuptial marriage contract, dated in 1815, a husband provided to himself in liferent, and the children of the marriage in fee, one-half of his whole estate, including not only what then belonged to him, but all that he might acquire during the subsistence of the marriage. One son was born of the marriage. The wife died in 1848. The son died in 1856, leaving issue, and bequeathing his whole estate to trustees. The husband, who contracted a second marriage, died in 1860, and was survived by his second wife, whom he appointed his executrix and universal legatee. He never made any settlement in fulfilment of the obligation in the marriage contract of 1815. Held that the provision in favour of the son of the first marriage, who predeceased his father, did not vest in him, but vested in his issue who survived the granter.

Arthur and Seymour v Lamb, 1870, 8 M. 928; 42 J. 542; 7 S.L.R. 592.

(304)

Obligation by father to make provision payable after death to children when major or married—Vesting contingent on survival of father.

Gore Booth's Trustee v Gore Booth, 1898, 25 R. 803; 35 S.L.R. 606; 5 S.L.T. 381, No. 197, supra.

(305)

Direction on death of mother to pay to children "then alive"—Predecease of father—Vesting at dissolution of marriage.

An antenuptial marriage contract, inter alia, directed that after the death of the wife, in case she should survive her husband, and if there should be a child or children of the marriage then alive, the trustees should pay the funds to the children. The marriage was dissolved by the death of the husband. Held that the funds vested in the children of the marriage at his death.

Angus' Trustees v Angus, 1880, 17 S.L.R. 536.

(306)

Provision by wife to husband in liferent and children in fee — Wife predeceasing — Vesting on dissolution of marriage.

By antenuptial marriage contract property belonging to the wife was settled, in the event of her predeceasing her husband, upon him in liferent, for his liferent use alienably, and on the children of the marriage in fee, with power to the wife to apportion among the children, and, failing such apportionment, the division to be equally among them, excepting and excluding the eldest child of the marriage, in the event of his succeeding to estate through the father of equal or greater value than such child's equal share of the fund. The wife predeceased the husband, leaving four children, and a deed directing an equal division among the children who should survive the longest liver of the spouses, excluding the eldest or other son who should succeed to his father's estates, declaring that the issue of predeceasing children should take their parent's share. The eldest son survived his mother but predeceased his father, leaving two daughters. Held (1) that at the death of the mother the fee vested in the children; (2) that one-fourth vested in the eldest son, although, as heir-apparent to his father, he had the prospect of succeeding to entailed estates of greater value than his share of his mother's estate; and (3) that the share which had vested in the second son suffered defeasance on his succeeding to his father's estates.

Robertson, 1869, 7 M. 1114; 41 J. 621; 6 S.L.R. 709.

[See also Boyd's Trustees v Boyd, 1905, 7 F. 576; 42 S.L.R. 435; 12 S.L.T. 798, No. 54, supra.]

(307)

Provision by wife to spouse in liferent and on the death of the survivor to the children of the marriage, whom failing, to the wife's heirs — Wife predeceasing — Child surviving mother and predeceasing father held to have no vested right.

An antenuptial marriage contract appointed trustees to hold funds, contributed by the wife, for her liferent use, and, in the event of her predecease, for the use of her husband, and after the decease of the longest liver to pay over the principal sum "to the child or children of this intended marriage in terms of a joint deed to be executed at any time" by the spouses or the survivor, and, failing such division, then share and share alike; and in case there shall be no children of the said marriage, or, if there shall be children, in case the whole of the said children shall die before the term of payment of their shares of the trust moneys, then and in either of these events to the wife's testamentary disponees or heirs whatsoever. The wife predeceased her husband, survived by issue of the marriage. No joint deed of division was executed by the spouses. Subsequently the father executed such a deed in favour of a surviving son and daughter. This deed was delivered to the son, who, after assigning his right, predeceased his father, leaving one child. In a competition between the son's assignees and his only child, held that the son had no vested interest in his mother's funds under the marriage contract; that he could not assign the share allotted to him under the deed of division; and that it therefore went to his issue.

Scott's Trustees v Brown & Co., 1882, 9 R. 798; 19 S.L.R. 606.

(308)

Provision by father to children payable on death of survivor of spouses, and, failing children then surviving, to husband's heirs and assignees—Husband predeceasing—Vesting at dissolution of marriage.

In an antenuptial marriage contract the husband bound himself to pay an annuity of £150 to his wife, if she survived him, and to pay £4000 to the children of the marriage at the first term after the death of the survivor of the spouses. In security of these provisions he bound himself to convey to trustees an insurance policy for £4000, declaring that if he should predecease his wife the trustees should have power to purchase an annuity of £150 for her, and that the children's provisions should in that event be restricted to the balance of the £4000, and be payable to them at majority or marriage. It was further provided that, in the event of there being no children, or of all predeceasing the survivor of the spouses, without lawful issue, the sum should be held for the husband's own heirs and assignees. There were children of the marriage, which was dissolved by the death of the husband. Held that the right of the children vested at the husband's death.

Murray's Trustees v Bloxson's Trustees, 1887, 15 R. 233; 25 S.L.R. 191.

(309)

By a bond and obligation granted in contemplation of marriage (which was afterwards solemnised) the granter undertook to lay out on heritable security the sum of £8000 in the names of certain trustees for payment of the interest to his wife should she survive him, and on her death payment of the capital to the children of the marriage, and provided that—"In case of my said intended wife surviving me, and thereafter dying without leaving any child or children or grandchildren of the said marriage alive at the time (i.e., at the date of the death), then that the said trustees shall immediately convey and make over to me, my heirs and successors, the whole of the foresaid trust funds of £8000, after providing for the expense of this trust." The trustees were given power, in the event of the wife predeceasing, to make advances for the education and maintenance of the children out of their respective shares, with the consent of their father. The wife survived the husband. Held that vesting was postponed until her death.

Warrand's Judicial Factor v Warrand, (O.H.) 1896, 3 S.L.T. 251.

(310)

Destination to spouses in liferent and to children of marriage in fee—Gift over to husband's next of kin—Vesting on dissolution of marriage by husband's death.

Gregory's Trustees v Alison, 1889, 16 R. (H.L.) 10; 14 App.Cas. 124; 26 S.L.R. 787, No. 252, supra.

(311)

Provision by wife to spouses in conjunct fee and liferent for liferent allanarly of husband and children in fee—Husband predeceasing—Vesting at dissolution of marriage.

In an antenuptial marriage contract the wife conveyed to trustees the whole of her means and estate for behoof of her husband and herself "in conjunct fee and liferent for the liferent use allanarly" of the husband, exclusive of his jus mariti, "and for the use and behoof of the children" of the marriage in fee, in such proportions as the husband should appoint, or, failing such appointment, equally. A discretionary power was given to the trustees to pay to the wife such part of the capital as they should think fit. The husband died, survived by his widow, and by four out of eight children. In a question raised after the death of the widow, held that the provisions to children vested in them at the date of the dissolution of the marriage by the death of the father, and not in each child at birth or at the date of the mother's death.

Wardlaw's Trustees v Wardlaw, &c., 1880, 7 R. 1070; 17 S.L.R. 725.

(312)

Provision in favour of wife in liferent and children of that or any future marriage in fee.

In a marriage contract the date of payment of a provision in favour of the wife in liferent and her issue by that or any future marriage, with a destination over in favour of her heirs and assignees, was postponed until her death, when her liferent of the provision expired. Held that vesting was postponed until her death.

Murray's Judicial Factor, (O.H.) 1900, 8 S.L.R. 281.

(313)

Provision in favour of spouses in liferent and heirs of the marriage in fee.

In a marriage contract the wife's father entailed an estate on the spouses and the longest liver in liferent (subject to restrictions which limited the right of the spouses to a liferent allanarly) and the heir-male of the marriage, whom failing, the heir-female of the marriage in fee. There were no sons of the marriage, which was dissolved by the death of the husband. Held that, on the dissolution of the marriage, the estate vested in the eldest daughter of the spouses, subject to the fetters of the entail and to her mother's liferent.

Maule, 1876, 3 R. 831; 13 S.L.R. 532.

(314)

Marriage contract disposing of estate as at dissolution of marriage—Subsequent settlement granting liferent to wife—Renunciation of liferent.

By antenuptial marriage contract the intending spouses mutually conveyed "to and in favour of each other, and the longest liver of them two in liferent for their respective liferent use allanarly, and to their child or children to be procreated of the said intended marriage . . . whom failing to the heirs or assignees whomsoever of the said two spouses equally, at the decease of the longest liver of them in fee, the whole estate, heritable and moveable, belonging" or "which shall belong to them respectively at the time of the dissolution of the marriage by the decease of either" of them. The husband died leaving a settlement, by which he conferred on his wife a liferent of his whole estate, and directed that on her death his estate should be realised and divided equally amongst his children who should then be alive. Some years after his death, there being then only one child alive, the widow desired to renounce her liferent, so that the child should receive the capital of the estate. Held that the marriage contract was the ruling deed, and the effect of it was that the fee of the husband's estate vested in the children, at latest, at the dissolution of the marriage, and that the widow could renounce her liferent, and the child, in whom the estate had vested, receive payment of the capital from the trustees.

Knox v Knox's Trustees, 1887, 24 S.L.R. 282.

(315)

Provision for children—Powers to impose conditions and apportion—Settlement postponing payment with destination over.

A husband in his marriage contract directed his trustees to hold the estate conveyed to them for the benefit of his children, subject to such conditions and in such shares as either he or his wife might appoint by any deed or instrument. The husband, who survived his wife, executed a trust disposition in which he directed his trustees to pay the only child of the marriage the income of the marriage contract estate till he reached the age of thirty, and then pay him the capital, and if he failed to reach the age of thirty, and died without issue, then to pay the capital to certain legatees. The son died before attaining the age of thirty. Held that the trust disposition was ineffectual to postpone vesting under the marriage contract, that the estate vested in the child at his father's death, and that his claim thereto was not barred by acceptance of the income provided by his father's trust settlement for several years.

Rogerson's Trustees v Rogerson, 1881, 18 S.L.R. 621.

(316)

Exercise of power of apportionment under marriage contract.

Chancellor's Trustees v Sharples' Trustees, 1896, 23 R. 435; 33 S.L.R. 313; 3 S.L.T. 250, No. 276, supra.

Blackburn's Trustees v Blackburn, 1896, 23 R. 698; 33 S.L.R. 505; 3 S.L.T. 331, No. 37, supra.
Cuming's Trustee v Cuming, 1896, 24 R. 153; 34 S.L.R. 77; 4 S.L.T. 146; No. 277, supra.
M'Dougal's Trustee v Heinemann, 1918 S.C. (H.L.) 6; 55 S.L.R. 80; 1917, 2 S.L.T. 221, No. 279, supra.

(317)
Effect of divorce between parents on vesting in children.
Harveys' Judicial Factor v Spittal's Curator ad litem, 1893, 20 R. 1016; 31 S.L.R. 13; 1 S.L.T. 155, No. 282, supra.
Dawson v Smart, 1903, 5 F. (H.L.) 24; [1903] A.C. 457; 40 S.L.R. 879; 11 S.L.T. 321. HUSBAND AND WIFE, No. 345.

VIOLATING SEPULCHRES. See JUSTICIARY.

VIOLENT PROFITS. See LANDLORD AND TENANT.

VITIOUS INTROMISSION. See SUCCESSION.

VITUPERATION. See SLANDER.

VOLENTI NON FIT INJURIA. See NEGLIGENCE.

VOLUNTARY ASSOCIATION. See ASSOCIATION (VOLUNTARY).

VOLUNTEER FORCE. See MILITARY FORCES.

VOTERS. See ELECTION LAW (FRANCHISE).

WAGES. See ARRESTMENT; MASTER AND SERVANT.

WAIVER. See PERSONAL BAR.

WAKENING. See PROCESS; SHERIFF.

WAR.

	COL.
I. ALIEN ENEMY, ...	1341
II. MILITARY SERVICE, -	1343
III. DEFENCE OF THE REALM, -	1347
IV. TRADING WITH THE ENEMY, -	1350
V. EMERGENCY LEGISLATION—
1. Liquor Control, -	1358
2. Food Control, -	1363
3. Courts (Emergency Powers) Acts, -	1366
4. Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Acts, -	1369
5. Miscellaneous, -	1371

I. ALIEN ENEMY.

(1)

Firm—Action at instance of neutral firm—Sole partners individually interested in business carried on in enemy's country—Competency of proceeding with action—Sist of process.

In an action at the instance of a Dutch firm, carrying on business in Holland, it was admitted that the sole partners of the firm were individually interested in, though not the sole partners of, a business carried on in Germany. Held that the pursuers were alien enemies in the sense of the Trading with the Enemy Acts, 1914, and relative proclamations; and action sisted until after the termination of the war.

Van Uden v Burrell, 1916 S.C. 391; 53 S.L.R. 400; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 117.

(2)

Executor—Appointment—Aliens Restriction Act, 1914—Aliens Restriction (Consolidation) Order, 20th August, 1914.

Held that an alien enemy, resident in Scotland and duly registered under the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914, and relative Order in Council, might be appointed an executor-dative.

Schulze, 1917 S.C. 400; 54 S.L.R. 306; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 176.

(3)

Title to sue—Aliens Restriction Act, 1914.

An alien enemy who had resided and carried on business in Scotland for many years, and who had complied with the provisions of the Aliens Restriction Act, 1914, held entitled to sue in the Scottish Courts.

Schulze, Gow & Co. v Bank of Scotland, (O.H.) 1914, 2 S.L.T. 455.

II. MILITARY SERVICE.

STATUTES.

Act 1916—Military Service Act, 1916—5 & 6 Geo. V. c. 104.

Act 1916 (Session 2)—Military Service Act, 1916 (Session 2)—6 & 7 Geo. V. c. 15.

(4)

Liability to service—Jurisdiction—Determination of question of liability—"Civil Court"—Court of Session or Court of Summary Jurisdiction—Act 1916, sec. 1 (2)—Army Act, 1881, sec. 190 (31)—Reserve Forces Act, 1882, sec. 15.

The Court of Session has no jurisdiction to determine the question of liability to military service under the Military Service Acts, which falls to be decided by the sheriff in proceedings brought under the Summary Jurisdiction Acts for the enforcement of a calling-up notice, with the ordinary rights of appeal to the High Court of Justiciary. So held in the case of (1) a Russian subject who founded upon the alleged lapse of the convention of July, 1917, under which resident Russians became liable to serve in the British army; and (2) a British subject who averred that he was in possession of a valid certificate of exemption; and notes of suspension and interdict against their calling-up notices dismissed as incompetent.

Green v Lord Advocate, 1918 S.C. 667; 55 S.L.R. 647; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 15.

(5)

—Exceptions—"Regular ministers of any religious denomination"—Act 1916, sec. 1 (1), and first schedule (4).

The first schedule to the Military Service Act, 1916, includes among the persons exempt from service "men in holy orders or regular ministers of any religious denomination." Held that a third year student of divinity, acting as locum tenens to a minister of the United Free church, was not a "regular minister" in the sense of the schedule, and accordingly was not exempted from military service.

Marshall v Haig, 1918 J.C. 47; 55 S.L.R. 271; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 179.

(6)

The first schedule to the Military Service Act, 1916, includes among the persons exempt from service "men in holy orders or regular ministers of any religious denomination." A religious denomination, which believed it to be unscriptural to have a fixed ministry, that is, regular clergymen attached to separate congregations, elected "elders" from among the members of each congregation, who exercised all the functions usually performed by regular clergymen. In addition, two "evangelists" were appointed to visit the various congregations and to exercise all the functions usually exercised by the elders, except the dispensing of the Lord's Supper. The evangelists were not ordained; they were appointed ad vitam aut culpam; they devoted their whole time to the work; and they were supported by voluntary contributions. Held that such an evangelist was not a "regular minister" in the sense of the schedule, and accordingly was not exempted from military service.

Montgomerie v Mackenna, 1918 J.C. 55; 55 S.L.R. 317; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 226.

(7)

—Act 1916 (Session 2), sec. 1 (1).

Held that an "elder," elected by the members of a Bible association (which had no "ministers," and could elect an unlimited number of "elders") to perform, without remuneration, the usual duties of a clergyman within the association, whose appointment subsisted for six months but was renewable, and who at the same time carried on his ordinary secular occupation, was not a "regular minister" in the sense of the first schedule to the Military Service Act, 1916, and accordingly was not exempted from liability to military service.

Guy v Mackenna, 1917 J.C. 59; 54 S.L.R. 540; 1917, 2 S.L.T. 81.

(8)

"Ordinarily resident" in Great Britain—Exceptions—Residence for "special purpose"—Residence for purpose of health—Act 1916, sec. 1 (1), and first schedule.

An unmarried Australian of independent means, who had come to Europe in 1913 for the benefit of his health, was in France at the outbreak of war in August, 1914, and, being unable to remain there owing to the conditions resulting from the war, he came to Edinburgh with friends in September, 1914. He made his headquarters at a hotel there, but visited various health resorts from time to time. In May, 1916, his health was so far restored that he took steps to obtain a passport to return to Australia, but, before the necessary documents had arrived from Australia, he was charged, in September, 1916, with being an absentee from military service. Held that he was liable to military service, in respect (1) that he was ordinarily resident in Great Britain within the meaning of sec. 1 (1) of the Military Service Act, 1916; and (2) that he was not resident there for a special purpose within the meaning of the exceptions in the first schedule of the Military Service Act.

Pannifax v Brown, 1917 J.C. 26; 54 S.L.R. 130; 1916, 2 S.L.T. 294.

(9)

Exemption—Powers of tribunal.

A person brought an action of declarator and reduction to have it declared that certain decisions of a local tribunal and appeal tribunal under the Military Service Acts were ultra vires, and to have these decisions reduced, on the grounds that (1) the military representative led no evidence before the local tribunal in support of his application for withdrawal of the pursuer's conditional exemption; and (2) that the local tribunal refused to hear testimony as to the "national interest" involved in the pursuer remaining in his civil occupation, which the pursuer proposed to lead. Held (1) that the local tribunal was entitled to withdraw a certificate of exemption, although the military representative called no witnesses; and (2) that the tribunal was not bound to hear witnesses which the applicant for exemption was prepared to adduce.

Osborne v Lord Advocate, (O.H.) 1918, 1 S.L.T. 25.

(10)

Application for exemption—Temporary exemption expiring—Status—Act 1916, secs. 1 (1), 3 (3), and first schedule (6).

A man of forty at 2nd March, 1916, which was the appointed date at which enlistment was deemed to have taken place under the Military Service Act, 1916, sec. 1 (1), had at that date applied for absolute exemption, but did not hold a certificate of exemption. On 1st June, 1916, he obtained a certificate of temporary exemption until 31st July, 1916, and on 22nd July, 1916, applied for a renewal of exemption, which application was dismissed on 2nd November, 1916. On 10th September, 1916, he reached the age of forty-one. On 25th July, 1917, he was called up for service by personal notice, which he failed to obey. Held, in a summary complaint, that the man's status was fixed as at 2nd March, 1916, when he was deemed to have been enlisted in terms of the Act 1916, sec. 1 (1); that the effect of his exemption was merely to postpone the date at which he might be called up; that he had been guilty of an offence in failing to obey the notice.

Mackenna v Rankine, 1918, 55 S.L.R. 268; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 168.

(11)

"Conditional exemption"—Condition that work of national importance be obtained outwith a certain area—Act 1916, sec. 2, and Act 1916 (Session 2), sec. 5.

On an appeal for exemption from military service, made on conscientious grounds, the central tribunal granted exemption from combatant service only, but added this proviso—"That if within twenty-one days he undertakes, under the direction of the committee on work of national importance, work which is of national importance and under conditions approved by the tribunal, he shall be exempt from non-combatant service also. . . ." The committee on work of national importance declined work suggested by the man, intimating in a letter to him that it was a condition laid down by the central tribunal that work should be obtained in a district at least 50 miles from the man's usual abode. The man having suggested no work meeting this condition, he was called to the colours, and having failed to obey the notice, was apprehended and convicted of being a deserter and absentee. Held that the tribunal was entitled to impose the condition as to distance, and the conviction sustained.

Dollan v M'Intyre, 1917, 55 S.L.R. 5; 1917, 2 S.L.T. 118.

(12)

Failure to obey notice to join colours—Dependency of application for exemption—Act 1916, sec. 3 (5).

A certificate of exemption granted upon the application of a shepherd's employer was withdrawn by the local tribunal on 12th January, 1917. The shepherd thereafter obtained employment with another farmer, who applied for renewal of his certificate of exemption. The local tribunal refused that application on 27th February, 1917, and the appeal tribunal refused an appeal on 4th April, 1917. On 23rd May, 1917, the man was served with a notice to join the colours on 7th June, 1917, which notice was not obeyed. On 25th May, 1917, the man having obtained employment with another farmer, the latter presented an application for his exemption, which was refused by the local tribunal on 3rd July, 1917, and an appeal against that decision was refused by the appeal tribunal. On 18th June, 1917, the man was served with a notice to report for service on 5th July, 1917, which notice he failed to obey. Held, in a summary complaint against the man for failure to obey the notice to report for service, that the application for exemption presented on 25th May, 1917, was incompetent in respect that it was presented after the man's case had been disposed of, and that the man was guilty of an offence in failing to obey the notice to report for service on 5th July, 1917.

Macniven v M'Leod, 1917, 55 S.L.R. 8; 1917, 2 S.L.T. 125.

III. DEFENCE OF THE REALM.

(13)

Statutory Rules and Orders—Ultra vires—Detention of wagons—Defence of the Realm Consolidation Act, 1914, sec. 1 (1)—Defence of the Realm Regulation 7 B (1) (b)—Railway Wagons Disposal (Scotland), No. 2 Order, 1918 (No. 1575/S. 67 of 1918).

The Defence of the Realm Consolidation Act, 1914, empowered His Majesty in Council, during the continuance of the war, to issue regulations for securing the public safety and the defence of the realm. Regulation 7 B (1) (b) of the Defence of the Realm Regulations authorised the Board of Trade to make Orders prescribing the time after the expiration of which charges might be made by railway companies for the detention of wagons. By the Railway Wagons Disposal (Scotland), No. 2 Order, 1918, issued on 28th November, 1918, the Board of Trade curtailed the free time for detention of wagons previously fixed by arbitration, and authorised railway companies to make charges from the expiration of the abbreviated free time. In defence to an action at the instance of a railway company against a trader for charges incurred under that Order (the rates charged being admitted to be reasonable), the trader maintained that the Regulation and Order were ultra vires in respect (1) that they did not allow a reasonable time for the loading and unloading of wagons, and that they allowed a railway company to make any charge for detention they pleased, and at the same time deprived the trader of his statutory right to submit the reasonableness of the free time and of the rate of charge to arbitration; (2) that the Order was issued after the armistice solely for the benefit of the railway companies, and not for securing the public safety and the defence of the realm. Held that the defences stated were irrelevant; and decree granted for the sum sued for.

North British Railway Co. v Steel Co. of Scotland, 1921 S.C. 252; 58 S.L.R. 182; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 142.

(14)

Royal prerogative—Royal proclamation—Defence of the Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, 1914, 8 D—Water trustees undertaking unauthorised work at request of military authorities.

On being asked by the local military authorities, but without any formal requisition being served on them, the Edinburgh and District Water Trustees, in addition to supplying military camps with water, carried out the ordinary plumbing work connected with the distribution of the water throughout the camps, although under their statutes they were not empowered to do work of that description. In an action of interdict brought against them by certain Edinburgh plumbers, the defenders founded on (1) a provision in the Defence of the Realm Regulations under which any water authority, if so required by the Army Council, was bound to supply water and carry out such works and render such services as might be necessary for procuring the supply; (2) a royal proclamation enjoining on the king's subjects the duty of obeying all instructions and regulations issued by, inter alios, any officer of the army. Held that the action of the defenders was ultra vires, in spite of the fact that they had undertaken the work at the request of the military authorities and with the sole motive of furthering the public interest; and interdict granted. Question, as to the Trustees' position had they been acting in a national emergency upon a formal requisition made by the proper military authority.

Grieve v Edinburgh and District Water Trustees, 1918 S.C. 700; 55 S.L.R. 691; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 72.

(14a)

Compensation for loss—Defence Act, 1842, sec. 19—Defence of the Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, Regs. 2 and 9—Application for order to have compensation fixed under Defence Act, 1842—Order for specific performance of a statutory duty—Court of Session Act, 1868, sec. 91.

In an action relating to an Edinburgh hotel, which had been occupied by the War Department under the powers conferred by the Defence of the Realm Regulations, 1914, the Court pronounced an interlocutor finding and declaring the proprietors of the hotel "entitled to such compensation as may be found due to them in respect of the occupation and use (of the hotel) under and in terms of the Defence of the Realm Acts and relative Acts of Parliament." Thereafter the proprietors presented a summary petition for an order under sec. 91 of the Court of Session Act, 1868, for the specific performance of a statutory duty, in which, founding on the above interlocutor, they averred that they were entitled to have the compensation fixed by a jury summoned under and in virtue of the provisions of sec. 19 of the Defence Act, 1842, and craved the Court to ordain the Lord Advocate and the Secretary of State for War "forthwith to take such steps to have the compensation . . . ascertained and fixed as may be necessary for the fulfilment of the statutory duty imposed upon the said principal Secretary of State by the Defence of the Realm Acts and relative Acts of Parliament, by causing a jury to be summoned." The Court dismissed the petition as irrelevant, per Lord Dundas and Lord Ormisdale, on the ground that the petitioners had failed to aver a sufficiently definite statutory duty on the part of the respondents, which they had failed to perform, to justify the granting of the order sought; per Lord Justice-Clerk

Scott Dickson and Lord Salvesen on the ground that the respondents were under no statutory duty to cause a jury to be summoned.

Carlton Hotel Co. v Lord Advocate, 1921 S.C. 237; 58 S.L.R. 172; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 126.

(15)

Defence of the Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, 1914—Order by military authority closing licensed premises—Proof of Order in prosecution.

In a prosecution under the Summary Jurisdiction (Scotland) Act, 1908, for a contravention of a closing Order issued under the Defence of the Realm (Consolidation) Regulations, 1914, sec. 10, by a military officer describing himself as a competent military authority within the meaning of the regulations, held that the Order was sufficiently proved by the production in the proceedings of an uncertified copy.

Brander v Mackenzie, 1915 S.C. (J.) 47; 7 Adam, 609; 52 S.L.R. 660; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 440.

(16)

—Compensation for losses—Direct loss by reason of interference with property—Stranded mine exploded by competent naval authority causing damage to buildings—Exercise of power under regulation for defence of realm—Exercise of royal prerogative—Defence of the Realm Regulations, Reg. 2—Indemnity Act, 1920, sec. 2, and schedule, part II.

In a claim against the Admiralty before the War Compensation Court the claimant stated that a mine, which had been washed ashore on his property, was exploded by officials of the Admiralty, and damaged an adjacent farmhouse belonging to him. Held that the claimant had stated a relevant claim of direct loss by reason of interference with his property through the exercise by the respondents of a power under Regulation 2 of the Defence of the Realm Regulations, and that the War Compensation Court could accordingly, under the Indemnity Act, 1920, sec. 2, and schedule, part II, competently entertain the claim. Opinions reserved as to whether the act of exploding the mine was also an exercise of the royal prerogative.

Monypenny v The Admiralty, 1922 S.C. 706; 59 S.L.R. 468; 1922 S.L.T. 463.

(17)

—Liability of government department for taking possession of land.

Held that a government department taking possession of lands and buildings under powers conferred upon it by the Defence of the Realm Regulations was not liable to the owner in compensation.

John Best & Sons v Lord Advocate, (O.H.) 1918, 2 S.L.T. 220.

(18)

An officer of the army took possession of certain lands under powers conferred by the Defence of the Realm Regulations, and proceeded to execute certain works. The proprietors brought a note of suspension and interdict. They did not aver that the officer was acting without orders or without statutory power, but they stated that such works as were necessary for the defence of the realm could be carried out effectively without endangering their interests. Held that these averments were irrelevant.

A B v C D, 1916, 54 S.L.R. 114.

(19)

—Liability of War Office for property commandeered.

The owners of a hydropathic brought an action against the War Department to recover compensation for buildings, furniture, and stock commandeered by the War Department under the Defence of the Realm Regulations. Held that the Department were not liable to pay compensation, in respect that they were acting under powers conferred upon them by the Defence of the Realm Regulations.

Moffat Hydropathic Co. v Lord Advocate, (O.H.) 1919, 1 S.L.T. 82.

(20)

—Reg. 2 (b)—Property requisitioned—Poor, school, and lunacy rates—Liability for owner's assessments—Exemption of Crown property from assessment.

A factory having, under the Defence of the Realm Regulations, 1914, Reg. 2, B, been taken possession of by the military authorities, and retained in their possession, without any rent or compensation having been paid to the owner, held that the owner was nevertheless liable for the owner's assessments for poor, school, and lunacy rates.

Edinburgh Parish Council v Schulze, 1917 S.C. 679; 54 S.L.R. 577; 1917, 2 S.L.T. 77.

IV. TRADING WITH THE ENEMY.

STATUTES.

Act 1914—Trading with the Enemy Act, 1914—4 & 5 Geo. V. c. 87.

Amendment Act, 1914—Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1914—5 Geo. V. c. 12.

Act 1915—Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1915—5 & 6 Geo. V. c. 79.

Act 1916—Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1916—5 & 6 Geo. V. c. 105.

Act 1918—Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1918—8 & 9 Geo. V. c. 31.

(21)

Alien enemy—Action at instance of neutral firm—Sole partners individually interested in business carried on in enemy's country—Competency of proceeding with action—Sist of process.

Van Uden v Burrell, 1916 S.C. 391; 53 S.L.R. 400; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 117, No. 1, supra.

(22)

Attempt to trade—Proposal to supply goods to the enemy through a neutral intermediary—Preparation or perpetration—Trading with the Enemy Proclamation, No. 2, 9th September, 1914—Act 1914—Amendment Act, 1914.

Held (by Lord Justice-General Strathclyde) that an indictment, charging a merchant with writing and posting a letter to a subject of a neutral state residing in the neutral country requesting him to write and ask certain enemies if goods could be delivered to them through the neutral, was a relevant charge of proposing to supply goods to the enemy contrary to the Proclamation and Acts of 1914 directed against trading with the enemy, although the neutral was not the agent or representative of the enemies. Held, further, that the posting of the letter was an overt act which might be sufficient to take the offence out of the stage of preparation into that of perpetration.

H.M. Advocate v Innes, 1915 S.C. (J.) 40; 7 Adam, 596; 52 S.L.R. 275; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 105.

(23)

—Act 1914, sec. 1—Amendment Act, 1914, sec. 10 (1)—Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act, 1887, secs. 1 and 61—Interpretation Act, 1889, sec. 28—Whether attempt to trade a crime prior to passing of the Amending Act.

The Trading with the Enemy Act, 1914, which came into force on 18th September, enacts, sec. 1, that any person trading with the enemy shall be guilty of a misdemeanour and be liable to certain penalties. The Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1914, which came into force on 27th November, enacts, sec. 10 (1), that sec. 1 of the principal Act shall apply to a person who, inter alia, "attempts" so to trade. Held that, apart altogether from sec. 10 (1) of the amending Act, an attempt to trade was an indictable offence under sec. 1 of the principal Act, when read, as it must be, along with secs. 1 and 61 of the Criminal Procedure (Scotland) Act, 1887, and sec. 28 of the Interpretation Act, 1889; and that a charge of attempting to trade by means of a letter written on 23rd October was accordingly relevant.

H.M. Advocate v Mitchell, 1915 S.C. (J.) 35; 7 Adam, 589; 52 S.L.R. 273; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 92.

(24)

"Proposing" or "agreeing" to trade—Proposal and agreement in letter to proposer's own agent—"Supplying" goods to enemy—Specification of locus—Indictment—Relevancy—Jurisdiction—Act 1914, sec. 1—Amendment Act, 1914, sec. 10.

An indictment set forth that two members of a Glasgow firm wrote to their agents at Rotterdam suggesting that these agents should deliver to a German firm a cargo of iron ore which was stored on the quay at Rotterdam awaiting the Glasgow firm's instructions, and that they thereafter wrote to their agents agreeing to certain proposed terms for delivering the ore to the German firm. Held (by Lord Justice-General Strathclyde) that counts in the indictment charging the accused with "proposing" and "agreeing" to supply goods to the enemy in contravention of the Proclamation and Acts of 1914 relating to trading with the enemy were relevant, and were not open to the objection that the proposal and agreement were made to and with the firm's own agents, and not to or with the enemy or his agents. Held, further, that subsequent counts in the indictment charging the accused with "supplying" the ore to the enemy were relevant although they did not specify the locus where the offence had been committed, it being plain from the indictment as a whole that the locus was Rotterdam. Observed that, if persons resident and carrying on business in Scotland supply goods to an enemy, they are subject to the jurisdiction of the Court in Scotland, no matter in what country such persons or goods may chance to be when the goods are supplied.

H.M. Advocate v Hetherington, 1915 S.C. (J.) 79; 7 Adam, 663; 52 S.L.R. 742; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 90.

(25)

"Supplying" goods to enemy—Requisites of the offence—Property in goods—Contractual obligations—Conditions with regard to supply—Position of intermediary—Act 1914, sec. 1—Royal Proclamation, 5th August, 1914.

Held (by Lord Justice-General Strathclyde) that the offence of "supplying" goods to the enemy, in contravention of the Proclamation and Acts of 1914 dealing with trading with the enemy, is not affected by any question as to the ownership of the goods supplied; and, accordingly, that the offence may be committed even though the person supplying the goods is not the owner and has no right of disposal, and even though the property in the goods has already vested in the enemy at the date when they are supplied. Held also that the offence is not affected by the existence of any contractual obligation to make the supply, or by any conditions as to payments or otherwise adjoined to the supply, or by the relation to the supplier of any intermediary through whom the supply is made.

H.M. Advocate v Hetherington, 1915 S.C. (J.) 79; 7 Adam, 663; 52 S.L.R. 742; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 90.

(26)

Declaration as to destination of goods—Customs (War Powers) Act, 1915, sec. 5 (1)—Customs (War Powers) Act, 1916, sec. 2 (2)—Recovery of penalties—Competency of defences—Defence that goods have not reached enemy territory—Defence that exporter took reasonable steps with regard to destination.

Where an exporter has made a declaration, under the Order of the Commissioners of Customs and Excise of 26th April, 1915, as to the destination of goods shipped by him, and has been called upon, and has failed, to satisfy the commissioners that the goods have not reached an enemy country, it is not competent for him, in defence to an action for recovery of penalties under sec. 5 (1) of the Customs (War Powers) Act, 1915, to tender evidence that the goods have not de facto reached an enemy country. The only defence open to him is that, if they have, it has not been with his consent and connivance, and that he has taken all reasonable steps to secure that the ultimate destination of the goods should be the destination mentioned in the declaration. Circumstances in which held that an exporter had failed to prove that he had taken all reasonable steps to secure that the ultimate destination of the goods should be the declared destination. Observations upon the scope and effect of sub-sec. (2) of sec. 2 of the Customs (War Powers) Act, 1916. Lord Advocate v Van Weel, 1917 S.C. 227; 54 S.L.R. 258; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 122.

(27)

Payment of money "to or for the benefit of an enemy"—"Branch" situated in British territory—"Transaction"—Sist of process—Trading with the Enemy Proclamation, No. 2, of 9th September, 1914 (Statutory Rules and Orders, 1914, No. 1376), secs. 5 (1) and 6.

The Trading with the Enemy Proclamation, No. 2, of 9th September, 1914, by sec. 5, warns all persons in His Majesty's dominions "(1) not to pay any sum of money to or for the benefit of an enemy." By sec. 6 the following exception is made:—"Provided always that where an enemy has a branch locally situated in British . . . territory . . . transactions by or with such branch shall not be treated as transactions by or with an enemy." A German company, having its head office in Berlin, and having manufacturing works in different parts of Germany, had also an office in London, in charge of a manager who had authority to enter into contracts and to sue and be sued on behalf of the company. In respect of this office the company was registered under the Companies Act, 1908, as a foreign company having a place of business in the United Kingdom. The company, having entered into a contract, through their London manager, with a Glasgow firm, brought an action against that firm in the Sheriff Court at Glasgow for payment of certain sums alleged to be due under the contract. The sheriff having granted decree in favour of the defenders, the company appealed to the Court of Session. While the case was standing in the short roll war was declared against the German Empire, and the proclamation quoted above was issued. Held (1) that the pursuers' office in the United Kingdom was not a "branch" in the sense of sec. 6 of the proclamation; (2) (per Lord President Strath-clyde and Lord Johnston) that the payment of money after the date of the proclamation in fulfilment of a previous contract, was not a "transaction" in the sense of that section; and, in respect that no effective decree in favour of the pursuers could be pronounced, process sisted.

Orenstein & Koppel v Egyptian Phosphate Co., 1915 S.C. 55; 52 S.L.R. 54; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 293.

(28)

—Arrestment—Debt due to alien enemy arrested in hands of British subject—Debt not payable till after outbreak of war—Competency of forthcoming—Tantum et tale—Trading with the Enemy Proclamation, No. 2, sec. 5 (1).

A British firm arrested in the hands of another British firm a debt due by the latter to an alien enemy. The debt was not payable till twelve days after the outbreak of war. An action of forthcoming having been brought against the arrestee, held that, as the arrestee was not liable to make payment to the enemy alien during the continuance of the war, and as he could put forward against the arrester all defences competent against the common debtor, the action fell to be sisted meantime.

On appeal, the House of Lords, holding it to be inexpedient to express any opinion upon the questions raised in the action, continued the sist on the ground of convenience until the end of the war on caution being found by the arrestee, and dismissed an appeal against the judgment of the First Division without expressing any opinion upon the reasons on which that judgment was founded.

Fergusson & Co. v Brown & Tawse, 1917 S.C. 570; 54 S.L.R. 309; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 200; 1918 S.C. (H.L.) 125; 55 S.L.R. 437; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 404.

(29)

—Action for payment of debt admittedly due—Procedure—Duty of defender—Consignment of sum sued for—Right to withdraw from proceedings—Intimation to Lord Advocate—Trading with the Enemy Proclamation, No. 2, 9th September, 1914, sec. 5 (1).

In an action for the price of goods supplied by the pursuers to the defenders, the defenders admitted the debt, but, averring that the pursuers were agents of an alien enemy and that payment could not be made to them without violation of the Trading with the Enemy Proclamation, No. 2, of 9th September, 1914, they consigned the sum sued for with the Clerk of Court. The pursuers averred that in the transaction in question they acted as principals, and denied that they were agents of an alien enemy; and they asked for a proof of their averments. In allowing a proof, the Court held that the defenders having consigned the sum sued for, were under no obligation to take any further part in the proceedings; but ordered intimation to be made to the Lord

Advocate in order that, if so advised, he might compare for the public interest.

Guyot-Guenin & Son v Clyde Soap Co., 1916 S.C. 6; 53 S.L.R. 45; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 244.

(30)

Debt due to enemy—Arrestment before war—Recall.

Arrestments on the dependence of an action at the instance of an alien enemy against a British subject, laid on before the outbreak of war, recalled after, and owing to, its outbreak.

Van Uden v Burrell, 1916 S.C. 391; 53 S.L.R. 400; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 117.

(31)

—Arrestment—Forthcoming.

A debt due by a British firm to an Austrian firm was arrested in the hands of the debtors. In an action of forthcoming the Court, on the arrestees finding caution, sisted process and appointed the proceedings to be laid before the Custodian under the Trading with the Enemy Acts.

Brown v Willock, Reid & Co., 1918, 55 S.L.R. 744; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 159.

(32)

—Price payable by instalments—Arrestment of instalments of price paid to manufacturers.

A contract between a British firm and an Austrian firm, for the purchase by the latter of goods to be manufactured, provided for an extension of time for delivery if delay should occur owing to causes beyond the control of the sellers. The price was payable by instalments, of which £4620 was paid to account of the whole, when war broke out and it became illegal to implement the contract. None of the goods had at that time been delivered. Thereafter the goods were completed and sold in Great Britain at an enhanced price. Third parties, having obtained a decree against the purchasers of the goods, arrested money in the hands of the sellers of the goods. Held (per Lord Dewar, Ordinary) (1) that the contract was dissolved, not merely suspended, by the outbreak of war; (2) that the sum paid to account of the price of the goods belonged to the buyers and was validly arrested in the hands of the sellers. The Court of consent sisted the cause upon the arrestees finding caution.

Davis & Primrose v Clyde Shipbuilding and Engineering Co., (O.H.) 1918, 56 S.L.R. 24; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 297.

(33)

—Act 1916, sec. 1—Goods on sale and return.

In an application by the Controller under sec. 1 of the Trading with the Enemy (Amendment) Act, 1916, it appeared that the stock-in-trade of an alien enemy who was a bookseller consisted of foreign books, a quantity of which had been supplied on sale or return. The Controller was unable to discover what proportion of the books had been so supplied. Held that the Controller was entitled to sell the whole stock, and if he sold at a loss the dealers who supplied the books had not a preferential claim for the contract price.

M'Lintock, (O.H.) 1918, 1 S.L.T. 137.

(34)

Enemy property—Vesting of property in Custodian—Executory contract terminated by war—Unfinished ship—Property passed to, and instalments paid by, enemy purchasers—Ship requisitioned and purchased by Admiralty—Right of Custodian to equivalent of instalments paid—Interest—Counter claims—Acts 1914, 1915, and 1916.

The property in a ship, which was being built by Scottish shipbuilders for Austrian shipowners, had passed to the latter at 12th August, 1914, the date of the declaration of war between Great Britain and Austria, and instalments of the price amounting to £79,732 had been paid. On 17th February, 1915, the Admiralty requisitioned the ship as she then stood at the price of £86,000, but it was not until 30th July, 1917, that the Admiralty paid the builders that sum, and they refused to pay any interest from the date of requisition. On 1st December, 1917, the Board of Trade pronounced an order vesting the sum of £79,732, with interest from the date of receipt of the instalments, in the Custodian for Scotland under the Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1914, as "moneys owing to or held for or on behalf of or on account of" the enemy purchasers, and the Custodian brought an action against the builders for payment of this sum and interest. The builders resisted payment; and also stated two counter claims against the fund (1) for loss caused by the ship occupying a berth in their yard after the stipulated date of delivery, and (2) for the interest which the Admiralty had refused to pay. The House of Lords, in terms of an agreement entered into—at the suggestion of the House—by the parties during the hearing, found that the pursuer was entitled to decree for £79,732, with interest from the date of the interlocutor of the First Division, but under deduction from the sum of £79,732 of such sum, if any, as the defenders could prove to represent loss sustained by them under their first counter claim.

Penney v Clyde Shipbuilding and Engineering Co., 1920 S.C. (H.L.) 68; 57 S.L.R. 342; 1920, 1 S.L.T. 264.

(35)

—Vesting order—Amendment Act 1914, sec. 4—Act 1918, sec. 9—Part-owners.

A British subject, alleging he had claims against an enemy firm and an enemy subject, one of its partners, brought an application to the Court to make a vesting order vesting in the Custodian for Scotland a ship then lying in harbour in England, and also a sum of £20,000, being the freight earned by the ship while under requisition of the Admiralty. He averred that the enemy firm, and the two partners thereof, were "the owners, or at least part-owners, of the" ship in question. Held that the application was irrelevant, in respect that the applicant had failed to aver a sufficient interest of the enemy firm and its partners in the ship to make the provisions of sec. 4 (1) of the Trading with the Enemy Amendment Act, 1914, applicable.

Burrell v Maashaven Steamship Co., 1919, 56 S.L.R. 434; 1919, 1 S.L.T. 306.

(36)

———Custodian of enemy property—Petition to ordain Custodian to pay money to creditor of ex-enemy firm—Competency.

The selling agent in England of an Austrian manufacturing firm obtained a decree in absence against them, arrested money due to them in the hands of a Scots firm, and brought an action of furthcoming against the Scots firm. The funds in the arrestees' hands were thereafter vested in the Custodian of enemy property. Held that a petition to have the Custodian ordained to pay the funds to the creditor was incompetent.

Brown, (O.H.) 1922 S.L.T. 190.

(37)

Duties of Custodian appointed under Act 1914.

The Custodian appointed under the Trading with the Enemy Act, 1914, is not bound to pay the creditor of a foreign debtor, or to pay interest on a debt which he may in his discretion pay, unless the debtor could have been compelled to pay interest. It is within the discretion of the Custodian to advertise for claims against the debtor.

David Rowan & Co., (O.H.) 1916, 2 S.L.T. 165.

(38)

Conjoined actions—Alien enemy party to one action only—Trading with the Enemy Proclamation, No. 2, of 9th September 1914 (Statutory Rules and Orders, 1914, No. 1376)—Sist of process.

In counter actions between a firm of steamship owners and a storage company the Lord Ordinary, having conjoined the actions, thereafter sisted a German subject as pursuer in the action at the instance of the storage company. A proof having been taken, the Lord Ordinary pronounced an interlocutor in which he decerned against the storage company in the action against them, and, in the action at their instance, assolized the defenders. After a reclaiming note against this interlocutor had been presented by the storage company, war was declared between Britain and Germany. The respondents then moved the Court to sist procedure quoad the action at the instance of the storage company in respect that the true pursuer therein was an alien enemy, and quoad the other action to sustain the Lord Ordinary's interlocutor. The Court sisted both actions.

Craig Line Steamship Co. v North British Storage and Transit Co., 1915 S.C. 113; 52 S.L.R. 65; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 326.

(39)

Petition to determine questions occurring in winding up of enemy business—Remit—Act of Sederunt, 15th December, 1914, sec. 1.

A petition to determine certain questions in connection with the winding up of an enemy business was presented to the Inner House. The Court remitted the petition to the Junior Lord Ordinary.

M'Lintock, (O.H.) 1918, 1 S.L.T. 137.

V. EMERGENCY LEGISLATION.

1. LIQUOR CONTROL.

(40)

Statutory Order—Ultra vires—Order by Food Controller regulating sale of liquor—Spirits (Prices and Description) Order, 1920 (No. 531 of 1920)—New Ministries and Secretaries Act, 1916, sec. 4—Defence of the Realm Regulations, 2 F.

Held that an Order made by the Food Controller, the Spirits (Prices and Description) Order, 1920, which regulates the sale of spirits in licensed premises, was not ultra vires of the Food Controller; and objection that such an Order could have been lawfully made only by the Liquor Control Board repelled.

M'Ninch v Auld, 1921 J.C. 13; 58 S.L.R. 99; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 408.

(41)

Definition of area.

The Privy Council had power to define an area in which the supply of intoxicating liquor should be controlled, in respect that troops were assembled therein, or that munitions were manufactured or handled in transit through the area. An Order in Council defined such an area, consisting of two counties, in one of which it was averred that no troops were stationed, and no munitions manufactured or handled. Held that the Order in Council was valid, it being within the discretion of the Privy Council to say when facts necessary to warrant the definition of an area had emerged, and that a decision of the Privy Council on questions of fact preliminary and incidental to an Order was not open to review by the Court.

Tewsley v Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic), (O.H.) 1918, 1 S.L.T. 123.

(42)

Total prohibition in area.

By an Order in Council the Liquor Control Board were empowered to regulate or prohibit the sale by retail or supply of intoxicating liquor in licensed premises within an area. The Liquor Control Board issued an Order totally prohibiting the sale or supply of spirits throughout the area. Held that the Order in Council empowering the Liquor Control Board to prohibit, and the Order of the Liquor Control Board prohibiting, the sale of intoxicating liquor were valid.

Tewsley v Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic), (O.H.) 1918, 1 S.L.T. 123.

(43)

Hours for sale of spirits to be consumed off the premises—Order of Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic) for the Scotland, West Central, Area, of 12th August, 1915, articles 2 (2) and 3—Whether the restrictions in article 3 fall to be imported into article 2 (2).

Held, with regard to the provisions of the Order of the Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic) for the Scotland, West Central, Area, of 12th August, 1915, which deals with the sale and supply of liquor to be consumed off licensed premises, that the provisions of article 3 are imported into article 2 (2).

Mackenna v Sim, 1916 S.C. (J.) 24; 7 Adam, 732; 53 S.L.R. 411; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 297.

(44)

Power to regulate "consumption" of liquor on licensed premises—Defence of the Realm (Liquor Control) Regulations, 1915 (Order in Council of 10th June, 1915)—Order of Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic) for the Scotland, North-Western, Area, of 14th April, 1916, article 3.

The Defence of the Realm (Liquor Control) Regulations, 1915, by Reg. 2, confer on the Central Control Board power, by Order, to prohibit, or impose conditions or restrictions upon, "the sale by retail or supply" of intoxicating liquor in any licensed premises or club, including such "incidental and supplemental provisions" as may be necessary to give full effect to the Order. Held that that Regulation does not confer on the Board power to prohibit "consumption" on licensed premises of liquor obtained by the consumer elsewhere.

M'Elfrish v Barlow, 1917 J.C. 32; 54 S.L.R. 337; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 182.

(45)

Sale of spirits—Licensed premises having public bar—Sale of spirits in another part of premises after stock in public bar exhausted—Spirits (Prices and Description) Order of 30th April, 1919, clause 3 (a).

The proprietor of licensed premises, in which he conducted a restaurant business and also a public bar, allocated equally to the public bar and to each of three other departments in the premises the supply of whisky available for consumption within a certain period. Held that, by selling whisky within that period in one of these departments after the supply of whisky allocated to the public bar had been exhausted, he had contravened clause 3 (a) of the Spirits (Prices and Description) Order of 1919, which prohibits the sale of spirits in any part of licensed premises having a public bar, unless spirits are also on sale in the public bar.

Strathern v McKillop, 1920 J.C. 54; 57 S.L.R. 238; 1920, 1 S.L.T. 166.

(46)

"Public bar"—Spirits (Prices and Description) Order of 9th April, 1920 (No. 531 of 1920), article 3.

Held that the expression "public bar" as used in the Spirits (Prices and Description) Order of 9th April, 1920, was not limited by article 3 (a) of the Order, but was employed in its ordinary sense as meaning a bar open to the public without discrimination.

Howman v Doyle, 1921 J.C. 49; 58 S.L.R. 224; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 61.

(47)

Prohibition against permitting consumption of liquor after specified hours—Order of Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic) for the Scotland, West Central, Area, of 12th August, 1915, article 2 (1)—Previously supplied liquor finished after hours.

Held that a prohibition by a Liquor Control Board against selling or consuming, or permitting any person to consume liquor on licensed premises, except upon the days and between the hours specified, was absolute, and that not only the sale but also the consumption of liquor must immediately cease on the expiry of the hours specified; and that a publican or his barman, who did not take steps to prevent customers finishing after hours liquor supplied to them bona fide during hours, was guilty of the offence of permitting consumption after the specified hours.

Finnegan v Hart, 1916 S.C. (J.) 9; 7 Adam, 705; 53 S.L.R. 371; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 120.

(48)

Prohibition of treating—Publican "supplying" liquor to person who had not paid for it—Order of Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic) for the Scotland, East Central, Area, of 12th August, 1915, article 6.

Two women entered a public-house together, and one of them ordered and paid for half a glass of whisky and half a glass of port, which were supplied by the publican, who placed the two glasses on the counter before her. She drank the whisky herself, and the port was drunk by the other woman. Held that the publican was guilty of "supplying" liquor to a person who had not ordered and paid for it, within the meaning of an Order of a Liquor Control Board which prohibited "treating."

Brown v M'Kechnie, 1916 S.C. (J.) 20; 7 Adam, 725; 53 S.L.R. 397; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 218.

(49)

—Sale "by any servant or agent"—Sale without knowledge of licensee—Servant not in direct employment of licensee.

In each of two public-houses the servant or person in charge supplied excisable liquor to one person which was paid for by another, contrary to a Liquor Control Order of 12th August, 1915. One of the public-houses was occupied by the licensee-holder, the other was occupied by a firm of which the licensee-holder was a partner.

In the former case the servant was the servant of the licence-holder, in the latter case he was the servant of the firm. In both cases the sales were effected without the knowledge of the employers. Held that in both cases the licence-holders were guilty of a contravention of the Order, although the sales were effected without their knowledge, and also, in the case of the house occupied by the firm, although the servant was the servant of the firm and not of the licence-holder.

Gair v Brewster—Soutar v Hutton, 1916 S.C. (J.) 36; 7 Adam, 752, 753; 53 S.L.R. 547, 550; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 380, 388.

(50)

Licence-holder taking his own liquor from licensed premises during prohibited hours—“Supply”—Order of the Central Control Board (Liquor Traffic) for the Scotland, West Central, Area, of 12th August, 1915, article 2 (2), and article 3 (c) as added by Amendment Order of 16th November, 1916.

Under Orders dealing with the control of the liquor traffic it is an offence, except during specified hours, to “supply” liquor in licensed premises or to take such liquor away from such premises. All liquor to be consumed off the premises must also be labelled in a certain way. The licensee of certain premises, who was also the owner of the stock of liquor therein, was found at the door of the premises, during prohibited hours, in the act of taking from them, for his own use, certain bottles of exciseable liquor without labels. Held that the licence-holder was taking from the premises liquor “supplied” to himself, and was guilty of a contravention of the Orders.

Mackenna v Brady, 1918 J.C. 37; 55 S.L.R. 171; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 23.

(51)

Sale or supply “by any servant or agent”—Meaning of “agent”—Liability of licensee—Liquor Control Order of 12th August, 1915, for Scotland, West Central, Area, article 2 (2).

Under an Order dealing with the control of the liquor traffic it is made an offence for any person either “by himself or by any servant or agent” to sell exciseable liquor under circumstances specified. Held that the word “agent” was used with its ordinary legal signification, and therefore that a licensee of premises was not responsible for every sale which took place within his premises, no matter by whom effected, but only for sales by himself, his servant, or a person who could properly be described as his agent. Held, accordingly, that a licensee charged with contravening the Order had been rightly acquitted, where the liquor had been sold without any authority by a boy whom the licensee’s shopman was authorised to employ only as an occasional messenger.

Auld v Devlin, 1918 J.C. 41; 55 S.L.R. 174; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 33.

(52)

Illegal “dispatch” of liquor by licensee or his servant—Liability of licensee—Fraudulent abstraction of liquor by servant—Liquor Control Order for Scotland, West Central, Area, of 12th August, 1915, article 2—Amending Order of 20th March, 1916, article 2—Amending Order of 16th November, 1916, article 2.

The holder of a public-house licence was convicted on a charge of contravening the Liquor Control Regulations by “dispatching” from his premises, by the hands of his servant, two half-bottles of whisky within prohibited hours, without receiving payment, and without having the bottles labelled in the prescribed manner. The facts were that a lad of fifteen employed by the accused had, without his knowledge, secreted the bottles in the premises, and thereafter removed them from the premises and handed them over, unpaid for and unlabelled, to a friend who had asked him to obtain the whisky. Held that the fraudulent abstraction of the whisky by the lad was not a “dispatch” of the whisky by the licence-holder or by his servant within the meaning of the Regulations; and conviction quashed.

Herriot v Auld, 1918 J.C. 16; 55 S.L.R. 55; 1917, 2 S.L.T. 178.

(53)

Sale of spirits—Illegal measure—Excessive price—Form of labelling offence—Proof—Evidence of strength of spirits—Spirits (Prices and Description) Order of 30th April, 1919, clauses 2, 4 (a), and 7.

The Spirits (Prices and Description) Order, 1919, by clause 2, prohibits the sale in licensed premises of spirits otherwise than by certain measures, including a gill; and, by clause 4 (a) and the second schedule, Part I., it fixes the maximum price for the sale of whisky weaker than 43 degrees under proof at 1s. 8d. per gill. A complaint was brought charging a publican with having, in response to a demand for one gill of whisky, sold a quantity of whisky of a strength under 43 degrees under proof which measured less than one gill, “and that for 1s. 8d. being at the rate of 2s. 2½d. per gill, and in excess of the maximum price of 1s. 8d. per gill for such spirits, contrary to clause 4 (a)” of the Order. It was proved that the whisky was drawn from a cask on which was conspicuously displayed (as required by clause 7 of the Order) a placard inscribed “1s. 8d. per gill. Strength less than 43 degrees under proof.” There was no further evidence as to the strength of the whisky. Held (1) that while the offence might have been consistently charged as a sale of an illegal measure in contravention of clause 2, it had been relevantly labelled as a sale at an excessive price in contravention of clause 4 (a); and (2) that, in the absence of challenge or of evidence to the contrary, the statement on the placard was sufficient evidence of the strength of the whisky, and that evidence of analysis was unnecessary.

O’Malley v Strathern, 1920 J.C. 74; 57 S.L.R. 640; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 251.

(54)

—Sample for analysis—Purchase by private individual—Spirits (Prices and Description) Order of 30th April, 1919, clause 8—Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, sec. 14.

The provisions of sec. 14 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, as to the method of dealing with articles purchased for the purpose of analysis, are imported into the Spirits (Prices and Description) Order of 1919 by clause 8 thereof only with regard to purchases made by a person duly authorised under that Order, and do not apply to purchases made by ordinary members of the public. So held, in a prosecution of a publican under that Order, where an analysis had been made of spirits purchased from him by a member of the public, which had not been divided into three portions as required by the Sale of Food and Drugs Act.

Strathern v Graham & Sons, 1920 J.C. 82; 57 S.L.R. 644; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 255.

(55)

—Purchase by authorised persons—Spirits (Prices and Description) Order of 30th April, 1919, clause 8—Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, sec. 14.

A person authorised to procure a sample of spirits for analysis under clause 8 of the Spirits (Prices and Description) Order, 1919, must conform to the procedure laid down by sec. 14 of the Sale of Food and Drugs Act, 1875, by dividing the sample into three parts, and, if required to do so, delivering one of these to the seller or his agent.

Strathern v Healy, 1920 J.C. 58; 57 S.L.R. 240; 1920, 1 S.L.T. 157.

(56)

Contract—Illegality—Permit to withdraw liquor from bond—Sale of permit to third party—Intoxicating Liquor (Output and Delivery) Order, 1917 (No. 270 of 1917), article 4.

A permit, issued by the authority of the Commissioners of Customs and Excise under the Intoxicating Liquor (Output and Delivery) Order, 1917, and empowering a particular person to take a specified quantity of wine or spirits out of bond, cannot be transferred by that person to another; and a contract for the sale of such a permit is illegal and unenforceable.

Trevalion & Co. v Blanche & Co., 1919 S.C. 617; 56 S.L.R. 567; 1919, 2 S.L.T. 142.

2. FOOD CONTROL.

(57)

Food Hoarding Order of 5th April, 1917—“Quantity required for ordinary use”—Complaint—Relevancy—Failure to specify quantity required—Summary Jurisdiction (Scotland) Act, 1908, sec. 19 (1).

Held that a complaint charging the accused with having purchased 56 lbs., or thereby, of butter “whereby the quantity of such butter in your possession or under your control at one time exceeded the quantity required by you for ordinary use and consumption in your household or establishment,” contrary to the Food Hoarding Order of 5th April, 1917, was irrelevant, in respect that, the expression “the quantity required by you for ordinary use and consumption in your household or establishment” being indeterminate, the accused was not sufficiently certiorated of the offence alleged to have been committed.

Shepherd v Howman, 1918 J.C. 78; 55 S.L.R. 396; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 300.

(58)

Milk (Winter Prices) Order of 17th September, 1918 (No. 1165 of 1918), article 12—“Make or demand any unreasonable charge”—Complaint—Relevancy—Failure of order to define “unreasonable.”

The Milk (Winter Prices) Order, 1918, which fixed maximum prices for the sale of milk, also provided by article 12 that no person should, in connection with the sale of milk, “make or demand any unreasonable charge.” A farmer was charged with a contravention of article 12 of the Order by having in connection with certain sales of milk made “the unreasonable demands” that the purchasers should pay certain specified sums in addition to the maximum prices fixed by the Order. Objection having been taken to the complaint, on the ground that there was no definition of what was an “unreasonable” demand, held that the complaint was relevant, in respect that any charge in addition to the maximum prices being an unreasonable charge, the word “unreasonable” did not require more precise definition.

Stirrat v Cameron, 1919 S.C. 11; 57 S.L.R. 427; 1920, 1 S.L.T. 321.

(59)

Flour and Bread (Prices) Order of 6th September, 1917, article 5—“Reasonable additional charge for making delivery”—Failure to define reasonable charge—Summary Jurisdiction (Scotland) Act, 1908, sec. 19 (1).

Article 5 of the Flour and Bread (Prices) Order, 1917, fixes the maximum price for bread at 2½d. per lb. and provides—“(b) A reasonable additional charge may be made . . . for making delivery.” A baker was charged with a contravention of article 5 of the Order by selling, without the authority of the Food Controller, five 2 lb. loaves of bread at the price of 2s. 1d., “being a price exceeding the cumulo amount of the maximum price of 1s. 10½d. . . . and any reasonable additional charge you were entitled to make for making delivery in terms of the said Order.” Held that the complaint was irrelevant, in respect that it did not state what was the reasonable additional charge for delivery which had been exceeded.

Allan v Howman, 1918 J.C. 50; 55 S.L.R. 273; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 181.

(60)

Maximum prices—Selling milk "whole-sale"—Milk (Summer Prices) Order of 8th March, 1918 (No. 296), article 3—Milk (Summer Prices) Amendment Order of 8th June, 1918 (No. 622), article 1—Milk (Registration of Dealers) Order of 8th January, 1918 (No. 24), article 19.

Held (1) that the definition of "whole-sale" in article 19 of the Milk (Registration of Dealers) Order of 8th January, 1918, viz., "17 gallons or more at one time," could not be imported into the Milk (Summer Prices) Order of 8th March, 1918, for the purpose of construing the word "whole-sale" as used in the latter Order; (2) that, as there used, "wholesale" meant the sale of milk to a retailer for sale by him to consumers irrespective of the quantity sold.

Mackenna v McMillan, 1919 J.C. 4; 56 S.L.R. 251; 1919, 1 S.L.T. 173.

(61)

Kosher meat—Retail price—Meat (Maximum Prices) Orders, 1917.

The Meat (Maximum Prices) Order, 1917, fixed a higher wholesale price for kosher than for ordinary meat. A kosher butcher retailed kosher meat at a price higher than the maximum retail price fixed by the local food control committee for "prime beef" and "prime mutton." Held that the maximum retail price applied to kosher meat, and that its retail sale at a price exceeding the maximum retail price was a contravention of the Food Control Regulations.

Mackenna v Joseph, 1918, 55 S.L.R. 740; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 147.

(62)

Milk Order of 7th September, 1917, article (1)—Sale of milk by servant at price exceeding authorised price—Liability of employer.

The Milk Order of 7th September, 1917, by article (1), prohibits any person from "directly or indirectly" selling milk at prices beyond the maximum rate fixed in pursuance of the Order. A servant, employed by a dairy company to sell its milk, in disobedience to his instructions charged a higher price for the milk than the authorised maximum rate, but he did not account to his employers for the portion of the price in excess of that rate. Held, in these circumstances, that the servant, in so far as he sold the milk at a price beyond the authorised rate, was acting outwith the scope of his employment; and that, accordingly, the company was not guilty of a contravention of the order.

City and Suburban Dairies v Mackenna, Scottish Farmers' Dairy Co. v Mackenna, 1918 J.C. 105; 55 S.L.R. 737; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 155.

(63)

Sale of live stock—Slaughter of pregnant animal—Ignorance of pregnancy—Live Stock (Sales) Order, 1918.

In a prosecution of a farmer for selling a heifer in calf for slaughter contrary to the Live Stock (Sales) Order, 1918, held that the fact that the seller did not know the heifer was in calf was no defence to the charge.

Anderson v Rose, 1919 J.C. 20; 56 S.L.R. 574; 1919, 2 S.L.T. 86.

(64)

—Slaughter of pregnant animal—Justifiable ignorance of pregnancy—Live Stock (Sales) Order of 27th September, 1919.

A butcher, convicted in the Sheriff Court of a contravention of the Live Stock (Sales) Order, 1919, by causing the slaughter of an in-calf cow which he had bought at a public mart, appealed to the High Court by a stated case. The case set forth that the accused bought the cow at the mart, after she had been graded and allocated to him by the officials of the Food Controller, and sent her to be slaughtered eight days later; that at the time of the purchase neither the officials nor the accused considered the animal to be in calf; that, prior to her removal for slaughter, she was discovered by the allocator to be in that condition; but that he did not inform the accused, nor was the latter aware of this discovery. Held that the facts stated did not establish that the accused was justifiably ignorant of the animal's condition when it was slaughtered, and, accordingly (even assuming that such ignorance would have been a good defence to the charge), that the sheriff was entitled to convict.

Beattie v Waugh, 1920 J.C. 64; 57 S.L.R. 471; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 23.

3. COURTS (EMERGENCY POWERS) ACTS.

STATUTES.

Act 1914—Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914—4 & 5 Geo. V. c. 78.

Act 1917—Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1917—7 & 8 Geo. V. c. 25.

Act 1919—Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1919—9 & 10 Geo. V. c. 64.

(65)

Leave to proceed with diligence—Arrestment—Forthcoming—Funds of alien enemy arrested in hands of British subject—Act 1914, sec. 1 (1) (a) and (7).

A British firm, who had obtained decree against an alien enemy for payment of a sum of money, arrested in the hands of another British firm a debt due by the latter to the alien enemy. The arresters thereafter brought an action of forthcoming against the arrestees for payment of the sum arrested. Held that, as the action of forthcoming was primarily a proceeding against the alien enemy for the purpose of transferring his rights to the arrestor, it could proceed without the leave of the Court. Observed that, after decree had been obtained in the forthcoming, diligence against the British arrestees could not proceed without the leave of the Court.

Fergusson & Co. v Brown & Tawse, 1917 S.C. 570; 54 S.L.R. 309; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 200.

Appeal dismissed, 1918 S.C. (H.L.) 125; 55 S.L.R. 437; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 404, No. 23, supra.

(66)

Leave to proceed with diligence.

Decree having been obtained in the undefended roll, the pursuer applied for leave to proceed with diligence in terms of the Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914. The defender appeared, and stated he was unable to make immediate payment by reason of circumstances attributable to the war. Execution stayed for three months.

Brandon Hill, Limited v Frater, (O.H.) 1915, 1 S.L.T. 199.

(67)

Charge to pay costs—Act 1914, sec. 1 (1) (a)—Courts (Emergency Powers) Order in Council, 1918.

Held, in a note of suspension of a charge to pay taxed costs of an English action, that it was not necessary to obtain the leave of the Court before proceeding to do diligence.

Findlay v Wickham, (O.H.) 1920, 2 S.L.T. 325.

(68)

Suspension of execution on decree for expenses—Act 1914, sec. 1 (2).

Circumstances in which the Court suspended execution on a decree for expenses for six weeks.

Crowe v Irvine, 1914, 52 S.L.R. 112; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 378.

(69)

Leave to petition for sequestration—Act 1914, sec. 1 (1).

Opinion (per Lord Johnston) that there is no necessity to apply to the Court under the Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914, sec. 1 (1), prior to presenting a petition for sequestration.

Central Motor Engineering Co. v Gibbs, 1918, 55 S.L.R. 702; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 177.

(70)

Contract impossible of performance without serious hardship—Act 1917, sec. 1 (2)—Act 1919, sec. 1 (1).

In an action for declarator that a contract which had been partly implemented was null and void as having become impossible of performance without serious hardship within the meaning of the Courts (Emergency Powers) Acts, and for payment of a quantum meruit, circumstances in which the Court continued the cause to enable parties to negotiate.

Fasey v Eyemouth Harbour Trustees, 1921, 1 S.L.T. 109.

(71)

Suspension of contract—Contract fixing maximum fares for tramway—Act 1919, sec. 1 (1).

A company which leased tramways from a burgh corporation were bound by their lease not to charge more than certain maximum fares. Circumstances in which, of consent, this condition was suspended on the company agreeing to new maximum fares and agreeing not to found on this suspension in any proceedings under an option, which they possessed, to buy the undertaking.

Greenock and Port-Glasgow Tramways Co. v Greenock Magistrates, 1920, 57 S.L.R. 481; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 46.

(72)

Breach of contract—Cancellation—Non-fulfilment in compliance with government order.

A contract of sale was cancelled in consequence of advice from the War Trading Intelligence Department. In an action of damages for breach, held that this cancellation of the contract was "non-fulfilment" of the contract in the sense of sec. 3 of the Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1917, and that in the circumstances the sellers were not liable in damages.

Mas v Bookless Brothers, (O.H.) 1917, 2 S.L.T. 139.

(73)

Contract to feed deer—Act 1917, sec. 2 (a)—Deer (Restriction of Feeding) Order, 1918.

Circumstances in which held that a lessor of a deer forest who was bound by lease to expend a certain sum annually in feeding deer was entitled to statutory relief from this obligation.

Fowler v Higson, (O.H.) 1920, 1 S.L.T. 155.

(74)

Right in security—Action of maills and duties—Obtaining leave of Court before bringing action—Act 1914, sec. 1 (1) (b).

Held that, as the obtaining of a decree in an action of maills and duties did not have the effect of causing the creditor to "enter into possession" of the property within the meaning of the Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914, sec. 1 (1), but was merely declaratory of his rights, it was not necessary for him to obtain the leave of the Court before bringing such an action. Observed that he would have to obtain the leave of the Court before putting a decree obtained in such an action into operation.

City of Glasgow Friendly Society v Bruce, 1916 S.C. 267; 53 S.L.R. 199; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 29.

(75)

Defender officer on service.

An application by a first bondholder for power to realise certain heritable property was opposed by an officer on active service who was both the heir at law of the debtor and also a postponed bondholder. The Lord Ordinary granted the application.

Brown's Trustees v Mackinnon, (O.H.) 1919, 1 S.L.T. 108.

(76)

Bondholder—Power to sell heritage.

Application under the Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914, for power to sell heritable property under a bond continued for three months on condition that the interest was increased by $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

Motherwell v Lang, (O.H.) 1916, 1 S.L.T. 204.

(77)

Date of debt.

In an action of accounting for the introduction of trust funds during a period prior to the war, decree was pronounced in terms of a minute of tender and acceptance. Held that the date of the debt was the date of the acceptance of the tender, and that an application under the Court (Emergency Powers) Act, 1914, was unnecessary.

Graham's Executrix v Gallatly's Judicial Factor, (O.H.) 1916, 1 S.L.T. 213.

(78)

Process — "Application" under the Act 1917, sec. 1 (2)—Form of application.

Held that a party to a contract, applying to the Court under sec. 1 (2) of the Courts (Emergency Powers) Act, 1917, for the suspension or annulment of the contract or for the stay of proceedings for its enforcement, cannot do so by pleading the Act in his defences to an action for enforcement of the contract, but must make an independent application to the Court.

Shankland & Co. v Robinson & Co., 1919 S.C. 180; 56 S.L.R. 107; 1919, 1 S.L.T. 2.

4. INCREASE OF RENT AND MORTGAGE INTEREST (RESTRICTIONS) ACTS.

Act 1915—Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915—5 & 6 Geo. V. c. 97.

Act 1920—Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920—10 & 11 Geo. V. c. 17.

(79)

"Satisfactory ground" for ejection order—Act 1915, sec. 1 (3).

A tenant of a dwelling-house to which the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act applied gave notice to her landlord in February, 1919, that she intended to vacate the house at Whitsunday following. The landlord let the house to a new tenant. The old tenant then refused to vacate the house. The landlord brought an action of ejection. Decree granted. Opinion (per Lord Mackenzie) that, while it was not competent for a tenant to contract out of the Act ab ante, it was competent for him to prevent tacit relocation.

Smith v Barclay, 1919, 57 S.L.R. 93; 1920, 1 S.L.T. 13.

(80)

Removing upon ground satisfactory to Court—Sheriff—Suspension.

The sheriff-substitute in an action of removing granted decree upon "some other ground which may be deemed satisfactory by the Court making such order" in terms of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restriction) Act, 1915, sec. 1 (3). In a note of suspension of said decree it was contended that the sheriff-substitute had not reasonably exercised the discretion given to him under the Act. Held that his judgment could not be suspended unless he had proceeded upon grounds which were wholly unreasonable.

Grandison v Mackay, (O.H.) 1919, 1 S.L.T. 95.

(81)

Permitted increase—Right of landlord to increase rent without formally terminating tenancy—Landlord and tenant—Act 1920, sec. 3 (1).

A dwelling-house to which the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920, applied was, in 1920, occupied by a tenant who had continued in possession since the expiry of his original lease granted for a month in 1916. The landlord, without giving notice of termination of the tenancy, gave notice of his intention to charge the increases of rent permitted by sec. 2 of the Act. Held that under sec. 3 (1) the landlord was not entitled to increase the rent without having given a notice terminating the tenancy.

Kerr v Bryde, 1922 S.C. 622; 59 S.L.R. 460; 1922 S.L.T. 400.

Affirmed, 1923 S.C. (H.L.) 12; [1923] A.C. 16; 59 S.L.R. 575; 1922 S.L.T. 576.

(82)

Application to sheriff for suspension of increase — Application by sanitary authority—Appeal to Court of Session—Competency—Act 1920, sec. 2 (2) and (6).

Sec. 2 of the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920 (as applied to Scotland), by sub-sec. (1) permits an increase of rent in certain specified cases, and enacts, sub-sec. (2), that, in certain of these cases, "the tenant or the sanitary authority may apply to the Sheriff Court for an order suspending such increase" on the ground of the bad condition of the house in question. It further provides that the Court, if satisfied that the house is in bad condition and that such condition has not been caused by the tenant, shall order that the increase be suspended until the Court is satisfied that the necessary repairs have been executed. Sub-sec. (6) enacts—"Any question arising under sub-sec. (1), (2), or (3) of this section shall be determined on the application either of the landlord or the tenant by the Sheriff Court, and the decision of the Court shall be final and conclusive." Held that an appeal against the decision of the sheriff in an application presented by the sanitary authority was incompetent.

Glasgow Corporation v Mickel, 1922 S.C. 228; 59 S.L.R. 153; 1922 S.L.T. 160.

(83)

Act 1920, sec. 5—Servant possessing house as part of the remuneration for his services—Termination of contract of service—Right of master to eject.

Where a servant has had possession of a dwelling-house belonging to his employer as part of the remuneration for his services, he is not entitled, on the termination of his contract of service, to the benefit of the restrictions on a landlord's right to recover possession or to eject a tenant, imposed by the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920.

Marquis of Bute v Prenderleith, 1921 S.C. 281; 58 S.L.R. 290; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 175.

(84)

Act 1920, secs. 5 (1) (d) and 12 (1) (f) and (g)—Tenant of dwelling-house sub-letting house—Whether tenant a "landlord."

The Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (Restrictions) Act, 1920, provides by sec. 5 (1) (d) that no order for the recovery of possession of any dwelling-house to which the Act applies, or for the ejectment of a tenant therefrom, shall be made unless the dwelling-house is reasonably required by the "landlord" for occupation as a residence for himself or for certain other persons enumerated. Held that the expression "landlord," as interpreted by sec. 12 (1) of the Act, was not limited to the proprietor of a dwelling-house, but included a tenant who had sub-let to a sub-tenant.

Logan v Fair, 1922 S.C. 76; 59 S.L.R. 138; 1922 S.L.T. 2.

(85)

Postponed bondholder.

In an action of mails and duties brought by the first bondholders over a property, decree was objected to by a postponed bondholder. The debtor in the bond consented to decree. It was maintained for the defender that the action was barred by the Increase of Rent and Mortgage Interest (War Restrictions) Act, 1915. Held that, as the debtor had consented, the postponed bondholder had no interest to oppose, and the pursuers found entitled to decree.

Graham's Trustees v Dow's Trustee, (O.H.) 1917, 2 S.L.T. 154.

5. MISCELLANEOUS.

(86)

Motor car—Use of motor spirit—Motor Spirit (Consolidation) and Gas Restriction Order of 3rd January, 1918, article (3)—Where the journey cannot otherwise be reasonably and conveniently accomplished"—Complaint—Relevancy.

The Motor Spirit (Consolidation) and Gas Restriction Order of 3rd January, 1918, prohibits the use of petrol for any purpose whatsoever, but by article (3) excepts from that prohibition the use of petrol for driving a private motor vehicle for the purposes of trade "where the journey cannot otherwise be reasonably and conveniently accomplished." By article (7) the onus is put upon the accused of proving that the petrol was used in accordance with the provisions of the Order. A manure manufacturer, having used his private motor car to convey him to and from a market, was charged on a complaint which set forth the use of the petrol and proceeded, "which journey . . . could have been reasonably and conveniently accomplished otherwise," but did not specify how the journey should have been accomplished. The Sheriff, holding that the journey could have been reasonably and conveniently accomplished by train, convicted the accused. Held (1) that the complaint relevantly charged an offence against the Order, and (2) that, on the facts proved, the sheriff was warranted in convicting the accused.

Rogers v Howman, 1918 J.C. 88; 55 S.L.R. 626; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 78.

(87)

—"Motor cab"—"Hire car"—Motor cab used as hire car.

The Motor Spirit (Consolidation) and Gas Restriction Order of 3rd January, 1918, defines a "motor cab" as a motor vehicle which, inter alia, is licensed to stand or ply for hire, and provides, by article (3) D, that petrol may be used for driving a motor cab within, or for a certain distance beyond, the area for which it is licensed. The Order also defines a "hire car" as a motor vehicle which is kept for hire and which is neither a motor cab nor an omnibus, and provides that petrol may be used for driving such a car when it is used, inter alia, for the conveyance of a person to or from the nearest convenient railway station. Held that the owner of a "motor cab," who used it to convey a person to a railway station beyond the limits within which it was entitled to ply as a "motor cab," was not guilty of a contravention of the Order, in respect that the vehicle was being used on the occasion in question as a "hire car."

Clelland v Archibald, 1918 J.C. 111; 55 S.L.R. 742; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 206.

(88)

—"Public duty"—Attending church—Order in Council, dated 10th May, 1917 (S.R. and O. 1917, No. 440), amending the Defence of the Realm Regulations—Defence of the Realm Regulations Consolidated, Reg. 8 GG.

A hotelkeeper who held a permit granted under the Defence of the Realm Regulations authorising him to let a motor car for hire, "provided it [was] used only for business purposes, or public duties, or for the conveyance of passengers to or from a railway station or port," hired the car on a Sunday to take the hirer and his wife to church. They attended the Scottish Episcopal Church, and the church was about nine miles from their home. Held that it was a question of circumstances to be determined by the magistrate whether the hiring of a motor car to enable the hirer to attend church was a contravention of the Regulations regulating the use of motor spirit, and that, in the circumstances of the case, there was nothing to show that the sheriff-substitute had gone wrong in finding no contravention.

Maclean v Maxwell, 1917, 55 S.L.R. 170; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 38.

(89)

Jute (Export) Order, 1917, dated 23rd November, 1917, article 1—Construction—"On any sale."

Opinions (per Lord Justice-Clerk Scott Dickson and Lord Salvesen) that the words "on any sale" in article 1 of the Jute (Export) Order, 1917, did not exclude from the scope of that order contracts for the sale of goods concluded prior to its date.

M'Master & Co. v Cox, M'Euen & Co., 1920 S.C. 566; 57 S.L.R. 504; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 122; judgment reversed, 1921 S.C. (H.L.) 24; 58 S.L.R. 70; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 84.

(90)

Paper restriction—"Advertising circular"—Bookmaker's coupons—Paper Restriction (Posters and Circulars) Consolidation Order, 22nd October, 1917 (S.R. and O. 1917, No. 1078), articles 6 and 13—"Procuring" the commission of an offence—Placing order for prohibited article with printer—Defence of the Realm Regulations, 1914, Reg. 48.

A bookmaker employed a printer to print football coupons for him. In the coupons odds were offered weekly by the bookmaker upon the results of football matches. The coupons were designed to be used for placing bets with the bookmaker, but his name did not appear upon the coupons. He was, however, known as the sender of the coupons by persons in the habit of betting on football matches. The coupons were usually sent to regular customers of the bookmaker or to persons who asked for them. Several coupons were sent which could be handed on by the recipient to his friends, and the bookmaker's friends and agents were also in the habit of passing the coupons round amongst customers of the bookmaker and persons who asked for coupons. The coupons in question were seized in the printer's premises. The bookmaker was charged with making and printing by the hand of the printer 32,000 advertising circulars contrary to articles 6 and 13 of the Paper Restriction (Posters and Circulars) Order of October 22, 1917, or otherwise with causing the printer to make and print for him the advertising circulars contrary to that article, and thus procuring the commission by the printer of an act prohibited by that Order, contrary to sec. 48 of the Defence of the Realm Regulations, 1914. Held (1) that the coupons were advertising circulars in the sense of the Paper Restriction Order; and (2) that the bookmaker was guilty of an offence in that he had procured the commission of a deed prohibited by the Paper Restriction Order.

Mackenna v Dunn, 1918, 55 S.L.R. 622; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 66.

(91)

Early closing of shops—Refreshments—"Sweets"—Strawberry water ice—"Ice cream"—Early Closing of Shops (Scotland) Order, 1917, 1, 2 (2) and 4 (b).

Under the Early Closing of Shops Order of 26th April, 1917, as amended by the Order of 28th June, 1918, an exception is made in favour of the sale of "refreshments for consumption on the premises," it being provided, however, that "refreshments shall not be deemed to include sweets, chocolate or other sugar confectionery or ice cream." Held that strawberry water ice fell under the category of "sweets." Opinions reserved upon the question whether it was "ice cream."

Jacovelli v Archibald, 1918 J.C. 13; 55 S.L.R. 33; 1917, 2 S.L.T. 175.

(92)

Timber—Timber Control Order of 16th July, 1918, part I., par. 2—Prohibition against contract for sale of timber except to holder of permit—Contract to sell subject to buyer obtaining permit—Contract—Legality—Pactum illicitum.

The Timber Control Order, 1918, part I., par. 2, enacts that no person shall "sell or enter into any contract for the sale of" any imported timber except to the holder of a permit from the Controller. Held that a contract fell within the prohibition and was illegal, although it contained the condition that the buyers should obtain a permit; and an action of damages by the seller against the buyers based on an alleged breach of the contract dismissed.

Eisen v M'Cabe, Limited, 1920 S.C. (H.L.) 146; 57 S.L.R. 534; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 133.

(93)

Corn production—Arbitration—Procedure—Review—Case stated for opinion of sheriff—Competency of appeal—Corn Production Act, 1917, part IV., sec. 11 (1)—Agricultural Holdings (Scotland) Act, 1908, second schedule.

An appeal against an opinion of a sheriff pronounced in a case stated upon questions of law arising in an arbitration under part IV. of the Corn Production Act, 1917, is incompetent.

Johnson-Ferguson v Board of Agriculture, 1921 S.C. 103; 58 S.L.R. 96; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 414.

(94)

Profiteering Act, 1919—Complaint—Excessive charge for cleaning and repairing suit of clothes.

Circumstances in which held that a complaint under the Profiteering Act, 1919, was irrelevant on the ground of want of specification.

Gibson & Reid v Glasgow Local Profiteering Committee, (O.H.) 1920, 2 S.L.T. 84.

(95)

Ship—Defence of compulsory pilotage.

Article 32 of sec. xvi. of the Firth of Forth Traffic Regulations, issued by the admiral commanding the coast of Scotland, excludes the defence of compulsory pilotage.

Paulsen v Johanson, (O.H.) 1916, 2 S.L.T. 349.

WARRANTICE. See ASSIGNATION; HERITABLE PROPERTY; LANDLORD AND TENANT.

WARRANTY. See INSURANCE; SALE OF MOVEABLES.

WASTING SECURITIES. See FEE AND LIFERENT.

WATER. See MINES AND MINERALS; PRESCRIPTION; RATES AND ASSESSMENTS; RIVER, LOCH, AND SEA; ROADS AND STREETS; SERVITUDE; VALUATION.

WATERWORKS CLAUSES ACTS. See COMPULSORY POWERS; JUSTICIARY.

WAYGOING CROP. See LANDLORD AND TENANT.

WAY-LEAVE. See MINES AND MINERALS; SERVITUDE.

WAY, RIGHT OF. See ROADS AND STREETS; SERVITUDE.

WEEK. See TIME.

WEIGHTS AND MEASURES. See JUSTICIARY.

WHINSTONE. See MINES AND MINERALS.

WHIPPING. See JUSTICIARY.

WHITEBONNET. See HERITABLE PROPERTY.

WILFUL MISCONDUCT. See CARRIER ACTS.

WINDING UP. See BUILDING SOCIETY ACTS.

WINTER HERDING ACT. See JUSTICIARY.

WITNESS. See EVIDENCE; JUSTICIARY; PROCESS; WRIT.

WORDS. See in Vol. VI.—“WORDS JUDICIALLY DEFINED.”

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACTS.

I. WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT, 1906 (6 Edw. VII. cap. 58)—	COL.
1. Section 1 (1), -	1385
(1) Injury by Accident, -	1385
(a) What is an Accident, -	1385
(b) Whether Death attributable to Accident, -	1390
See 16, infra .
(c) Whether incapacity for Work attributable to Accident, -	1390
See 18, infra .
(2) Arising out of and in the course of the Employment, -	1390
(a) Proof—Sufficiency of Evidence, -	1390
(b) Workman going to or from Work, -	1393
(c) Interruption of Employment—Returning to Work, -	1394
(d) Scope of Employment, -	1396
(e) Risks Incidental to Employment, -	1399
(i.) Whether Danger Peculiar to Employment, -	1399
(ii.) Act of Third Party, -	1402
(iii.) Peril added by act of Workman, -	1403
(f) Breach of Rules and Orders, -	1406
(g) Effect of Intoxication, -	1411
(h) Miscellaneous, -	1412
2. Section 1 (2) (b)—Option to claim Compensation or to take Proceedings against Employer independently of Act, -	1413
See II. 2, infra .
3. Section 1 (2) (c)—Serious and Wilful Misconduct, -	1413
(1) What Constitutes, -	1413
(a) Breach of Rules and Orders, -	1413
(b) Other Cases, -	1415
(2) Whether Injury attributable to Misconduct, -	1415
See II. 3 (2), infra .
(3) Question of Fact or Law, -	1416
See II. 3 (3), infra .
4. Section 1 (3)—Settlement of Disputes, -	1416
(1) Agreements, -	1416
(2) Arbitration—Competency, -	1417
5. Section 1 (4)—Assessment of Compensation on Failure of Action of Damages, -	1419
6. Section 2—Time for taking Proceedings—Notices and Claims, -	1421
7. Sections 3 and 15—Contracting out, -	1423
8. Section 4—Sub-contracting, -	1424
9. Section 5—Bankruptcy of Employer, -	1424
10. Section 6—Remedies against Employer and Third Party, -	1425
11. Section 7—Application of Act to Seamen, -	1427

I. WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT, 1906—Continued.

COL.

12. Section 8—Industrial Diseases,	- - - - -	1428
(1) Generally,	- - - - -	1428
(2) Certificates of Certifying Surgeon and of Medical Referee,	- - - - -	1431
13. Section 13—Definitions,	- - - - -	1434
(1) Employer,	- - - - -	1434
(2) Workman,	- - - - -	1434
(3) Dependants,	- - - - -	1437
14. Sections 13 and 14—Appeals in Actions against Employer at Common Law and/or under Employers' Liability Act,	- - - - -	1440
15. Section 16—Commencement of Act,	- - - - -	1442

FIRST SCHEDULE—

16. "Where Death results from the Injury"—First Schedule (1) (a),	- - - - -	1443
17. Incapacity for Work—First Schedule (1) (b) and (3),	- - - - -	1444
18. "Where . . . Incapacity for Work results from the Injury"—First Schedule (1) (b),	- - - - -	1447
19. Compensation,	- - - - -	1451
(1) Compensation in respect of Workman's Death—First Schedule (1) (a),	- - - - -	1451
(a) Generally,	- - - - -	1451
(b) Amount,	- - - - -	1451
(2) Compensation for Injury—First Schedule (1), (3),	- - - - -	1452
(a) Amount,	- - - - -	1452
(i.) Average Weekly Earnings,	- - - - -	1452
(ii.) Payments, &c., received from Employer during Incapacity—First Schedule (3),	- - - - -	1456
(iii.) Compensation in respect of Partial Incapacity—First Schedule (1) (b) and (3),	- - - - -	1456
(a) Generally,	- - - - -	1456
(β) Wage-earning Capacity,	- - - - -	1458
(γ) Suitable Employment,	- - - - -	1458
(b) Review of Weekly Payments—First Schedule (16),	- - - - -	1459
(i.) Competency,	- - - - -	1459
(ii.) Date from which Payment may be Reviewed,	- - - - -	1461
(iii.) Method of Obtaining Review,	- - - - -	1462
See 27, infra .	- - - - -
(iv.) Recovery of Injured Workman,	- - - - -	1462
(v.) Minor Workmen,	- - - - -	1465
(c) Suspensory Orders,	- - - - -	1466
(d) Redemption of Weekly Payments—First Schedule (17),	- - - - -	1468
(e) Personal Bar,	- - - - -	1469
20. Medical Examination of Workman,	- - - - -	1469
(1) Preliminary Examination on behalf of Employer—First Schedule (4),	- - - - -	1469
(2) Medical Examination during Payments—First Schedule (14) and (15),	- - - - -	1469
21. Ascertainment of Dependants—First Schedule (8),	- - - - -	1472

SECOND SCHEDULE—

22. Medical Assessor—Second Schedule (5),	- - - - -	1472
23. Recording Memorandum of Agreement—Second Schedule (9),	- - - - -	1472
(1) Competency,	- - - - -	1472
(2) Party Interested,	- - - - -	1473
(3) Genuineness,	- - - - -	1473
(4) Agreements no longer Subsisting,	- - - - -	1475
(5) Recording subject to Conditions,	- - - - -	1476
(6) Appeal from Order granting or refusing Special Warrant to Register,	- - - - -	1478
(7) Agreement for Redemption of Weekly Payments,	- - - - -	1479
(8) Suspension of Charge on Recorded Memorandum,	- - - - -	1480
(9) Miscellaneous,	- - - - -	1480
24. Remit to Medical Referee for Report—Second Schedule (15),	- - - - -	1483
25. Procedure in Arbitrations—Second Schedule (17) (b),	- - - - -	1484

I. WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT, 1906— Continued.		60L.
26. Appeals—Second Schedule (17) (b),	-	1485
(1) Competency,	-	1485
(2) Form of Stated Case,	-	1486
(3) Refusal of Arbitrator to State Case,	-	1487
(4) Remit to Arbitrator,	-	1489
(5) Transmission of process from Sheriff Court,	-	1490
(6) Appeal to House of Lords,	-	1491
27. Suspension of Charge to pay Compensation,	-	1491
28. Expenses,	-	1492
See EXPENSES I. 10 (2).
29. Personal Bar,	-	1492
II. WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT, 1897 (60 & 61 Vict. cap. 37)—
1. Section 1 (1),	-	1495
(1) "Employment to which this Act applies,"	-	1495
(2) Injury by Accident,	-	1495
(a) What is an Accident,	-	1495
(b) Whether Death attributable to Accident,	-	1495
See 11, infra .
(c) Whether Incapacity for Work attributable to Accident,	-	1495
See 13, infra .
(3) Arising out of and in the course of the Employment,	-	1496
(a) Proof,	-	1496
(b) Workman going to or from Work,	-	1496
(c) Scope of Employment,	-	1497
(d) Risks Incidental to Employment,	-	1500
(e) Breach of Rules and Orders,	-	1501
2. Section 1 (2) (b)—Option of Workman to claim Compensation or to take Proceedings against Employer independently of Act,	-	1503
3. Section 1 (2) (c)—Serious and Wilful Misconduct,	-	1506
(1) What constitutes,	-	1506
(a) Breach of Rules and Orders,	-	1506
(b) Other Cases,	-	1510
(2) Whether Injury Attributable to Misconduct,	-	1511
(3) Question of Fact or Law,	-	1511
4. Section 1 (3)—Settlement of Disputes,	-	1513
(1) Agreements,	-	1513
(2) Arbitration,	-	1514
5. Section 1 (4)—Assessment of Compensation on Failure of Action of Damages,	-	1517
6. Section 2—Time for taking Proceedings,	-	1519
(1) Generally,	-	1519
(2) Notice of Accident,	-	1519
(3) Claim for Compensation,	-	1520
7. Section 4—Sub-contracting,	-	1521
(1) Relation of Undertaker and Contractor,	-	1521
(2) Part of or Process in Undertaker's Business,	-	1522
(3) Ancillary or Incidental to Undertaker's Business,	-	1522
8. Section 6—Remedies Against Employer and Third Parties,	-	1524
9. Section 7 (1)—Application of Act,	-	1525
(1) Undertakers,	-	1525
See 10 (6), infra .
(2) On, In, or About a Railway,	-	1525
(3) On, In, or About a Factory,	-	1526
(4) On, In, or About a Mine,	-	1528
(5) On, In, or About an Engineering Work,	-	1529
10. Section 7 (2)—Definitions,	-	1530
(1) Railway,	-	1530
See 9 (2), supra .
(2) Factory,	-	1530
(a) Generally,	-	1530
(b) Docks, Wharves, Quays, Warehouses and Shipbuilding Yards,	-	1532
(3) Mine,	-	1537
See 9 (4), supra .

II. WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT, 1897—Continued.

COL.

(4) Engineering Work, ...	1537
(5) Buildings, Construction, &c., of, ...	1538
(6) Undertakers, ...	1539
(7) Workman, ...	1543
(8) Dependants, ...	1544
(a) Persons entitled to Sue for Solatium, ...	1544
(b) Persons Wholly or in Part Dependent on Workman's Earnings at his Death, ...	1545

FIRST SCHEDULE—

11. "Where Death results from the Injury"—First Schedule (1) (a), ...	1548
12. Incapacity for Work—First Schedule (1) (b) and (2), ...	1549
13. "Where . . . Incapacity for Work results from the Injury"—First Schedule (1) (b), ...	1549
14. Compensation, ...	1552
(1) Compensation in respect of Workman's Death—First Schedule (1) (a), ...	1552
(a) Generally, ...	1552
(b) Amount, ...	1552
(2) Compensation for Injury, ...	1553
(a) Amount, ...	1553
(i.) Average Weekly Earnings, ...	1553
(ii.) Compensation in respect of Partial Incapacity—First Schedule (1) (b) and (2), ...	1557
(a) Powers of Arbitrator, ...	1557
(β) Wage-earning Capacity, ...	1558
(b) Review of Weekly Payments—First Schedule (12), ...	1559
(i.) Competency, ...	1559
(ii.) Date from which Weekly Payments may be Reviewed, ...	1560
(iii.) Method of Obtaining Review, ...	1561
See 20, infra .
(iv.) Recovery of Injured Workman, ...	1561
(c) Suspensory Orders, ...	1562
(d) Miscellaneous Cases, ...	1563
15. Medical Examination of Workman during Payments—First Schedule (11), ...	1564

SECOND SCHEDULE—

16. Recording Memorandum of Agreement—Second Schedule (8) and (14) (b), ...	1567
(1) Competency, ...	1567
(2) Genuineness, ...	1568
(3) Agreement no longer Subsisting, ...	1568
(4) Appeal from Order granting or refusing Warrant to Register, ...	1568
(5) Suspension of Charge on Recorded Agreement, ...	1569
See 20, infra .
(6) Miscellaneous Cases, ...	1569
17. Remit to Medical Referee—Second Schedule (13), ...	1571
18. Procedure in Arbitrations—Second Schedule (14), ...	1572
19. Appeals—Second Schedule (14) (c), ...	1573
(1) Competency, ...	1573
(2) Form of Stated Case, ...	1574
(3) Refusal of Arbitrator to State a Case, ...	1574
(4) Remit to Arbitrator, ...	1576
(5) Transmission of Process from Sheriff Court, ...	1577
(6) Appeal to House of Lords, ...	1577
20. Suspension of Charge to pay Compensation, ...	1577
21. Expenses, ...	1581
See EXPENSES L. 10 (2).
22. Personal Bar, ...	1581

III. WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT, 1900 (63 & 64 Vict. cap. 22), ... 1581

IV. WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION (WAR ADDITION) ACTS, 1917 AND 1919, (7 & 8 Geo. V. c. 42 and 9 & 10 Geo. V. c. 83). 1582

I. WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT, 1906.

(6 Edw. VII. c. 58.)

1. SEC. 1 (1).

(1) INJURY BY ACCIDENT.

(a) What is an accident.

[See also cases under Act 1897, II. 1 (2) (a), infra.]

(1)

Designed act of third party.

One of a party of workmen, employed in a woodyard to take the place of others who were on strike, was injured by the attacks of the strikers, who rushed the police guarding the yard and assaulted the workers. Held that this was not a case of "injury by accident" within the meaning of the Act.

Murray v Denholm & Co., 1911 S.C. 1087; 48 S.L.R. 896; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 125.

(2)

Observed (per Lord Justice-Clerk Macdonald) that it is now settled law that the word accident covers a case of intentional injury.

Macfarlane v Shaw (Glasgow), Limited, 1915 S.C. 273; 52 S.L.R. 236; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 30.

(3)

Voluntary act of workman—Immersion in water—Deafness following upon chill—Chill due to voluntarily waiting in water accumulated in mine through breakdown of a pump.

A miner, about to ascend to the surface at the end of his shift, in order to be among the first to obtain a place in the cage, stood for upwards of thirty minutes in a pool of water which had accumulated in the pit bottom owing to a defect in the pump. Had he waited his turn upon dry ground, as he might have done, he could have reached the cage comparatively dry. Owing to the wetting he contracted a chill which produced deafness, causing incapacity. Held that the incapacity was not due to injury by accident in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906.

M'Luckie v John Watson, Limited, 1913 S.C. 975; 50 S.L.R. 770; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 61.

(4)

Apoplexy brought on by over-exertion.

A gatekeeper employed in a flax mill in the course of his employment ran to the scene of an accident, and then back to the gate to telephone for a doctor. The exertion of running, and the excitement, brought on an apoplectic shock, from which he died in a few hours. Held that the death of the workman was due to an accident, within the meaning of the Act.

Aitken v Finlayson, Bousfield & Co., 1914 S.C. 770; 51 S.L.R. 653; 1914, 2 S.L.T.

27.

(5)

Cerebral hæmorrhage caused by exertion.

A workman, while engaged, in the course of his employment, in moving a weight, had an attack of cerebral hæmorrhage as the result of the exertion he was using. The work was being performed in the ordinary manner. He was put to bed, and four days later a second attack supervened, which caused permanent paralysis. At the time of the first attack his arteries were in a degenerate condition, which rendered such an attack more likely to occur. Held that the workman's final disablement had been caused by accident arising out of and in the course of his employment within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906.

M'Innes v Dunsmuir & Jackson, 1908 S.C. 1021; 45 S.L.R. 804; 16 S.L.T. 214.

(6)

Blood poisoning—Workman handling artificial manures—Time and manner of infection by germ not proved.

A workman employed in a manure works died from blood poisoning, the germs producing the disease having entered his system through a scratch or abrasion on his leg. These germs were present in large quantities in the bone dust which he handled in the course of his employment, but are also present in lesser degree in the air and in other substances. It was not proved when or how the deceased received the scratch or abrasion, nor could it be determined when the infection actually took place. The arbitrator found, upon the medical evidence, that it was from the bone dust that the infection was contracted, and further found that the workman had died from the effects of an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment. Held that the arbitrator was entitled to find that death was due to an accident, viz., the fortuitous alighting of the germs upon the abrasion, and that the injury by accident had arisen out of and in the course of the employment, in spite of the fact that the actual time and circumstances of the occurring of the accident were not established. Observations upon the question how far it is necessary, in a claim for compensation under the Act, to establish the actual time at which the alleged accident happened.

Grant v G. & G. Kynoch, 1919 S.C. (H.L.) 62; [1919] A.C. 765; 56 S.L.R. 345; 1919, 1 S.L.T. 280.

(7)

Cardiac breakdown.

A miner while engaged in holding back a hutch which was being wheeled down a gradient felt a severe pain in his chest and sat down saying that he thought he had jerked himself. He worked on four out of the following eleven days, but became then totally incapacitated. For a period prior to the date on which he felt the pain he had been engaged wheeling hutches, and the cause of his incapacity was cardiac breakdown due to the fact that the work in which he had for some days been engaged was too heavy for him. He was not injured by any sudden jerk, but the repeated excessive exertion strained his heart unduly until finally it was overstrained. The sheriff-substitute, having the assistance of the medical referee as assessor, found that the injury was not an "injury by accident" within the meaning of the Act. Held that there was no ground for altering the sheriff's judgment.

Coe v Fife Coal Co., 1909 S.C. 393; 46 S.L.R. 328; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 170.

(8)

Heart disease—Lifting weight.

In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, it was proved that a workman, while engaged in lifting a weight, felt a pain in the breast followed by palpitation of the heart; that he was found to be suffering from heart disease of long standing, which was bound to manifest itself sooner or later and probably in the way described; and that from that time his condition became gradually worse until he became permanently incapacitated for work as a result of the diseased state of his heart. It was not proved that the lifting of the weight had accelerated the progress of the disease. Held that the arbitrator was entitled to find that the workman had failed to prove that his incapacity was due to an "accident" within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906.

Spence v William Baird & Co., 1912 S.C. 343; 49 S.L.R. 278; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 90.

(9)

Heart failure—No specific accident.

In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the arbitrator found that a farm labourer, apparently in good health, died suddenly while engaged, in the course of his ordinary work, in lifting baskets of corn to feed a bruising machine; that the cause of death was "failure of the heart"; and that "a contributing cause of the failure of the heart's action was the strain arising from the exertion made by the deceased in repeatedly stooping to fill the basket with corn and then lifting it when full up to the level of his shoulders in order to feed the bruiser." Held that there were no facts stated from which the arbitrator could competently infer that the death was due to injury by accident within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, since there was no particular event or occurrence to which the death could be attributed.

Ritchie v Kerr, 1913 S.C. 613; 50 S.L.R. 434; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 216.

(10)

Rupture—Recurrence of rupture—No proof of specific accident.

A farm labourer, while engaged in his employment, had a recurrence of an old rupture, which became strangulated and caused his death. There was no proof of anything specific having happened to him to cause the rupture to recur, and the arbitrator refused compensation on the ground that it was not proved that the workman had met with an "accident." The Court refused an application for an order to state a case on the ground that, on the facts alleged by the applicant, it could not be held that the arbitrator had come to an unreasonable decision.

Walker v Murray, 1911 S.C. 825; 48 S.L.R. 741; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 448.

(11)

Pleurisy following upon chill.

A collector and canvasser, who had contracted pleurisy, claimed compensation from his employers, averring that in order to finish his work timeously one day he had to over-exert himself in climbing the stairs of a tenement; that he became "sweated" and contracted a chill which developed into pleurisy; and that he thus sustained an accident in the course of his employment. The arbitrator dismissed the application as irrelevant, holding that the workman had failed to aver an "accident" within the meaning of the Act. In an appeal, held that the arbitrator was right.

M'Millan v Singer Sewing Machine Co., 1913 S.C. 346; 50 S.L.R. 220; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 484.

(12)

Exposure to cold air—Pneumonia following on chill—Wreck in mine involving withdrawal of workmen—Chill due to standing in a draught while waiting to be raised to the surface.

During the working time in a coal mine the miners in No. 2 pit, owing to a wreck in the shaft, were ordered to ascend to the surface by the shaft of No. 1 pit, which was the downcast shaft for the air current which ventilated the mine. The miners, who had been sweating at their work, were compelled to wait at a mid-landing for an hour and a half, exposed to the down draught of cold air, until the men from the lower levels, who usually ascended by this shaft, had been raised. On reaching the surface one of the miners, who had been exposed to the draught, complained of chill. On this chill pneumonia supervened, and resulted in the death of the miner. Held that there was evidence on which an arbitrator might competently find that the deceased's death was due to an "injury by accident." Opinions (per Lord Atkinson and Lord Shaw of Dunfermline) that the exposure to cold air was an accident in the sense of the Act.

Brown v John Watson, Limited, 1914 S.C. (H.L.) 44; [1915] A.C. 1; 51 S.L.R. 492; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 406.

(13)

Chill contracted by miner while waiting to be raised from shaft bottom.

A workman employed in a coal mine finished his work and went to the shaft bottom at the time when, as he knew, the statutory daily inspection of the shaft was taking place. The time occupied by the inspection varied with the amount of repairs that had to be effected, but the cage usually took about half an hour to descend. On the day in question, owing to a breakdown of the bell wire, the repairs took longer than usual, and the cage occupied an hour in descending. During that time the workman was standing in a cold current of air, and he contracted a chill, which developed into pneumonia, of which he died. An arbitrator having found that the workman was not injured by accident arising out of and in the course of his employment, held that, on the evidence, the arbitrator was entitled so to find.

Lyons v Woodilee Coal and Coke Co., 1917 S.C. (H.L.) 48; 54 S.L.R. 404; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 274.

(14)

Immersion in water—Pneumonia following upon chill—Chill due to partial immersion in water accumulating in a mine through breakdown of a pump.

During the working time in a coalpit, which was a wet pit, water began to accumulate owing to a defect in the pump; and the pump being stopped for repair, the water accumulated still further. When the miners found the water rising they decided to leave the pit, and hastened to the pit bottom, where they were kept waiting for twenty minutes, during which time they were severely chilled by the water which rose to their knees, and by exposure to the current of cold air descending the shaft. One of these miners on reaching the pit head lingered there for at least twenty minutes, and on arriving at his home complained of chill, and next day suffered from a cough, hoarseness, and pains, but went to his work. After several days—on three of which he worked at the pit—he was found to be suffering from pneumonia, of which he ultimately died. Held (by a Court of seven judges) that the occurrence in the mine on the day in question was an "accident," and that there was evidence on which the arbitrator might competently find that the deceased's pneumonia was due to that occurrence.

Drylie v Alloa Coal Co., 1913 S.C. 549; 50 S.L.R. 350; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 167.

(15)

—Rheumatism caused by immersion while baling water in a pit.

The pumps in a coal pit broke down and the pit became flooded. Five days after the breakdown a workman, whose ordinary employment was that of a "brusher," went down the pit to his regular work, but on reaching the bottom he was directed to bale the water which had accumulated, and while doing so he remained immersed up to his chest for several hours. He subsequently became incapacitated by rheumatism, and claimed compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906. An arbitrator having found that the rheumatism was caused by the extreme and exceptional exposure to cold and damp to which the workman was subjected on the occasion in question, held that, in view of this finding in fact, the arbitrator was entitled to hold that the workman had met with an injury by accident within the meaning of sec. 1 of the Act.

Welsh v Glasgow Coal Co., 1916 S.C. (H.L.) 141; [1916] 2 A.C. 1; 53 S.L.R. 311; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 272.

(16)

Inhaling carbon-monoxide gas—Death resulting from pneumonia caused by inhaling carbon-monoxide gas—Gas not usually present in fatal quantity.

A miner in a coal mine, who had fired a shot, returned three minutes afterwards to the working place, while it was still full of smoke. Soon after he felt ill, and ultimately developed pneumonia, of which he died, the pneumonia being caused by the inhalation of carbon-monoxide gas. The firing of shots was of daily occurrence at the miner's working place and generated carbon-monoxide gas in quantities which varied with the ventilation. On former occasions the miner had frequently suffered from headache, giddiness, and nausea through inhaling the gas. The arbitrator having found that the death of the miner resulted from "injury by accident," the Court refused to disturb his decision, holding that the unexplained and unforeseen presence of the gas in fatal quantity on the occasion in question might reasonably be said to be an "accident."

Kelly v Auchenlea Coal Co., 1911 S.C. 864; 48 S.L.R. 768; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 23.

(b) Whether Death attributable to Accident.

[See 16, infra.]

(c) Whether Incapacity for Work Attributable to Accident.

[See 18, infra.]

(2) ARISING OUT OF AND IN THE COURSE OF THE EMPLOYMENT.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 1 (3), infra.]

(a) Proof—Sufficiency of Evidence.

(17)

Onus of proof.

In an application for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the onus is on the claimant to prove that the accident arose out of and in the course of the workman's employment.

O'Brien v Star Line, 1908 S.C. 1258; 45 S.L.R. 935; 16 S.L.T. 292.

(18)

—Actual time and circumstances of accident unknown—Blood poisoning—Infection by germ.

Grant v G. & G. Kynoch, 1919 S.C. (H.L.) 62; [1919] A.C. 765; 56 S.L.R. 345; 1919, 1 S.L.T. 280, No. 6, supra.

(19)

Miner found dead in mine at a distance from his work.

In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, arising out of the death of a miner, it was proved that the miner, in descending the pit to go to his work, had left the cage at an intermediate level before it reached the level at which he was working; that he tried to get back into the cage, but that it had resumed its descent, and that he descended to the next level by means of an adjacent blind pit; that he then, for some unexplained reason, proceeded 600 or 700 feet along a road leading in the opposite direction from the road leading to his work; and there met his death by scalding from the exhaust steam from a pump. The arbitrator found that the accident had not arisen "out of and in the course of" the employment. Held that there was no evidence from which the arbitrator could properly arrive at that decision.

Sneddon v Greenfield Coal and Brick Co., 1910 S.C. 362; 47 S.L.R. 337; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 145.

(20)

Circumstances in which held there was evidence on which the arbitrator might reasonably find that a miner, killed by an explosion while in a place to which he did not require to go, had not been injured in the course of his employment, and that the Court therefore could not interfere with his decision.

Traynor v Robert Addie & Sons, 1910, 48 S.L.R. 820.

(21)

Unexplained accident—Ship's fireman found injured at bottom of hold—Inference from proved facts.

A fireman, whose duty it was to remain on board the ship where he was employed, went ashore without permission, and returned to the ship in the evening, intoxicated. In the morning he was found fatally injured at the bottom of a hold. The only access to the hold was in a part of the vessel where the fireman had no right to be, through a door which was kept locked, but which had been broken open. In a claim for compensation brought by dependants of the fireman, the above facts were proved. There was no evidence to show how the door of the hold had been broken open, or how the fireman had got to the hold, or how the accident had happened. Held that the claimants had failed to prove that the accident arose out of and in the course of the fireman's employment; and accordingly that they were not entitled to compensation.

O'Brien v Star Line, 1908 S.C. 1258; 45 S.L.R. 935; 16 S.L.T. 292.

(22)

Seaman found drowned—Inference from proved facts.

In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, in which the dependants of A, who had been employed as engineer on a steam tug, claimed compensation in respect of his death, the following facts were proved:—On the morning of 15th February, 1908, the tug was lying moored to a barge which was moored to a jetty, and at 5 a.m. A was seen in his bunk. An hour later it was found that A had disappeared, leaving his working clothes beside his bunk. Two days thereafter A's body, clothed in nightdress, was found by a diver in the sea near the place where the tug had been moored on the 15th February. According to the medical evidence A's death was due to drowning, but there was no evidence as to how he met his death. The deceased was a man of cheerful disposition and of steady habits, and his death was not caused by suicide. Held that the arbitrator was entitled to draw the inference that A's death was due to an accident arising out of his employment.

Mackinnon v Miller, 1909 S.C. 373; 46 S.L.R. 299; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 65.

(23)

Seaman found drowned—Inference from proved facts.

In a claim for compensation by the dependants of a ship steward, who was last seen alive in his bunk, and was found drowned next day in the harbour near to the place where his ship had been lying, the arbitrator awarded compensation. Circumstances in which the House of Lords affirmed the award of the arbitrator, holding that there was evidence from which a reasonable man might draw the inference that the accident which caused death arose out of the employment.

Lendrum v Ayr Steam Shipping Co., 1914 S.C. (H.L.) 91; [1915] A.C. 217; 51 S.L.R. 733; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 137.

(24)

Ship's cook disappearing during voyage.

A ship's cook during a voyage was last seen leaving the galley at 6.45 a.m. About 7.30 a.m. it was discovered that he was missing from the ship. Held that, even on the assumption that he had accidentally fallen overboard, it could not, in the absence of evidence, be inferred that the accident arose out of the employment.

Lynch v Crown Steamship Co., 1916 S.C. 695; 53 S.L.R. 575; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 370.

(25)

Dock labourer ordered to stop work because of intoxication—Subsequently found drowned.

A dock labourer, who was liable to be paid off without notice, was thought by the clerk in charge of the squad to be unfit to continue work owing to intoxication, and was directed by him to sit down in a shed where his wages would be brought to him. Shortly afterwards his body was found in the water opposite to the place where he had been working, but there was no evidence to show how he got into the water. Held that his death was due to accident, but that the accident did not arise out of the employment. Opinion that the accident did not arise in the course of the employment.

M'Intyre v Stewart, 1916 S.C. 91; 53 S.L.R. 62; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 288.

(26)

Commercial traveller run over by train while drunk.

Renfrew v R. & J. M'Crae, 1914 S.C. 539; 51 S.L.R. 467; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 354, No. 90, infra.

(b) Workman going to or from Work.

(27)

Miner on way to pit—Accident on employers' premises, but before work commenced.

A workman employed at a coal mine, while going from his house to his work by the usual road, and while crossing a railway belonging to his employers, fell and was injured. The place of the accident was part of the mine within the meaning of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, and the workman might have been required to work there under his contract of service. In fact, his only duties at the time were those of a miner underground, and did not actually commence until he arrived at the lamp cabin, 360 yards distant from the scene of the accident. Held that the accident to the workman did not arise out of and in the course of his employment within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906.

Anderson v Fife Coal Co., 1910 S.C. 8; 47 S.L.R. 3; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 260.

(28)

Miner going to work mistaking his way.

Sneddon v Greenfield Coal and Brick Co., 1910 S.C. 362; 47 S.L.R. 337; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 145, No. 19, supra.

(29)

Workman injured while going to his work—Access road provided by employers.

A workman, employed in oil works, was going to his work at night by a path (which was one of several means of access available to him) situated on land leased by his employers, and provided and maintained by them as an access for their employees although members of the public were also allowed to use it. At a spot where the path ran alongside a switchback lye he strayed on to the lye and was run over by a railway wagon and killed. The ground on each side of the spot where the accident happened was occupied by bings and sidings in connection with the works, but the spot was 80 yards from the nearest building belonging to the works, and was 330 yards from that department of the works to which the deceased's employment was exclusively confined. Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of the employment.

Nicol v Young's Paraffin Oil Co., 1915 S.C. 439; 52 S.L.R. 354; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 159.

(30)

Miner killed while returning from work.

A workman, employed underground in a coal mine, on finishing his day's work returned to the surface and was proceeding home by a track along the side of a private branch railway line, the property of his employers, when he was knocked down and killed by an engine at a point 400 yards distant from the mouth of the pit. Held that the accident did not arise out of and in the course of his employment.

Graham v Barr & Thornton, 1913 S.C. 538; 50 S.L.R. 391; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 180.

(31)

Miner leaving his work by unauthorised route.

A miner on leaving the pit after his work was finished, instead of taking the recognised road from the mine provided by the mineowners, crossed over a gangway to a dirt-bing, down which he proceeded by a steep and very rough track. This track was not formed in any way, but was worn down into uneven steps, and although it was occasionally used by men who were short of time, there was no evidence that the mineowners knew of this, and the use of the track was neither sanctioned nor prohibited by them. While walking down the track the miner fell and received fatal injuries. The arbitrator found that the accident to the deceased did not arise out of and in the course of his employment, and assailed the mineowners. Held that the arbitrator's finding was not unreasonable, and could not be set aside.

Hendry v United Collieries, 1910 S.C. 709; 47 S.L.R. 635; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 386.

(c) Interruption of Employment—Returning to Work.

(32)

Ship's watchman returning to vessel—Fall from ladder leading from quay to vessel.

A workman was employed to watch four trawlers as they lay in harbour. He was on duty for twenty-five hours, during which time he had to provide his own food, and in connection with his duties it was occasionally necessary for him to be on the quay. In the course of his watch he left the boats and went to a hotel which was a short distance from the harbour, where he got refreshment. He was absent a very short time, and on his return, while descending a fixed ladder attached to the quay to go on board one of the trawlers, he fell into the water and was drowned. In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, held by the House of Lords that the above facts entitled the arbitrator to find that the accident arose out of and in the course of the deceased's employment.

Jackson v General Steam Fishing Co., 1909 S.C. (H.L.) 37; [1909] A.C. 523; 46 S.L.R. 901; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 227.

(33)

Seaman ashore by leave for his own purposes—Return to ship—Fall from dock before reaching ship—Dock closed to public—Access by Admiralty pass.

A ship was lying in a public harbour, which had been taken over temporarily by the Admiralty and was closed to the public, only such persons as possessed an Admiralty pass having access to it. The chief engineer of the ship went ashore on leave for purposes of his own after obtaining a pass, and, while proceeding after dark along one of the quays of the harbour on his way back to the ship, but before reaching the place where the ship was lying, he fell into the dock and was drowned. Held that, as the accident had occurred prior to the engineer's arrival at the provided access to the ship, and at a time when he was not engaged on any duty forming part of his services to his employers, the accident did not arise out of his employment. Opinions that "in the course of the employment" does not mean "during the period of the employment," but means in the course of doing something which is part of, or incidental to, the workman's service to his employer; and that the employment is interrupted when the workman is absent on leave for his own purposes.

Officer v Davidson & Co., 1918 S.C. (H.L.) 66; [1918] A.C. 304; 55 S.L.R. 185; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 87.

(34)

Seaman returning to vessel—Fall from quay.

A seaman employed on a ship in port went ashore after work was over, as he was entitled to do, partly to buy food (which under his contract of employment he was bound to provide for himself) and partly to see the town. On returning to the vessel, before he had reached the gangway, which was the only access from the quay to the vessel, he accidentally fell from the quay into the water and was drowned. The passage-way along the quay from the gangway to beyond the point where the man fell was narrowed to a width of two feet by a row of barrels which were standing on the quay. Held that there was evidence to warrant an arbitrator's finding that the accident did not arise out of the employment.

Craig v Owners of s.s. "Calabria," 1914 S.C. 765; 51 S.L.R. 657; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 30.

(35)

Seaman drowned while rowing to island on which his ship was beached.

A seaman was employed on board a ship, which was hauled up on an island for the purpose of its annual repair. The work of the crew ceased at 5.30 p.m., and they were then free either to remain on board or to spend the night elsewhere. Another member of the crew, who desired to go to the mainland on his own business after his work was over but to return to the ship the same night, arranged with the seaman that the latter should bring a boat across for him at 10.30 p.m. For this purpose the seaman borrowed a small boat from a man on the island and rowed over to the mainland. On the return journey to the island with his fellow-employee the boat was swamped and the seaman was drowned. Held that there was no evidence to support a finding by the arbitrator that the accident arose out of the employment.

M'Lean v David Macbrayne, Limited, 1916 S.C. 338; 53 S.L.R. 254; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 76.

(d) Scope of Employment.

(36)

Incidents of employment—Miner not at work going to pithead for wages—Injured while waiting for his pay lines.

A boy, employed as a coal picker, who was absent from his work on a pay day, went to the pithead, where pay lines were usually distributed, for the purpose of getting his line. While waiting for the pithead gaffer who distributed the pay lines, he sat down by a fire, which was burning in the centre of a line of rails, with his back towards a railway wagon, which was spragged so as to prevent it from moving towards the fire. Owing to the carelessness of some workers a wagon further up the line got out of control and ran into the spragged wagon, causing it to run over the boy and injure him. It was a regular custom for the pithead workers to gather round the fire to eat their "pieces" during their time off. Held that the arbitrator was entitled to find that the accident arose out of and in the course of the boy's employment.

M'Graw v William Baird & Co., 1920 S.C. (H.L.) 155; 57 S.L.R. 491; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 136.

(37)

Assisting fellow-servants to work for a third party.

A carter in the service of carting contractors was employed to deliver goods to consignees. It was his duty to sling the goods from his lorry into tackle provided by the consignees, but he had no duty to receive or stow the goods inside the consignees' warehouse. A custom prevailed among the carters, which was not proved to have been known to their employers, that, when several were delivering goods at the same time, one remained outside and slung the goods from all the lorries, while the others entered the warehouse and helped the consignees' servants to receive and stow the goods. For these services each carter, including the one who remained with the lorries, received remuneration from the consignees. When the carter, in accordance with this custom, was slinging goods from several lorries belonging to his employers, he was injured by accident while working on a lorry other than that of which he was in charge. Held that the accident did not arise out of and in the course of his employment with the contractors.

Carlton v William Sinclair, Limited, 1914 S.C. 871; 51 S.L.R. 759; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 105.

(38)

Workman taking upon himself duty not entrusted to him.

A repairer was engaged in making repairs on an air course in a mine, and it was necessary for him to bring wood to that place for the purpose. This could be done by hauling the wood up the air course, or by taking it up in hutches by a wheel brae, and the repairer was directed to take it by the air course and not by the wheel brae. He elected, however, to take it by the latter, and in the absence of the person in charge he loaded the empty hutch in an unskilful manner, with the result that the chain broke, and he was struck by the descending full hutch and killed. Held that the repairer was killed while arrogating to himself a duty which he was neither engaged nor entitled to perform, and accordingly that the accident did not arise out of his employment.

Burns v Summerlee Iron Co., 1913 S.C. 227; 50 S.L.R. 164; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 469.

Kerr v William Baird & Co., 1911 S.C. 701; 43 S.L.R. 646; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 446, No. 80, infra.

Smith v Fife Coal Co., 1914 S.C. (H.L.) 40; [1914] A.C. 723; 51 S.L.R. 496; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 385, No. 81, infra.

(39)

Ropeworker removing threads from a machine at which she was working.

A girl in a ropework, employed with her mate at an intermediate drawing frame, was removed from that work by the foreman, and the frame was put in charge of two other workers. The girl, without orders to do so, then started working at an adjoining finishing frame, but after a few minutes she left to ask the foreman for instructions as to what work she was to take up. When passing the intermediate frame at which she had formerly been working she attempted, of her own accord, to remove some loose threads which had become entangled in its rollers, and her hand and arm were caught in the machine and injured. It was customary to remove such threads while the machines were in motion, but at the time it was no part of her duty to do so. Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of her employment.

Beattie v Tough & Sons, 1917 S.C. 199; 54 S.L.R. 127; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 27.

(40)

Ambulance employee—Duty to telephone for doctor—Accident to workmen not directly employed by millowners.

A gatekeeper employed at a flax mill—whose duty it was, besides attending to the gate, to take charge of the ambulance appliances for use in cases of accidents occurring in the works, to telephone for the doctor in case of necessity, and to attend personally to minor accidents—was informed while on duty of a scaffold accident in the works to some slaters, who were not in the employment of the flax spinners, but were engaged in doing work in the mill. The gatekeeper ran to the scene of the accident, and then back to the gate to telephone for the doctor. The exertion of running and the excitement brought on an apoplectic shock, from which he died in a few hours. He had no instructions not to attend to accidents to workmen who, though not in the employment of the flax spinners, were engaged in doing work for them on the premises. Held that the gatekeeper's death was due to an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment.

Aitken v Finlayson, Bousfield & Co., 1914 S.C. 770; 51 S.L.R. 653; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 27.

(41)

Workman entering saw pit to recover fellow-workman's tea can.

A boy, employed as an assistant attendant at a circular saw, entered the saw pit for the purpose of recovering a fellow-workman's tea can which had fallen into it, and was injured by coming into contact with the revolving saw. In the ordinary performance of his duties he was never required to enter the pit. Held that the accident did not arise out of and in the course of the employment.

Espie v British Basket Co., 1920 S.C. 655; 57 S.L.R. 529; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 89.

(42)

Place where workman had no right to be—Unnecessary risk.

A craneman, whose duty it was to attend to two travelling cranes in an engineering shop, was crushed to death while on another crane, on to which he had climbed. It was found that he had no right to be on the crane on which he met his death, and there was no evidence to show why he went there. Held that it had not been proved that the accident arose out of and in the course of the deceased's employment.

Miller v North British Locomotive Co., 1909 S.C. 698; 46 S.L.R. 755; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 519.

(43)

Getting off wagon to pick up pipe.

A workman, whose duty it was to load and accompany a train of wagons drawn by a traction engine, dismounted from a wagon on which he was riding in order to recover a pipe he had dropped. In doing so he fell and was run over by the wagon. Held that the accident arose out of and in course of the employment.

M'Lauchlan v Anderson, 1911 S.C. 529; 43 S.L.R. 349; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 127.

(44)

Getting off moving lorry to recover his coat—Added risk.

A workman, who was employed to accompany the driver of a motor lorry and help in delivering goods, was sitting beside the driver when his coat, which he had taken off for the purposes of his work, blew on to the road. While the driver was stopping the lorry to enable him to recover his coat, and while the lorry was still moving at four or five miles an hour, the workman stepped down with his face turned towards the rear. He fell, and was seriously and permanently injured. He was not prohibited by law or by the terms of his employment from leaving a lorry in motion. Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of the employment.

Strong v Wright & Co., 1922 S.C. 515; 59 S.L.R. 414; 1922 S.L.T. 342.

(45)

Saving fellow-workman from danger—Fellow-workman not engaged on employer's business.

Mullen, a workman, justifiably left the works in which he was employed, to obtain refreshment. While returning to his work he met a squad of his fellow-workmen, who were engaged in hauling a bogie across a public street which intersected the works. M'Ginlay, a fellow-workman of Mullen, came up, and improperly seized the rope by which the bogie was being hauled, and began to pull against the squad. In doing this M'Ginlay slipped and fell over the rope, and was in danger of being injured by the bogie. Mullen came to M'Ginlay's assistance, and succeeded in rescuing him from danger, but before he himself could get out of the way he was jammed by the bogie, and sustained severe injuries. Held that Mullen had not been injured by accident arising out of and in the course of his employment.

Mullen v Stewart & Co., 1908 S.C. 991; 45 S.L.R. 729; 16 S.L.T. 172.

(e) Risks Incidental to Employment.

(i.) Whether Danger Peculiar to Employment.

(46)

Common risk — Unusual heat — Heat apoplexy—Plumber stooping at work.

A plumber, who was engaged in laying and jointing iron pipes in the open air on a day of unusual heat and who had to stoop at his work, was taken ill while so employed, and died some days afterwards from heat apoplexy. Held that, even assuming that there had been an "accident," it did not arise "out of" the deceased's employment, as there was no peculiar danger to which he had been exposed by the nature of his employment beyond that to which other persons who had to stoop at outdoor labour on the day in question were exposed.

Blakey v Robson, Eckford & Co., 1912 S.C. 334; 49 S.L.R. 254; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 81.

(47)

Abnormal exposure to common risk—Ship's carpenter burned by shavings accidentally set on fire—Carpenter working in oily trousers.

A ship's carpenter, working on the poop of a vessel lying in harbour, was severely burned owing to some shavings by which he was surrounded being ignited by a match carelessly thrown down by a shore labourer. The carpenter's trousers happened to be saturated with inflammable oil which had leaked from a barrel he had shifted in the course of his work, and thus readily caught fire from the shavings. Held that he was injured by an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment.

Manson v Forth and Clyde Steamship Co., 1913 S.C. 921; 50 S.L.R. 687; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 475.

(48)

Risk unconnected with nature of employment—Wall on adjoining property falling on building in which workman employed.

While a woman, employed in a fish-curing establishment, was working in a shed belonging to her employer, a brick wall in course of erection on neighbouring property fell by reason of its own instability on the shed, bringing down the roof and part of one of the walls of the shed, so that the woman was buried in the wreckage and was injured. Held that the accident arose out of, as well as in the course of, the woman's employment.

Simpson v Sinclair, 1917 S.C. (H.L.) 35; [1917] A.C. 127; 54 S.L.R. 267; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 211.

(49)

Risk unconnected with nature of employment—Injury by falling slate during a gale.

During a severe gale a carter in charge of a horse and lorry within his employer's yard was struck by a sheet of corrugated iron blown from the roof of an adjoining building. Held that the arbitrator was not entitled to find that the accident arose out of the employment.

Guthrie v Kinghorn, 1913 S.C. 1155; 50 S.L.R. 863; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 153.

(50)

Risk unconnected with nature of employment—Abnormal exposure to common risk—Injury by falling slate during a gale.

During a severe gale an engineer's fitter was engaged in erecting machinery in an open yard near to a building from the roof of which slates were being blown. While stooping to adjust a large piece of machinery he was struck on the head by a falling slate and injured. Held that the arbitrator was entitled to find the accident arose out of the employment.

Adamson v George Anderson & Co., 1913 S.C. 1038; 50 S.L.R. 855; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 139.

(51)

Workman seized with a fit—Injury due to falling on concrete floor of working place.

A workman employed in a bonded store, having been seized with a fit in the course of his work, fell on the floor, which was made of concrete, and fractured his skull. Held that the arbitrator was entitled to find that the workman was injured by an accident arising out of his employment.

M'Kendry v Wright & Greig, 1919 S.C. 98; 56 S.L.R. 39; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 282.

(52)

School janitor injured by falling on the street.

A school janitor, conveying a message on school business through the streets of Paisley about noon on a hot July day, was overcome by giddiness or faintness brought on by the heat, and fell, struck his head against the pavement, and sustained injuries of which he died. Held that the accident did not arise out of his employment.

Rodger v Paisley School Board, 1912 S.C. 584; 49 S.L.R. 413; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 271.

(53)

Collector injured in street accident.

A salesman and collector in the employment of a firm of sewing machine manufacturers, whilst riding in the street on a bicycle in the course of his employment, was kicked on the knee by a passing horse, and incapacitated from work. Held that the accident arose out of his employment.

M'Neice v Singer Sewing Machine Co., 1911 S.C. 12; 48 S.L.R. 15; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 210.

(54)

Falling on slippery road—Workman using the road in carrying out the duties of his employment.

It was the duty of a machine-fitter, employed by a firm of weighing-machine erectors, to attend at inspections of their machines by the county inspectors of weights and measures. On one occasion he had to attend inspections at two villages—the one village being about half-an-hour's walk from the other. When the inspection at one village was completed the inspector got on his bicycle to ride to the other, and, as there was no convenient train, the machine-fitter started to walk to the other village, in order to keep in touch with the inspector. While so walking he slipped upon ice which had formed on the road, and fell and was injured. Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of the employment.

White v W. & T. Avery, 1916 S.C. 209; 53 S.L.R. 122; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 374.

(55)

Street dangers—Coachman riding a bicycle to fetch letters for his employer—Man lurching against bicycle.

A coachman, in obedience to his orders, had, from time to time, to fetch his employer's letters from a post office in a small country town four miles off, and in doing so he generally, as his employer was aware, rode a bicycle. When his employer was at home he might have to go to the post office every evening, at other times he might not go for a fortnight. On one occasion, when returning with letters, he was injured through a man lurching against his bicycle and knocking him over. Held that the accident arose out of the employment.

Hughes v Bett, 1915 S.C. 150; 52 S.L.R. 93; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 337.

(56)

Collector falling on stair.

A collector for an assurance company, whose duty it was to make a door-to-door collection of premiums, fell upon a stair which he had occasion to use while seeking to collect a premium, and was injured. Held that the accident arose "out of and in the course of" the employment.

Millar v Refuge Assurance Co., 1912 S.C. 37; 49 S.L.R. 67; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 361.

(57)

Workman injured by unintentional blow from fellow-servant while passing on stair.

A post office sorting clerk, while ascending some wheeling steps in a stair of the post office, was struck in the eye and seriously injured by another employee, who was descending the stair and, not noticing the sorting clerk, waved his hand, as he passed, to a third employee. Held that the accident arose out of the employment, in respect that the construction of the stair necessarily brought the employee when using it into such close proximity to other employees who might happen to pass him as to expose him to the risk of injury due to their careless gestures.

Clark v Lord Advocate, 1922 S.C. 561; 59 S.L.R. 442; 1922 S.L.T. 389.

(ii.) Act of Third Party.

(58)

Workman assaulted and falling against box of molten metal.

A workman in an iron foundry, while engaged in his employment there, was struck by a stranger who had found his way into the works in a state of intoxication. When the blow was struck the workman was working in a stooping position in proximity to boxes of molten metal. In consequence of the blow, and of his position when he was struck, the workman lost his balance and fell between the boxes, burning and bruising his arm. Held that the arbitrator was entitled to find that the workman was injured by an accident arising out of his employment.

Macfarlane v Shaw (Glasgow), Limited, 1915 S.C. 273; 52 S.L.R. 236; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 30.

(59)

Designed act of third party—Strike breakers—Attack by strikers.

One of a party of workmen, employed in a woodyard to take the place of others who were on strike, was injured by the attacks of the strikers, who rushed the police guarding the yard and assaulted the workers. Opinions (per Lord Justice-Clerk Macdonald and Lord Salvesen) that if the occurrence were an accident it did not arise "out of" the employment of the injured man.

Murray v Denholm & Co., 1911 S.C. 1087; 48 S.L.R. 896; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 125.

(60)

Horseplay of fellow-servant.

A domestic servant, while in the course of her duties, was struck on the eye and blinded by a ball thrown at her in play by a fellow-servant. Held that the accident was not one arising out of the employment of the injured servant.

Wilson v Laing, 1909 S.C. 1230; 46 S.L.R. 843; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 18.

(61)

Unintentional blow from fellow-servant.

Clark v Lord Advocate, 1922 S.C. 561; 59 S.L.R. 442; 1922 S.L.T. 389, No. 57, supra.

(iii.) Peril added by Act of Workman.

(62)

Miner sitting on cover of haulage pulley while waiting for cage.

A miner, while waiting at the bottom of the shaft for the cage to take him to the surface, entered a heading 10 to 15 yards from the shaft in order to escape the draught down the shaft. He had no duty to be in the heading, but it had been a regular practice for years, known to the oversman, for the workmen to go there while waiting for the cage. In the heading was a tension pulley round which ran an endless haulage rope. When the miner entered the heading the rope was at rest, and about that particular hour it usually stopped for the day. He seated himself on the flat wooden cover of the pulley with his leg close to the rope, and, on the rope unexpectedly starting, his leg was dragged into the pulley, and he was seriously and permanently injured. Held that the act of the workman in sitting on the cover of the pulley was in no way incidental to the discharge of his duty and exposed him to an unnecessary danger; and, accordingly, that the accident did not arise out of the employment.

Fraser v Lochgelly Iron and Coal Co., 1920 S.C. 667; 57 S.L.R. 589; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 147.

(63)

Brakesman riding on lorry when it was his duty to walk behind it.

A workman was employed to attend to the screw brakes at the rear of a lorry, and it was his duty to walk behind it continuously to be ready to apply the brakes at any moment. There was a rule, of which the workman was aware, that no one but the driver should ride on the lorry, but in spite of this he took his seat beside the driver. On being required by the driver, under whose orders he was, to put on the brakes, he fell in attempting to jump off the lorry, and was injured. Held that the accident did not arise out of the employment, the workman having created for himself a risk which was not incidental to his employment.

Revie v Cumming, 1911 S.C. 1032; 48 S.L.R. 831; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 81.

(64)

Dock employee jumping on to railway wagon for lift home.

A workman employed as a capstanman in a dock, going home at the dinner hour, was, before he reached the dock gates, overtaken by an engine and trucks on an adjoining railway. The workman in attempting to mount one of the trucks, for the purpose of being carried to the dock gates, was seriously injured. He attempted to climb on to the truck, not for any purpose of his employers, the dock trustees, but for his own pleasure. Held that the accident did not arise out of his employment.

Morrison v Clyde Navigation Trustees, 1909 S.C. 59; 46 S.L.R. 40; 16 S.L.T. 454.

(65)

Message clerk boarding a tramway car in motion.

A boy, employed as a message clerk, was sent on an errand and given money to pay for his tramway fare. While attempting unnecessarily to board a tramway car in motion—which, as he knew, was forbidden—he fell, and was injured. Held that the accident did not arise out of the boy's employment.

Symon v Wemyss Coal Co., 1912 S.C. 1239; 49 S.L.R. 921; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 127.

(66)

Workman getting off moving lorry to recover his coat.

Strong v Wright & Co., 1922 S.C. 515; 59 S.L.R. 414; 1922 S.L.T. 342, No. 44, supra.

(67)

Message boy injured while using hoist not intended for his use.

A message boy was employed by a fishmonger to deliver fish at the kitchen of an infirmary situated on the third storey of the building. The ordinary means of access to the kitchen was a stair, but there was also a hoist, with, however, a notice, publicly displayed, announcing that it was to be used only by servants of the institution and worked only by those specially authorised by the directors. The message boy when on his way to deliver fish at the infirmary, found the gate of the hoist standing open, entered the hoist and set it in motion, and his foot was jammed between the floor of the hoist and the wall, and injured. He knew he was doing wrong in using the hoist, for on several previous occasions, and in particular on the evening before the accident, the porter had seen him making his way to the hoist, and had rebuked him, and forbidden him to use it, and sent him up by the stair. Held that the accident did not arise out of and in the course of the boy's employment.

M'Daid v Steel, 1911 S.C. 859; 48 S.L.R. 765; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 13.

(68)

Workman returning to vessel—Fall while jumping from quay to vessel.

A workman engaged in overtime work on a vessel went ashore at night, against the orders of his foreman, to purchase bread.

The vessel was moored 6 or 7 feet from the quay, and a gangway was to the knowledge of the workman placed between the vessel and the quay. The deck of the vessel was 3 feet above the quay. The workman in returning went past the end of the gangway, and attempted to jump from the quay to the vessel, but fell into the water and was drowned. It was a rule of the employment (which, however, was frequently broken) that men should not jump between the vessel and the quay, and the deceased had been warned against this practice. Held that the accident did not arise out of and in the course of the deceased's employment.

Martin v Fullerton & Co., 1908 S.C. 1030; 45 S.L.R. 812; 16 S.L.T. 219.

(69)

Seaman attempting to reach ship in a boat without oars.

A ship's engineer who had been ashore in the course of his employment attempted to reach his vessel, which was moored 100 yards from the shore, alone and without oars in a 27 foot lifeboat, trusting that the boat would be carried in the direction of the vessel by the force of wind and tide, his only means of directing its course being by paddling with the rudder. He was blown out to sea and was drowned. Held that the accident did not arise out of the employment.

Halvorsen v Salvesen, 1912 S.C. 99; 49 S.L.R. 27; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 376.

(70)

Workman walking on railway instead of on the road.

A canal overseer, having occasion, in the course of his employment, to walk from a railway station to his office on the banks of the canal, proceeded thither along the railway line, where, at a narrow and dangerous spot, he was knocked down by a passing train and was killed. There was no necessity for the deceased to go along the railway line, for he could have proceeded to his office by the public road, the distance being only slightly longer. He had no right to walk on the railway line, and had been warned by one of his superiors not to do so. Held that, although the accident arose "in the course of" the employment, it did not arise "out of" the employment.

M'Laren v Caledonian Railway Co., 1911 S.C. 1075; 43 S.L.R. 885; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 117.

(71)

Electrician injured by electric current—Neglect to remove fuse.

An electrician, employed in a mine, while doing a job connected with a "gate-end box," noticed that the box was dirty. The work of cleaning the box could not safely be performed without cutting off the current, and this the electrician was entitled to do by removing a fuse situated at the pit-bottom some 600 yards distant. Noticing, however, from the stopping of an electric pump, that the current had been switched off at the surface, he took the opportunity of cleaning out the box, although he knew the danger involved from the fact that the current might be turned on again at any moment. While he was cleaning the box the current was turned on, and he was injured. Held that the accident did not arise out of the employment, but was due to a peril added by the workman's own actings and not reasonably incidental to his employment.

Brown v Baton Colliery Co., 1921 S.C. 323; 58 S.L.R. 268; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 181.

(72)

Miner taking on himself duty not entrusted to him.

Burns v Summerlee Iron Co., 1913 S.C. 227; 50 S.L.R. 164; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 469, No. 38, supra.

(f) Breach of Rules and Orders.

(73)

Statutory regulations—Regulations imposed by employer.

Observed that in determining whether a regulation limits the sphere of a workman's employment, there is no distinction in principle between a statutory regulation and a regulation imposed only by the employer.

Donnelly v A. G. Moore & Co., 1921 S.C. (H.L.) 41; [1921] 1 A.C. 329; 53 S.L.R. 85; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 94.

(74)

Breach of statutory regulations—Miner returning prematurely to unexploded shot—Miner passing fence and entering prohibited area.

A miner employed as a shot-firer lighted a fuse and retired to a place of safety. The shot missed fire, and he returned to the shot-hole in less than one hour in contravention of par. 3 (a) of the Explosives in Coal Mines Order of 1st September, 1913. As he approached the shot-hole the shot exploded, and he received injuries causing serious and permanent disablement.

A miner working at the pit face went in search of brattice nails which he required for the purpose of his work. He passed a fence and entered a disused working in contravention of Regulations (4) and (9) of 10th July, 1913, made under the Coal Mines Act, 1911. While in the prohibited area he was overcome by gas, and died as the result of gas poisoning. Held in each case that the miner, in disobeying the statutory regulations, was acting outwith the sphere of his employment, and that consequently the accident did not arise out of and in the course of his employment.

Donnelly v A. G. Moore & Co.; Colville v Fife Coal Co.; Gordon v Fife Coal Co., 1921 S.C. (H.L.) 41; [1921] 1 A.C. 329; 53 S.L.R. 85; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 94.

(75)

Miner returning prematurely to unexploded shot—"If a shot misses fire"—Explosives in Coal Mines Order of 1st September, 1913, par. 3 (a).

In a mine in which par. 3 of the Explosives in Coal Mines Order of 1st

September, 1913, was in force, two miners were engaged together in firing shots at their working place by means of fuses and naked lights. One lit the fuse of his shot, and the other attempted to light the fuse of his shot but believed he had not succeeded in lighting it. Both men then retired to a place of safety, and the shot that was known to be lit duly exploded. The men waited for the smoke to clear away, and meanwhile ate a meal and had a smoke. After between thirty and forty minutes the miner whose shot had not exploded returned to the shot-hole, when the second shot exploded and he was seriously and permanently disabled. On a remit from the Court the arbitrator found as a fact that the miner had failed to light the fuse of his shot. Held (1) that the shot had "missed fire" within the meaning of par. 3 of the Order; and (2) that, as the miner had accordingly acted in breach of that Order in approaching the shot-hole within an hour, the accident did not arise out of and in the course of his employment.

Costello v Addie & Sons' Collieries, 1922 S.C. (H.L.) 72; [1922] 1 A.C. 164; 59 S.L.R. 116; 1922 S.L.T. 106.

(76)

—Miner returning prematurely to unexploded shot—"Person firing the shot"—Fuse lit by another—Explosives in Coal Mines Order of 1st September, 1913, par. 3 (a).

In a mine in which par. 3 of the Explosives in Coal Mines Order of 1st September, 1913, was in force, a miner and his son together bored and charged a shot-hole, and the son, with his father's knowledge, applied a light to the fuse. The shot missed fire, and the father believing that the fuse had not been ignited, returned within an hour in order to re-light it. As he approached, the shot exploded, and he was seriously and permanently injured. Held that "the person firing the shot" within the meaning of the Order and prohibited from returning within an hour was the person who actually applied the light to the fuse, and, accordingly, that the father had not acted in breach of the Order in returning to the shot-hole, and that, in so doing, he had not taken himself outside the sphere of his employment.

Baillie v Coltness Iron Co., 1922 S.C. (H.L.) 76; [1922] 1 A.C. 170; 59 S.L.R. 118; 1922 S.L.T. 108.

(77)

—Miner returning prematurely to unexploded shot—"If a shot misses fire"—Miner returning to shot in belief that it had exploded—Explosives in Coal Mines Order of 1st September, 1913 (No. 953 of 1913), par. 3 (a).

The Explosives in Coal Mines Order of 1st September, 1913, provides, par. 3—"If a shot misses fire (a) the person firing the shot shall not approach or allow any one to approach the shot-hole until an interval has elapsed of not less than . . . an hour in the case of shots fired by other means" than electricity or a squib. In a mine in which par. 3 was in force, a miner was engaged in firing, by means of a naked light, shots prepared in a series along the working face. He had ignited the fuses of three of the shots when his lamp failed, and he retired to refill it and to await the explosions. Having heard two separate explosions, the miner came to the conclusion, erroneously but honestly and in good faith, that two of the three shots had exploded simultaneously (as sometimes occurs when two or more shots are fired by fuses at the same time), and that the two reports accounted for all three shots. He accordingly returned to the face within four minutes of the time when he had fired the shots, and the last of the three shots then exploded, and he was seriously and permanently injured. Held that the workman was not entitled to assume that the exceptional case of two shots exploding simultaneously had occurred, and, accordingly, that he had acted in breach of the order in returning to the shot-hole, and that the accident did not arise out of and in the course of the employment.

Sloan v Shotts Iron Co., 1922 S.C. 294; 59 S.L.R. 253; 1922 S.L.T. 270.

(78)

—Workman lighting match in mine.

A coal miner, during the customary interval in the middle of a shift, struck a match to light his pipe. An explosion immediately occurred, and the miner received injuries of which he died. To have matches in the pit was an offence under sec. 35, and the lighting of a match in the pit was an offence under sec. 32 of the Coal Mines Act, 1911, which was posted up, and in force, at the colliery. The prohibitions were known to the miner. Held that the accident did not arise out of the miner's employment.

Robertson v Woodilee Coal and Coke Co., 1920 S.C. (H.L.) 71; 57 S.L.R. 343; 1920, 1 S.L.T. 282.

(79)

Miner going into forbidden place to get a tool required for work.

A fireman discovered a dangerous accumulation of gas in an "upset" in a mine, and accordingly placed a fence across the entrance with "no road up here" chalked upon it. A miner, for the purpose of getting a pick which he required for his work, crossed the fence with a naked light in his cap, and was killed by an explosion of gas. The miner, who had been in conversation with the fireman and had watched him erecting the fence, had been told not to enter the "upset," and understood that there was a dangerous accumulation of gas there, besides being aware of a special rule forbidding miners to pass any fence. Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of the deceased's employment. Observations on disobedience to an order as affecting the question whether an accident arises "in the course of" the employment.

Conway v Pumpherston Oil Co., 1911 S.C. 660; 48 S.L.R. 632; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 440.

(80)

Miner endeavouring to fire a blast contrary to rule.

A miner was employed in a pit, the rules of which provided, inter alia—(1) that every charge should be fired by a competent person appointed in writing, and (2) that detonators should be under the control of a person specially appointed in writing, and should be issued only to shot-firers. The mineowners had in writing duly appointed a shot-firer, and had also appointed him to have the control of the detonators. In the absence of the shot-firer the miner, who had in the course of his employment been preparing a shot for firing, and who had in his possession a detonator, which, however, he had not obtained from the shot-firer, determined to fire the shot himself, and inserted the detonator in it for that purpose. The insertion of detonators was usually performed by the miners, and not by the shot-firer. When the miner attempted to ignite the fuse the shot exploded prematurely and killed him, the cause of the explosion being an accidental ignition of the fuse prior to the miner's attempt to ignite it. Held that the accident happened while the miner was arrogating to himself a duty which he was neither engaged nor entitled to perform, and accordingly that it did not arise out of and in course of the employment.

Kerr v William Baird & Co., 1911 S.C. 701; 48 S.L.R. 646; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 446.

(81)

Miner doing shot-firer's work contrary to rule—Breach of rule not cause of accident.

The use of explosives in a mine was regulated by statutory rules, which provided that every charge should be fired by a specially appointed shot-firer, and that, where the firing was done by electricity, it was the duty of the shot-firer himself to connect the charge with the cable, and thereafter to connect the cable with the firing apparatus, after seeing that all persons in the vicinity had taken shelter. A duly appointed shot-firer was in the habit of getting the miners to connect the charges with the cable, and on one occasion he handed the cable to a miner for the purpose of having it so connected, and, without waiting till this had been done, and without ascertaining that all persons in the vicinity had taken shelter, coupled the cable to the firing apparatus. He then fired the shot, and the miner, who had attached the cable to the charge and had not had time to retire to a place of safety, was seriously and permanently disabled by the explosion. Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of the miner's employment, in respect that the accident was really due to the premature firing of the charge by the shot-firer, and could not be attributed to the miner having arrogated to himself a duty which he was neither engaged nor entitled to perform.

Smith v Fife Coal Co., 1914 S.C. (H.L.) 40; [1914] A.C. 723; 51 S.L.R. 496; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 385.

(82)

Riding on hutch in breach of rule.

A miner on leaving his work jumped on to a hutch for the purpose of getting a ride to the pit bottom, and was injured by reason of his doing so. By a special rule in force in the mine, of which the miner was aware, miners were forbidden to ride on hutches. Held that the injury was not caused by an accident arising "out of" the employment.

Kane v Merry & Cuninghame, 1911 S.C. 533; 48 S.L.R. 430; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 113.

(83)

Railway porter jumping on to footboard of incoming train in breach of rules.

A railway porter, whose duty it was to unload passengers' luggage, was seriously and permanently injured by falling on to the rails while attempting to jump on to the footboard of an incoming train in order to be ready to remove the luggage as quickly as possible when the train stopped. This act was in breach of the company's rules, a copy of which the porter had received but had not read, and he had been reprimanded by the stationmaster for doing the same thing on previous occasions. Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of his employment.

M'William v Great North of Scotland Railway Co., 1914 S.C. 453; 51 S.L.R. 414; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 294.

(84)

Dangerous method of doing work—Disobedience to instructions.

A machine moulder, working on piece-work at a hydraulic press, required in the course of his duties to remove from time to time the loose sand which collected at the top of the moulding box below the moveable upper plate of the press. For this purpose he was supplied by his employers with a wooden scraper, and express instructions were issued that the sand from the top of the moulding boxes should be removed by means of these scrapers. In disregard of these instructions, and in order to increase his output and so to earn a higher wage, he was in the habit of removing the sand, whenever it accumulated, by inserting his hand between the moulding box and the upper plate. While doing so his hand was caught by the hydraulic press and crushed. Held that the accident did not arise out of the employment.

Gaunt v Babcock & Wilcox, 1918 S.C. 14; 55 S.L.R. 28; 1917, 2 S.L.T. 147.

(85)

Prohibited act outwith employment—Cleaning machinery in motion.

A workman was employed in a factory as underman at a mangle. His duties were to carry the cloth to and from the mangle and to assist the headman in putting it on to the rollers. It was no part of his duty to be inside the rail fencing the mangle or to interfere with the mangle while working. Cleaning machinery while in motion was prohibited, but on two days in each week the machinery was stopped in the early morning for cleaning, and it was the duty of the workman to assist the headman to clean the mangle at these times. While the machinery was in motion, and in the absence of the headman, the workman, without orders, went inside the rail and attempted to clean a part of the mangle, and was injured. Held that the accident did not arise out of and in the course of his employment.

M'Diarmid v Ogilvy Brothers, 1913 S.C. 1103; 50 S.L.R. 883; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 133.

(86)

Dock labourer ordered to stop work because of intoxication—Subsequently found drowned.

M'Intyre v Stewart, 1916 S.C. 91; 53 S.L.R. 62; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 288, No. 25, supra.

(87)

Message boy injured while using hoist—Notice displayed that hoist to be used only by servants of institution to which message boy sent.

M'Daid v Steel, 1911 S.C. 859; 48 S.L.R. 765; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 13, No. 67, supra.

(88)

Workman on ship jumping from quay to vessel—Contrary to rule—Rule frequently broken.

Martin v Fullerton & Co., 1908 S.C. 1030; 45 S.L.R. 812; 16 S.L.T. 219, No. 68, supra.

(g) Effect of Intoxication.

(89)

Intoxicated seaman falling from ladder leading from quay to ship.

While a vessel was lying in port some of the crew were allowed to go ashore to make purchases for themselves. One of them returned at a late hour in a dazed condition due to intoxication, and endeavoured to get on board by means of a ladder 40 feet long, which reached from the quay to the bulwark and formed the only means of access to the ship from the quay. The arbitrator stated that the seaman "caught hold of the sides of the ladder and went up without help, but in stepping from the ladder on to the rail of the bulwark, he, as the result of his dazed condition due to the liquor he had consumed, let go his grip of the ladder with both hands, lost his footing and fell back, struck the quay, and falling into the water was drowned." Held that the arbitrator's finding must be read as a finding in fact that the sole cause of the accident was the seaman's intoxicated condition, and, accordingly, that the accident had not arisen out of his employment.

Scrimgeour v Thomson & Co., 1922 S.C. (H.L.) 64; 59 S.L.R. 66; 1922 S.L.T. 47.

(90)

Commercial traveller run over by train while drunk—Unexplained death.

A commercial traveller, in the course of his rounds, arrived late in the day at a town where he had customers. He, however, did not attempt to transact business, but proceeded to get intoxicated, and while in this condition found his way to the railway station (where he could get a train for his home), and when last seen uninjured he was sitting on a seat on the platform. After a goods train had passed, he was found on the line, having been run over by the train and having sustained injuries from which he died. No one saw how he got, or fell, on to the line. Held that the accident did not arise out of the employment of the deceased.

Renfrew v R. & J. McCrae, 1914 S.C. 539; 51 S.L.R. 467; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 354.

(91)

Driver of traction-engine falling from engine while drunk.

The driver of a traction-engine, while driving the engine, fell from the footplate and was run over and killed. The arbitrator found that the accident did not arise out of his employment, in respect that the man was under the influence of drink and unfit for his work at the time of the accident. Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of the employment.

Fraser v Riddell & Co., 1914 S.C. 125; 51 S.L.R. 110; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 377.

(h) Miscellaneous.

(92)

Mistake of workman—Seaman drinking water containing caustic soda.

The crew of a vessel lying in a Mediterranean harbour were in the habit, with the sanction of the officers, of cooling their drinking water, after drawing it from the ship's pump, by placing it in tins in a cool part of the ship. There was a good deal of give and take in the matter, one man often drinking water which had been carried from the pump by another. A seaman found a tin at a place where there was hawse holes, and, thinking it contained sometimes a draught of air through the water which had been placed there to cool, he drank from it. The tin, which belonged to the boatswain, contained a solution of caustic soda, and the seaman was seriously and permanently disabled. Held that there was no evidence to justify an arbitrator in finding that the accident arose out of the seaman's employment.

M'Kinnon v J. & P. Hutchison, 1916 S.C. (H.L.) 111; [1916] 1 A.C. 471; 53 S.L.R. 232; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 158.

(93)

Resorting to wrong place for necessary purpose.

A workman, who was employed to attend to the boilers at a colliery, left his work on one occasion for a necessary purpose; but instead of going to the water-closets provided by his employers, he went into a space under the table-engine about four feet in height. While there he accidentally plunged his foot into a cistern in the floor of this place, which received the escape water from the engine, and his foot was thereby scalded. Held that the accident did not arise out of and in the course of his employment.

Thomson v Flemington Coal Co., 1911 S.C. 823; 48 S.L.R. 740; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 438.

2. SEC. 1 (2) (b)—OPTION TO CLAIM COMPENSATION OR TO TAKE PROCEEDINGS AGAINST EMPLOYER INDEPENDENTLY OF ACT.

[See Cases under Act 1897, II. 2, infra.]

3. SEC. 1 (2) (c)—SERIOUS AND WILFUL MISCONDUCT.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 3, infra.]

(1) WHAT CONSTITUTES.

(a) Breach of Rules and Orders.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 3 (1) (a), infra.]

(94)

Coal mine—Bottomer opening gate fencing shaft before cage stopped—Question of fact or law.

By the additional special rules in force in a coal mine, under the provisions of the Coal Mines Regulations Act, 1887, it was provided, rule 3:—"The bottomer at a mid-working in a vertical shaft . . . shall not open the gate fencing the shaft until the cage is stopped at such mid-working." A bottomer at a mid-working who required a cage signalled for a cage at the bottom of a shaft to be sent to the mid-working. He did so by the ordinary method in use in that mine, viz., by calling to the bottomer at the foot of the shaft, who thereupon signalled to the engineman at the surface to draw up the cage. On receiving such a signal the engineman usually stopped the cage in the course of its ascent at the mid-working, but was not bound to do so, and did not invariably do so. On the signal to raise the cage being given the bottomer opened the gate, and, without ascertaining whether the cage had really stopped, went behind a hutch to push it into the cage, but the cage on the occasion in question had not been stopped at the mid-working, and the hutch fell to the foot of the shaft, drawing the bottomer with it, whereby he was injured. Held that the facts proved entitled the arbitrator to find that the injuries were attributable to the serious and wilful misconduct of the workman.

George v Glasgow Coal Co., 1909 S.C. (H.L.) 1; [1909] A.C. 123; 46 S.L.R. 28; 16 S.L.T. 463.

(95)

—Workman handling explosive and permitting naked light to remain in cap.

By the special rules in force in a coal mine it was provided that a workman while handling any explosive "shall not . . . permit a naked light to remain in his cap, or in such a position that it could ignite the explosive." A miner in that mine, with the intention of counting the charges of powder in his canister, sat down on the ground, placing the canister on his left, and his cap with a naked light in it on his right, at a distance of five feet from the canister. In counting the charges he brought them nearer the light than the canister, and nearer than was necessary. They were ignited by a spark from the light, and an explosion resulted, causing injuries which temporarily incapacitated the miner. Held that the above facts were sufficient to entitle the arbitrator to find that the workman's injuries were attributable to his serious and wilful misconduct.

Donnachie v United Collieries, 1910 S.C. 503; 47 S.L.R. 412; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 251.

(96)

Approaching shot-hole after misfire contrary to regulations—Unexplained motive of workman.

A miner ignited two fuses, each attached to a separate shot-hole, and then retired to shelter. On charge exploded within a minute; and a minute and a half after hearing the sound of that explosion the miner returned towards the shot-hole of the unexploded charge, contrary to rule 3 of the Explosives in Coal Mines Order, 1913, which requires that, when a shot fired by a fuse misses fire, the firer must not approach the shot-hole within an hour. As the miner was approaching the shot-hole the charge exploded and he was injured, but not seriously and permanently. There was no evidence to explain how the miner came to return so soon to the shot-hole, except a statement by him (which the arbitrator rejected as contrary to the evidence) that he had lighted only one fuse. Held that, on these facts, the arbitrator was justified in holding that the miner had been guilty of serious and wilful misconduct.

M'Kenna v Niddrie and Benhar Coal Co., 1916 S.C. 1; 53 S.L.R. 1; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 234.

(97)

Miner returning prematurely to unexploded shot—"If a shot misses fire"—Explosives in Coal Mines Order of 1st September, 1913 (No. 953 of 1913), par. 3 (a).

The Explosives in Coal Mines Order of 1st September, 1913, provides, par. 3:—"If a shot misses fire—(a) the person firing the shot shall not approach . . . the shot-hole until an interval has elapsed of not less than . . . an hour in the case of shots fired by other means" than electricity or a squib. In a mine in which par. 3 was in force, two miners were engaged together in firing shots at their working-place by means of fuses and naked lights. One lit the fuse of his shot, and the other simultaneously applied a light to the fuse of his shot, but believed he had not succeeded in lighting it. Both men then retired to a place of safety. The shot that was known to be lit duly exploded, and the other miner, in the belief that his shot had not been lit, immediately went back to light it. As he was approaching the shot it exploded and injured him, but not seriously and permanently. No notice had been posted in the mine directing that the rule should be held to apply to attempts to light a shot as well as to actual lighting. Held (1) that the shot had "missed fire" within the meaning of par. 3 of the Order, and, accordingly, that the miner was in breach of the Order in returning to the shot-hole within an hour; and (2) that, although the miner honestly believed that the shot had not been lit and accordingly that the Order did not apply, the arbitrator was entitled to hold that he had been guilty of serious and wilful misconduct; and compensation refused.

Smith v Archibald Russell, Limited, 1921 S.C. 335; 58 S.L.R. 284; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 171.

(98)

Return to working place when a shot had been lighted and had not exploded.

Held that a rule against returning to a place when "a shot has been lighted and does not explode" applied whenever a light had been applied to a fuse, and that a workman who disobeyed the rule was guilty of serious and wilful misconduct.

Waddell v Coltness Iron Co., 1912, 50 S.L.R. 29; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 301.

(b) Other Cases.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 3 (1) (b).]

(99)

Dangerous act — Miner crossing working shaft.

A roadsman, working at a pit bottom, crossed the working shaft to fetch a tool in order that he might help to repair a breakdown in another shaft. He waited for the cage to be raised before crossing, but it was lowered again without warning, and he was severely crushed by it. A "bont-gate" or by-pass round the shaft was provided for the workmen, and though it was also used for the hutchies, it was never so crowded as to prevent a man passing. Though there was no special rule prohibiting workmen from crossing the shaft, it was recognised by them that there was great risk in doing so, and in practice no one crossed it unless the cage was in its seat. Held that the above facts were sufficient to entitle the arbitrator to find that the injuries were attributable to the serious and wilful misconduct of the workman.

Leishman v William Dixon, Limited, 1910 S.C. 498; 47 S.L.R. 410; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 273.

(2) WHETHER INJURY ATTRIBUTABLE TO MISCONDUCT.

[See II. 3 (2), infra.]

(3) QUESTION OF FACT OR LAW.

[See Cases under Act 1897, II. 3 (3), infra.]

4. SEC. 1 (3)—SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 4, infra.]

(1) AGREEMENTS.

[Cf. I. 2 and 3, infra.]

(100)

Constitution of agreement — Admission of liability and payment of compensation.

In an application to an arbitrator for an award of compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the pursuer averred: "The defenders admitted liability to pursuer in respect of said accident and the said injuries sustained by him under said Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, and paid pursuer compensation at the rate of 10s. per week up to and including payment for the week ending 9th December, 1914, since which date defenders refuse to continue payment." The defenders objected to the competency of the proceedings, on the ground that these averments disclosed that the questions between the parties had been settled by agreement. Held that the averments did not instruct an agreement within the meaning of sec. 1 (3) of the Act, and accordingly that the application was competent.

Kane v John G. Stein & Co., 1915 S.C. 863; 52 S.L.R. 689; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 33.

(101)

Agreement in settlement of claim for compensation — Liability denied, but claim settled as though compensation due.

Held that an agreement between a workman and his employers for the settlement of a claim for compensation by payment of a lump sum may be an "agreement" in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act, even though the employers dispute liability to pay compensation, if, in fact, they have agreed to the amount of the compensation being fixed as though they were liable under the Act.

M'Guire v Paterson & Co., 1913 S.C. 400; 50 S.L.R. 289; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 32.

(102)

Reduction of agreement—Agreement for redemption of compensation by payment of lump sum—Mutual error as to extent of injury.

A workman, with the advice of his law agent, agreed with his employers to accept a lump sum in settlement of a claim for compensation due to him in respect of injuries caused by an accident, and a memorandum of the agreement was recorded. In a subsequent action for reduction of the memorandum he averred that both parties were in error as to the extent of his injuries at the time when the agreement was made, both being under the belief that he would recover in a few weeks, whereas, as it turned out, he was permanently incapacitated. Held that these averments did not disclose a relevant ground for setting aside the agreement. M'Guire v Paterson & Co., 1913 S.C. 400; 50 S.L.R. 289; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 32.

(103)

Reduction on ground of minority and lesion.

A minor, injured by an accident in the course of his employment, agreed, without consulting his father, to accept compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906. After compensation had been paid for some time he brought an action of damages for his injury at common law, in which he averred that he had accepted the statutory compensation in ignorance of his common law claim; and contended that he being a minor, the agreement should be reduced on the ground of minority and lesion. Held that the pursuer was entitled to an inquiry into the facts.

M'Feetridge v Stewarts & Lloyds, 1913 S.C. 773; 50 S.L.R. 505; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 325.

(104)

Reduction of registered memorandum of agreement—Competency—A.S., June 26, 1907, sec. 12 (C.A.S., L. xiii. 12).

John Brown & Co. v Orr, 1910 S.C. 526; 47 S.L.R. 437; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 138, No. 293, infra.

Mackinnon v Fairfield Shipbuilding and Engineering Co., (O.H.) 1920, 2 S.L.T. 118; 1921, 2 S.L.T. 270, No. 294, infra.

(2) ARBITRATION—COMPETENCY.

[See also I. 25 and under Act 1897, II. 4 (2), infra.]

(105)

Compensation being paid — "Question" arising under the Act.

A workman, who was receiving full compensation for total incapacity under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, applied for the registration of a memorandum of agreement for payment of compensation at that rate until ended, diminished, &c., in terms of the Act. The genuineness of this memorandum was objected to by the employers, on the ground that the workman had signed a receipt bearing that he had agreed that compensation should be paid only while his employers were of opinion that his incapacity continued. The workman accordingly abandoned the application. He then presented an application for arbitration to fix the amount of compensation, to the competency of which the employers objected on the ground that, as full compensation was being paid, there was no "question" arising in any proceedings under the Act within the meaning of sec. 1 (3) thereof. Held, in the circumstances, that there was a "question" in the sense of the Act, and that the workman was entitled to apply for and to obtain an award of compensation.

Hunter v John Brown & Co., 1912 S.C. 996; 49 S.L.R. 695; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 487.

(106)

Whether any "question" as to compensation has arisen—Delay in replying to request for admission of liability.

The employers of an injured workman, in response to a letter inquiring whether they admitted liability to pay him compensation, requested him to submit himself to medical examination. The workman did so. Thirteen days later, as no further communication had been received from his employers, the workman initiated arbitration proceedings for an award of compensation. Held that these proceedings were incompetent, in respect that, as the employers could not be held to have refused to admit liability, no "question" for arbitration had arisen, within the meaning of sec. 1 (3) of the Act.

Crone v Donaldson Line, 1916 S.C. 532; 53 S.L.R. 540; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 373.

(107)

Question as to liability to pay compensation—Validity of discharge.

In an arbitration arising out of a claim under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the employers pleaded in defence a discharge signed by the injured workman acknowledging receipt of a payment of £2 1s. 2d., as "in full satisfaction and discharge of all claims past and future," competent to him in consequence of his injuries. The arbitrator found that the workman had signed the discharge in the belief that it was merely a receipt for past due compensation. He also found that the employers' cashier, who took the discharge, believed that the workman had fully recovered, while in point of fact he was still totally incapacitated. On these findings he held that the discharge was not a bar to the recovery of compensation, and found the workman entitled to compensation. On an appeal held that the effect of the discharge was a question arising in the proceedings as to the liability to pay compensation in the sense of sec. 1 (3) of the Act, and that the arbitrator was acting within his jurisdiction in determining it.

Ellis v Lochgelly Iron and Coal Co., 1909 S.C. 1278; 46 S.L.R. 960; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 224.

(108)

Competency—"Question" as to duration of compensation—Act of Sederunt, 26th June, 1907, sec. 2 (C.A.S., L. xiii. 2).

The employers of a workman, who had been totally incapacitated by an accident, admitted liability under the Workmen's Compensation Act, tendered the amount of compensation due (as to which there was no dispute), and requested the workman to sign a receipt which contained this clause—"At the first or any subsequent payment liability is admitted only for the compensation to date of payment. Further liability, if any, will be determined week by week when application for payment is made." The workman objected to this clause on the ground that he was entitled to have an unqualified admission of liability, refused to sign the receipt, and initiated arbitration proceedings. Held that there was a question between the parties as to the duration of the compensation which had not been settled by agreement, and accordingly, that the arbitration was competent.

Freeland v Summerlee Iron Co., 1913 S.C. (H.L.) 8; [1913] A.C. 221; 50 S.L.R. 518; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 239.

(109)

Application by employers to have compensation ended at certain date—Workman not claiming payments in respect of period subsequent to date in question.

A workman claimed £1 15s. 11d. as compensation for 2 5-6th weeks ending on 13th April, 1908. He made no claim for any period subsequent to that date. The employers, while admitting that they were due the amount claimed, averred that the workman's incapacity had ceased on 13th April, 1908, and craved the arbitrator to grant an order ending the compensation as at that date. The arbitrator decreed for the sum claimed; but, on the ground that there was no dispute between the parties as to the period subsequent to 13th April, 1908, submitted to arbitration, he made no further order. Held that the arbitrator, besides issuing a finding as to the amount due, should have proceeded to determine whether the compensation should be ended as at 13th April, 1908.

Malcolm v Bowhill Coal Co., 1909 S.C. 426; 46 S.L.R. 354; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 177.

(110)

Arbitration to obtain award of compensation—Simultaneous application for warrant to record memorandum of agreement—Conjunction.

A workman presented an application in the sheriff court for warrant to record a memorandum of agreement for payment of compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, in respect of an accident. The genuineness of the memorandum was disputed by his employers. While the application was pending he initiated arbitration proceedings to obtain an award of compensation under the Act in respect of the same accident. Held that the two proceedings could not competently be conjoined, and that the arbitration should be sisted until the application for the warrant had been determined.

King v Arniston Coal Co., 1913 S.C. 892; 50 S.L.R. 685; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 451.

5. SEC. 1 (4)—ASSESSMENT OF COMPENSATION ON FAILURE OF ACTION OF DAMAGES.

[See also II. 5, infra.]

(111)

Parties entitled to assessment of compensation—Dependants not parties to action for damages—Claim not made within six months.

Held that the privilege given by sec. 1 (4) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, of having compensation in terms of the Act assessed by the Court in which an unsuccessful action for damages has been brought, is a privilege personal to the pursuer in the action for damages, and that other persons, who have not claimed compensation within six months, are not entitled to be sisted as parties to the compensation proceedings.

M'Ginty v Kyle, 1911 S.C. 589; 48 S.L.R. 474; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 272.

(112)

Time for making application to assess compensation—Procedure—Expenses of application.

Held (after consultation with the judges of the other division) that where a workman, who has been unsuccessful before a jury in the Court of Session in an action of damages for personal injuries directed against his employer, desires to move the Court to assess compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, the motion must be made before the verdict of the jury is applied, and if not so made it will be too late. Observations on the character of the proceedings and the scope of the inquiry that will follow on the granting of such a motion. Circumstances in which held that a workman, who had been unsuccessful in an action of damages for personal injuries against his employers, but had thereafter applied for, and been awarded, compensation under sec. 1 (4) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, was entitled to the expense of obtaining the award of compensation.

Slavin v Train & Taylor, 1912 S.C. 754; 49 S.L.R. 93 and 577; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 410; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 349.

(113)

Cause appealed for jury trial—Motion to fix compensation.

A workman raised an action of damages for personal injuries against his employer in the sheriff court. The cause having been appealed to the Court of Session for jury trial, an issue was approved and the cause remitted to the Lord Ordinary "to proceed as accords." The pursuer, being satisfied that he could not support the only averments on which he had obtained an issue in the motion roll, moved the Lord Ordinary, under sec. 1 (4) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, to allow a proof of what was due as compensation under the Act, or alternatively to remit to the sheriff to deal with the question. No claim had been made under the Act within six months of the accident. The Lord Ordinary refused the motion on the ground that (1) since the action had not been tried or evidence led before him, there were no materials before him on which he could determine the question whether compensation was due or what the amount thereof might be, and (2) no claim had been made under the Act within six months of the accident.

M'Carten v M'Robbie, (O.H.) 1909, 2 S.L.T. 469.

(114)

Action not raised within six months of accident.

A workman who had met with an accident raised an action of damages against his employers in which a verdict was returned for the defenders. Before the verdict was applied a motion was made to have compensation assessed under the Workmen's Compensation Act. Held that the motion was incompetent in respect that the action had not been raised within six months of the date of the accident.

Durkin v Distillers Company, (O.H.) 1913, 2 S.L.T. 450.

6. SEC. 2—TIME FOR TAKING PROCEEDINGS—NOTICES AND CLAIMS.

[See also II. 6, infra.]

(115)

Computation of time — Claim within six months of accident.

A workman who was injured through an accident occurring at 11.30 a.m. on 24th November, 1908, lodged with his employers a claim for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, at 5.30 p.m. on 24th May, 1909. In an application for compensation by the workman held that the claim had been made within six months from the occurrence of the accident as required by sec. 2 (1) of the Act.

Peggie v Wemyss Coal Co., 1910 S.C. 93; 47 S.L.R. 149; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 448.

(116)

"Mistake or other reasonable cause"—Failure to give notice of accident.

On 9th May, 1910, a collector for an assurance company fell, in the course of his employment, on a stair and sustained injuries. A day or two after the accident, and again on 8th June, while he still believed that his injuries were temporary, he gave verbal notice of the accident, but made no claim for compensation. On 29th June he left the service of the company, and from that date onwards he was incapacitated. On 12th September, when he had ascertained from medical advice that his condition was much more serious than he had at first supposed, he gave formal notice of the accident. Circumstances in which held that the delay in giving notice was due to "mistake . . . or other reasonable cause" within the meaning of sec. 2 (1) (a) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, and so was not a bar to the maintenance of proceedings for compensation.

Millar v Refuge Assurance Co., 1912 S.C. 37; 49 S.L.R. 67; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 361.

(117)

Ignorance of serious nature of injuries—Delay in giving notice and making claim.

Held that, where a delay of more than six months in giving notice and claiming compensation was due to the workman's ignorance of the serious nature of his injury, it was occasioned by "mistake or other reasonable cause," within the meaning of sec. 2 (1) of the Act, and so was not a bar to the maintenance of proceedings for compensation.

Ellis v Fairfield Shipbuilding and Engineering Co., 1913 S.C. 217; 50 S.L.R. 137; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 485.

(118)

Failure to realise seriousness of injury—Delay in giving notice.

A workman, who could not read or write, sustained an apparently trifling injury to his finger on 2nd December, 1913. His doctor treated the case as one of septic poisoning, but disapproved of his returning to work. The workman, however, continued to work until 22nd February, 1914, when he became disabled. In March he consulted another doctor, upon whose advice he went into hospital, and remained there from 24th March until 22nd April. He was found to be suffering from an obscure constitutional disease, which might be awakened into activity by such an injury as he had sustained. It was not until he consulted the second doctor in March that he began to regard his injury as serious, and not until he was in hospital that he began to consider the question of compensation. Formal notice was first given to the employers on his behalf on 22nd April. Held that, on these facts, the arbitrator was entitled to find that the workman's failure to give notice as soon as practicable was due to a "reasonable cause" within the meaning of sec. 2 (1) (a) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906.

Flood v Smith & Leishman, 1915 S.C. 726; 52 S.L.R. 471; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 340.

(119)

Reasonable cause—Failure to make claim within six months.

A workman, who had been injured, was offered compensation under the Act. He resolved not to accept it, and instructed an agent to recover damages. This agent threatened on his behalf to raise an action at common law against his employers, and had several meetings with the agent of the insurance company which insured the employers, who was anxious to avoid litigation and to get the workman to accept compensation. Nothing, however, had been arranged, and no action had been raised by the workman, when the period of six months from the accident expired. On the workman subsequently initiating proceedings under the Act, the arbitrator found that he had failed to make a claim timeously in terms of sec. 2 (1) of the Act, and that there was no "reasonable cause" for this failure, and dismissed the application. Held that there was no ground for disturbing the arbitrator's findings.

Devons v Anderson & Sons, 1911 S.C. 181; 48 S.L.R. 187; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 401.

(120)

Workman suffering from injury but hopeful of recovery—Delay in giving notice.

A miner was struck in the abdomen by a hutch on 22nd December, 1920, and, though suffering from the effect of the injury so as to require assistance in his work, he continued to work until 31st December in the hope that he would recover during the New Year holidays. On 3rd January, 1921, he had to take to bed, and on 20th January an operation was performed on him for opening an abscess on the abdominal wall. Notice of the accident was first given to the employers on his behalf on 11th January, 1921. Held that, on the facts, the arbitrator was entitled to find that the workman's failure to give notice as soon as practicable was not occasioned by "mistake . . . or other reasonable cause" within the meaning of sec. 2 (1) (a) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906.

Livingstone v Summerlee Iron Co., 1922 S.C. 272; 59 S.L.R. 212; 1922 S.L.T. 209.

(121)

"Prejudice" to the employer in his defence—Failure to give notice of accident.

A miner was subjected to severe exertion on 28th December, 1914, while engaged in his work, and died that afternoon, the cause of death being found by an arbitrator acting under the Workmen's Compensation Act to be heart failure the result of heart strain. No notice of the accident or intimation of a claim for compensation was given to the employers until 6th January, 1915, some days after the funeral. After notice had been given, no application was made by the employers for the exhumation of the body. Held that the arbitrator was entitled to hold that the employers had not been prejudiced in their defence by the delay which had occurred in giving notice, and that accordingly he was entitled to award compensation.

Kirk v Lochgelly Iron and Coal Co., 1917 S.C. (H.L.) 18; 54 S.L.R. 22; 1916, 2 S.L.T. 230.

7. SECS. 3 AND 15—CONTRACTING OUT.

(122)

Scheme certified under Act of 1897—Recertification.

The Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, came into operation on 1st July, 1907. A workman entered an employment on 9th August, 1907, and agreed to accept a scale of compensation provided by a scheme certified under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, the certificate bearing that the scheme was to expire on 31st December, 1908. On 15th August, 1907, when the scheme had not been re-certified under sec. 15 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the workman was injured by an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment. Held, on a construction of secs. 3 and 15 of the Act of 1906, that, the workman having entered on his employment after 1st July, 1907, he was not barred from obtaining compensation under the Act by having agreed to accept the provisions of a scheme certified under the Act of 1897, but which had not been re-certified under the Act of 1906.

Wallace v Hawthorne, Leslie & Co., 1908 S.C. 713; 45 S.L.R. 547; 15 S.L.T. 977.

8. SEC. 4—SUB-CONTRACTING.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 7, infra.]

(123)

Work "undertaken" by the principal.

A firm of chemical manufacturers contracted with a certain person to tar the outside of tanks used in their business to protect them from the weather, and a workman in the employment of the contractor was killed by an accident while engaged on the works. In a claim for compensation by the workman's widow, held that the work of tarring the tanks was not part of the work "undertaken" by the chemical manufacturers, within the meaning of sec. 4 (1) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, and that they were not liable to pay compensation.

Zugg v J. & J. Cunningham, 1908 S.C. 827; 45 S.L.R. 670; 16 S.L.T. 52.

(124)

Work undertaken by principals "in the course of or for the purposes of" their business.

Shipowners entered into a contract with A for the cleaning of the boilers of one of their ships which was lying in Glasgow harbour. B, one of several boiler scalers employed and paid by A to do the work, was accidentally injured while so employed. Shipowners on the river Clyde occasionally have the work of boiler scaling performed by their own men without calling in a contractor. Held that the work which A contracted to do, and at which B was engaged at the time of the accident, was not work undertaken by the shipowners in the course of or for the purposes of their trade or business in the sense of sec. 4 (1) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906; and that accordingly they were not liable to pay compensation to B.

Spiers v Elderslie Steamship Co., 1909 S.C. 1259; 46 S.L.R. 893; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 107.

9. SEC. 5—BANKRUPTCY OF EMPLOYER.

(125)

Liquidation of insurance company—Subsequent liquidation of employers' company.

An employee who was entitled to compensation was ranked for his claim in the liquidation of the insurance company with which his employers were insured. On the subsequent liquidation of the employers' company, he lodged a claim to be ranked for the full amount of compensation due to him. Held that sec. 5 (1) was not applicable and that he was entitled to be ranked for his claim on assignment to the liquidator of his claim against the insurance company.

Liquidator of Thrashbush Coal Co. v M'Inally, (O.H.) 1915, 1 S.L.T. 430.

10. SEC. 6—REMEDIES AGAINST EMPLOYER AND THIRD PARTY.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II, 8, infra.]

(126)

Election of remedy—Recovery of compensation from employer—Competency of action against third party—Personal bar.

A workman, who had been injured on 15th January, intimated a claim of damages against a third party by whose fault he alleged the injuries had been caused, and thereafter brought an action of damages against the third party. He made no claim for compensation against his employers, but, in accordance with the custom of their firm with regard to workmen who were off work through illness, they paid him half-wages from the date of the injury. On 14th March the workman entered into an agreement with his employers to refund these payments should he succeed in recovering damages from the third party, and he thereafter signed receipts for the payments that had been made. Held that the payments made to the workman were not made or received as compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, and, accordingly, that he was not barred, under sec. 6 (1) of the Act, from recovering damages from the third party.

Frame v Taylor, 1918 S.C. 343; 55 S.L.R. 288; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 203.

(127)

"Recovery" of compensation—Reservation of claims against third parties.

An injured workman obtained compensation from his employers, for which he granted receipts which bore that he had "elected to take compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act." They further bore to be granted "under reservation of my claims against third parties," and he agreed with his employers to repay the sums received from them if he recovered damages from the third parties whom he alleged to be responsible for the accident. In an action of damages by the workman against these third parties, held that he had not "recovered" compensation in the sense of sec. 6 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, so as to be barred from pursuing the action.

Wright v Lindsay, 1912 S.C. 189; 49 S.L.R. 210; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 444.

(128)

Footings on which payments made.

An injured workman intimated to his employers that he intended to take proceedings for damages against a third party, and requested them meanwhile to pay whatever compensation was due to him under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, "on the understanding that should he succeed in obtaining damages" from the third party, he would repay to them whatever compensation they might have paid. On that footing weekly payments, corresponding to the amount of compensation due to him, were made to the workman by his employers. In an action of damages at his instance against the third party, held that, as the workman had not de facto recovered compensation from his employers, but had merely received payments in terms of a special agreement, he was not barred, under sec. 6 (1) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, from recovering damages.

Kelly v North British Railway Co., 1916 S.C. 19; 53 S.L.R. 53; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 247.

(129)

An injured workman received weekly payments for more than a year from his employers, and granted a receipt for the first payment as "being compensation for accident sustained." The word "compensation" did not appear in subsequent receipts, and they ultimately bore to be granted "without prejudice and under reservation of any claim against third parties." In a subsequent action of damages at the instance of the workman against a third party through whose fault he alleged that he had been injured, he averred that, at the time when the payments by his employers began, he was a minor and was unaware of his legal rights, and that he was willing, in the event of his recovering damages from the defender, to repay to his employers the money received from them. Held that, as the workman had de facto recovered compensation from his employers, he was barred under sec. 6 (1) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, from recovering damages; and action dismissed.

Aldin v Stewart, 1916 S.C. 13; 53 S.L.R. 49; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 239.

(130)

Compensation awarded in absence of workman.

A workman brought an action of damages in the Court of Session for personal injuries against a stranger who was not his employer. While the action was still pending the workman presented a petition in the sheriff court craving compensation from his employer under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, and the sheriff, on the motion of the employer, there being no appearance for the workman, made an award of compensation. The workman refused to accept the award of compensation. Held that the workman had recovered compensation within the meaning of sec. 6 (1) of the Act, and accordingly was barred under the section from insisting in the common law action.

Buchanan v Alexander Cross & Sons, (O.H.) 1911, 2 S.L.T. 33.

(131)

Action of damages by father against railway company for death of son—Railway company not son's employers—Bar of action by son having recovered compensation from his employers.

A workman, employed by a colliery company as brakesman on a branch line of railway belonging to his employers, was incapacitated for work as the result of an accident, and received from his employer compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act for three years, until he died from his injuries. His father thereupon brought an action of damages in respect of his son's death against a railway company, owing to whose fault, he averred, the accident had happened. The Court dismissed the action, holding that the pursuer's claim was excluded by sec. 6 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, on account of his son having recovered compensation from his employers.

Gray v North British Railway Co., 1915 S.C. 211; 52 S.L.R. 144; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 435.

11. SEC. 7—APPLICATION OF ACT TO SEAMEN.

(132)

Date from which compensation payable—Suspension of compensation during maintenance of injured seaman—Discharge of claim for maintenance—Injured seaman deserting during conveyance to return port—Merchant Shipping Act, 1906, sec. 34 (1).

A seaman, who had been injured during a round voyage from Bombay to the United Kingdom and back to Bombay, rejoined his ship after treatment in hospital, though still partially incapacitated. While in course of being returned to Bombay, in terms of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1906, he deserted his ship; and thereafter he applied for compensation. The arbitrator, holding that the seaman's right to compensation was excluded until he returned to Bombay, refused, hoc statu, to make an award of compensation. Held that the liability for the seaman's maintenance imposed on the owners by sec. 34 (1) of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1906, ceased at the date of his desertion, and, accordingly, that, under sec. 7 (1) (e) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, their obligation to pay compensation under the Act commenced as from that date.

Mohad v Anchor Line, 1922 S.C. (H.L.) 53; [1922] 1 A.C. 146; 59 S.L.R. 61; 1922 S.L.T. 38.

(133)

Fishing vessel—Fisherman partly remunerated by share in earnings.

A fisherman was employed as a member of the crew of a steam trawler upon a contract of service with the master, representing the owner, under which he received wages at the rate of 30s. a week, and a commission of 2d. per £ on the gross value of the fish landed under deduction of the cost of carriage. During the only week of his employment his commission amounted to 7s. Held that he was not "remunerated" by a share in the profits or the gross earnings of the working of the vessel, and accordingly was not excluded by sec. 7 (2) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, from claiming compensation under the Act.

Colquhoun v Woolfe, 1912 S.C. 1190; 49 S.L.R. 911; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 169.

(134)

Fireman on fishing vessel partly remunerated by share of gross earnings—Right to share in proceeds of "scum."

A fireman on a steam drifter was employed upon a contract of service, under which he received a fixed wage of 35s. a week, and, along with the engineer and the cook, was also entitled to the proceeds of the "scum"—the name given to fish which fell from the nets as they were being hauled on board and were caught by the engineer in a hand net. The proceeds of the "scum" amounted to a substantial sum. Held that, in respect of his interest in the "scum," the fireman was partly remunerated by a share in the gross earnings of the working of the vessel; and, accordingly, that a claim for compensation under the Act in respect of his death was excluded by the sub-section. Opinion (per Lord Dundas), that Colquhoun v Woolfe, 1912 S.C. 1190, is overruled by Costello v Owners of ship "Pigeon," [1913] A.C. 407.

Buchan v Scottish Steam Herring Fishing Co., 1917 S.C. 565; 54 S.L.R. 482; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 343.

(135)

Remuneration by share in profits or gross earnings.

The sole remuneration of the mate or first fisherman of a steam trawler while at sea was one and one-eighth share (each share being one-fourteenth) of the net balance of the gross price of the fish caught on a trip after deducting certain specified expenses, which did not include the wages of other members of the crew who were paid by fixed wages. Held that such remuneration was a share in the profits or the gross earnings of the vessel, and that the fisherman so paid fell under the exception contained in sec. 7 (2) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, and was consequently precluded from claiming compensation under that Act.

Gill v Aberdeen Steam Trawling and Fishing Co., 1908 S.C. 323; 45 S.L.R. 247; 15 S.L.T. 641.

(136)

Cargo boat—Member of crew paid by share of gross earnings.

Clark v G. R. & W. Jamieson, 1909 S.C. 132; 46 S.L.R. 73; 16 S.L.T. 450, No. 162, infra.

12. SEC. 8—INDUSTRIAL DISEASES.

(1) GENERALLY.

(137)

"Employment."

Observations (per Lord Johnston and Lord Skerrington) as to the meaning of the term

"employment" in sec. 8 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906.

M'Gowan v Merry & Cuningham, 1915 S.C. 34; 52 S.L.R. 30; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 298.

(138)

Disease "due to the nature of any employment"—Disease "contracted."

Observations (per Lord Skerrington) on the interpretation to be put on the words "due to the nature of any employment" and the word "contracted," used in sec. 8 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, with regard to industrial diseases.

M'Taggart v William Barr & Sons, 1915 S.C. 224; 52 S.L.R. 125; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 430.

(139)

Disease due to nature of employment "at or immediately before" disablement—Workman not employed for eight months prior to disablement—Onus of proof—Sub-sec. (2).

A miner obtained from a certifying surgeon a certificate that he was disabled for work by miner's nystagmus, one of the industrial diseases scheduled to the employment of mining in the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906. For eight months prior to the date of disablement he had been out of employment, having been incapacitated, while working as a miner, by an accident, which, however, was not proved to have caused or accelerated the nystagmus. The miner having claimed compensation from the employer with whom he was last employed, i.e., eight months before the disablement, held that the employment was not "at or immediately before the date of disablement" in the sense of sec. 8, sub-sec. (2), of the Act; and, consequently, that the miner was not entitled to the benefit of the statutory presumption that his disease was due to the nature of his employment, but that the onus was upon him to prove that it was so.

M'Taggart v William Barr & Sons, 1915 S.C. 224; 52 S.L.R. 125; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 430.

(140)

Disease due in part to nature of employment within twelve months previous to date of disablement—Liability of last employer—Onus of proof.

A miner was employed by A between 28th January and 16th April, 1913. From 16th April, 1913, till 27th January, 1914, he was out of employment owing to an injury to his leg. Having recovered from that injury, he entered the employment of B on 27th January, 1914. He worked in that employment on that day and the following day, but did not return to his work after 28th January, 1914, owing to trouble with his eyesight. He was afterwards certified to be suffering from miner's nystagmus, the disablement being found to date from 28th January, 1914. In an arbitration in which the miner claimed compensation from B, the sheriff-substitute held that the disease was in part due to the nature of the workman's employment before 28th January, 1913, and in part due to the nature of his employment between 28th January, 1913, and 16th

April, 1913; and on 27th and 28th January, 1914; and awarded compensation. Held that it was not necessary for the workman, in order to succeed in his application, to prove either (1) that the disease was due to any particular thing done to or suffered by him on the two days he was in the employment of B; or (2) that it was solely due to the nature of his employment during the period of twelve months prior to his disablement to the exclusion of any previous period; and award upheld.

M'Gowan v Merry & Cuningham, 1915 S.C. 34; 52 S.L.R. 30; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 298.

(141)

Disablement "the happening of the accident"—Claim by workman who has left employment prior to date of disablement.

Sec. 8 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, which makes disablement by industrial disease equivalent to injury by accident for purposes of compensation, contains a proviso that "the disablement . . . shall be treated as the happening of the accident." Held that the proviso merely fixes the date of disablement as the date from which compensation is payable, and does not have the effect, where the workman has left the employment prior to the date of the disablement, of excluding a claim for compensation on the ground that the accident did not happen in the course of the employment.

Keary v Archibald Russell, Limited, 1915 S.C. 672; 52 S.L.R. 447; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 283.

(142)

Duty to furnish names and addresses—Correct information accompanied by false statement—Sub-sec. (1) (c) (i.).

A workman claiming compensation for lead poisoning produced in an arbitration, as required by sec. 8 of the Act, a correct list of names and addresses of former employers to enable his last employers to operate relief against them. He, however, falsely added a statement that he did not use white lead when employed by them. Held that the mere fact that he had made this false statement did not bar the workman from obtaining compensation, the last employers having not in fact been prejudiced by it.

Taylor v Burnham & Co., 1910 S.C. 705; 47 S.L.R. 643; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 362.

(143)

Information as to former employer—Liability of employer at date of disablement—Disease contracted prior to last employment—Sub-sec. (1) (c).

A workman, who had been employed in mining during the greater part of his life, ceased to work underground owing to trouble with his eyesight, and obtained employment on the surface for three years. He then returned to work underground, and within two months of doing so became disabled from miner's nystagmus. The workman having claimed compensation from the employers who had employed him during these two months, and having supplied them with information as to his employment (which was on the surface) with other employers during the twelve months preceding the disablement, they maintained that they were freed from liability under the provisos to sec. 8 (1) (c) of the Act, in respect that they had proved that the disease was not contracted while the workman was in their employment, and that he had failed to supply them with such information as was sufficient to enable them to operate their relief against his previous employers. Held that the employers were liable although the disease was not contracted in their employment; and that they were not freed from liability by the insufficiency of the information supplied, in respect that the workman had given them all the information in his possession, and that it was insufficient only because there were no employers who during the previous twelve months had employed him in the work of mining. Opinions (per Lord President Strathclyde and Lord Johnston) that the time limit of twelve months was impliedly imported into proviso (ii.) of sec. 8 (1) (c) of the Act.

Docherty v Archibald Russell, Limited, 1918 S.C. 115; 55 S.L.R. 140; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 2.

(144)

Process of "mining"—Surface labour—Sub-secs. (1) and (2), third schedule.

Held that a man employed at the pithead of a colliery as a surface labourer was not employed in the process of "mining" in the sense in which that expression is used in relation to industrial diseases in the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906.

Scullion v Cadzow Coal Co., 1914 S.C. 36; 51 S.L.R. 39; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 271.

(145)

Review of weekly payment—Recovery from industrial disease—Susceptibility to recurrence—Question whether susceptibility due to original attack—Onus of proof—First schedule (16).

Darroll v Glasgow Iron and Steel Co., 1913 S.C. 387; 50 S.L.R. 226; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 506, No. 201, infra.

(2) CERTIFICATES OF CERTIFYING SURGEON AND OF MEDICAL REFEREE.

(146)

Regulations, 25th June, 1907, as to certifying surgeons—Form of certificate of certifying surgeon—Statement of "process" in which workman employed.

Held (1) that the word "process" in the form of certificate prescribed by the regulations, dated 25th June, 1907, for issue by certifying surgeons to workmen alleging disablement by industrial disease must be read as equivalent to "employment," and is not limited to the industrial "processes" set forth in the third schedule to the Act; and (2) that a certificate by a certifying surgeon that a workman, who had not been engaged in one of the scheduled "processes," was suffering from an industrial disease, was invalid because it did not set forth the employment in which he stated he had been engaged.

Marr v Leadhills Co., 1918 S.C. 815; 55 S.L.R. 732; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 170.

(147)

Certificate of certifying surgeon—Production of certificate—Sec. 8 (1) (i).

In proceedings by a workman for recovery of compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, on the ground that he is suffering from an industrial disease, the certificate of a certifying surgeon that he is so suffering does not require to be obtained before the initiation of proceedings, but may be obtained and produced in the course of the proceedings.

Taylor v Burnham & Co., 1909 S.C. 704; 46 S.L.R. 482; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 321.

(148)

Certificate of certifying surgeon referred to medical referee—Form of medical referee's decision—Duty to return a categorical answer—Sec. 8 (1) (i).

When a certificate by a certifying surgeon as to whether a workman is suffering from an industrial disease is objected to, and is referred under sec. 8 (1) (f) of the Workmen's Compensation Act to a medical referee, it is the duty of the medical referee to decide categorically whether the certificate has been rightly granted or not. So held where a medical referee had pronounced a decision "subject to" a note, the terms of the note being contradictory of what purported to be the effect of the decision.

Winters v Addie & Sons' Collieries, 1911 S.C. 1174; 48 S.L.R. 940; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 279.

(149)

—Scope of medical referee's decision—Sec. 8 (1) (i).

Held that under sec. 8, sub-sec. (1) (f) of the Act, a medical referee can only decide whether a certifying surgeon's certificate was rightly granted; and accordingly that, where a medical referee had upheld the granting of a certificate of disablement, an addendum by him to the effect that, at the date of his (the medical referee's) examination, the workman was again able for his work, was incompetent, and fell to be treated pro non scripto.

Garrett v Waddell & Son, 1911 S.C. 1168; 48 S.L.R. 937; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 276.

(150)

—Scope of medical referee's decision—Sec. 8 (1) and (2).

Opinions that it is competent for a medical referee, while affirming the certificate of a certifying surgeon that a claimant is suffering from a scheduled disease, to vary that certificate by finding that the disease is not due to the nature of his employment.

M'Ginn v Udston Coal Co., 1912 S.C. 668; 49 S.L.R. 531; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 339.

(151)

Certificate of certifying surgeon—Validity—Certificate that workman "is suffering from" ulceration of eye—Eye removed prior to granting of certificate.

A workman, claiming compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, in respect of his disablement by an industrial disease, founded upon the certificate of a certifying surgeon, granted in terms of sec. 8 (1) of the Act, which bore that the workman "is suffering from" ulceration of the corneal surface of the eye, one of the scheduled diseases. Under the heading in the certificate "leading symptoms of disease," it was stated, "He has lost his right eye as the result of corneal ulceration." The right eye, which was the eye affected, had been removed by a surgical operation some weeks before the date of the certificate. Held that the words in sec. 8 (1), "is suffering from" an industrial disease, included suffering from the results of a surgical operation rendered necessary by the disease, and that, accordingly, the certificate that the workman was suffering from the disease therein specified was not invalidated by the fact that, prior to the date of the certificate, the eye had been removed.

Corser v Archibald Russell, Limited, 1921 S.C. (H.L.) 31; [1921] 1 A.C. 351; 58 S.L.R. 80; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 113.

(152)

Certificates of certifying surgeon and of medical referee — Claimant certified to be suffering from scheduled disease—Finding by medical referee that disease not due to employment—Claimant's right to prove contrary—Onus—Sec. 8 (1) and (2) and third schedule.

A miner, claiming compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, in respect of an industrial disease, obtained from a certifying surgeon a certificate that he was suffering from, and disabled by, "nystagmus," one of the scheduled diseases applicable to the employment of "mining." A medical referee, to whom the matter was referred on the application of the employers, found that the claimant suffered from nystagmus, but that it was not miner's nystagmus but one of the other forms of that disease. The arbitrator dismissed the claim on the ground that, in view of the referee's finding, the claimant had not obtained the certificate, required by sec. 8 of the Act, that he was suffering from a scheduled disease. In an appeal held (1) that the claimant had obtained the necessary certificate that he was suffering from a scheduled disease, (2) that the decision of the medical referee was not final as to whether that disease was or was not due to the claimant's employment, and (3) that the effect of the finding that it was not due to his employment was to displace the presumption in his favour, and to throw on him the onus of proving affirmatively that it was; and case remitted to the arbitrator to allow a proof.

M'Ginn v Udston Coal Co., 1912 S.C. 668; 49 S.L.R. 531; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 339.

13. SEC. 13—DEFINITIONS.

[See also II. 10, infra.]

(1) EMPLOYER.

(153)

Owner or charterer of vessel—Accident to seaman.

The registered owner of a vessel was, under a charter party, bound to provide and pay a crew of two men, and had the sole power to dismiss them. The possession, control, and management of the vessel under the charter party belonged to the charterer. After the vessel had been delivered to the charterer one of the crew appointed by the owner was killed. Held that the owner, and not the charterer, was the person liable in compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906.

Mackinnon v Miller, 1909 S.C. 373; 46 S.L.R. 299; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 65.

(154)

Harbour commissioners or shipping agents—Accident to coal trimmer—Coal trimmer selected by harbour commissioners, and paid and superintended by shipping agents.

A firm of shipping agents, acting as managers of a vessel lying in Leith harbour, contracted with a firm of merchants to load and carry a cargo of coal. The operation of loading was carried out by a squad of trimmers, who, according to the harbour regulations, were selected by a gaffer, nominated by the harbour commissioners and having the power to dismiss the men. The commissioners had no responsibility for the conduct of the trimmers, who were directly under the control and superintendence of the shipping agents, by whom they were paid. The expenses of loading were deducted from the freight, the balance of which, less charges, was handed by the agents to the owners of the vessel. One of the trimmers sustained injury by an accident while engaged in the work of loading the coal. Held that he was in the employment of the shipping agents at the date of the accident, and was entitled to claim compensation from them.

Gorman v Gibson & Co., 1910 S.C. 317; 47 S.L.R. 394; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 177.

(155)

Distress committee—Poor person employed by distress committee—Unemployed Workmen Act, 1905, sec. 1 (1) (3) and (5), sec. 2 (1) and sec. 5.

Gilroy v Mackie, 1909 S.C. 466; 46 S.L.R. 325; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 141, No. 159, infra.

(2) WORKMAN.

(156)

"Employment"—"Contract of service"—Voidable contract — Deserter from army entering employment—Widow's right to compensation.

A deserter from the army entered the employment of a firm of shipowners as a fireman on one of their vessels, the employers not knowing that he was a deserter. He was drowned through the loss of the vessel at sea. Held that, as the fact that he was a deserter did not render the contract of service between him and his employers void but merely voidable, and as that contract was in force at the date of his death, his widow was not debarred from obtaining compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act.

M'Lelland v J. & P. Hutchison, 1919 S.C. 68; 56 S.L.R. 77; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 264.

(157)

Casual employment—Employment for the purposes of employer's trade or business—Window cleaner.

A jobbing window cleaner was in use about once a month to clean the windows of the house of a medical practitioner, who used a portion of the house in connection with his professional practice. There was no formal contract between the parties, and the window cleaner called and did the work without receiving on each occasion a special invitation or special permission to do so. On one occasion while cleaning the window of the dining-room he fell and was injured. Held that the window cleaner's employment was of a casual nature, and that he was not employed for the purposes of the employer's trade or business, and that he was, therefore, not entitled to compensation.

Rennie v Reid, 1908 S.C. 1051; 45 S.L.R. 814; 16 S.L.T. 222.

(158)

Inmate of charitable institution receiving monthly payments in course of industrial training.

A blind pauper was injured while working in the industrial department of a charitable institution. The department, which supplied industrial training to blind persons, was not self-supporting, but depended partly on charitable aid. On account of the pauper the institution received £14 8s. per annum from his parish, and £20 per annum from a charitable fund, and, on the other hand, supplied him with his board, lodging, and clothing, and paid him 5s. a month. Held that the pauper was a "workman" in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act.

MacGillivray v Northern Counties Institute for the Blind, 1911 S.C. 897; 48 S.L.R. 811; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 57.

(159)

Poor person employed by distress committee—Unemployed Workmen Act, 1905, sec. 1 (1) (3) and (5), sec. 2 (1), and sec. 5.

A man employed on temporary work by a distress committee under the Unemployed Workmen Act, 1905, was injured by accident arising out of and in the course of the employment. Held that the injured man was a workman in the employment of the distress committee within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, and was entitled to compensation under that statute.

Gilroy v Mackie, 1909 S.C. 466; 46 S.L.R. 325; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 141.

(160)

Fisherman partly remunerated by share of profits—Sec. 7 (2).

Colquhoun v Woolfe, 1912 S.C. 1190; 49 S.L.R. 911; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 169, No. 133, supra.

(161)

Fireman on fishing vessel partly remunerated by share of gross earnings—Right to share scum.

Buchan v Scottish Steam Herring Fishing Co., 1917 S.C. 565; 54 S.L.R. 482; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 343, No. 134, supra.

(162)

Member of crew of cargo boat paid by share of gross earnings.

Circumstances in which held that a member of the crew of a small cargo boat, who were remunerated by a share of the gross earnings of the vessel, was a workman within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, and not a partner in a joint adventure.

Clark v G. R. & W. Jamieson, 1909 S.C. 132; 46 S.L.R. 73; 16 S.L.T. 450.

(163)

Partner—Co-owner of ship employed as master.

Sharpe, the owner of ten sixty-fourth shares of the "Dolphin," was employed by the managing owner as master at a fixed remuneration. In a claim by his widow for compensation in respect of his death under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, against the managing owner, held (1) that the deceased was a workman employed by the defender in the sense of the Act; (2) that the fact that the deceased held shares in the vessel did not bar the claim under the Act; and (3) that the fact that he held these shares did not make him a partner or joint adventurer in the trading of the vessel, although ultimately he would bear part of the loss.

Sharpe v Carswell, 1910 S.C. 391; 47 S.L.R. 335; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 80.

(164)

Workman or contractor.

A workman, whose trade was the fixing of enamel letters to windows, had been for a year in the habit of calling on a firm, who made and dealt in enamel letters, and obtaining work from them. He was paid by the piece, defrayed his own travelling expenses, and was under no obligation to undertake any particular job. He frequently canvassed for orders for the firm, being only paid for the orders he received. He was at liberty to accept, and occasionally accepted, work from other employers. The arbitrator having held that he was a "workman" within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the Court refused to interfere with the judgment, holding that it was impossible to say that on the facts the arbitrator was wrong.

Taylor v Burnham & Co., 1910 S.C. 705; 47 S.L.R. 643; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 362.

(165)

Held that a stonebreaker, who was engaged by a contractor to break stones for road metal at the rate of 2s. 2d. per cubic yard of metal broken, and who was subject to the orders of the contractor, and to dismissal by him, was a "workman" within the meaning of sec. 13 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, and was not himself an independent contractor.

Doharty v Boyd, 1909 S.C. 87; 46 S.L.R. 71; 16 S.L.T. 429.

(166)

—C agreed with a firm of timber merchants to bring his horse, when required, to drag logs from one place to another, for which he was paid at the rate of 8s. per day. His share of the work was confined to leading the horse, and this he might have done by means of a substitute, there being no contract that he should perform the work personally. C having sustained injury by an accident while engaged in this work claimed compensation. Held that he was an independent contractor, and not a "workman" within the meaning of sec. 13 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906.

Chisholm v Walker & Co., 1909 S.C. 31; 46 S.L.R. 24; 16 S.L.T. 395.

(167)

"Member of the employer's family dwelling in his house"—Son paying board—Accident occurring while temporarily absent on a job.

A glazier, aged twenty-six, was employed as an ordinary workman by, and lived with, his father in Glasgow, paying for his board and lodging. While engaged on a job for his father in Oban, where he lived in lodgings, he was accidentally injured. Held that at the time of the accident he was "a member of the employer's family dwelling in his house," within the meaning of sec. 13 of the Act, and accordingly was not a workman entitled to compensation under the Act.

M'Dougall v M'Dougall, 1911 S.C. 426; 48 S.L.R. 315; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 96.

(3) DEPENDANTS.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 10 (8) (b), infra.]

(168)

Workman's grand-daughter acting as his housekeeper—Servant or dependant.

An able-bodied girl of eighteen claimed compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act in respect of the death by accident of her grandfather. She had acted as housekeeper to her grandfather for a period of a year prior to his death, and, in consideration of her services, she received her food and clothing and also pocket money amounting to about 3s. a week, but no other money wage. She resided in her father's house, but was absent at her grandfather's house every day from 5.30 a.m. to 6 p.m. The sheriff-substitute having found that the grand-daughter was not dependent on the earnings of her grandfather, in respect that her relation to him was under a contract of service, held that there was evidence on which he was entitled so to find.

Mitchell v Scottish Iron and Steel Co., 1920 S.C. 184; 57 S.L.R. 162; 1920, 1 S.L.T. 73.

(169)

Brothers and sisters living in family.

Opinion reserved whether, when a family live together and some of the children work and some do not, and the workers contribute to the family purse, the result in law is that the children who do not work are dependants of those who do.

M'Ginty v Kyle, 1911 S.C. 589; 48 S.L.R. 474; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 272.

(170)

Illegitimate child—Dependency on mother—Child maintained gratuitously by stranger.

The mother of an illegitimate child gave it, on its birth, to a woman who had agreed to adopt it without payment. In handing over the child to the woman, the mother stated that she would contribute something to its support, and she subsequently contributed 3s. 6d. including the materials for a shawl. Apart from this contribution the child was maintained by the woman who had adopted it. Two months after the child's birth the mother was killed through an accident in the course of her employment. Held that the mother's legal liability to support the child was not in itself sufficient to establish the child's dependency on her, and that, in the circumstances, the child was not wholly or in part dependent upon the earnings of the mother at the date of her death, and was, therefore, not entitled to compensation.

Briggs v Mitchell, 1911 S.C. 705; 48 S.L.R. 606; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 293.

(171)

Decree for aliment—No sums recovered under decree.

The mother of an illegitimate child obtained a decree for aliment of £6 6s. annually for ten years against the father. On account of the father having worked under an assumed name, she was unable for some time to enforce the decree, but on his being discovered she arrested the wages due to him in the hands of his employers, and the father agreed that these wages, to the extent of £22, should be uplifted for behoof of the child. Shortly afterwards the father met with an accident in the course of his employment, from the effects of which he died before any portion of the £22 had been uplifted for behoof of the child. In a claim for compensation at the instance of the child, the arbitrator found in fact that the child was partially dependent on its father at the time of his death, and awarded compensation. Held that the finding of dependency was a finding in fact; that the finding in fact had not been arrived at by a wrong inference in law from the other facts in the case, and was consequently final.

Bowhill Coal Co. v Smith, 1909 S.C. 252; 46 S.L.R. 250; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 31.

(172)

Persons not in receipt of support, but with legal right and prospect of enforcing—Children deserted by father.

Dependency is always a question of fact; and, even where children have been deserted by their father for three years before his death and have received no support from him during that time, they may still be held to be partially dependent upon him if there was a reasonable probability that, had he lived, he would in the future have contributed to their support.

Dobbie v Egypt and Levant Steamship Co., 1913 S.C. 364; 50 S.L.R. 222; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 509.

(173)

Children deserted by their father and maintained chiefly by their brothers—Competency of appeal—Fact or law.

Held that a person may be dependent upon a workman at the time of his death within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, and so entitled to compensation, although he was in fact receiving at the time no support from the workman, provided that he had at the time a legal right to support, and that there was also a reasonable prospect of his being able to enforce and of his enforcing the right to a greater or less extent at some future period.

Observed that the question of dependency is one of fact upon which the decision of the arbitrator is final, unless there is no evidence to support it, or unless he has misdirected himself upon a question of law.

Circumstances in which held that there was evidence to justify the finding of an arbitrator that two pupil children were wholly dependent on their father's earnings at the time of his death in April, 1911, and accordingly entitled to compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, although they had received practically no support from him since March, 1907.

Young v Niddrie and Benhar Coal Co., 1913 S.C. (H.L.) 66; [1913] A.C. 531; 50 S.L.R. 744; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 63.

(174)

"Wholly dependent."

A widow who had five sons, working miners, four of whom were married and had children, lived with and was entirely supported by her unmarried son. Held that notwithstanding her right to relief from the four other sons, who were able to contribute to her support, she was wholly dependent upon the earnings of the son who supported her at the time of his death.

Rintoul v Dalmeny Oil Co., 1908 S.C. 1025; 45 S.L.R. 809; 16 S.L.T. 212.

(175)

Total or partial dependency of daughter on father—Daughter wholly supported out of common fund to, which father and brothers contributed.

In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, in which the question at issue was whether the daughter of a miner, who had been accidentally killed, was wholly or only in part dependent upon her father's earnings, the following facts were proved:—The miner's household consisted of himself, two brothers, three sons, and the daughter. Towards a fund amounting to £8 17s. 6d. weekly, of which £4 was set aside for food, the miner contributed his whole earnings amounting to £3 16s. 6d.; out of their earnings the two elder sons each contributed £2 2s., and the youngest son 17s. The daughter and one of the miner's brothers earned nothing, and made no contribution; the other brother paid 30s. into the food fund, but the whole of this sum was expended upon his sustenance. Out of the balance of the general fund the miner paid for clothes and other necessities required by his sons and daughter, and by the brother who earned no wages. It was admitted that the latter and the youngest son were in part dependent upon him. No facts were proved as to the proportion of expenditure made on behalf of the various members of the family.

Held that the arbitrator was entitled to assess the compensation due to the daughter on the basis of partial dependency, in respect that the existence of a common fund from which she was supported led to a prima facie inference that she was dependent upon all the contributors to the fund, and that it had not been proved that she was, in fact, wholly dependent upon her father's contributions to it.

Sinnerton v Robert Addie & Sons' Collieries, 1920 S.C. 660; 57 S.L.R. 585; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 153.

Ascertainment of dependants in arbitration.

[See 21, infra.]

14. SECS. 13 AND 14—APPEALS IN ACTIONS AGAINST EMPLOYER AT COMMON LAW AND/OR UNDER EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY ACT.

STATUTES.

Act 1907—Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act, 1907—7 Edw. VII. c. 51.

Act 1913—Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act, 1913—2 & 3 Geo. V. c. 28.

(176)

Removal to Court of Session for jury trial—Competency—Action of damages by father of deceased employee against son's employers—Act 1907, sec. 30.

The father of a deceased workman brought an action in the sheriff court against his son's employers concluding for damages under the Employers' Liability Act in respect of his son's death. A proof having been allowed, the action was, on the pursuer's motion, remitted to the Court of Session for trial by jury under sec. 30 of the Sheriff Courts Act, 1907. On the pursuer moving for issues in the single bills the defenders objected that the removal of the action to the Court of Session was rendered incompetent by the provisions of sec. 14 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906. Held that the cause had been competently removed to the Court of Session, and issues allowed.

Brown v Glenboig Union Fireclay Co., 1911 S.C. 179; 48 S.L.R. 245; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 36.

(177)

—Competency—Action of damages by father of deceased workman against son's employers—Alleged dependency of father on the deceased—Act 1907, secs. 30 and 52.

In an action in the sheriff court at the instance of a father whose son had been accidentally killed against his son's employers for damages under the Employers' Liability Act, or alternatively at common law, the pursuer averred that the deceased paid his earnings to his parents for the maintenance of the house. The cause having, on the motion of the pursuer, been remitted to the Court of Session for jury trial under sec. 30 of the Sheriff Courts Act, 1907, the defenders objected to the competency of the remission on the ground that the pursuer, being a dependant of the deceased, was in virtue of sec. 13 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, a "workman" in the sense of that Act, and accordingly, by sec. 14 of that Act, his right to have the cause removed to the Court of Session for jury trial was excluded. Held that even if the right of one in the position of the pursuer to have the cause remitted to the Court of Session for jury trial had been taken away by secs. 13 and 14 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the right had been restored by secs. 30 and 52 of the Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act, 1907.

Lawrie v Banknock Coal Co., 1912 S.C. (H.L.) 20; [1912] A.C. 105; 49 S.L.R. 98; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 475.

Cf. Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act, 1907, as amended by Act 1913, sec. 3 (g).

(178)

Appeal in action of damages by father of deceased workman against son's employers—Competency.

Held that the limitation of appeal to the Court of Session imposed by sec. 14 of the Workmen's Compensation Act with regard to actions of damages at the instance of injured workmen was made applicable by sec. 13 to actions at the instance of the persons specified in the latter section; and accordingly that an appeal (not on a question of law) in an action of damages for the death of a workman, brought by his father against the employers at common law or under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, was incompetent.

Cook v Bonnybridge Silica and Fireclay Co., 1914 S.C. 740; 51 S.L.R. 529; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 430.

(179)

Form of appeal — Second schedule (17)—Act, 1907, sec. 28.

In an action in the sheriff court concluding for damages for personal injury at common law or alternatively under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, the sheriff pronounced an interlocutor setting forth the questions for the jury, and granted leave to appeal. The defenders having appealed, the pursuer objected to the competency of the appeal as not being in the form of a stated case on a question of law, and pointed out that by the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (sec. 14, and second sched. (17)), it was enacted that in such actions appeal should be taken only by way of stated case on a question of law. Held that, as the question raised by the appeal was a question of law, and as the whole of the facts which would have been set forth in a stated case were before the Court, the sheriff, by granting leave to appeal, had in effect stated a case for the determination of a point of law; and objection repelled.

Whitton v Ewing, Aitken & Edgar, 1911 S.C. 781; 48 S.L.R. 672; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 322.

15. SEC. 16—COMMENCEMENT OF ACT.

(180)

Accident happening before commencement of Act—Application of Act—Right of appeal to House of Lords—"Proceedings consequential" on medical reference.

The Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906 (which provides for an appeal to the House of Lords that did not exist under the Act of 1897), enacts, sec. 16, that the Act shall not apply to cases where the accident happened before its commencement, "except so far as it relates to references to medical referees and proceedings consequential thereon." In an arbitration with regard to an accident which had happened before the commencement of the Act of 1906, the arbitrator made a remit, under par. 15 of the second schedule to that Act, to a medical referee to examine and report, and thereafter pronounced an interlocutor which was appealed to the Court of Session. An appeal having been taken from the judgment of the Court of Session to the House of Lords, held that the judgment of the Court of Session was not a "proceeding consequential" on the medical reference and accordingly that the provisions of the Act of 1897, and not those of the Act of 1906, applied, and excluded the appeal.

Rosie v Mackay, 1912 S.C. (H.L.) 7; 49 S.L.R. 48; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 401.

(181)

Workman ceasing to be employed prior to commencement of Act—Death of workman after commencement of Act—Secs. 8 (1) (iii) and 8 (4) (b).

A stereotyper in the employment of a newspaper contracted lead poisoning. He left the employment on 22nd June, 1907, and died on 14th September, 1907. The Act came into operation on 1st July, 1907. Held that the provisions of the Act were not applicable, and that the workman's widow was not entitled to recover compensation.

Greenhill v "The Daily Record," Glasgow, 1909, 46 S.L.R. 483; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 344.

FIRST SCHEDULE.

16. "WHERE DEATH RESULTS FROM THE INJURY"—First Schedule (1) (a).

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 11, infra.]

(182)

Death from disease following on an accident.

A workman had a fall from a ladder whereby his ankle was injured, and he also suffered from general pain and shock, which lasted until, about a month after the accident, he was seized with violent internal pains and died from appendicitis peritonitis. In an arbitration upon a claim by his widow for compensation, in which two doctors were examined for each side, there was a conflict of medical evidence, one doctor, for the pursuer, saying that probably the workman "would have been alive now had he not met with the accident," the other that the condition of which the workman died "was consequent, indirect if you will, of the accident," and that "in all probability" he "would not have died but for the accident." The two doctors examined for the defenders could see no connection between the accident and the cause of death. Held that there was evidence to support the arbitrator's finding that death was the result of the accident.

Euman v Dalziel & Co., 1913 S.C. 246; 50 S.L.R. 143; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 464.

(183)

Pneumonia following upon chill—Chill due to partial immersion in water accumulating in mine through breakdown of a pump.

Drylie v Alloa Coal Co., 1913 S.C. 549; 50 S.L.R. 350; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 167, No. 14, supra.

(184)

Pneumonia following on chill—Wreck in mine involving withdrawal of workmen—Chill due to standing in draught while waiting to be raised to the surface.

Brown v John Watson, Limited, 1914 S.C. (H.L.) 44; [1915] A.C. 1; 51 S.L.R. 492; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 406, No. 12, supra.

(185)

Death due to chill—Chill contracted by miner while waiting to be raised from shaft bottom—Delay due to statutory inspection of shaft.

Lyons v Woodilee Coal and Coke Co., 1917 S.C. (H.L.) 48; 54 S.L.R. 404; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 274, No. 13, supra.

(186)

Death from operation not confined to injury caused by accident.

A workman accidentally ruptured himself and was obliged to undergo an operation for hernia. In the course of the operation he was discovered to be suffering also from another old hernia, and both were operated upon. He subsequently died from heart weakness and degeneracy "set up by the strain of the operation." Held that there was evidence to justify the arbitrator in finding that death was the result of the accident.

Thomson v Mutter, Howey & Co., 1913 S.C. 619; 50 S.L.R. 447; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 213.

(187)

Duty of arbitrator to decide question whether death results from injury—Death accelerated by workman's conduct.

In an application by the widow of a deceased workman for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the arbitrator obtained a report from a medical referee which stated that the workman's folly in leaving a hospital to which he had been sent after meeting with the accident, "probably accelerated his death," but that this circumstance could not "disestablish the conclusion that but for the accident" the workman "would not have died how and when he did die." On considering this report and the facts of the case, the arbitrator "found in fact that but for the accident the deceased would not have died at the time at which and in the way in which he did die, and found, in fact and law, that the said injury by accident was thus the cause of the death." On appeal, held that it was the duty of the arbitrator to decide, in terms of the actual words of the first schedule, whether the workman's death had "resulted" from the accident, and, as the arbitrator in his finding had not decided that question, case remitted to him to do so, and to report. The arbitrator having thereafter reported that he found as a fact that death "resulted" from the accident, the Court held that there was evidence on which he was justified in coming to this conclusion.

Dunnigan v Cavan & Lind, 1911 S.C. 579; 48 S.L.R. 459; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 187 and 274.

17. INCAPACITY FOR WORK—First Schedule (1) (b) and (3).

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 12, infra.]

(188)

Observations (per Lord President Dunedin) as to the meaning of wage earning capacity.

Petrie v Smith, 1913, 50 S.L.R. 749; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 470.

(189)

In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the arbitrator found that the workman was permanently incapacitated for work at his trade as a stonebreaker, and that there was no proof of his being able to earn wages in his present condition, and awarded compensation. In an appeal the employer maintained that there was no finding in fact to the effect that the workman was incapacitated for other work than stone-breaking. The Court refused to interfere with the determination of the arbitrator, Lord McLaren observing—"It has been the practice of the Court not to interfere with a sheriff's judgment when any possibility of injustice can be obviated by subsequent application for review."

Observations upon the meaning of "incapacity" for work.

Doharty v Boyd, 1909 S.C. 87; 46 S.L.R. 71; 16 S.L.T. 429.

(190)

Physical capacity—Inability to get work.

Observed (per Lord Salvesen), "Incapacity for the purposes of the Workmen's Compensation Act is primarily physical incapacity."

It does not, in my opinion, include inability to get employment which arises from something not personal to the workman."

Carlin v Stephen & Sons, 1911 S.C. 901; 48 S.L.R. 862; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 19.

(191)

Inability to obtain work on account of injured condition—First schedule (1) (b).

Held that a workman's inability to obtain work owing to his injured condition is "incapacity for work" within the meaning of the Act, although he is physically capable of doing work.

Duris v Wilsons & Clyde Coal Co., 1912 S.C. (H.L.) 74; [1912] A.C. 513; 49 S.L.R. 708; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 459.

(192)

Wage earning capacity—First schedule (1) (b).

A miner, who lost one eye by an accident and who had been given work above ground and was receiving partial compensation, was examined by a medical referee, who reported that he was "as fit as any other one-eyed man to resume his work underground." The employers having applied to have the compensation ended, the arbitrator, after a proof, found that the miner had made various applications for work underground without success, and that he "is presently working on the surface and is only able on account of his injuries to earn 18s. a week," and dismissed the application. In an appeal the Court refused to disturb the arbitrator's finding.

Arnott v Fife Coal Co., 1912 S.C. 1262; 49 S.L.R. 902; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 143.

(193)

Profits made in public-house business.

In an application to end or diminish weekly payments of compensation made to a miner, the arbitrator found that the workman had not sufficiently recovered to resume his occupation as a miner, but that he had for a year been carrying on a public-house business; that after deducting interest on capital, wages, and other expenses, the net profits of that business amounted to £98 per annum, which sum he treated as the measure of the workman's earning capacity; and that as this sum exceeded the workman's average earnings prior to the accident (£94 per annum), his incapacity for work had terminated; and accordingly he ended the payments. Held that the profits made in business were not the measure of the workman's earning capacity; and case remitted to the arbitrator to inquire what services the man actually performed in his business, and what these services would have been worth if, instead of serving himself, he had been serving another.

Paterson v A. G. Moore & Co., 1910 S.C. 29; 47 S.L.R. 30; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 291.

(194)

Workman fit for light work but unable to walk from place of residence to such work—Refusal to reside near work.

In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, it was proved that the injured workman, a miner, was fit for light work; that his employers had offered him light work at their pit, but that, by reason of his injury, he was unable to walk the distance between his residence and the pit; and that, although he could be provided with a house close to the pit, he, without assigning any reason, refused to change his residence. Held that the arbitrator was entitled to assess the compensation on the basis of the workman's earning capacity if he resided close to his work.

Pearson v Archibald Russell, Limited, 1916 S.C. 536; 53 S.L.R. 377; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 214.

(195)

Workman receiving same wages as before the accident—Minor workman—First schedule (3) and (16).

A minor workman was injured, and received compensation till 13th April, 1908, when he returned to work, and thereafter the employers lodged a minute craving an order finding that the workman's incapacity had ceased at 13th April, 1908, and declaring the compensation at an end. After sundry procedure, which delayed the decision till more than twelve months after the accident, the arbitrator found that the workman had not completely recovered from the effects of the injury (which was rupture), and refused the employers' crave. In a case for appeal, he found in fact that after 13th April, 1908, the workman had earned "much the same wages as before the accident"; and the question of law was whether the fact that the workman earned the same wages after as before the accident in itself entitled the employers to have the compensation declared at an end. The Court, without answering the question, remitted to the arbitrator to determine whether the workman's earning capacity was the same as, or less than, it would have been had he not been injured.

Malcolm v Bowhill Coal Co., 1910 S.C. 447; 47 S.L.R. 449; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 322.

(196)

—State of labour market—Possibility of supervening incapacity—Suspensory order.

Mulligan v Corporation of Glasgow, 1917 S.C. 450; 54 S.L.R. 352; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 230, No. 262, infra.

(197)

Workman unfit to perform previous work, but earning previous wages at work provided by employers.

Kilpatrick v Wemyss Coal Co., 1922 S.C. 71; 59 S.L.R. 89; 1921, 2 S.L.T. 278, No. 252, infra.

18. "WHERE . . . INCAPACITY FOR WORK RESULTS FROM THE INJURY"—First Schedule (1) (b).

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 13, infra.]

(198)

Cessation of incapacity due to accident—Loss of eye—Diseased condition of other eye—Risk of future incapacity—Concurrent causes of incapacity—Ending of compensation.

A miner lost his right eye through an accident arising out of his employment, and for a time received from his employers compensation for total incapacity. Subsequently, in proceedings for review, the arbitrator ended the compensation, on the ground that the miner's incapacity had ceased, and that he was fit to resume his former work as a miner. He, however, also found that there was incipient cataract in the remaining eye, which would gradually produce incapacity for work, but that the cataract was not due to the accident. Held that the arbitrator was right in ending the compensation.

Hargreave v Haughhead Coal Co., 1912 S.C. (H.L.) 70; [1912] A.C. 319; 49 S.L.R. 474; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 361.

(199)

Obesity—Natural tendency increased by enforced inactivity following injury.

A miner, aged sixty, received injuries by an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment, which for a time totally incapacitated him for active work. Three years after the accident he had recovered from the direct effects of it, but had become unfit for any except sedentary work. This partial incapacity for work was due to age and obesity, and the obesity was the result of a natural tendency increased by the enforced inactivity following on the accident. In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the arbitrator found that the partial incapacity did not result from the accident, and terminated the compensation. Held that there was evidence to justify the arbitrator's finding. Opinions that in order to entitle a workman to compensation it is not necessary that the incapacity in respect of which he makes his claim should be the direct result of the accident injury, or that there should be no contributory source of weakness in the workman.

Clark v Taylor & Co., 1914 S.C. (H.L.) 104; 51 S.L.R. 740; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 145.

(200)

Supervening aneurism.

A miner strained his back on 7th December, 1911, and in consequence became incapacitated for work, but on 27th May resumed and continued at full work until 15th August, when he became totally incapacitated owing to dilation of the heart caused by an aneurism of the aorta. He did not feel pain in the cardiac region or show any symptoms of heart trouble until July. Held that the arbitrator, who was of opinion that the aneurism was caused by the miner being engaged between May and August at work which was beyond his physical powers, was entitled to find that his present incapacity was not due to the accident of 7th December.

Paton v William Dixon, Limited, 1913 S.C. 1120; 50 S.L.R. 866; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 149.

(201)

Industrial disease—Susceptibility to recurrence—Question whether susceptibility due to original attack—Onus of proof.

In an application by employers for the ending or diminishing of a weekly payment of compensation, it was proved that the workman, after being duly certified as suffering from miner's nystagmus (an industrial disease), was awarded compensation, that he had "now completely recovered from this attack," but that he was susceptible to a recurrence of the disease. It was not proved whether the susceptibility was due to the original attack or to constitutional predisposition, the evidence being inconclusive. Held that, as the workman had recovered from the original attack, and as he had failed to discharge the onus which lay on him of proving that his susceptibility to recurrence of the disease was due to that attack, the compensation fell to be ended.

Darroll v Glasgow Iron and Steel Co., 1913 S.C. 387; 50 S.L.R. 226; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 506.

(202)

Refusal to undergo surgical operation—Unreasonable refusal—Onus of proof.

Where an employer contends that a workman's incapacity is attributable to his unreasonable refusal to undergo a surgical operation and not to the injury, the onus probandi rests upon the employer. The fact that the workman's refusal is in accordance with the advice of his own doctor, while affording prima facie evidence that his conduct has been reasonable, is not conclusive. Circumstances in which held that an arbitrator was entitled to reach the conclusion that the employers of a workman had failed to prove that the workman's incapacity was due to unreasonable refusal to undergo an operation.

Cant v Fife Coal Co., 1921 S.C. (H.L.) 15; 58 S.L.R. 74; 1921, 1 S.L.T. 88.

(203)

A workman accidentally injured in the foot and thereby incapacitated refused to undergo a simple operation which, it was reasonably certain, would have cured him. He acted on the advice of his own doctors, who were of opinion that the operation, though safe, would be useless. Held that he was precluded from claiming a continuance of compensation.

O'Neill v John Brown & Co., 1913 S.C. 653; 50 S.L.R. 450; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 210.

(204)

Circumstances in which held that a mill girl's present incapacity was due to an accident to her hand, and could not be attributed to unreasonable conduct on her part in refusing to undergo an operation, which might have restored or improved the capacity of her hand, but which her own doctor advised her not to undergo. Opinion (per Lord President Strathclyde) that "save in very special circumstances, the proximate cause of incapacity never can be the unreasonable refusal of a workman to undergo an operation, if his own medical adviser advises him against undergoing that operation."

Gracie v Clyde Spinning Co., 1915 S.C. 906; 52 S.L.R. 706; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 46.

(205)

Unreasonable conduct of workman—Incapacity due in whole or in part to workman's failure to return to work.

In an application for termination or review of compensation which was being paid to an injured workman, the arbitrator found that the workman had for some time been fit for light work, but had made no attempt to obtain work, and that, though partial incapacity still existed, it was "due in whole or in part to the defender's failure to return to work when able to do so"; and ended the payments of compensation until further order. Held that, as the arbitrator's findings did not exclude the conclusion that incapacity was still partly due to the workman's injuries, he was not entitled to end the compensation. Observations on the effect of a workman's unreasonable conduct on his right to continue to receive compensation, and opinions (per Lord Mackenzie and Lord Skerrington) that unreasonable conduct cannot, per se, deprive a workman of his right to compensation, but can only do so if it is proved that the existing incapacity is due to that conduct.

Devlin v Chapel Coal Co., 1915 S.C. 71; 52 S.L.R. 83; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 320.

(206)

Onus of proof—Injury to knee—Incapacity alleged to be due to similar injury in previous employment.

In December, 1908, a workman in the course of his employment felt a severe pain in his right knee on rising from a kneeling position, and on examination it was found that the cartilage was torn. Three years before, while in another employment, he had sustained a "wrench" to the same knee, which had incapacitated him for some weeks, after which he was able to resume his ordinary work. It was not clear on the evidence whether the later injury was connected with the former, or, if so, to what extent it was so connected. In answer to a claim by the workman for compensation against the firm in whose employment he was in December, 1908, they maintained that the incapacity was due to the original injury. Held that, as the injury in December, 1908, was apparently sustained in the employment of his then employers, the onus was on them to show that no new injury was sustained and that anything suffered in December, 1908, was due to the former accident; that they had failed to discharge this onus, and were accordingly liable to pay compensation.

Borland v Watson, Gow & Co., 1912 S.C. 15; 49 S.L.R. 10; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 327.

(207)

Supervening incapacity — Question whether incapacity due to accident.

Under a remit by parties to a medical referee to report on the condition of a workman, who had been injured and who was in receipt of compensation, the referee reported that he was fit for his former work. Thereafter the employers presented an application for review of the compensation, which was opposed by the workman on the ground that, since the date of his examination by the medical referee, he had again become incapacitated as a result of the accident. In a stated case, held that the onus was on the workman of proving that the supervening incapacity was due to the accident.

M'Ghee v Summerlee Iron Co., 1911 S.C. 870; 48 S.L.R. 807; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 16.

(208)

Recovery from injury—Supervening insanity—Whether insanity due to accident.

On 28th February, 1912, a workman, in the course of his employment, received a severe scalp wound, which incapacitated him for work. His employers paid him compensation down to 5th November, 1913. The workman, at some time not later than September, 1914, became insane, and in the autumn of 1916 an application was presented for an award of compensation in respect of total incapacity. The arbitrator found that the workman had completely recovered from the physical effects of his injury, but that he was totally incapacitated for work owing to his insanity. He further found that there was no proof that the insanity was due to the accident, nor, on the other hand, was there any proof of a new cause intervening to account for the insanity; and awarded compensation. Held that the onus of proving that the insanity was due to the accident lay upon the workman, and that, as he had failed to discharge that onus, he was not entitled to compensation.

Brownlee v Coltness Iron Co., 1917 S.C. 409; 54 S.L.R. 311; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 185.

(209)

———Review—Weekly payments fixed by registered agreement.

M'Callum v Quinn, 1909 S.C. 227; 46 S.L.R. 141; 16 S.L.T. 501, No. 249, infra.

19. COMPENSATION.

(1) COMPENSATION IN RESPECT OF WORKMAN'S DEATH—First Schedule (1) (a).

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 14 (1), infra.]

(a) Generally.

(210)

Claim by dependant's executor.

Held that the right to compensation, conferred by the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, on the dependant of a deceased workman, vests in the dependant on the death of the workman, and transmits to the representatives of the dependant, although the dependant may have made no claim for compensation during his lifetime.

Hendry v United Collieries, 1909 S.C. (H.L.) 19; [1909] A.C. 383; 46 S.L.R. 780; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 47.

(211)

Funeral expenses.

Opinion, per curiam, that reasonable funeral expenses are a proper charge on the fund available for compensation.

Murray v Gourlay, 1908 S.C. 769; 45 S.L.R. 577; 15 S.L.T. 1029.

(b) Amount.

Average weekly earnings.

[See (2) (a) (i), infra.]

(212)

Partial dependency—Sum "reasonable and proportionate to the injury."

In an application for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, for the death of a workman, the arbitrator found that an illegitimate pupil child of the deceased, for whose support the deceased had been paying aliment under a decree of affiliation and aliment, was partially dependent on his earnings, and that the sum available for compensation under the Act was £150. No other dependant having applied for compensation, the arbitrator awarded the whole sum of £150, less £5 10s. of funeral expenses, to the illegitimate child. Held that in making the award the arbitrator had proceeded on a wrong principle, in respect that the Act does not provide for the maximum sum being awarded in every case, but only for an award of reasonable compensation within that limit; and case remitted to him to ascertain the prospective value of the contributions that would probably have been made by the deceased, if he had lived, for the support of his illegitimate child.

Murray v Gourlay, 1908 S.C. 769; 45 S.L.R. 577; 15 S.L.T. 1029.

(213)

———Competency of considering possible future earnings of deceased.

In assessing, under paragraph (1) (a) (ii) of the first schedule to the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the compensation payable to dependants in part dependent upon the earnings of a deceased workman, an arbitrator is not bound to confine his attention to the workman's past earnings, but may take into consideration the earnings which he might reasonably have been expected to make in the future, and may admit evidence with regard thereto. So held where an arbitrator had refused to admit evidence with regard to the possible future earnings of a boy of fourteen, who had been killed by an accident, and who had been in the habit of contributing his earnings towards the support of his family.

Fraser v Fairfield Shipbuilding and Engineering Co., 1919 S.C. 279; 56 S.L.R. 133; 1919, 1 S.L.T. 63.

(2) COMPENSATION FOR INJURY—First Schedule (1), (3).

(a) Amount.

(i.) Average Weekly Earnings.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 14

(2) (a) (i.), infra.]

(214)

Mode of computation.

A workman who had been incapacitated by accident, and who was entitled to compensation, had been at the date of the accident for thirteen weeks in his employment. During that period he had earned for one week nothing, and for another week very little, on account of illness, and again for one week had earned nothing, and for another week very little, on account of trade holidays. The arbitrator calculated his average weekly earnings by dividing his total earnings by thirteen. In an appeal by stated case, the Court enunciated certain general rules for the computation of a workman's average weekly earnings for the purposes of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, recalled the determination of the arbitrator, and remitted to him to proceed.

Carter v Lang & Sons, 1908 S.C. 1198; 45 S.L.R. 938; 16 S.L.T. 345.

(215)

———First schedule (2) (a).

In ascertaining the amount of the average weekly earnings of a workman entitled to compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the leading canon is, as stated in sec. (2) (a) of the first schedule, that "average weekly earnings shall be computed in such manner as is best calculated to give the rate per week at which the workman was being remunerated."

Carter v Lang & Sons, 1908 S.C. 1198; 45 S.L.R. 938; 16 S.L.T. 345.

(216)

Coal cutting contract—Contractor working along with his gang—Separation of earnings as workman from profits as contractor.

A workman was employed by a colliery company as an electrical coal cutting machine contractor. In this work he employed a gang of men and worked along with them himself; and while so working he met with an injury by accident. His income for the year preceding the accident was £281, of which £220 represented his personal earnings as a workman, and the balance his profits on the contracts. His employers having admitted liability to pay him compensation, held that, in assessing compensation, the arbitrator was, in the circumstances, entitled to separate the man's earnings as a workman from his profits as a contractor, and to base his award on the former sum only.

Logan v Shotts Iron Co., 1919 S.C. 131; 56 S.L.R. 79; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 298.

(217)

General rule — Regularly recurring trade holidays—First schedule (2) (a).

In an ordinary case the average weekly earnings of a workman entitled to compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, are to be ascertained by dividing the total amount earned during the relevant period of his employment by the number of weeks actually worked within that period, and, if there are regularly recurring trade holidays when no work can be done, by deducting from the result thus obtained a fraction equal to the fraction of the year during which for this reason no wages can be earned.

Carter v Lang & Sons, 1908 S.C. 1198; 45 S.L.R. 938; 16 S.L.T. 345.

(218)

Days on which workman absent from work—First schedule (2) (a).

In ascertaining the average weekly earnings of a workman the question whether those days in any week on which the workman was absent from work are to be disregarded depends on the nature of the employment, and in an employment where it is customary to work for only a limited number of days in the week, the amount earned in these days may be taken as the weekly earnings of the workman.

Carter v Lang & Sons, 1908 S.C. 1198; 45 S.L.R. 938; 16 S.L.T. 345.

(219)

Facts of workman's own employment—First schedule (2) (a).

The question whether, in view of the shortness of the employment or of the other considerations indicated in sec. (2) (a) of the first schedule of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, it is practicable to compute the rate of remuneration at the date of the accident from the facts of the workman's own employment, is a question of fact for the determination of the arbitrator, and is to be settled in each case by a consideration of the whole circumstances of the employment.

Carter v Lang & Sons, 1908 S.C. 1198; 45 S.L.R. 938; 16 S.L.T. 345.

(220)

Inmate of charitable institution receiving monthly payments in course of industrial training—First schedule (2) (a).

A blind pauper was injured while working in the industrial department of a charitable institution. The department, which supplied industrial training to blind persons, was not self-supporting, but depended partly on charitable aid. On account of the pauper the institution received £14 8s. per annum from his parish, and £20 per annum from a charitable fund, and, on the other hand, supplied him with his board, lodging, and clothing, and paid him 5s. a month. The Court, holding the pauper to be a "workman," held also that as the monthly payments to such blind persons were supposed, in the institution, to represent 20 per cent. of their average earnings, the compensation fell to be calculated on that basis.

MacGillivray v Northern Counties Institute for the Blind, 1911 S.C. 897; 48 S.L.R. 811; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 57.

(221)

Grade of employment—Change of grade—Appointment to work higher class machine dealing with finer material—First schedule (2) (c).

A girl in a rope and sailcloth factory, employed at a weekly wage of 7s. 6d. to work a drawing machine dealing with hemp which was afterwards spun into rope, was promoted to work, at a weekly wage of 8s., a drawing machine dealing with tow, a finer material which was afterwards woven into sailcloth. Five weeks after the change she was accidentally injured. Held that the change was a change in the "grade" of her employment within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, first schedule (2) (c), and that compensation fell to be calculated on the basis of her average weekly earnings for these five weeks.

Dalglish v Edinburgh Roperie and Sailcloth Co., 1913 S.C. 1007; 50 S.L.R. 916; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 206.

(222)

Boilermaker—Labourer—First schedule (2) (c).

A workman, a boilermaker by trade, who had been employed for four weeks as a boilermaker at a boilermaker's wage, and for fifteen weeks as a labourer at a labourer's wage, in the service of the same employers, was injured while working as a labourer. Held that in calculating his average weekly earnings for purposes of compensation, the wages he had earned as a boilermaker did not fall to be included.

Babcock & Wilcox v Young, 1911 S.C. 406; 48 S.L.R. 298; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 21.

(223)

"Absence from work due to illness or other unavoidable cause"—First schedule (2) (c).

In the application of sec. (2) (c) of the first schedule to the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, "absence from work due to illness or any other unavoidable cause" means absence from work due to a cause personal to the workman, as distinguished from causes due to the work, such as trade holidays or an accidental stoppage of machinery.

Carter v Lang & Sons, 1908 S.C. 1198; 45 S.L.R. 938; 16 S.L.T. 345.

(224)

Deductions from wages—"Special expenses"—First schedule (2) (d).

A miner was in the habit of purchasing the explosives which he required for his work from his employers, and the price of these was retained by them from his wages. Held (1) that it had been authoritatively settled by decisions prior to the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, that in estimating a miner's earnings for the purposes of compensation his wages must be taken at their full rate, without deducting the cost of explosives paid for by him; (2) that in the present case the cost of explosives did not represent a sum paid to the miner "to cover any special expenses" in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, first schedule (2) (d); and therefore (3) that the miner was entitled to compensation on the full rate of wages.

M'Kee v John G. Stein & Co., 1910 S.C. 38; 47 S.L.R. 39; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 293.

(225)

Total of earnings and compensation for one week exceeding wages before injury—Charge for compensation for one week—Suspension.

An injured workman, who was earning a weekly wage of 36s. before his injury, was awarded compensation for partial incapacity at the rate of 15s. a week. He returned to work, and in one week earned 23s. 4d., but in the following week his earnings fell to 14s. The employers having refused to pay the full sum of 15s. for the week in which the workman earned 23s. 4d., on the ground that he would, with his earnings, thereby receive more than his former wage of 36s., the workman charged them to pay the 15s. The employers having brought a suspension of the charge, held that the figures of one week could not be taken as establishing an average; and, as it did not appear that the average wages that the workman was able to earn were such as would, with the addition of the full compensation amount to more than his former wage, the employers were not entitled to suspend the charge.

James Nimmo & Co. v Myles, 1917 S.C. 522; 54 S.L.R. 465; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 306.

(ii.) Payments, &c., Received from Employer during Incapacity—First Schedule (3).

(226)

"Benefit" received from employer—Payment of hospital charges.

Held that an arbitrator was entitled to find that the payment by employers of an account rendered to them for the maintenance of an injured man in hospital was a "benefit" received by the workman in the sense of paragraph (3) of the first schedule to the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, which fell to be taken into account in fixing the amount of his compensation.

Sorensen v John Gaff & Co., 1912 S.C. 1163; 49 S.L.R. 896; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 137.

(227)

Payment received from employer—Employment by distress committee—Poor relief.

A workman employed by a distress committee under the Unemployed Workmen Act, 1905, was totally incapacitated for work by an accident arising out of his employment, and was found entitled to compensation from the distress committee under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906. During incapacity he was paid poor relief at the rate of ten shillings per week. Held that the amount of the poor relief did not fall to be taken into account in calculating the amount of the compensation payable by the distress committee.

Gilroy v Mackie, 1909 S.C. 466; 46 S.L.R. 325; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 141.

(iii.) Compensation in Respect of Partial Incapacity—First Schedule (1) (b) and (3).

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 14 (2) (a) (ii.), infra.]

(a) Generally.

(228)

Workman in receipt of maximum compensation in respect of total incapacity from new employers—Claim for continuation of compensation in respect of partial incapacity from former employers.

A workman, having partially recovered his capacity after an accident, entered the service of new employers, his old employers continuing their former weekly payments of compensation at the maximum rate, in virtue of an agreement which provided that these payments were to be continued during the continuance of partial incapacity. In his new employment, and while still partially incapacitated by his old injury, the workman met with an accident causing total incapacity, in respect of which his new employers paid him compensation at the maximum rate. Held that, as the workman was receiving from his new employers the maximum compensation provided by the Act, the weekly payments of compensation by the old employers fell to be suspended.

M'Kinstrey v Auchinlea Coal Co., 1920 S.C. 75; 57 S.L.R. 80; 1919, 2 S.L.T. 263.

(229)

Partial recovery—Review of weekly payments—Arbitrator's discretion.

When a workman, who has been totally incapacitated and has been receiving full compensation in terms of the Workmen's Compensation Act, partially recovers and is earning a wage, a prima facie case arises for reducing his compensation; but it is open to him to prove circumstances which will warrant the arbitrator, in the exercise of his discretion, in refusing to diminish the compensation. The circumstance that the compensation he has been receiving together with the wage he is earning does not equal his average weekly earnings before the accident does not by itself justify a refusal to diminish.

Pryde v A. G. Moore & Co., 1913 S.C. 457; 50 S.L.R. 302; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 49.

(230)

Workman fit for light work—Evidence justifying reduction of compensation.

In an application at the instance of the employers of a workman to end or diminish the weekly payments of compensation due under a recorded memorandum of agreement, it was proved that about nine months after the accident (by which the workman, a labourer, had been wholly incapacitated and for which he had been receiving compensation at the rate of 12s. weekly), the employers offered him light work as a labourer, which he refused, though he was able for the work and though it would have aided his recovery. Six months later, at the date of the application for review, the workman was proved to be "able for light work such as that of a messenger or light porter or other occupation, where he would not require to do the heavy work of a labourer," and the employers renewed their previous offer of employment. There was no evidence of how much the workman was capable of earning at such work as he was able to perform. The arbitrator reduced the compensation to 8s. weekly. The Court sustained the award.

Carlin v Stephen & Sons, 1911 S.C. 901; 48 S.L.R. 862; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 19.

(231)

Amount of compensation—General rise in wages since date of accident.

Held that, in reviewing the compensation due to a partially disabled miner under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, an arbitrator was entitled to take into consideration a general rise in miners' wages since the date of the accident.

M'Neill v Woodilee Coal and Coke Co., 1918 S.C. (H.L.) 1; [1918] A.C. 43; 55 S.L.R. 15; 1917, 2 S.L.T. 131.

(232)

Amount of compensation—General fall of wages.

Quilter v Kepplehill Coal Co., 1921 S.C. 905; 58 S.L.R. 588; 1921, 2 S.L.T. 184, No. 237, infra.

(β) Wage-earning Capacity.

[See 17, supra.]

(γ) Suitable Employment.

(233)

Refusal to accept light work—Sunday labour.

An injured workman, who was in receipt of compensation as for total incapacity but who had so far recovered as to be physically fit for light work, was offered work as a watchman by his employers. That work was suitable to the workman's physical condition, but it involved working on Sundays, and on that ground the workman refused it. The arbitrator having reduced the weekly payments, held that, as the workman had unreasonably refused suitable employment, the arbitrator was justified in reducing the weekly payment.

Smith v William Beardmore & Co., 1922 S.C. 131; 59 S.L.R. 94; 1922 S.L.T. 58.

(234)

Partially incapacitated workman enlisting in army—Suspension of compensation.

A partially incapacitated workman, who was receiving weekly payments of compensation, enlisted in the army. In an application for review at the instance of his employers, the arbitrator suspended compensation, holding that service in the army was not a "suitable employment" within the meaning of par. (3) of the first schedule, and that the workman, by enlisting, had made it impossible to test his wage-earning capacity in a suitable employment. Held (1) that service in the army was not a "suitable employment" within the meaning of the Act; but (2) that it was the duty of the arbitrator to determine from the workman's physical condition what wages he would have been able to earn in a suitable employment, and to assess compensation accordingly.

Thomson v John Watson, Limited, 1916 S.C. 23; 53 S.L.R. 55; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 246.

(235)

Risk of future incapacity—One-eyed miner—First schedule (3).

A miner was struck by a chip of coal while working at the coal face, and thereby lost the sight of one eye. His employers, after paying compensation for a time, ceased payment on the ground that he was able to resume his former occupation and to earn his former wage. The miner having applied to the sheriff to have the compensation continued, the sheriff dismissed the application, finding that the miner was able to resume his former occupation at the face and to earn his former wage, and that the risk, which was incidental to working at the face, of a similar accident again happening was not increased by the fact that he had lost the sight of an eye. On appeal it was contended for the miner that the sheriff had disregarded the relevant consideration that the loss of one eye, although not increasing the risk of a similar accident occurring, would render the results of such an accident more serious, as total blindness would follow; and accordingly that, the employment of a miner working at the face not being a "suitable employment" for him, he was still entitled to compensation. Held that the determination of the sheriff, in dismissing the application, was right. Observed that the question whether an employment was "suitable" arose only under the first schedule (3) to the Workmen's Compensation Act, when partial incapacity existed, and therefore did not arise in this case, as the workman's incapacity had ceased. Opinions (per Lord President Strathclyde and Lord Guthrie), that the consideration that the results of a future accident might be more serious to a workman who had lost one eye than to a workman who had not could not relevantly be taken into consideration in determining what was "suitable" employment; opinion contra (per Lord Johnston).

Law v William Baird & Co., 1914 S.C. 423; 51 S.L.R. 388; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 261.

(236)

A miner lost the use of one eye, and received compensation for a certain period. Thereafter the arbitrator terminated compensation in the meantime. In an application by the miner for review and for an award of partial compensation, he contended that he was entitled to refuse to work at the face. The arbitrator considered himself bound by authority to find that work as a miner at the face was suitable employment for the applicant. Held that he was not so bound.

Burt v Fife Coal Co., 1914, 52 S.L.R. 51; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 313.

(b) Review of Weekly Payments—First Schedule (16).

(i.) Competency.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 14
(2) (b) (i.), infra.]

(237)

Change of circumstances—General reduction of wages.

A miner, who was in receipt of compensation in respect of partial incapacity at a rate which his employers were willing to continue, claimed an increase of the rate, stating as the sole basis of his claim that there had been a general reduction in wages to the extent of at least 2s. per shift. Held that he had failed to aver relevant grounds for a review of the rate of compensation.

Quilter v Kepplehill Coal Co., 1921 S.C. 905; 58 S.L.R. 588; 1921, 2 S.L.T. 184.

(238)

Inability to get work due to the accident—Workman physically capable of doing work.

Held (1) that a workman's inability to obtain work owing to his injured condition is "incapacity for work" within the meaning of the Act, even though he may be physically capable of doing work; (2) that supervening inability to obtain work is a relevant ground for reviewing a weekly payment, even though there may have been no change in the workman's physical condition.

Duris v Wilsons & Clyde Coal Co., 1912 S.C. (H.L.) 74; [1912] A.C. 513; 49 S.L.R. 708; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 459.

(239)

Unsuccessful applications for employment—No physical change in workman.

A miner, who was awarded compensation as being partially incapacitated owing to an injury to three fingers of his right hand, presented an application ten weeks later for review of the weekly payments. It was proved that the applicant was able for light work only; that there had been no change in his physical condition since the date of the former award; but that he had on seven occasions applied for employment to five companies without success, for the reasons either that these companies had no vacancy in their works, or preferred, in the case of injured men, to engage those who had been injured in their own service, or that the work which they could offer was too heavy for him to undertake with his injured hand. It was not proved that he had completely exhausted his chances of employment, or that it was impossible for men in his physical condition to obtain employment. The arbitrator found that the applicant, "in view of the difficulty of his finding employment, which is attributable to the nature of his personal injury," was entitled to an increase in the rate of compensation, and awarded a higher weekly sum. Held that there was evidence upon which the compensation could competently be increased by the arbitrator. Observations upon the review of awards of compensation in cases where there has been no alteration in the physical condition of the injured workman.

M'Alinden v James Nimmo & Co., 1919 S.C. (H.L.) 84; [1920] A.C. 39; 56 S.L.R. 522; 1919, 2 S.L.T. 84.

(240)

Payments under unrecorded verbal agreement.

Weekly payments made under an unrecorded verbal agreement were reviewed in an application under paragraph (16) of the first schedule of the Act.

Southhook Fireclay Co. v Laughland, 1908 S.C. 831; 45 S.L.R. 664; 16 S.L.T. 46.

(241)

No compensation being paid—Competency of review of unrecorded agreement.

A workman was injured on 31st July, 1908, and his employers paid him compensation until 1st April, 1909, when they ceased further payments. Thereafter, on 17th May, 1909, they applied to the sheriff, as arbitrator, for a declaration that the workman's right to compensation had ceased on 1st April, or, alternatively, for an award of partial compensation. The workman pleaded that the application was incompetent. Held that the application was competent, although (1) no compensation was actually being paid; (2) no memorandum of agreement had been recorded.

Nelson v Summerlee Iron Co., 1910 S.C. 360; 47 S.L.R. 344; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 137.

(242)

Application to have compensation ended at certain date—No claim for payments in respect of period subsequent to date in question.

A workman claimed £1 15s. 11d. as compensation for two and five-sixths weeks ending on 13th April, 1908. He made no claim for any period subsequent to that date. The employers, while admitting that they were due the amount claimed, averred that the workman's incapacity had ceased on 13th April, 1908, and craved the arbitrator to grant an order ending the compensation as at that date. The arbitrator decreed for the sum claimed; but, on the ground that there was no dispute between the parties as to the period subsequent to 13th April, 1908, submitted to arbitration, he made no further order. Held that the arbitrator, besides issuing a finding as to the amount due, should have proceeded to determine whether the compensation should be ended as at 13th April, 1908.

Malcolm v Bowhill Coal Co., 1909 S.C. 426; 46 S.L.R. 354; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 177.

(243)

Partial incapacity—Workmen enlisting in army.

Thomson v John Watson, Limited, 1916 S.C. 23; 53 S.L.R. 55; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 246, No. 234, supra.

(244)

Employer offering full wages for light work—Recording memorandum of agreement—Sisting procedure.

Keevans v Mundy, 1914 S.C. 525; 51 S.L.R. 462; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 350, No. 291, infra

(ii.) Date from which Payment may be Reviewed.

[See also II. 14 (2) (b) (ii.), infra.]

(245)

Date when incapacity ceased.

The employers of an injured workman, in terms of an award of an arbitrator, paid him compensation for total incapacity up to 24th September, at which date they ceased the payments, contending that his incapacity had ceased. On 4th November they presented an application for review of the compensation, asking that the payments should be terminated as at 24th September. The arbitrator found in fact that the workman had completely recovered his capacity at 24th September. Held that the compensation fell to be terminated as at the date when the incapacity ceased, and not merely at the date of the application for review. Opinion (per Lord Atkinson) that the same principles would apply to an application to diminish or increase the weekly payments. Observations (per Lord Shaw of Dunfermline) on the procedure to be adopted by an employer who maintains that the workman has recovered and ceases the weekly payments, if the workman proceeds to charge for payment.

Wishart v Gibson & Co., 1914 S.C. (H.L.) 53; [1915] A.C. 18; 51 S.L.R. 516; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 416.

(246)

Date of application for review.

Upon an application under the first schedule, par. (16), of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, for review of a weekly payment under the Act, on the ground that the workman's incapacity has ceased, it is competent for the arbitrator, if he finds that the incapacity has ceased at or prior to the date of the application, to terminate the weekly payment as from the date of the application, and he is not bound to treat the payment as enforceable up to the date of his decision; but it is not competent for him to terminate the payment as from any date prior to that of the application.

Donaldson Brothers v Cowan, 1909 S.C. 1292; 46 S.L.R. 920; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 161.

(247)

Payments under unrecorded verbal agreement.

Employers, who were paying compensation to a workman under an unrecorded verbal agreement, presented an application on 21st December, 1907, under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, first schedule (16), to have the payments reviewed, and the compensation ended as at 1st November, 1907, on the ground that incapacity had then ceased. The arbitrator found it proved that the workman's incapacity ceased on 1st November, 1907, and on 29th January, 1908, pronounced an interlocutor ending the payments from the date of the interlocutor. In an appeal on a stated case, held that as there was no recorded agreement, the compensation fell to be ended as from the date when incapacity ceased, and not from the date of the application for review, or the date of the arbitrator's decision.

Southhook Fireclay Co. v Laughland, 1908 S.C. 831; 45 S.L.R. 664; 16 S.L.T. 46.

(iii.) Method of Obtaining Review.

[See 27, infra.]

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 20, infra.]

(iv.) Recovery of Injured Workman.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 14 (2) (b) (iv.), infra.]

Medical examination—Effect of medical referee's report.

[See 20 (2), infra.]

(248)

Finality of arbitrator's decision.

The employers of a workman, whose duties occasionally necessitated his climbing a ladder, and who had suffered injuries and had been in receipt of compensation, stopped the payments, and presented an application to have the compensation ended or reduced, on the ground, which was disputed, that the workman had recovered. After a proof before the sheriff and a medical assessor, the sheriff found that the workman was "fit to resume his former work," or "to undertake any other form of labour which is conducted on the level of the ground," but that, "in the meantime, it would not be entirely safe for him to climb ladders, . . . as from want of use, combined with the effect of the accident, the appellant's left leg is weaker than the right," and ended the compensation. The Court refused to interfere with the decision, holding that the question of the workman's recovery was one of fact only upon which the sheriff's finding was final.

M'Naughton & Sinclair v Cunningham, 1910 S.C. 980; 47 S.L.R. 781; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 167.

(249)

Onus of proof—Registered agreement.

In an application under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, for review of a weekly payment fixed by a recorded memorandum of agreement, the arbitrator found it proved that the workman was unable to work in consequence of a cardiac affection, which was not proved to be in any way connected with the injuries in respect of which compensation was payable, and that it was not proved that the workman still suffered from these injuries in such a way as to render him incapable of work. Held that upon such findings the employer was not entitled to have the weekly payments ended, the onus being upon him, in the case of a payment fixed by a recorded memorandum of agreement, to prove affirmatively that the workman had recovered from his injuries.

M'Callum v Quinn, 1909 S.C. 227; 46 S.L.R. 141; 16 S.L.T. 501.

(250)

Partial recovery—Arbitrator's discretion.

Observed (per Lord Salvesen)—"The moment it is established as matter of fact that total incapacity has ceased and that only partial incapacity is present, the employer has made out a prima facie case for having the award as for total incapacity diminished."

Carlin v Stephen & Sons, 1911 S.C. 901; 48 S.L.R. 862; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 19.

(251)

—When a workman, who has been totally incapacitated and has been receiving full compensation in terms of the Workmen's Compensation Act, partially recovers and is earning a wage, a prima facie case arises for reducing his compensation; but it is open to him to prove circumstances which will warrant the arbitrator, in the exercise of his discretion, in refusing to diminish the compensation. The circumstance that the compensation he has been receiving, together with the wage he is earning, does not equal his average weekly earnings before the accident does not by itself justify a refusal to diminish.

Pryde v A. G. Moore & Co., 1913 S.C. 437; 50 S.L.R. 302; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 49.

(252)

Cessation of incapacity—Workman unfit to perform previous work but earning previous wages at work provided by employers.

A workman, who was employed as supervisor at the picking tables at a colliery, lost the use of his right eye in December, 1917, through an accident arising out of the employment, and for a time received from his employers compensation as for total incapacity. In March, 1919, the medical referee certified that he was unfit to resume his previous work, as his left eye was also defective from a cause unconnected with the accident, but that he was fit to work in the employers' woodyard. In April, 1919, he did resume his previous work, at which, however, he could only get part-time employment, and he was paid partial compensation until 24th December, 1919, when he began to receive wages equal to his earnings prior to the accident. He continued to receive these wages until May, 1920, when, owing to the progressive failure of the sight of his left eye, he again became totally unable to work. In an application by the employers for an award ending the right to compensation as from 24th December, 1919, the arbitrator found as facts that, when the workman resumed his previous work, he was not fit to resume it, and could not have obtained employment in that capacity in the open market, although he was fit to perform work in the woodyard until his sight failed; and he found that the workman's condition was one of partial incapacity from which he at no time recovered, and awarded compensation as for partial incapacity from May, 1920, when he had to give up work. Held that the fact that the workman had received from his employers as high wages as he had earned prior to the accident did not prove that his incapacity had ceased, and that there was evidence upon which the arbitrator was entitled to make his award.

Kilpatrick v Wemyss Coal Co., 1922 S.C. 71; 59 S.L.R. 89; 1921, 2 S.L.T. 278.

(253)

Loss of one eye—Supervening disease in other eye—Risk of future incapacity.

Hargreave v Houghhead Coal Co., 1912 S.C. (H.L.) 70; [1912] A.C. 319; 49 S.L.R. 474; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 361, No. 259, infra.

(254)

Workman receiving same wages as before the accident—Earning capacity.

Opinion (per Lord Kinnear), that the fact that a workman is earning the same wages as before the accident may not in itself be conclusive as to the termination of his right to compensation. Opinion (per Lord Johnston), that in the case of a workman who was not a minor the fact would be conclusive.

Malcolm v Bowhill Coal Co., 1910 S.C. 447; 47 S.L.R. 449; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 322.

(255)

Abnormal state of labour market—Suspensory order.

Mulligan v Glasgow Corporation, 1917 S.C. 450; 54 S.L.R. 352; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 230, No. 262, infra.

(v.) Minor Workmen.

(256)

Probable earnings at date of review—General rise in wages—Agreement fixing probable earnings at prior date—Rise in wages between date of agreement and date of review.

The compensation payable to a minor workman was fixed by agreement at a weekly sum representing half the amount which, in the opinion of the parties, he would have been earning at the date of the agreement had he remained uninjured. Some months afterwards, in consequence of a general rise in wages, he applied to the sheriff to have the compensation increased. Held that the fact that there had been a general rise in wages between the date of the agreement and the date of the application did not per se entitle the workman to an increase, but that it was merely one of the items to be taken into consideration by the sheriff in determining for himself under par. (16) of the first schedule to the Act the weekly sum which the workman would probably have been earning at the date of the review if he had remained uninjured.

Malcolm v Thomas Spowart & Co., 1913 S.C. 1024; 50 S.L.R. 823; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 141.

(257)

Minor workman of full earning capacity—General rise in wages—Discretion of arbitrator.

The fact that a minor workman, who had been injured, was earning an adult's full wage at the time of the injury does not debar an arbitrator from giving effect, in the exercise of his discretion, to the proviso in favour of minor workmen contained in par. (16) of the first schedule to the Workmen's Compensation Act; and he is entitled to give effect to an increased wage which the minor, if uninjured, might have been able to earn at the date of review, notwithstanding the fact that the increase is due solely to a general rise in wages. Opinion (per Lord Skerrington) that an arbitrator is not properly exercising his discretion if he refuses to give effect to par. (16) of the first schedule merely on the ground that a minor workman was earning an adult's full wage before he was injured and is not entitled to be put in a better position than if he had been a workman of full age.

Burke v Wilsons & Clyde Coal Co., 1917 S.C. 92; 54 S.L.R. 97; 1916, 2 S.L.T. 285.

(c) Suspensory Orders.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 14

(2) (c), infra.]

(258)

Competency—Possibility of supervening incapacity.

Decision in Rosie v Mackay, No. 582, infra, to the effect that it is incompetent to keep open a claim to compensation by means of a nominal award or similar device, doubted in view of the opinions delivered in the House of Lords in the subsequent English case of Taylor v London and North-Western Railway, [1912] A.C. 242.

Weir v North British Railway Co., 1912 S.C. 1073; 49 S.L.R. 772; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 54.

(259)

Review—Loss of eye—Possibility of incapacity supervening in consequence of disease in other eye—Disease not due to accident.

A miner lost his right eye through an accident arising out of his employment, and for a time received from his employers compensation for total incapacity. Subsequently in proceedings for review the arbitrator ended the compensation on the ground that the miner's incapacity had ceased, and that he was fit to resume his former work as a miner. He also found that there was incipient cataract in the remaining eye which would gradually produce incapacity for work, but that the cataract was not due to the accident. The miner maintained that the arbitrator ought to have made a suspensory order or a nominal award of compensation to enable him to obtain compensation if incapacity should supervene. Held that the arbitrator was right in ending the compensation.

Hargreave v Haughhead Coal Co., 1912 S.C. (H.L.) 70; [1912] A.C. 319; 49 S.L.R. 474; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 361.

(260)

Possibility of supervening incapacity.

A workman, who had suffered injuries which necessitated the amputation of portions of three fingers of the right hand, after recovering from the operation obtained work at higher wages in the district where he had been employed, and where, owing to the construction of public works, there was a large demand for labour. In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the arbitrator, while finding that the workman's injuries were permanent, found also that he was no longer incapacitated owing to the accident from earning his former wages, and ended the compensation that was being paid to him. In an appeal at the instance of the workman the Court hoc statu remitted the case to the arbitrator to consider and decide whether the ending of the payment of compensation should be permanent or temporary. Opinion (per Lord President Strathclyde, dub. Lord Johnson) that a suspensory order was the proper judgment for the arbitrator to pronounce, looking to the possible adverse effect of a change in the condition of the labour market on the future wage-earning capacity of a permanently damaged workman.

Dempsey v Caldwell & Co., 1914 S.C. 28; 51 S.L.R. 16; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 267.

(261)

Possibility of supervening incapacity—Review—Suspensory order.

A workman, who had received injury at his work, was paid compensation by his employers for two weeks, when he resumed his work, and thereafter earned as much as he was earning prior to his injury. In an application by the employers for review the parties agreed to a remit to a medical referee to decide whether there was any chance of the workman's incapacity recurring. The referee reported that there was still some risk of recurrence of the incapacity. Held that the arbitrator's duty was to grant a suspensory order.

Dingwall v Fife Coal Co., 1918 S.C. 203; 55 S.L.R. 226; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 121.

(262)

Workman earning same wages as before accident—State of labour market—Possibility of supervening incapacity.

A workman lost the sight of his left eye through an accident arising out of his employment, and for a time his employers paid him compensation; but subsequently they refused to continue payment, and offered to take him back to his former work. In an application by the workman for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the arbitrator found that the workman was fit for work, and that it was not proved that his earning capacity in the open market had been affected by the accident, and dismissed the application. At the time of the application the labour market was in an abnormal condition owing to war. The Court, in respect that the stated case did not disclose that the arbitrator had considered the possible effects of his injury upon the appellant's earning capacity in a normal labour market, hoc statu remitted the case to the arbitrator to consider and decide whether the ending of the payment of compensation should be permanent or temporary.

Mulligan v Glasgow Corporation, 1917 S.C. 450; 54 S.L.R. 352; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 230.

(263)

Permanent injury—Chance of employment.

A workman met with an accident which necessitated the amputation of the thumb of his left hand. In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, after the workman had recovered from the effects of the operation, the arbitrator, after a proof, found that he was fit to resume his former work as a brakeman, and also that the loss of his thumb did "not impair his chance of employment in his former line of employment or in any other line of employment which he might reasonably hope to follow," and terminated the compensation. Held that, notwithstanding the permanent and patent nature of the injury, the arbitrator, in view of his finding as to the workman's chance of employment, was entitled to end and not merely suspend the compensation.

Watson v William Beardmore & Co., 1914 S.C. 718; 51 S.L.R. 621; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 481.

(264)

Possibility of supervening incapacity—Suspensory order—Omission to apply to arbitrator for suspensory order—Process—Remit—Competency.

An arbitrator terminated the compensation payable to a miner, who had permanently lost the use of one eye, on the ground that he had recovered his capacity to do the full work of a miner. In an appeal by stated case at the instance of the miner the arbitrator stated that no evidence had been led in the arbitration to show that the man's wage-earning capacity in the open market would be prejudicially affected by his condition, and that no request had been made for the pronouncement of a suspensory order. The Court, on condition that the appellant paid the whole expenses of the stated case, remitted to the arbitrator to consider and decide whether the ending of the payment of compensation should be permanent or temporary.

Neilson v Farme Coal Co., 1919 S.C. 410; 56 S.L.R. 286; 1919, 1 S.L.T. 205.

(d) Redemption of Weekly Payments—First Schedule (17).

(265)

Permanent incapacity—Loss of arm.

The employers of a workman, who had lost an arm as the result of an accident while in their employment, and who under agreement had received compensation at the rate of 16s. per week for over six months, presented an application under sec. 17 of the first schedule for redemption of liability. The facts above stated having been admitted by the parties, the arbiter, without further inquiry, fixed the amount payable by the employers at £622 14s. Sixteen shillings per week was admittedly the maximum rate of compensation for total incapacity. In an appeal the employers denied that the workman's incapacity was permanent, and moved for inquiry into his ability to work. Held that the incapacity was permanent in the sense of par. (17) of the first schedule, and that the arbiter had rightly proceeded, without further proof, to award a sum determined on that footing.

National Telephone Co. v Smith, 1909 S.C. 1363; 46 S.L.R. 988; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 147.

(e) Personal Bar.

[See 29, infra.]

20. MEDICAL EXAMINATIONS OF WORKMAN.

(1) PRELIMINARY EXAMINATION ON BEHALF OF EMPLOYER—First Schedule (4).

(266)

Workman's demand for presence of his own doctor.

Held that a workman has not an absolute right to insist on his own doctor being present when he is being examined, in terms of par. (4) of the first schedule to the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, by a medical practitioner on behalf of the employers; the question whether such a demand is reasonable or unreasonable, and, accordingly, whether the workman's insistence on it does or does not amount to a refusal to submit himself to examination, being a question of fact for the decision of the arbitrator in each particular case.

Morgan v William Dixon, Limited, 1912 S.C. (H.L.) 1; [1912] A.C. 74; 49 S.L.R. 45; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 430.

(2) MEDICAL EXAMINATION DURING PAYMENTS—First Schedule (14) and (15).

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 15, infra.]

(267)

Reference to medical referee—Recovery of injured workman—Finality of arbitrator's decision.

The employers of a miner whose knee had been injured and who had been in receipt of compensation, stopped further payments on 9th April, 1909, on the ground that the workman had completely recovered. The question of his recovery was referred to a medical referee, who reported that the knee should be kept unbandaged, and that after continuing for a month at light labour he should resume his original work. The workman ceased wearing a bandage, but a fortnight thereafter his knee again required to be bandaged by a doctor, and after one day's absence he resumed light work and continued to wear a bandage. In an application by the workman for continued compensation, the sheriff found, on 22nd July, 1909, "that the appellant, if he wears a knee-cap, will be able and ought to resume his original work as a brusher," and awarded him partial compensation up to 13th August, 1909, and ended the compensation as from that date. The Court refused to interfere with the sheriff's finding, holding that the question of the workman's recovery was one of fact only, on which the sheriff's decision was final.

Anderson v Darngavil Coal Co., 1910 S.C. 456; 47 S.L.R. 342; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 149.

(268)

Finality of referee's report—Proof as to earning capacity.

In an application for review of compensation paid to a miner, who had received an injury resulting in the loss of an eye, a reference was made to a medical referee in terms of par. (15) of the first schedule. The referee reported that the miner was "as fit as any other one-eyed man to resume his work underground." The miner having moved for a proof as to his earning capacity, the arbitrator refused the motion and ended the compensation, on the ground that the referee's report was final, and that it meant that the miner's incapacity had ceased. Held that the report in question, though final as to the miner's physical condition, was not final as to his earning capacity, and case remitted to the arbitrator to allow a proof on that matter.

Arnott v Fife Coal Co., 1911 S.C. 1029; 48 S.L.R. 828; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 85.

(269)

Finality of medical referee's report—Report of fitness for work—Proof as to wage-earning capacity.

By agreement between a coal miner, who had received an injury to his thumb and was receiving compensation, and his employers the question of the workman's capacity to resume his former employment was referred to a medical referee. The medical referee reported that the workman was "quite fit to resume his ordinary employment as a coal miner, having recovered from" the injury. In an application by the employers to have the compensation ended, the workman averred that having returned to work he had ascertained "that his earning ability has been considerably reduced from the effects of his injury," and maintained that he was still entitled to partial compensation. Held that, as the medical referee's report was final, and was from its terms conclusive as to the question raised by the workman's averments, proof of these averments was inadmissible. Observed that where a medical referee's report is not from its terms conclusive a proof may be admissible. Question, whether a proof might not have been admissible if the workman had averred that, owing to the consequences of the accident, he had been unable to obtain employment.

Gray v Shotts Iron Co., 1912 S.C. 1267; 49 S.L.R. 906; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 146.

(270)

Finality of referee's report—Proof as to wage-earning capacity.

In an application to end the compensation payable to a miner who had received an injury to his eye, the question of his condition and his fitness for employment was referred to a medical referee under par. (15) of the first schedule to the Act. The medical referee reported that "his condition is such that I consider he ought now to be fit to resume his ordinary work as a miner below ground." The miner having lodged answers in which he averred that he had not yet recovered from the effects of the accident and that his earning capacity was not restored, the Court allowed a proof as to the miner's wage-earning capacity, but excluded all evidence with regard to his physical condition and physical fitness for his ordinary work as a miner below ground, as on those points the medical referee's certificate was final.

Cruden v Wemyss Coal Co., 1913 S.C. 534; 50 S.L.R. 344; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 100.

(271)

—Certificate of recovery—Supervening incapacity.

The employers of a workman paid him compensation for injuries under an unrecorded agreement until 20th October, 1908, when they refused to make further payments, on the ground, disputed by the workman, that the incapacity had ceased. The parties having applied for a reference to a medical referee, the referee reported that incapacity ceased at 20th October, 1908. The workman acquiesced in the non-payment of compensation until 8th May, 1909, at which date he alleged that he again became incapacitated owing to the same injury. No application was ever made by the employers for an order to end the compensation. In an application to the sheriff by the workman for an award to fix the amount of compensation due in respect of the alleged supervening incapacity, held that the certificate of the medical referee did not bar the application.

King v United Collieries, 1910 S.C. 42; 47 S.L.R. 41; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 272.

(272)

—Ambiguous report—Competency of sending report back to medical referee for explanation.

The report of a medical referee, to whom a reference has been made under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, first schedule (15), may competently be sent back to him by the arbitrator for explanation, if it is ambiguous or unintelligible.

Kennedy v William Dixon, Limited, 1913 S.C. 659; 50 S.L.R. 453; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 253.

(273)

—Minute craving the Court to end compensation—Necessity for separate application—Act of Sederunt, 26th June, 1907, sec. ix. (C.A.S., L. xiii. 9).

A workman having been injured in the course of his employment, his employers agreed to pay him compensation, but no memorandum of the agreement was recorded. After compensation had been paid for some time, the parties, being at variance as to whether the workman had recovered, lodged a joint minute craving that the question be referred to a medical referee. The sheriff-clerk having made the reference, the referee reported that the workman had recovered, whereupon the employers lodged a minute craving the Court to end the compensation. The sheriff, holding that there was no process before him, and that he could not act until a separate application to end the compensation was presented, dismissed the minute. Held that, as the minute contained a crave to end the compensation, it was competent for the sheriff to act on it, and that he ought to have disposed of the application on its merits.

M'Ghie v United Collieries, 1910 S.C. 927; 47 S.L.R. 751; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 186.

21. ASCERTAINMENT OF DEPENDANTS —First Schedule (8).

(274)

Proof of relationship incidental to arbitration.

In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, a claim was made by a girl who alleged that she was an illegitimate child of the deceased workman. The arbitrator sisted procedure in order that she might establish her allegation in a competent Court. Held that it was the duty of the arbitrator, in determining the question whether the claimant was a dependant, to decide incidentally her relationship to the deceased.

Johnstone v Spencer & Co., 1908 S.C. 1015; 45 S.L.R. 802; 16 S.L.T. 182.

(275)

Proof of marriage incidental to arbitration.

In an arbitration under the Act a claim was made by a woman who alleged that she was the wife of the deceased workman, and in proof of the marriage tendered evidence of cohabitation and habit and repute. The arbitrator sustained her claim. Opinions reserved on the question whether it was competent for the arbitrator in the arbitration proceedings to determine whether the claimant was the widow of the deceased workman.

Wallace v Fife Coal Co., 1909 S.C. 682; 46 S.L.R. 727; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 509.

SECOND SCHEDULE.

22. MEDICAL ASSESSOR—Second Schedule (5).

(276)

In a stated case under the Workmen's Compensation Act the opinion of a medical assessor ought not to be included as a finding in fact. The arbitrator, however, is entitled to rely upon that opinion in arriving at a conclusion as to the cause of disablement or death.

Connelly v Cross & Sons, 1917 S.C. 164; 54 S.L.R. 142; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 40.

23. RECORDING MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT—Second Schedule (9).

(1) COMPETENCY.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 16 (1), infra.]

(277)

Agreement containing conditions other than those of the statute.

Opinion (per Lord Kinnear) that an agreement to pay compensation which introduces conditions other than those contained in the statute cannot be recorded under par. (9) of the second schedule.

M'Ewan v William Baird & Co., 1910 S.C. 436; 47 S.L.R. 430; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 215.

(278)

Agreement in settlement of claim for compensation—Liability denied but claim settled as though compensation due.

Held that an agreement between a workman and his employers for the settlement of a claim for compensation by payment of a lump sum may be an "agreement" in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act (and so recordable) even though the employers dispute liability to pay compensation, if, in fact, they have agreed to the amount of the payment being fixed as though they were liable under the Act.

M'Guire v Paterson & Co., 1913 S.C. 400; 50 S.L.R. 289; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 32.

(2) PARTY INTERESTED.

(279)

National Insurance Act, 1911—Approved society.

Question, whether an approved society under the National Insurance Act, 1911, is a "party interested" who, in terms of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, second schedule (9), may apply for registration of a memorandum of an agreement regarding the payment of compensation to one of its members.

William Baird & Co. v Ancient Order of Foresters, 1914 S.C. 965; 51 S.L.R. 819; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 206.

(3) GENUINENESS.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 16 (2), infra.]

(280)

Written agreement between parties—Terms of memorandum differing from terms of agreement.

Where an agreement in writing has been entered into between an employer and a workman with regard to compensation, it is the duty of the sheriff (if objection is taken) to refuse to record a memorandum which is not in the precise terms of the written agreement. It is not part of his duty to construe the written agreement and then to determine whether the memorandum gives effect to it as so construed.

M'Lean v Allan Line Steamship Co., 1912 S.C. 256; 49 S.L.R. 207; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 61.

(281)

Terms of memorandum differing from terms of agreement.

A workman, who had been totally incapacitated by an accident, received weekly payments of 10s. from his employers, for which he granted receipts bearing that the payments were accepted "as the weekly compensation payable during the period of total incapacity for work as the result of the accident." He subsequently applied for warrant to record a memorandum which bore that the parties had agreed "that compensation be paid by" the employers to the workman "in terms of the Workmen's Compensation Act, at the rate of 10s. per week from" the date of the accident. Held that the memorandum was not genuine, in respect of the omission of the qualification "during the period of total incapacity."

Pryde v A. G. Moore & Co., 1913 S.C. 457; 50 S.L.R. 302; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 49.

(282)

Terms of memorandum differing from terms of agreement—Agreement to pay compensation in terms of the Act.

An injured workman and his employers verbally agreed that compensation should be paid to the former at the rate of 15s. 1d. per week. The workman thereafter signed a number of receipts, each of which bore to be for "weekly compensation to date under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, under which I claim for personal injury by accident sustained by me." Thereafter the employers objected to the recording of a memorandum which bore that the agreement was to pay compensation at the foresaid rate "until the same is ended, diminished, redeemed, or suspended in terms of" the Act, on the ground that the memorandum was not genuine, because it differed in terms from the agreement which contained no obligation as to future payments. Held that the arbitrator, who had granted warrant to record the memorandum, was right in so doing, in respect that the agreement was an agreement to pay compensation in terms of the Act, and that the memorandum merely set forth those terms.

Pearson v Babcock & Wilcox, 1913 S.C. 959; 50 S.L.R. 790; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 96.

(283)

Terms of memorandum differing from terms of agreement—Agreement embodied in receipts—Whether agreement for total incapacity only.

A workman, who had been incapacitated as the result of an accident, received payments of compensation from his employers for more than a year, and granted receipts for these payments which bore that they were "accepted as the amounts payable under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906." The payments were all at the rate to which the workman was entitled as for total incapacity. On the employers ceasing to make further payments the workman sought to record a memorandum which bore that "the liability to pay workmen's compensation during the claimant's incapacity for work at the rate of 10s. per week was admitted by the respondents." The employers objected to the recording of this memorandum, on the ground that the agreement, as evidenced by the receipts, was to pay compensation during total incapacity only, and accordingly that the memorandum was not in terms of the agreement. Held that the agreement was not limited to the period of total incapacity, and accordingly that the memorandum was in terms of the agreement, and fell to be recorded.

Scott v Sanguhar and Kirkconnel Collieries, 1915 S.C. 520; 52 S.L.R. 391; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 241.

(284)

Memorandum not disclosing agreement as to expenses.

The law-agent of an employer who was paying weekly compensation to a workman offered the law-agent of the latter £15 and £5 5s. of expenses, in final settlement of the claim. The workman's agent communicated the offer of £15 to his client, and urged him to accept it, but did not mention the arrangement about expenses. The workman having authorised his agent to accept the offer of £15, the agent wrote accepting the offer of £15 in settlement of the compensation, "and £5 5s. in full of our expenses as arranged." Thereafter the employer presented an application to record a memorandum of agreement which narrated that the weekly payments were to be redeemed by payment of £15, but contained no reference to the expenses. Held that the memorandum of agreement was genuine though it contained no reference to the agreement as to expenses, that being a subsidiary arrangement.

M'Laughlin v Pumpherston Oil Co., 1915 S.C. 65; 52 S.L.R. 48; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 306.

(285)

Agreement to pay weekly sum during total incapacity—Objection on ground that incapacity had ceased.

By an agreement between a workman and his employers the latter bound themselves to pay him a weekly sum as compensation under the Act "during his total incapacity for work." The workman having sought to have a memorandum of agreement recorded at a time when he was no longer incapacitated, his employers, while not disputing that the memorandum correctly represented the contract between themselves and the workman, contended that in view of the fact that he was not incapacitated it was not "genuine" in the sense of the statute, and should not be recorded. Held that the memorandum was "genuine" and fell to be recorded.

Coakley v Addie & Sons, 1909 S.C. 545; 46 S.L.R. 408; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 261.

(4) AGREEMENTS NO LONGER SUBSISTING.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 16 (3), infra.]

(286)

Agreement superseded by reference to medical referee—Report that incapacity had ceased.

The employers of a workman paid him compensation for injuries under an unrecorded agreement till March, 1909, when the parties, by joint letter, referred to a medical man the question whether the workman had then recovered. The referee reported that the workman was fit for his former duties or for any ordinary work, and the employers stopped the payments. In August, 1909, the workman lodged a memorandum of the agreement to be recorded, which was objected to by the employers. The sheriff found that the memorandum was genuine, and granted warrant to record. On appeal by the employers, held that no warrant should have been granted, in respect that the agreement sought to be recorded had been superseded and brought to an end by the joint reference, and by the referee's report that incapacity had ceased.

M'Naughton & Sinclair v Cunningham, 1910 S.C. 980; 47 S.L.R. 781; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 167.

(287)

Discharge of claim by workman prior to application for recording—Determination of validity of discharge in application for recording—Act of Sederunt, 26th June, 1907, sec. 12.

A workman presented an application for recording a memorandum of agreement under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, to which the employers lodged objections, on the ground that prior to the memorandum being presented the workman had signed a final discharge of his claim. The workman in answer averred that the alleged discharge, if signed by him, was signed under essential error. Both parties expressly admitted that the question fell to be settled by arbitration in terms of sec. 12 of the Act of Sederunt, 26th June, 1907. Held that the arbitrator could competently determine the question as to the validity of the discharge in the application to record the memorandum, and that as the parties had joined issue on the question he was bound to determine it.

Hanley v Niddrie and Benhar Coal Co., 1910 S.C. 875; 47 S.L.R. 726; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 45.

(288)

Incapacity diminished—Finding that workman fit for some work.

Compensation having been paid for six months, applications were brought by the workman to have a memorandum recorded and by the employer to have the compensation ended or diminished. After a proof the sheriff-substitute found the workman "fit for some work," dismissed the employer's application, and granted warrant to record the memorandum. Case remitted to the sheriff-substitute for a definite finding as to workman's capacity.

Petrie v Smith, 1913, 50 S.L.R. 749; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 470.

(5) RECORDING SUBJECT TO CONDITIONS.

(289)

"Earning the same wages"—Workman returning to work, but dismissed prior to application for recording.

In an application by a workman for warrant to record a memorandum of agreement for the payment of compensation during total incapacity, which was opposed by the employers, it was proved that the workman had returned to work at wages higher than those earned before the accident; that on several occasions he was reprimanded for laziness, and was ultimately dismissed on a reduction of the staff, which took place a few weeks after his resumption of work; that since his dismissal he had earned no wages, and was earning none at the date of the application, although no incapacity had supervened. The sheriff, holding that the employers had discharged the onus of proof imposed on them by sub-sec. (b) of par. (9) of the second schedule, applied that sub-section, and granted only a conditional warrant to record. Held that the decision of the sheriff was justified.

Matthews v William Baird & Co., 1910 S.C. 689; 47 S.L.R. 627; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 356.

(290)

Workman earning the same wages as before the accident.

An injured workman, who had entered into an agreement with his employers with regard to payment of compensation, sought to record a memorandum of that agreement. The employers objected to the recording on the ground (which was admitted) that the workman had returned to work and was earning the same wages as before the accident; and the sheriff refused to record. Held that, the memorandum being a genuine record of the agreement, the sheriff had no discretion to refuse to record it, but should have recorded it, attaching such conditions as he considered just in the circumstances.

Scott v Sanquhar and Kirkconnel Collieries, 1915 S.C. 520; 52 S.L.R. 391; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 241.

(291)

Partially incapacitated workman—Employer's offer of full wages for light work—Refusal of offer by workman—Sisting procedure.

An injured workman, who had been receiving compensation in pursuance of an agreement with his employer, recovered from his injuries sufficiently to be fit for light work. His employer thereupon offered him such work, and offered to pay him therefor the same wage as he had been earning before the accident. The workman refused this offer, and presented for registration a memorandum of the agreement with his employer. The sheriff refused to record the memorandum, and ended the compensation. Held (1) that the workman was barred from receiving compensation by his refusal of work, at full wages, suited to his capacity; (2) that the proper course for the sheriff was to have recorded the memorandum, but, in respect of the employer's offer to pay the workman full wages, to have suspended compensation by sisting procedure hoc statu.

Keavans v Mundy, 1914 S.C. 525; 51 S.L.R. 462; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 350.

Cf. McEwan v William Baird & Co., 1910 S.C. 436; 47 S.L.R. 430; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 215, No. 303, infra.

(6) APPEAL FROM ORDER GRANTING OR REFUSING SPECIAL WARRANT TO REGISTER.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 16 (4), infra.]

(292)

Finality of sheriff—Act of Sederunt, 26th June, 1907, sec. 12 (see C.A.S., L. xiii. 12).

In a case where the recording of a memorandum was objected to on the ground that it was not genuine, held that the decision of the sheriff as to whether it should or should not be recorded was a decision qua arbitrator and not merely a ministerial act, and was accordingly subject to appeal by stated case.

Coakley v Addie & Sons, 1909 S.C. 545; 46 S.L.R. 408; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 261.

(293)

Method of review—Action of reduction—Competency—Act of Sederunt, 26th June, 1907, sec. 12 (see C.A.S., L. xiii. 12).

An application by a workman for the registration of a memorandum of agreement under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, was objected to by the employers, but the sheriff granted warrant to register. The employers thereupon brought an action for reduction of the registered memorandum. Held that the action of reduction was incompetent, in respect that, as the act of the sheriff in recording the memorandum was a judicial act in arbitration proceedings under the statute, and (in this case) involved a question of law, it fell under the provisions for appeal by way of stated case contained in the statute, and that the common law remedies were consequently excluded.

John Brown & Co. v Orr, 1910 S.C. 526; 47 S.L.R. 437; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 138.

(294)

Competency—Action by workman—No opportunity to workman to use statutory procedure.

A workman's employers obtained a receipt and discharge from the workman by which they were discharged from all claims in respect of personal injury in respect of an accident. An application of the employers for registration of a memorandum of agreement embodying the receipt and discharge was intimated to the workman, and the memorandum was recorded without opposition. The workman brought an action of reduction of the receipt and discharge and of the memorandum. The action was dismissed. On a reclaiming note, the record was allowed to be amended, the pursuer averring that he had had no opportunity of working out his remedy by the procedure provided in the Workmen's Compensation Act. Held that the action was competent and proof allowed.

Mackinnon v Fairfield Shipbuilding and Engineering Co., (O.H.) 1921, 2 S.L.T. 270.

(7) AGREEMENT FOR REDEMPTION OF WEEKLY PAYMENTS.

(295)

Duty of sheriff-clerk to inquire into circumstances of agreement.

The second schedule (9) (d) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, provides that a sheriff-clerk to whom a memorandum of agreement for the redemption of a claim for compensation by payment of a lump sum is brought, may refuse to record it if, "on any information which he considers sufficient," it appears to him that, by reason of the inadequacy of the sum or the means by which the agreement was obtained, the agreement should not be recorded. Held that the sheriff-clerk is not bound in every case ex proprio motu to inquire into these matters before proceeding to record. Observations on the duties of the sheriff-clerk in such a case.

M'Guire v Paterson & Co., 1913 S.C. 400; 50 S.L.R. 289; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 32.

(296)

Procedure—Minute by workman objecting to adequacy of sum agreed on and to means by which agreement obtained—Reference by sheriff-clerk to sheriff—Act of Sederunt, 26th June, 1912, sec. 12 (C.A.S., L. xiii. 12).

Held that where, upon a minute lodged by a workman objecting to the recording of a memorandum of an agreement as to the redemption of a weekly payment on the grounds mentioned in par. (9) (d) of the second schedule, the matter was referred by the sheriff-clerk to the sheriff, it was the duty of the latter to determine the questions thus raised, notwithstanding that the minute was lodged by the workman and not by the sheriff-clerk.

Burns v William Baird & Co., 1913 S.C. 358; 50 S.L.R. 280; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 491.

(297)

Duty of sheriff-clerk to consider question—National Insurance Act, 1911, sec. 11 (1) (c)—Workman member of approved society—Approved society objecting to recording of memorandum—C.A.S., L. xiii. 12.

An injured workman, who was an insured person with an approved society under the National Insurance Act, 1911, agreed to accept from his employers a lump sum in full of all his claims for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, and lodged a memorandum of this agreement with the sheriff-clerk for registration. The approved society thereupon lodged with the sheriff-clerk a minute in which they stated that they objected to the recording of the memorandum on the ground that the lump sum was inadequate. The minute contained no averments in support of this objection. The sheriff-clerk put the memorandum and minute before the sheriff, who found that the sheriff-clerk had in effect, though not by formal minute as required by C.A.S. 1913, L. xiii., sec. 12, referred the question in dispute to him, and accordingly that the matter fell to be dealt with by him as arbitrator. Held that the procedure followed had been irregular, and case remitted to the sheriff court in order that the sheriff-clerk might discharge the duty imposed on him by par. (9) (d) of the second schedule to the Act, and by sec. 12 of the Act of Sederunt, of considering any information, including that of the approved society, relating to the objection to recording the memorandum, and of laying before the sheriff, if so advised, a minute setting forth his grounds for refusing to record the memorandum. Held further that the sheriff, before disposing of the question raised, would be entitled to hear the approved society.

William Baird & Co. v Ancient Order of Foresters, 1914 S.C. 965; 51 S.L.R. 819; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 206.

(298)

Objection to recording of agreement—Lump sum already paid to workman—Validity of order for consignation of sum by workman before objection disposed of.

An injured workman entered into an agreement with his employers that the weekly compensation due to him should be redeemed for a lump sum of £100, which sum was paid over to him. On the employers presenting a memorandum of this agreement for registration, the sheriff-clerk refused to record it, on the ground of the inadequacy of the sum, and referred the matter to the sheriff-substitute, all in terms of the Act. The sheriff-substitute, holding that further inquiry into the question was necessary, ordained the workman to consign in Court the £100 (less the weekly compensation due to date), as a condition precedent to the inquiry being held. Held that the sheriff-substitute was not entitled to make such an order.

M'Vie v Taylor & Co., 1914 S.C. 533; 51 S.L.R. 435; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 342.

(8) SUSPENSION OF CHARGE ON RECORDED MEMORANDUM.

(299)

Suspension of charge on recorded memorandum of agreement—Competency.

Wilsons & Clyde Coal Co. v Cairnduff, 1911 S.C. 647; 48 S.L.R. 500; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 369, No. 339, infra.

(300)

Remedy of employer where workman charges for payment.

Wishart v Gibson & Co., 1914 S.C. (H.L.) 53; [1915] A.C. 18; 51 S.L.R. 516; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 416, No. 340, infra.

(9) MISCELLANEOUS.

(301)

Memorandum of agreement—Validity—Conditional agreement—Suspensive condition—Impossibility of fulfilment—Condition requiring approval by curator ad litem—Death of workman before curator appointed.

The employers of a minor workman, who had met with an injury in respect of which he was in receipt of weekly payments of compensation, entered into an agreement with the workman to pay him a sum in full settlement of all claims competent to him, but subject to the condition of the agreement being approved by a curator ad litem to be appointed by the Court. The workman presented an application to have a memorandum of the agreement recorded, but he died before a curator ad litem had been appointed. His executor having been sisted as applicant in his place, the application was refused by the sheriff-substitute. Held that the approval of a curator ad litem was a condition suspensive of the validity of the agreement, and that, as the condition could not be purified, the application had been rightly refused.

Donaldson's Executor v Sharp & Sons, 1922 S.C. 566; 59 S.L.R. 440; 1922 S.L.T. 385.

(302)

Arbitration to obtain award of compensation—Simultaneous application for warrant to record memorandum of agreement—Jurisdiction—Competency.

A workman presented an application to the sheriff court for warrant to record a memorandum of agreement for payment of compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, in respect of an accident. The genuineness of the memorandum was disputed by his employers. While the application was pending he initiated arbitration proceedings to obtain an award of compensation under the Act in respect of the same accident. Held that the two proceedings could not competently be conjoined, and that the arbitration should be sisted until the application for the warrant had been determined.

King v Arniston Coal Co., 1913 S.C. 892; 50 S.L.R. 685; 1913, 1 S.L.T. 451.

(303)

Counter application for review.

Where an application by a workman for the recording of an agreement fixing compensation and an application by his employer to have the compensation ended or diminished came before a sheriff-substitute at the same time, the sheriff-substitute allowed a proof in the application for review. The workman having moved for a warrant to record the memorandum in respect that its genuineness was not disputed and that no other question of fact arose, the sheriff-substitute refused the motion and allowed a proof to proceed on the same day as the proof in the application for review. In an appeal held that the sheriff-substitute was not bound to grant warrant to register the memorandum of agreement without awaiting the result of the proof in the application for review.

Opinion (per Lord President Dunedin and Lord Kinnear) that in such circumstances it was also competent for the sheriff-substitute either to sist the application for recording or to record the memorandum and supersede extract.

M'Ewan v William Baird & Co., 1910 S.C. 436; 47 S.L.R. 430; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 215.

(304)

—A workman presented to the sheriff a minute for special warrant to record a memorandum of agreement under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the genuineness of which had been objected to by his employers. The employers did not lodge a minute stating the grounds of their objection, but instituted arbitration proceedings to have the compensation ended or reduced. The workman then moved that the memorandum should be recorded, on the ground that its genuineness was not disputed, and that no other question of fact arose. The sheriff-substitute refused the motion at that stage, and continued the application till the date of the proof in the proceedings for review. Held that the arbitrator was not bound by the statute to grant warrant to record the memorandum of agreement without awaiting the result of the proof in the counter application.

M'Vey v William Dixon, Limited, 1910 S.C. 544; 47 S.L.R. 463; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 247.

(305)

Agreement discharging all claims—National Insurance Act, 1911, sec. 11 (1) (c) and (2)—Workman insured with approved society—Failure to give notice of agreement to society—Subsequent claim for compensation at instance of society—Competency.

An injured workman, who was insured with an approved society under the National Insurance Act, 1911, accepted compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, for ten weeks from the date of the accident at the rate of £1 per week. On the day following the last of those weekly payments he received an additional sum of £6, and signed a receipt for £16 in full settlement and discharge of all claims competent to him under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, or at common law, in respect of the injury sustained by him. He returned to work on the same day. A memorandum of this agreement was recorded, but no notice of the agreement was sent by the workman's employers to his approved society in terms of sec. 11 (1) (c) of the National Insurance Act, 1911. Some months later the workman again became incapacitated, and an application for an award of further compensation was made by the approved society in the workman's name. The society contended that the claim was not barred by the recorded memorandum, because of the employers' failure to send them notice of that agreement. Held that the application was incompetent.

Gormley v Scottish Iron and Steel Co., 1918 S.C. 742; 55 S.L.R. 667; 1918, 2 S.L.T. 102.

24. REMIT TO MEDICAL REFEREE FOR REPORT—Second Schedule (15).

[See also 20 (2), supra.]

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 17, infra.]

(306)

Competency—No proof taken—Regulations, 27th June, 1907, Part V., rule 20.

Held that a remit by an arbitrator to a medical referee for a report cannot competently be made unless the arbitrator has taken a proof regarding the matter remitted for report.

Gray & Sons v Carroll, 1910 S.C. 700; 47 S.L.R. 646; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 373.

(307)

Remit on matter as to which no evidence tendered—Competency of finding by referee outwith the matter remitted to him—Statutory Regulations, 27th June, 1907, Part V., rule 20.

A woman was incapacitated by an accident which caused injuries to her hand, and she refused, on the advice of her own doctor, to undergo a minor operation, involving the use of anæsthetics, which was likely to diminish the incapacity of her hand. After a proof, an arbitrator remitted to a medical referee for a report as to whether the woman would be exposed to any exceptional risk in the use of anæsthetics, as this was a matter which had not been established by the proof. The referee reported that the risk was not more than ordinary; but he added that he considered that the operation would be of little benefit, and that the injury to the hand was permanent. The arbitrator refused to take the latter expression of opinion into consideration, as it went beyond the terms of the remit to the referee. On an appeal it was maintained that a remit to a medical referee on a matter as to which no evidence had been led was incompetent. Held (1) that the remit to the medical referee had been completely made; (2) that the arbitrator was not entitled to disregard any part of the referee's report.

Gracie v Clyde Spinning Co., 1915 S.C. 906; 52 S.L.R. 706; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 46.

(308)

Conflict of medical evidence—Whether referee's report conclusive as to question remitted—Statutory Regulations, 27th June, 1907, Part V., rule 20.

In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act the arbitrator, in consequence of a conflict of medical evidence, remitted to a medical referee, under paragraph (15) of the second schedule, to examine the evidence and to report whether a deceased workman was injured by rupture of the heart caused by the work, and died therefrom, or whether he died of heart disease. The medical referee reported that the workman "died from disease of the heart." The sheriff thereafter found that the workman had died from a rupture of the heart caused by the strain resulting from the work in which he was engaged, and awarded compensation. In an appeal against that decision as contrary to the report, held (1) that the arbitrator was not bound to accept the medical referee's report as conclusive of the question which he, as arbitrator, had to decide, and (2) that as there was some evidence to support his decision it could not be interfered with.

Jackson v Scotstoun Estate Co., 1911 S.C. 564; 48 S.L.R. 440; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 215.

25. PROCEDURE IN ARBITRATIONS—Second Schedule (17) (b).

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 18, infra.]

(309)

Preliminary defences—Duty of arbitrator to dispose of whole case.

Where an arbitrator had allowed a separate proof on preliminary defences and had issued findings thereon without having heard the case as a whole, opinions that, there being no exceptional circumstances calling for the procedure followed, the arbitrator ought to have heard and disposed of the case as a whole.

Ellis v Fairfield Shipbuilding and Engineering Co., 1913 S.C. 217; 50 S.L.R. 137; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 485.

(310)

Dismissal of claim as irrelevant—Proof—Personal knowledge of arbitrator.

Employers, who had been paying compensation to an injured workman, discontinued the compensation on the ground that the workman's total incapacity had ceased. The question of his capacity was thereupon referred to a medical referee, who reported that the workman was fit to do light work, and specified certain kinds of such work. Thereafter the workman presented an application for an award of compensation as for total incapacity, and in support thereof averred that he had applied in the district for, and had been unable to obtain, such work as was indicated by the medical referee, and he enumerated the various places at which he had applied for that work. The arbitrator, without allowing a proof, dismissed the application as irrelevant, holding upon his knowledge of the district that there was a market for such work as was indicated by the referee, and that the workman's efforts to obtain work had not been sufficient to test the market. Held that the arbitrator was not entitled to dismiss the application as irrelevant, but ought to have allowed the workman a proof of his averments, although he would be entitled to use his own knowledge of the district in considering the evidence led.

Dyer v Wilsons & Clyde Coal Co., 1915 S.C. 199; 52 S.L.R. 114; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 411.

(311)

Amendment of pleadings—Addition of new respondent—Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act, 1907, secs. 39, 50, and first schedule, rule 79.

In an arbitration under the Workmen's

Compensation Act, 1906, a workman claimed compensation from H, and subsequently, during the course of a proof, craved leave from the sheriff to amend his instance by substituting the name of H & Co. as respondents instead of H. The sheriff refused the motion as incompetent. In an appeal the Court held that it was competent for the sheriff to allow the name of H & Co. to be added as additional respondents, and remitted to him to allow the amendment in that form. Opinion (per Lord Johnston) that rule 79 of the first schedule to the Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act, 1907, does not apply to arbitration proceedings under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906. Opinions reserved (per Lord Kinnear and Lord Salvesen).

O'Donnell v Wilson, 1910 S.C. 799; 47 S.L.R. 707; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 3.

(312)

Form of arbitrator's interlocutor.

Opinion (per Lord President Dunedin) that, in an interlocutor in an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, findings are unnecessary.

Walker v Murray, 1911 S.C. 825; 43 S.L.R. 575; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 278.

(313)

Power of arbitrator to decern.

In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the sheriff, acting as arbitrator, decerned for the sum claimed. Held that he should have merely pronounced a finding that that sum was due; and that in granting a decerniture he had exceeded his jurisdiction as arbitrator.

Malcolm v Bowhill Coal Co., 1909 S.C. 426; 46 S.L.R. 354; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 177.

(314)

Date of issue of award.

Hoolachan, 1917 S.C. 195; 54 S.L.R. 174; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 38, No. 315, infra.

26. APPEALS—Second Schedule (17) (b).

(1) COMPETENCY.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 19 (1), infra.]

(315)

Application for stated case—Application within seven days after issue of award—Date of issue of award—C.A.S., L. xiii. 11 (2) and 17 (a).

In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act the sheriff-substitute, acting as arbitrator, signed an award on the 11th of November. No written notice of the award was sent to the parties, but on 13th November the sheriff-clerk's assistant handed a copy of it, which was blank as to date, to the workman's agent and informed him that it was of that day's date. Thereupon, in his presence, the workman's agent filled in the date as 13th November. Seven days thereafter the workman lodged a minute craving a stated case for appeal. The sheriff-substitute refused to receive the minute, on the ground that, as his award was issued on 11th November, the minute had not been lodged within seven days as required by Act of Sederunt. Held that the award had not been issued till the 13th of November, and accordingly that the minute had been timeously lodged.

Hoolachan, 1917 S.C. 195; 54 S.L.R. 174; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 38.

(316)

Stage at which appeal competent—Appeal against allowance of proof.

Observations on the circumstances in which the Court will consider an appeal under the Workmen's Compensation Act before proof has been taken.

Colquhoun v Woolfe, 1912 S.C. 1190; 49 S.L.R. 911; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 169.

(317)

Failure to transmit case timeously—Dispensing power of Court—Act of Sederunt, 12th June, 1906, sec. 17 (e) (C.A.S., L. xiii. 17 (e)).

In an appeal under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the appellant failed to transmit the stated case within the seven days allowed by the Act of Sederunt of 12th June, 1906. The days expired in vacation, and the case was lodged before the first sederunt day. The First Division (after consulting with the judges of the Second Division), holding that they had power to dispense with the observance of the provisions of the Act of Sederunt, allowed the appeal to proceed, in respect that the appellant's failure to observe these provisions had not delayed the hearing of the appeal, and that it was the intention of the Court to alter the Act of Sederunt so as to provide for the event of the days expiring in vacation.

Leishman v William Dixon, Limited, 1910 S.C. 498; 47 S.L.R. 410; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 273.

(2) FORM OF STATED CASE.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 19 (2), infra.]

(318)

Arbitrator's note—Purpose for which note may be referred to—Act of Sederunt, 6th July, 1915, sec. 1.

Observed (by Lord Justice-Clerk Scott Dickson) that, while it was not legitimate for the Court to use statements in the arbitrator's note for the purpose of supplementing the specific findings in fact which were contained in the stated case, the Court might use the note in order to discover the ratio in law of the arbitrator's judgment.

Espeie v British Basket Co., 1920 S.C. 655; 57 S.L.R. 529; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 89.

(319)

Observed (by Lord Shaw of Dunfermline) —“The provisions of the Act of Sederunt were simply that, when the sheriff-substitute had written a note, it should go into the proceedings as an appendix to the case. But it is no function of the note to do anything other than to be expiscatory of what went before."

Scrimgeour v Thomson & Co., 1922 S.C. (H.L.) 64; 59 S.L.R. 66; 1922 S.L.T. 47.

(320)

Findings in fact—Findings in law—Duty of arbitrator to distinguish.

Observations (per Lord Atkinson) on the duty of the arbitrator to distinguish clearly between findings in fact and findings in law.

McKinnon v J. & P. Hutchison, 1916 S.C. (H.L.) 111; [1916] 1 A.C. 471; 53 S.L.R. 232; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 158.

(321)

Opinion of medical assessor.

In a stated case under the Workmen's Compensation Act, the opinion of a medical assessor ought not to be included as a finding in fact.

Connolly v Cross & Sons, 1917 S.C. 164; 54 S.L.R. 142; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 40.

(3) REFUSAL OF ARBITRATOR TO STATE CASE.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 19 (3), infra.]

(322)

Question of law — Form of arbitrator's award—Workman suffering from two affections—Precise cause of incapacity not disclosed in arbitrator's findings.

In arbitration proceedings under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, a controversy arose as to whether the workman had sustained injuries to his heart as well as to his back. The arbitrator found the workman entitled to compensation in consequence of total incapacity resulting from the accident, but he made no findings as to the nature of the injuries to which the incapacity was due. Thereupon the employers presented a minute craving him to state a case for the opinion of the Court on the questions (1) whether he was entitled to refrain from stating in his award whether the cause of incapacity was due to the condition of the back or of the heart, and (2) whether the award should have contained a finding as to the onus of proof with regard to the heart affection. The arbitrator refused to state a case, on the grounds that the questions proposed were not questions of law, and that, if they were, he had determined neither of them. Held that a question of law was raised; and arbitrator ordered to state a case containing specific findings regarding the character of the injuries said to have arisen out of the accident.

Montgomery v Niddrie and Benhar Coal Co., 1918 S.C. 181; 55 S.L.R. 217; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 107.

(323)

Accident arising out of and in the course of the employment—Form of question of law—C.A.S., L. xlii. 17 (h).

In arbitration proceedings under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the arbitrator found that a workman's death resulted from injuries sustained by him owing to a fall from a ladder, and awarded compensation. A medical certificate which was produced stated the cause of death to have been appendicitis-peritonitis. The arbitrator refused a minute for the employers craving him to state a case for the opinion of the Court on the question whether the death of the deceased "was the result of an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment," on the ground that the question was one of fact and not of law. Held that the proper question was "whether there was evidence upon which it could competently be found that the death of the workman was the result of an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment"; and case remitted to the arbitrator to state a case on this question.

Euman v Dalziel & Co., 1912 S.C. 966; 49 S.L.R. 693; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 450.

(324)

Question of fact or law.

Circumstances in which held in an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, that the question whether the accident had arisen "out of and in the course of" the workman's employment was a question of law and not of fact, and that the arbitrator was not justified in refusing to state it as a question of law for the Court of Appeal.

Jackson v General Steam Fishing Co., 1909 S.C. (H.L.) 37; [1909] A.C. 523; 46 S.L.R. 901; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 227.

(325)

Question whether arbitrator's findings in fact supported by the evidence led—Law or fact—C.A.S., L. xlii. 17 (h).

A workman, dissatisfied with the arbitrator's statement of a case on appeal under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, presented a note for an order upon the arbitrator to state a case, averring that certain facts, other than those stated by the arbitrator, had been proved, and that certain of the arbitrator's findings were contrary to the evidence, and proposing as one of the questions of law the question "Whether there was evidence led before the sheriff-substitute which could competently support his findings of fact?" He did not aver that there was no evidence before the arbitrator upon which he could proceed to a decision of the case. The Court refused the note, holding that it was in effect a request for the allowance of appeal upon a pure question of fact, upon which the arbitrator was final.

Nelson v Allan Brothers & Co., 1913 S.C. 1003; 50 S.L.R. 820; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 147.

(326)

Application for order to show cause why case should not be stated—Duty of applicant to specify in note the findings he desires—Act of Sederunt, 26th June, 1907, sec. 17 (h) (C.A.S., L. xlii. 17 (h)).

Held that a note presented to one of the Divisions of the Court of Session for an order to show cause why a case under the Workmen's Compensation Act should not be stated by the sheriff, must specify findings to which the applicant says he is entitled; and, unless these findings are such as will found a prima facie argument that the sheriff's decision in the arbitration is wrong, the order craved will not be made.

Walker v Murray, 1911 S.C. 825; 48 S.L.R. 575 and 741; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 278 and 448.

(327)

Certificate of refusal—Act of Sederunt, 26th June, 1907, sec. 17 (c) and (h) (C.A.S., L. xiii. 17 (c) and (h)).

A certificate of refusal to state a case for appeal under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, must be written on a separate paper, and not merely on the interlocutor sheet in the arbitration process.

Paterson v William Beardmore & Co., 1910 S.C. 507; 47 S.L.R. 455; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 208.

(4) REMIT TO ARBITRATOR.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 19 (4), infra.]

(328)

Remit to arbitrator to reconsider his award—Act of Sederunt, 26th June, 1907, sec. 17 (g) (C.A.S., L. xiii. 17 (g)).

In an appeal by way of stated case in an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, the Court, without answering the questions put, remitted the case to the arbitrator to reconsider his award in light of the opinions expressed by the House of Lords in a judgment pronounced after the date of his decision.

Weir v North British Railway Co., 1912 S.C. 1073; 49 S.L.R. 772; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 54.

(329)

Remit to arbitrator for further information—C.A.S., L. xiii. 17 (g).

Observations on the principles which should guide the Court in remitting stated cases back to the arbitrator for further information.

Lendrum v Ayr Steam Shipping Co., 1914 S.C. (H.L.) 91; [1915] A.C. 217; 51 S.L.R. 733; 1914, 2 S.L.T. 137.

See also M'Kenna v Niddrie and Benhar Colliery Co., 1916 S.C. 1; 53 S.L.R. 1; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 234.

(330)

Remit to arbitrator for new findings.

Circumstances in which the Court refused a motion for a remit to the arbitrator for certain findings.

Buchan v Scottish Steam Herring Fishing Co., 1917 S.C. 565; 54 S.L.R. 482; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 343.

(331)

Remit to arbitrator for further statement of fact—Power of arbitrator to hear further evidence—Act of Sederunt, 26th June, 1907, sec. 17 (g) (C.A.S., L. xiii. 17 (g)).

In a case stated for appeal against the decision of a sheriff-substitute acting as arbitrator in proceedings under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, in the course of which proceedings proof had been led, the Court remitted to the sheriff-substitute to find whether the workman had given statutory notice of his accident as soon as practicable thereafter. The sheriff-substitute reported that he had himself re-examined the doctor who attended the workman during his illness, and made a finding in answer to the question put by the Court. This report was objected to on the ground that it proceeded on evidence which had been taken after the proof had been closed. Held that the sheriff-substitute was entitled, under the remit, to take further proof, and objection repelled.

Park v Coltness Iron Co., 1913 S.C. 1163; 50 S.L.R. 926; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 232.

(332)

Remit to arbitrator for additional proof—Act of Sederunt, 26th June, 1907, sec. 17 (g) (C.A.S., L. xiii. 17 (g)).

At the hearing of a stated case under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the claimants moved the Court, in the event of it being held that they had failed to establish their claim, to remit the case to the arbitrator to take the evidence of the employer's foreman, who had not been examined in the arbitration. Motion refused.

Miller v North British Locomotive Co., 1909 S.C. 698; 46 S.L.R. 755; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 519.

(333)

Failure by arbitrator to state facts on which his finding was based—Use by Court of notes of evidence.

Circumstances in which the Court, on the failure of an arbitrator to state the salient points of the evidence on which his finding was based, used, of consent of parties, a transcript of the notes of evidence taken ex parte in the Court below, and reversed his decision.

Per Lord President Dunedin—"I must add that the entry, 'contusion of chest,' in the register of deaths proves, in the absence of the doctor, nothing as to its own correctness."

Dundee Steam Trawling Co. v Robb, 1910, 48 S.L.R. 11; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 211.

(5) TRANSMISSION OF PROCESS FROM SHERIFF COURT.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 19 (5), infra.]

(334)

Act of Sederunt, 26th June, 1907, sec. 17 (f) (C.A.S., L. xiii. 17 (f)).

Circumstances in which the Court, in a stated case under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, granted an order for the transmission of the process from the sheriff court, upon conditions as to the expenses connected with the transmission.

M'Ghie v United Collieries, 1910 S.C. 927; 47 S.L.R. 751; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 186.

(335)

In an appeal by stated case the Court remitted to the arbitrator for a statement of the facts on which he had based his judgment. The arbitrator having reported, the appellant stated that the evidence in the arbitration had been recorded in shorthand, and moved the Court, in respect of the unsatisfactory nature of the arbitrator's report, to order the process to be transmitted to the Court of Session. The respondent made no objection, and the Court ordered the process to be transmitted.

Millar v Refuge Assurance Co., 1912 S.C. 37; 49 S.L.R. 67; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 361.

(336)

Circumstances in which the Court refused a motion for transmission of the process in a stated case under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906.

Buchan v Scottish Steam Herring Fishing Co., 1917 S.C. 565; 54 S.L.R. 482; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 343.

(337)

Consideration of notes of evidence.

Circumstances in which the Court granted a motion for transmission of the process in a stated case under the Workmen's Compensation Act; and thereafter considered the notes of the evidence taken before the arbitrator, for the purpose of ascertaining whether there was evidence to support the findings made by him in the case.

M'Kenna v Niddrie and Benhar Coal Co., 1916 S.C. 1; 53 S.L.R. 1; 1915, 2 S.L.T. 234.

(6) APPEAL TO HOUSE OF LORDS.

(338)

Accident happening before commencement of Act — "Proceedings consequential" on references to medical referees.

Rosie v Mackay, 1912 S.C. (H.L.) 7; 49 S.L.R. 48; 1911, 2 S.L.T. 401, No. 180, supra.

27. SUSPENSION OF CHARGE TO PAY COMPENSATION.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 20, infra.]

(339)

Competency.

Opinion that where a memorandum of agreement has been recorded in terms of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, the only method by which the employer can relieve himself of the liability imposed on him by that memorandum is by an application for review under par. (16) of the first schedule to the Act; but observed that if a workman charges under a recorded memorandum for a sum which has already been paid to him by the employer, a suspension at the instance of the employer would be competent.

Wilsons and Clyde Coal Co. v Cairnduff, 1911 S.C. 647; 48 S.L.R. 500; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 369.

(340)

Employer alleging incapacity has ceased—Remedy of employer.

Observations (per Lord Shaw of Dunfermline) on the procedure to be adopted by an employer who maintains that the workman has recovered, and ceases to make weekly payments, if the workman proceeds to charge for payment.

Wishart v Gibson & Co., 1914 S.C. (H.L.) 53; [1915] A.C. 18; 51 S.L.R. 516; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 416.

(341)

Sist of process pending application for registration of new memorandum.

A workman in receipt of compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, returned to work and granted his employers a final discharge, and the payments were stopped. Two years later the workman recorded a memorandum of agreement. The employers did not oppose the recording of the agreement. Thereafter the workman charged the employers on the recorded memorandum. The employers brought a suspension of the charge, in which they alleged that per incuriam they had omitted to oppose the recording of the memorandum. The employers having presented in the sheriff court a minute craving to have the weekly payments reviewed and a memorandum of agreement embodying the discharge registered, the Court sisted process until the application for registration had been disposed of in the sheriff court, the complainers having consigned the sum charged for, holding that the validity of the discharge could only be decided in the application for registration.

Barr & Co. v M'Girr, 1911, 2 S.L.T. 26.

(342)

Average weekly earnings — Charge for compensation for one week—Total of earnings and compensation for one week exceeding wages before injury.

James Nimmo & Co. v Myles, 1917 S.C. 522; 54 S.L.R. 465; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 306, No. 225, supra.

28. EXPENSES.

[See EXPENSES I. 10 (2).]

29. PERSONAL BAR.

[See also Cases under Act 1897, II. 22, infra.]

(343)

Refusal of employment—Partial incapacity—Employer's offer of full wages for light work.

An injured workman who had been receiving compensation in pursuance of an agreement with his employer recovered from his injuries sufficiently to be fit for light work. His employer thereupon offered him such work, and offered to pay him therefor the same wage as he had been earning before the accident. The workman refused this offer. Held that the workman was barred from claiming compensation by his refusal of work, at full wages, suited to his capacity.

Keevans v Munday, 1914 S.C. 525; 51 S.L.R. 462; 1914, 1 S.L.T. 350.

(344)

Acquiescence by workman in discontinuance of compensation.

A workman who, in April, 1910, sustained injuries to his back through an accident, received compensation, under agreement with his employers, at the full rate till February, 1911, when he was certified to be fit for light work. Thereafter compensation at a reduced rate was paid till August, 1912, when the employers ceased to make further payments. No memorandum was ever recorded. In October, 1912, the workman threatened proceedings for the recovery of compensation, and the employers then denied liability. No further steps were taken by the workman until February, 1914, when, having become totally incapacitated through spinal sclerosis resulting from his injury, he intimated that fact to his employers, and subsequently applied for an award of partial compensation from August, 1912, till February, 1914, and for full compensation thereafter. It was proved that he had never fully recovered from the results of the accident and had never returned to work, but that the sclerosis was not diagnosed till December, 1913. There was no evidence that the employers had been prejudiced by his delay in taking proceedings. Held that, in the circumstances, the arbitrator was entitled to award compensation as claimed, rejecting a contention that the workman's claim for compensation for the period from August, 1912, to February, 1914, was excluded by his acquiescence in the non-payment of it throughout that period. Observations on the circumstances in which silence on the part of a workman in the face of his employer's refusal to continue payment of compensation will bar his claim.

Rankine v Fife Coal Co., 1915 S.C. 476; 52 S.L.R. 361; 1915, 1 S.L.T. 213.

(345)

A miner was totally incapacitated by an accident for fourteen months, during which period he was paid compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, at the maximum rate, by agreement with his employers. Having partially recovered he was employed by his former employers at lighter work for seven years, his average weekly earnings being less than prior to the accident, but greater than the weekly compensation he had received. During this period he repeatedly requested his employers to make up to him the deficiency in his earnings, but these requests were not complied with. At the end of the seven years he again became totally incapacitated. Held that he had barred himself personally exceptio*ne* from claiming any compensation in respect of his partial incapacity during the seven years.

Dempster v Baird & Co., 1909 S.C. 127; 46 S.L.R. 119; 16 S.L.T. 470.

(346)

Suspension of charge on memorandum.

A workman in receipt of compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1906, returned to work and granted his employers a final discharge, and the payments were stopped. Two years later the workman recorded a memorandum of agreement. The employers did not oppose the recording of the agreement. Thereafter the workman charged the employers on the recorded memorandum. In a suspension of the charge the employers pleaded, inter alia, that the workman, having acquiesced in the discontinuance of compensation, was barred from charging for any sum therefor prior to the date of the memorandum of agreement, but they made no averments of facts and circumstances in support of the plea apart from an averment that they had omitted to oppose the recording of the memorandum per incuriam. The Lord Ordinary dismissed the plea for want of relevant averments. The respondents having reclaimed, the Court of consent recalled in hoc statu the interlocutor of the Lord Ordinary in so far as it repelled the plea.

Barr & Co. v McGirr, 1911, 2 S.L.T. 26.

(347)

Agreement—Recording—Period prior to recording—Act 1897, first schedule (12)—Second schedule (8).

Lochgelly Iron and Coal Co. v Sinclair, 1909 S.C. 922; 46 S.L.R. 665; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 367, No. 631, infra.

(348)

Action by employers to reduce memorandum.

A memorandum of agreement having reference to compensation payable to a workman in respect of accidents which happened on two consecutive days was recorded at the instance of the workman. As provided by the Act, a copy of the memorandum was sent to the workman's employers, who stated no objection to recording. Subsequently the employers made an application for review of the weekly payments which were being made under the memorandum. After the decision in this application, they brought an action of reduction of the memorandum on the ground that there had never been any agreement to pay compensation in respect of the second accident, and that they had permitted the memorandum to be recorded in the belief that it had reference to the first accident only, an error which they averred was induced by the workman's failure to give notice of the second accident. Held that they were barred from insisting in the action of reduction.

Robert Forrester & Co. v Fleming, (O.H.) 1908, 16 S.L.T. 139.

(349)

Action by workman to reduce memorandum.

dum—Memorandum recorded without opposition.

A workman signed a receipt and discharge, discharging his employers of all claims in respect of personal injury resulting from an accident. The employers made application for registration of a memorandum of agreement embodying the receipt and discharge. This application was intimated in accordance with C.A.S., L. xiii. 11, and was recorded without opposition. In an action of reduction held that the workman had acquiesced in the recording of the memorandum, and action dismissed.

Mackinnon v Fairfield Shipbuilding and Engineering Co., (O.H.) 1920, 2 S.L.T. 118; 1921, 2 S.L.T. 270.

II. WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT, 1897.

(60 & 61 Vict. cap. 37.)

1. SEC. 1 (1).

(1) "EMPLOYMENT TO WHICH THIS ACT APPLIES."

(350)

Liability of employer as such.

Held that an employer who is not also an "undertaker" within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, is not liable in compensation under the Act.

Malcolm v M'Millan, 1900, 2 F. 525; 37 S.L.R. 383; 7 S.L.T. 364.

(2) INJURY BY ACCIDENT.

(a) What is an Accident.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 1 (1) (a), supra.]

(351)

Strain.

A workman while engaged in the course of his employment in replacing a derailed coal hutch on the rails severely strained his back. Held that the injury suffered by the workman was an injury by accident entitling him to compensation, in terms of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Stewart v Wilsons & Clyde Coal Co., 1902, 5 F. 120; 40 S.L.R. 80; 10 S.L.T. 366.

(352)

Voluntary attempt to rescue fellow servant—Suffocation by noxious gas.

London and Edinburgh Shipping Co. v Brown, 1905, 7 F. 488; 42 S.L.R. 357; 12 S.L.T. 694, No. 361, infra.

(b) Whether Death Attributable to Accident.

[See 11, infra.]

(c) Whether Incapacity for Work Attributable to Accident.

[See 13, infra.]

(3) ARISING OUT OF AND IN THE COURSE OF THE EMPLOYMENT.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 1 (2), supra.]

(a) Proof.

(353)

Unexplained death—Workman found dead in place where he might legitimately be in the course of his duties.

A station policeman in the employment of a railway company was run down by an engine on a siding at the station and died shortly afterwards of his injuries. There was no evidence to show how or why he came to be at the spot where he was injured, but he might legitimately have been there in the course of his duties as station policeman. Held that the deceased being a station policeman, the presumption was that he had been injured by accident arising out of and in course of his employment, and that in the absence of evidence to the contrary this must be taken to be the fact.

Grant v Glasgow and South-Western Railway Co., 1908 S.C. 187; 45 S.L.R. 128; 15 S.L.T. 585.

(b) Workman going to or from Work.

(354)

Climbing over railing in order to get to work.

A workman employed in the renovation of the interior of a church found the church door locked on his arrival in the morning, and was unable to unlock the door. To gain access to his work he climbed the iron railing of a neighbouring schoolyard, which enabled him to scale the churchyard wall and enter the church by a window. The railing was topped by spikes, one of which pierced his foot, from the effects of which injury he died. Held that the accident did not arise "out of and in the course of the employment" of the workman in the sense of sec. 1 (1) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Gibson v Wilson, 1901, 3 F. 661; 38 S.L.R. 450; 8 S.L.T. 497.

(355)

Miner on way to mine—Accident on railway belonging to employers.

A miner, while proceeding above ground to his work, slipped and broke his leg upon rails belonging to the mine leading to the doorway of a horizontal passage by which the mine was entered, at a spot distant between 9 and 13 feet from the doorway. Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of his employment.

Mackenzie v Coltness Iron Co., 1903, 6 F. 8; 41 S.L.R. 6; 11 S.L.T. 350.

(356)

Workman at coal mine on railway line belonging to employers.

A workman employed at a coal mine had finished his day's work, and was proceeding home along a private line of railway occupied by the colliery, when he was run over and killed at a point 230 yards distant from the place where he worked. Held that the accident did not arise "out of and in the course of the employment" of the workman in the sense of sec. 1, sub-sec. (1), of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Caton v Summerlee and Mossend Iron and Steel Co., 1902, 4 F. 989; 39 S.L.R. 762; 10 S.L.T. 204.

(357)

Miner leaving work by unauthorised route.

A workman employed at a coal mine proposing to go home by crossing a railway siding on the premises of the mineowners, and by trespassing along a railway, was injured while crossing the siding. There were two exits provided for leaving the mine, neither of which crossed the siding. The workman was aware that the short cut was not the proper exit, but there was no express prohibition against workmen leaving the mine at this spot. Held that the accident did not arise "out of and in the course of the employment" of the workman.

Haley v United Collieries, 1907 S.C. 214; 44 S.L.R. 193; 14 S.L.T. 546.

(358)

Engine-driver going to report himself off duty.

An engine-driver was relieved from active duty when his engine was in a siding. It was then his duty to report himself off duty at the neighbouring station. He was entitled to wages or an allowance for overtime until he reached home. In making his way to the station, it was necessary for him to go down the main line for some distance. He was warned that a down train had been signalled. He was run over by this train. When last seen alive he was walking on the down line, but was apparently making for the left side, where there was room to stand clear of the train. He had passed a footpath which afforded an egress from the line on to the public road, but there was a gate on this footpath which was not always unlocked. There was no rule or bye-law of the railway company against their servants walking on the line. Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of the engine-driver's employment.

Tod v Caledonian Railway Co., 1899, 1 F. 1047; 36 S.L.R. 784; 7 S.L.T. 85.

(c) Scope of Employment.

(359)

Assisting fellow-workman—Furtherance of employer's interests.

A labourer, employed in a steam joinery shop, whose duties were not connected with the management of the machinery, met with a fatal accident while assisting a machine-man to replace some loose belting upon the machinery while in motion. It was found in fact that the foreman might have ordered the deceased to assist in replacing the belting, but no such order had been given. Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of the labourer's employment in the sense of sec. 1 (1) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Menzies v McQuibban, 1900, 2 F. 732; 37 S.L.R. 526; 7 S.L.T. 432.

(360)

—Clerk helping to carry heavy weight.

A clerk, employed at engineering works, whose duty it was to weigh and record all articles sent out from the works, met with an accident which resulted in his death while helping workmen to carry a heavy article to the weighing machine. It was found in fact that his duty in relation to articles sent out was "confined to weighing the articles, which it was the duty of other employees to carry to the weighing machine." Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of the clerk's employment.

Goslan v James Gillies & Co., 1907 S.C. 63; 44 S.L.R. 71; 14 S.L.T. 466.

(361)

Voluntary attempt to rescue fellow-workman.

A steamship was moored to a quay in a dock discharging her cargo under a stevedore, who had contracted with her owners to unload her. The labourers in the employment of the stevedore were each appointed to work in connection with a particular hold of the vessel, either on board her or on the quay. A, who was employed on the quay to discharge cargo from the afterhold, and who did not require in the performance of his duty to go on board the vessel, on being informed that one of his fellow-workmen employed in the forehold was lying there in an unconscious condition owing to inhaling noxious gas, offered to attempt a rescue, and after a handkerchief had been tied round his mouth, was lowered into the forehold, where both he and the man he had attempted to rescue were suffocated by carbonic acid gas. A acted without instructions from his employer—the stevedore—who had gone for rescue appliances. Held that A met his death by an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

London and Edinburgh Shipping Co. v Brown, 1905, 7 F. 488; 42 S.L.R. 357; 12 S.L.T. 694.

(362)

Doing work of fellow-workman under private arrangement.

A roadman in the employment of a county road authority was injured when stepping down from a steam road roller belonging to the employers. The accident occurred before 7 a.m., the roadman's hour for beginning work. He had gone on to the roller for the purpose of breaking up the boiler fire so as to get up steam by 7 a.m. It was not part of his duty to do so, his employment being solely to sweep and put "blinding" on the road. He had privately arranged with the engineman to break up the fire so as to save the engineman and fireman, who had gone to their homes for the night, from returning before 7 a.m. Held that the accident did not arise "out of and in the course of" the workman's employment within the meaning of sec. 1 (1) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

M'Allan v Western District Committee of Perthshire County Council, 1906, 8 F. 783; 43 S.L.R. 592; 14 S.L.T. 36.

(363)

Brusher in coal mine interfering with charge in shot-hole.

General rule 12 (e) of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, provides: "No explosive shall be pressed into a hole of insufficient size, and when a hole has been charged the explosive shall not be unrammed." In the course of blasting operations in a mine, a brushing squad, whose work it was, drilled a hole and filled it with a charge of an explosive called saxonite, placing at the bottom of the charge a detonator which was to be electrically exploded by means of two wires passing downwards through the charge and attached to the detonator; the foreman brusher thereafter, contrary to fact and apparently for fun, informed the fireman whose duty it was to explode the charge, that it was not ready, and the fireman went away. Subsequently the fireman was sent for, but could not be found, and the foreman brusher then proceeded alone to the charge, which exploded and killed him, and it was found in fact that the accident was caused by friction set up by the deceased having attempted to pull out the wires communicating with the detonator. Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of the deceased's employment.

Lynch v Baird & Co., 1904, 6 F. 271; 41 S.L.R. 214; 11 S.L.T. 597.

(364)

Railway carter trying to stop his horse.

A, a carter in the employment of a railway company, was waiting with his horse and cart at one of the company's goods stations, when the horse, from some unexplained cause, started off, and A in endeavouring to stop it, received injuries from which he died. Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of the employment of the deceased on or in or about a railway.

Devine v Caledonian Railway Co., 1899, 1 F. 1105; 36 S.L.R. 877; 7 S.L.T. 99.

(365)

Fish porter killed on railway.

A fish porter, in the employment of a fish stevedore who had a contract with a railway company for the portage of fish delivered at one of their stations, left the siding where the trucks were customarily discharged, and going along the line of railway was run down and killed by a railway engine near a shunter's bothy to which the fish porters were in the habit of going in order to find out the number of fish boxes that were in transit. The fish porters had no right to walk along the railway, they were never instructed by any one to go to the bothy to find out the number of fish boxes that were in transit, and the information was not of any use to them, or to their employer in their work. Held that the deceased had not been killed through an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment.

Hendry v Caledonian Railway Co., 1907 S.C. 732; 44 S.L.R. 584; 14 S.L.T. 863.

(366)

Leaving work to get a drink.

Held that a miner, who had left the pit-head where he was working to get a drink of water, and was killed by a runaway hutch when he was returning, was killed "in the course of his employment," within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, sec. 1, sub-sec. (1).

Keenan v Flemington Coal Co., 1902, 5 F. 164; 40 S.L.R. 144; 10 S.L.T. 409.

(367)

Conversation with fellow-workman—Workman killed while returning to his work.

A, an engine-driver in the employment of a railway company, having brought a train into a station belonging to the company about 10 p.m., was ordered to take his engine into a particular lye in the station, there to await his next duty, which was to take a train out of the station at 11 p.m. Having taken his engine into the lye, he left the engine and crossed over four or five sets of rails to ask a traffic regulator why he had been ordered to take his engine to that particular lye. He then crossed two more sets of rails to a point about twelve or thirteen yards further from his engine, where he spoke for a moment or two to another of the company's employees. This conversation had nothing to do with A's duties as an engine-driver. Immediately afterwards, while recrossing the last-mentioned lines of rails on his way back to his engine, A was knocked down and killed by a train that was being shunted. Held that A was killed by an accident arising out of and in the course of his employment.

Goodlet v Caledonian Railway Co., 1902, 4 F. 986; 39 S.L.R. 759; 10 S.L.T. 203.

(d) Risks Incidental to Employment.

(368)

Negligence of fellow-servant.

M'Intyre, a workman in the employment of shipbuilders, was oiling with a brush a machine at which he was working. The brush was not the brush belonging to the machine, and M'Intyre knew this. While M'Intyre was so engaged, Clark, another workman in the same employment, to whose machine the brush belonged, and who required it for his work, came up angrily, said the brush was his, and took hold of it. M'Intyre asked Clark to wait a moment, but

Clark pulled the brush out of M'Intyre's hand, and in doing so unintentionally injured M'Intyre's hand by drawing it across a sharp piece of iron. Held that the injury to M'Intyre was caused by accident arising out of and in the course of the employment.

M'Intyre v Rodger & Co., 1903, 6 F. 176; 41 S.L.R. 107; 11 S.L.T. 467.

(369)

Horseplay of fellow-servant.

A workman in the course of his employment in a "factory," within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, met with an accident caused by his fellow-workmen, who, at the time, were not engaged at their work, but were indulging in horseplay. Held that the accident was not one arising "out of" the employment in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, sec. 1 (1), and that the injured workman was not entitled to compensation under the Act.

Falconer v London and Glasgow Engineering and Iron Shipbuilding Co., 1901, 3 F. 564; 38 S.L.R. 381; 8 S.L.T. 430.

(370)

Wrongful act of fellow-servant—Miner injured in trying to avoid rubbish thrown at him by fellow-servant.

Smith and Paton, two drawers in a coalpit, were sitting in a hutch, Smith driving the horse. In passing near the working place of another drawer, Burley, Paton took hold of a hutch Burley had been using and pulled it after him. Burley followed, and in endeavouring to recapture his hutch, pushed Paton with a prop. Paton then threw some rubbish at Burley; in avoiding the rubbish Burley struck his head against a projection on the wall and was injured. Held that although the accident arose in the course of Burley's employment, it did not arise out of it within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, sec. 1 (1).

Burley v Baird & Co., 1908 S.C. 545; 45 S.L.R. 416; 15 S.L.T. 867.

(371)

Dangerous method of doing work that might be done safely.

An accident to a workman may be attributable to his adopting a wrong and dangerous method of doing work which could be done safely, and at the same time may be an "accident arising out of and in the course of the employment," in the sense of sec. 1 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Durham v Brown Brothers & Co., 1898, 1 F. 279; 36 S.L.R. 190; 6 S.L.T. 239.

(e) Breach of Rules and Orders.

(372)

Going on wagons contrary to orders.

Some boys employed in steel works were allowed an interval of half an hour for rest between two jobs. During this interval they got into one of a number of wagons that were standing on a steeply inclined line of rails in the yard of the works. After the boys had got into the wagon, the wagons began to move down the incline, and one of the boys jumped off the wagon in order to sprag the wheels. While thus engaged he was caught by the sprag, and, being thrown underneath the wheels, sustained injuries from which he died. The boys had no occasion to be near the wagons, and had repeatedly been warned not to go near them, and knew that they were doing wrong when they went there. Held that the accident did not "arise out of" the boy's employment.

Powell v Lanarkshire Steel Co., 1904, 6 F. 1039; 42 S.L.R. 231; 12 S.L.T. 656.

(373)

Leaving working place contrary to order—Girl employed as a farm servant.

A girl was engaged on the platform of a steam threshing machine, her duty being to pass the sheaves to the millman. She was specially directed to remain at her place, and was warned of the danger of moving about. Notwithstanding, in the temporary absence of the millman, she attempted to step across the opening through which the mill was fed with sheaves, in order to speak to another girl who was engaged on the same machine. In attempting to cross her foot slipped and she was caught in the machinery and received injuries. For the performance of her work the pursuer did not require to speak to the other girl or to leave her place. Held that the accident was not an accident "arising out of and in the course of" the pursuer's employment.

Callaghan v Maxwell, 1900, 2 F. 420; 37 S.L.R. 313; 7 S.L.T. 339.

(374)

Ignorance of rule—Miner examining shot-hole contrary to rule.

A miner having lighted the train to fire a shot retired to a place of safety, but six minutes having elapsed without the shot exploding, he returned to examine the shot-hole. While he was so engaged the shot exploded, with the result that he was injured. One of the special rules adopted for the mine in terms of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, provided that, if a shot had been lighted and did not explode, no person should enter the place where it was lighted until thirty minutes should have elapsed. This rule was not known to the miner, and was not generally observed in the pit. A printed copy of the special rules was exposed to the view of the miners at the pit-head in a shallow case with a hinged door which could be closed but not locked. Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of the miner's employment.

M'Nicol v Speirs, Gibb & Co., 1899, 1 F. 604; 36 S.L.R. 428; 6 S.L.T. 353.

(375)

Procuring articles necessary for work—Ascending dangerous hoist—Use of hoist forbidden.

A workman who was engaged in the process of filling scrap-iron into barrows, was killed owing to the defective condition of a hoist in which he was ascending to a furnace platform, in order to procure hand-leathers, which were necessary to his work. The furnace platform could be reached either by a fixed iron ladder or by the hoist in question. Workmen were forbidden to ascend by the hoist, a notice to that effect being posted on a wall close by, and at the time of the accident the hoist had been rendered especially dangerous by recent alterations. There was no finding that the deceased knew of the notice, and there was no proof that his attention was directed to the changed condition of the hoist. Some of the workmen knew of the notice and some did not, but all of them used the hoist. Held that the deceased had been killed in the course of his employment.

Logue v Fullerton, Hodgart & Barclay, 1901, 3 F. 1006; 38 S.L.R. 738; 9 S.L.T. 152.

2. SEC. 1 (2) (b)—OPTION OF WORKMAN TO CLAIM COMPENSATION OR TO TAKE PROCEEDINGS AGAINST EMPLOYER INDEPENDENTLY OF ACT.

(376)

Election to take under Act—Bar to action of damages—Jury trial.

In an action of damages for personal injury laid at common law and under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, the defenders averred that the pursuer had claimed and received compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. Averments to this effect held relevant to support a plea of bar.

The Court sent the whole cause to trial by jury, allowing the defender a counter issue on the question of bar.

Campbell v Caledonian Railway Co., 1899, 1 F. 887; 36 S.L.R. 699; 7 S.L.T. 35.

(377)

Payment of compensation—Separate proof as to preliminary defence.

In an action raised by a workman against his employers at common law for damages for injuries alleged to have been received through their fault, the defenders, besides denying fault, averred that the pursuer had given written notice that he claimed compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, and that subsequently they had paid him compensation, and pleaded that in respect thereof the pursuer was barred from suing the action. In answer, the pursuer averred that he was induced to sign the notice shortly after the accident by false representations on the part of the defenders, at a time when, through illness, he could not, and did not, understand its import. Held that this question should be determined by proof primo loco.

Hunter v Darnagavil Coal Co., 1900, 3 F. 10; 38 S.L.R. 6.

(378)

Receipt for compensation.

A workman brought an action against his employer, at common law and under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, for damages on account of the loss of an eye sustained by him when in the defender's employment. The defender pleaded that the action was incompetent, in respect that the pursuer had elected to take compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. The defender founded on a receipt for 12s. 6d. signed by the pursuer when in hospital shortly after the accident, and bearing that the money had been "received under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897." The pursuer averred that he had signed the receipt without being made aware of its terms. After a proof, the Court repelled the defender's plea to the competency of the action, holding that it had not been proved that the pursuer had elected to take compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Fowler v Hughes, 1903, 5 F. 394; 40 S.L.R. 321; 10 S.L.T. 583.

(379)

Election inferred from acceptance of weekly payments.

In defence to an action of damages at common law for personal injuries, brought by a workman against his master, the master pleaded that the action was barred by the pursuer having elected to take compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act. On a proof it appeared that at the end of the week in which he was injured the workman was paid a sum in lieu of wages, and was told that for the next two weeks he would get nothing, but after that he would be paid half-wages. He subsequently, for a period of about six months, received each week a sum amounting to slightly more than half his average weekly wage. These payments were at first made at his house, but afterwards, when he had partially recovered, he called for them regularly at his employer's office. No receipts were taken for these payments. Held that the pursuer had elected to accept, and had accepted, compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, and was thereby barred from raising the action.

Mackay v Rosie, 1908 S.C. 174; 45 S.L.R. 178; 15 S.L.T. 654.

(380)

Receipts.

In an action against the pursuer's employers for damages, held (1) that receipts, granted by the pursuer to the defenders, according to their terms imported an election to take under the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897; (2) that the pursuer had not stated a relevant ground for setting aside the receipts; and therefore (3) that the pursuer was barred from proceeding with the action.

Little v P. & W. MacLellan, 1900, 2 F. 387; 37 S.L.R. 287; 7 S.L.T. 313.

(381)

Foreign workman.

In defence to an action for personal injuries, the defenders pleaded that the action was barred by the pursuer having claimed and accepted compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act. On a proof, it appeared that the workman was an Italian imperfectly acquainted with English, and wholly unable to read or write it; that he had applied for money for his injuries; that he had accepted two sums from the defenders, consisting of the amount due to him under the Act of 1897 for three weekly payments, and had with his mark authenticated two receipts therefor which bore to be for payments under the Act of 1897; that he knew of his right to half-wages during incapacity, but did not know of the Act by name, or of his rights apart from the Act; and that the receipts were not read over or explained to him. Held that it had not been proved that the pursuer had elected to take compensation under the Act of 1897, and that consequently he was not barred from raising the action.

Valenti v William Dixon, Limited, 1907 S.C. 695; 44 S.L.R. 532; 14 S.L.T. 882.

(382)

Claim for compensation under Act refused on ground of serious and wilful misconduct—Subsequent common law action.

Held that a workman who had claimed compensation under the Act, and whose claim had been disallowed by the arbitrator on the ground of his serious and wilful misconduct, must be held to have exercised his option of claiming either under or independently of the Act, and that he was not entitled thereafter to bring an action of damages at common law.

Opinions that when a claim for compensation has been dismissed on the ground of want of title, the effect will be otherwise.

Burton v Chapel Coal Co., 1909 S.C. 430; 46 S.L.R. 375; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 111.

(383)

Claim by person not a dependant—Subsequent action of damages.

Held that a claimant who had been refused compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, on the ground that she was not a dependant of the deceased workman, was not thereby barred under sec. 1, sub-sec. (2) (b), of the Act from raising an action of reparation at common law, or under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, against the deceased's employer.

M'Donald v James Dunlop & Co., 1905, 7 F. 533; 42 S.L.R. 394; 12 S.L.T. 765.

(384)

Claim by partial dependant—Subsequent action of damages.

Held that a son who had claimed compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, on account of the death of his father, but was found to have no title to insist in his claim, in respect that he had been only partially dependent on his father, and that there were others who had been wholly dependent on the father, was not by reason of his unsuccessful claim barred from insisting in an action of damages on account of his father's death.

Blain v Greenock Foundry Co., 1903, 5 F. 893; 40 S.L.R. 639; 11 S.L.T. 92.

3. SEC. 1 (2) (c)—SERIOUS AND WILFUL MISCONDUCT.

(1) WHAT CONSTITUTES.

(a) Breach of Rules and Orders.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 3 (1) (a), supra.]

(385)

Rashness—No wilful violation of known rule—No disobedience to order—Fact or law.
Condron v Gavin Paul & Sons, 1903, 6 F. 29; 41 S.L.R. 33; 11 S.L.T. 383, No. 403, infra.

(386)

Ignorance of rule—Coal mine.

Opinions (per Lord President Dunedin and Lord Kyllachy) that where a workman in a coal mine, except for some dominant reason, is in breach of a duly published statutory rule, and an injury results therefrom, his de facto ignorance of the rule can in no circumstances prevent the injury from being attributable to his serious and wilful misconduct. Opinion (per Lord McLaren) that there may be exceptions where the workman is excusably ignorant. Opinion (per Lord Kinnear and Lord Stormonth-Darling) reserved.

Dobson v United Collieries, 1905, 8 F. 241; 43 S.L.R. 260; 13 S.L.T. 644.

(387)

—A workman who was engaged in the process of filling scrap iron into barrows was killed owing to the defective condition of a hoist in which he was ascending to a furnace platform, in order to procure hand-leathers, which were necessary for his work. The furnace platform could be reached either by a fixed iron ladder or by the hoist. Workmen were forbidden to ascend by the hoist, a notice to that effect being posted on a wall close by, and at the time of the accident the hoist was specially dangerous owing to recent alterations. There was no finding that the deceased knew of the notice, and there was no proof that his attention was directed to the changed condition of the hoist. Some of the workmen knew of the notice and some did not, but all used the hoist. Held that the deceased had not been guilty of serious and wilful misconduct.

Logue v Fullerton, Hodgart & Barclay, 1901, 3 F. 1006; 38 S.L.R. 738; 9 S.L.T. 152.

(388)

—Rule not generally observed—Mine.

One of the special rules adopted for a mine under the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, provided that, if a shot had been lighted and did not explode, no person should enter the place where it was lighted until thirty minutes had elapsed. A miner disobeyed the rule and was injured in consequence. The rule was not known to the miner, and was not generally observed in the pit. A printed copy of the special rules was exposed to the view of the miners at the pithead in a shallow case with a hinged door, which could be closed but not locked. Held that the miner's failure to inform himself of the rule was not serious and wilful misconduct.

M'Nicol v Speirs, Gibb & Co., 1899, 1 F. 604; 36 S.L.R. 428; 6 S.L.T. 353.

(389)

Coal mine—Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887—Unramming explosive.

General rule No. 12 (e) of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, provides—"No explosive shall be forcibly pressed into a hole of insufficient size, and when a hole has been charged the explosive shall not be unrammed." In the course of blasting operations in a mine, a brushing squad, whose work it was, drilled a hole and filled it with a charge of an explosive called saxonite, placing at the bottom of the charge a detonator which was to be electrically exploded by means of two wires passing downwards through the charge and attached to the detonator; the foreman brusher thereafter, contrary to fact, and apparently for fun, informed the fireman, whose duty it was to explode the charge, that it was not ready, and the fireman went away. Subsequently the fireman was sent for, but could not be found, and the foreman brusher then proceeded alone to the charge, which exploded and killed him, and it was found in fact that the accident was caused by friction set up by the deceased having attempted to pull out the wires communicating with the detonator. Rule 12 (e) was well known to the deceased and carefully enforced, but it was not proved that he knew the mechanism of the detonator or the danger of pulling the wires. Held on the facts as stated by the arbitrator that the accident was not caused by an attempt to unram the charge in the sense of rule 12 (e), and did not result from the "serious and wilful misconduct" of the deceased in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Lynch v Baird & Co., 1904, 6 F. 271; 41 S.L.R. 214; 11 S.L.T. 597.

(390)

Accident due to absent-mindedness—Bottomer opening door of shaft before cage stopped.

By the special rules in force in a coal mine, under the provisions of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, it was provided (rule 3) —"The bottomer at a mid-working in a vertical shaft not provided with an appliance which constantly fences the shaft, being a mid-working in use for the regular passage of workers or the drawing of minerals from the mine, shall not open the gate fencing the shaft until the cage is stopped at such mid-working." In a case stated for appeal under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, it was stated that a bottomer with a loaded hutch opened the gate fencing the shaft when the cage was not opposite the gate; that the bottomer, "presumably through absent-mindedness, failed to notice (although there was sufficient light to enable him to do so) that the cage was not at the gate, and proceeded to push the hutch from behind till it fell down the shaft; that the "bottomer "was drawn after it, and was fatally injured by the fall." Held that the bottomer's conduct amounted to serious and wilful misconduct within the meaning of sec. 1 (2) (c) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

United Collieries v M'Ghie, 1904, 6 F. 808; 41 S.L.R. 705; 12 S.L.T. 650.

(391)

Failure to set sprags.

A case for appeal under the Workmen's Compensation Act set forth rule 9 of the additional special rules framed in pursuance of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, which provided—"Where holing is being done, sprags or holing props shall be set as soon as there is room, and the distance between such sprags or holing props shall not exceed six feet, or such less distance as shall be ordered by the owner, agent, or manager." A, a workman in a mine in which this rule was in force was killed by a fall of coal while holing coal with four other workmen. Three of the men had holed a distance of nearly seventeen feet before A and the remaining man began, and these two had holed a further distance of three feet when the accident happened. No sprag had been erected by any one in the space thus holed, though there was ample room for the erection of sprags. Held that A was in breach of rule 9, and that his death was attributable to serious and wilful misconduct in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, sec. 1 (2) (c).

O'Hara v Cadzow Coal Co., 1903, 5 F. 439; 40 S.L.R. 355; 10 S.L.T. 617.

(392)

Miner carrying explosives without removing naked light.

A special rule for a mine provided as follows:—"While charging shot-holes or handling any explosive not contained in a securely closed case or canister, a workman should not smoke or permit a naked light to remain on his cap, or in such a position that it could ignite the explosive." A, a workman in the mine, committed a breach of this rule by wearing a lighted naked lamp in his cap while carrying cartridges which were not enclosed in a case or canister. A spark from the lamp ignited the cartridges, which exploded, causing injuries which resulted in A's death. The employers provided a special canister to carry cartridges, but it was a common practice among the miners (not known to the employers) not to use this canister when carrying cartridges. A was not directly told not to carry cartridges in the way he did when he met his death, but the sheriff found "that it must be assumed he knew the special rules." Held that the death of A was attributable to his serious and wilful misconduct within the meaning of sec. 1, sub-sec. (2), of the Act.

Daily v John Watson, Limited, 1900, 2 F. 1044; 37 S.L.R. 782; 8 S.L.T. 73.

(393)

——By the additional special rules in force in a mine, under the provisions of the Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, it was provided, rule 1—"While charging shot-holes or handling any explosive not contained in a securely closed case or canister a workman shall not smoke or permit a naked light to remain in his cap, or in such a position that it could ignite the explosive." These rules were duly exhibited at the mine in such a manner as to satisfy the requirements as to publication of sec. 57, sub-sec. (1), of that Act. A workman in the mine, while carrying a cartridge not contained in a close case or canister, failed to remove a naked light from his cap, and in crawling through a narrow road, 2 feet in height, the light came in contact with the cartridge, which exploded and injured him. The workman did not know of the special rule, nor that there was any rule against having a lamp in his cap while carrying a cartridge. In acting as he did he followed his usual practice, a practice that was also followed by other miners in the pit. Held that the injury was attributable to the serious and wilful misconduct of the workman in the sense of sec. 1, sub-sec. (2) (c), of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Dobson v United Collieries, 1905, 8 F. 241; 43 S.L.R. 260; 13 S.L.T. 644.

(394)

Cleaning machinery in motion.

A woman employed in a spinning mill was injured through attempting to clean a teaser card-machine, at which she was working, while it was in motion. It was the rule and practice of the factory, known to the woman, that no cleaning of machinery was to be done unless the machinery was stopped. Held that the injuries to the woman were attributable to her serious and wilful misconduct within the meaning of sec. 1, sub-sec. (2) (c), of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and consequently that her employers were not liable to her in compensation under the Act.

Guthrie v Boase Spinning Co., 1901, 3 F. 769; 38 S.L.R. 483.

(395)

Boys going on wagons contrary to orders.

Some boys employed in steel works were allowed an interval of half an hour for rest between jobs. During this interval they got into one of a number of wagons that were standing on a steeply inclined line of rails in the yard of the works. After the boys had got into the wagon the wagons began to move down the incline, and one of the boys jumped off the wagon in order to sprag the wheels. While thus engaged he was caught by the sprag, and, being thrown underneath the wheels, sustained injuries from which he died. The boys had no occasion to be near the wagons and had been repeatedly warned not to go near them, and knew that they were doing wrong when they went there. Held that the accident was attributable to the boy's serious and wilful misconduct.

Powell v Lanarkshire Steel Co., 1904, 6 F. 1039; 42 S.L.R. 231; 12 S.L.T. 656.

(396)

Farm servant on steam threshing machine.

A girl employed as a farm servant was engaged on the platform of a steam threshing machine, her duty being to pass the sheaves to the millman. She was specially directed to remain at her place, and was warned of the danger of moving about. In the temporary absence of the millman she attempted to step across the opening through which the mill was fed with sheaves in order to speak to another girl who was engaged on the same machine. In attempting to cross her foot slipped and she was caught in the machine and injured. Held that the accident was attributable to her serious and wilful misconduct.

Callaghan v Maxwell, 1900, 2 F. 420; 37 S.L.R. 313; 7 S.L.T. 339.

(b) Other Cases.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 3 (1) (b), supra.]

(397)

Drunk and unfit to work.

Held that being drunk and unfit to work is serious and wilful misconduct on the part of a workman within the meaning of sec. 1 (2) (c) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

M'Groarty v John Brown & Co., 1906, 8 F. 809; 43 S.L.R. 598; 14 S.L.T. 66.

(398)

Railway servant walking on line.

An engine-driver was relieved from active duty when his engine was in a siding. It was then his duty to report himself off duty at the neighbouring station. He was entitled to wages or an allowance for overtime until he reached home. In making his way to the station it was necessary for him to go down the main line for some distance. He was warned that a down train had been signalled. He was run over by this train. When last seen alive he was walking on the down line, but was apparently making for the left side, where there was room to stand clear of the train. He had passed a footpath which afforded an egress from the line to the public road, but there was a gate on the footpath which was not always unlocked. There was no rule or bye-law of the company against their servants walking on the line. Held that the engine-driver had not been guilty of serious and wilful misconduct.

Tod v Caledonian Railway Co., 1899, 1 F. 1047; 36 S.L.R. 784; 7 S.L.T. 85.

(2) WHETHER INJURY ATTRIBUTABLE TO MISCONDUCT.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 3 (2), supra.]

(399)

Held that, though a deceased miner had in fact broken a statutory rule in force at the mine, his injury was directly attributable not to his breach of the rule, but to an act done by him after the operation to which the rule applied had been completed, and that, on the facts, his injury was not attributable to his serious and wilful misconduct in the sense of sec. 1 (2) (c) of the Act.

Praties v Broxburn Oil Co., 1907 S.C. 581; 44 S.L.R. 408; 14 S.L.T. 866.

(400)

A miner while riding on the top of a loaded hutch in the mine, in breach of one of the rules in force in the mine, was killed by the fall of a stone from the roof of the tunnel in which the hutch was running.

Held that although the miner was guilty of serious and wilful misconduct, his death was not "attributable" thereto in the sense of sec. 1, sub-sec. (2), of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and that his widow was not barred from claiming compensation.

Glasgow Coal Co. v Sneddon, 1905, 7 F. 485; 42 S.L.R. 365; 12 S.L.T. 717.

(3) QUESTION OF FACT OR LAW.

(401)

Facts stated in a case for appeal under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, on a consideration of which held that the question whether the workman had been guilty of serious and wilful misconduct within the meaning of sec. 1, sub-sec. (2), of the Act, was a question of law.

Dailly v John Watson, Limited, 1900, 2 F. 1044; 37 S.L.R. 782; 8 S.L.T. 73.

(402)

A farm servant, who had been driving a lorry, was found lying injured by the roadside with the lorry upset. No other person saw the accident happen, but it appeared that the cause of the accident was that the injured man had tied the reins to a small wheel which worked a brake on the front of the lorry instead of keeping them in his hand, and that the horse's head had thereby been pulled round so as to make it run back and upset the lorry. The arbitrator found, "in fact and in law," that the workman's action amounted to serious and wilful misconduct.

Held that the arbitrator's finding was a finding in fact, and was not subject to review.

Vaughan v Nicoll, 1906, 8 F. 464; 43 S.L.R. 351; 13 S.L.T. 804.

(403)

Rashness—No wilful violation of rule.

A miner employed in a coal mine at a place adjoining a wheel brae on which there were two sets of rails, one for ascending and the other for descending hutches, was injured in crossing the wheel brae while the hutches were running. He was well aware that it was most dangerous to do so. Had he waited until the hutches had ceased running he could by shouting to the man in charge at the top of the wheel brae have been able to cross in safety. The sheriff-substitute dismissed an application by the miner for compensation on the ground that the applicant's injuries were due to his own serious and wilful misconduct. In an appeal the miner contended that to establish serious and wilful misconduct in the sense of the statute, it was necessary to show either wilful violation of a known rule or disobedience to the order of a superior, and that in the present case the accident was due to rashness, and not to wilfulness. The Court dismissed the appeal, Lord President Kinross and Lord Adam holding that the sheriff's judgment determined a question which, in the absence of anything to show that the sheriff had proceeded on an erroneous construction of the statute, was one of fact only, and was not subject to review, Lord M'Laren and Lord Kinnear holding that the judgment involved a question of the construction of the statute, and that the construction of the statute on which the sheriff had proceeded was right.

Condron v Gavin Paul & Sons, 1903, 6 F. 29; 41 S.L.R. 33; 11 S.L.T. 383.

(404)

Breach of rule—Injury "attributable" to serious and wilful misconduct.

In defence to a claim under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, for the death of an oversman in a mine, the employers pleaded that the death was attributable to the serious and wilful misconduct of the deceased, in respect that he had acted in breach of the statutory rules in force at the pit. The arbitrator repelled this defence and awarded compensation. Circumstances in which the Court refused to interfere with his award.

Wallace v Glenboig Union Fireclay Co., 1907 S.C. 967; 44 S.L.R. 726; 15 S.L.T. 82.

(405)

Breach of statutory regulation — Driving cart without holding reins—General Turnpike Act, 1831, sec. 97.

A farm servant who was in charge of a horse and cart received fatal injuries through the horse bolting and the cart being upset. At the time of the accident he was not holding the reins, but had fastened them on to the bridle, contrary to the General Turnpike Act, 1831, sec. 97. The sheriff-substitute "found in fact" that his death was not attributable to any serious and wilful misconduct on his part, and awarded compensation. Held that the question was one of fact and not of law, and therefore not subject to review. Opinion that the case disclosed nothing amounting to serious and wilful misconduct.

Mitchell v Whitton, 1907 S.C. 1267; 44 S.L.R. 955; 15 S.L.T. 318.

(406)

Note for order on arbitrator to state a case.

A sheriff-substitute having held that on the facts proved, in proceedings before him as arbitrator under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, the injury received by a workman was not attributable to the serious and wilful misconduct of the workman, refused to state a case. The defender having presented a note to the Court for an order on the sheriff-substitute to state a case, on the ground that what constituted serious and wilful misconduct within the meaning of the Act was a question of law, the Court refused the note, in respect that, according to the facts as found by the sheriff-substitute, no question of law on the construction of the statute was raised.

Glasgow and South-Western Railway Co. v Laidlaw, 1900, 2 F. 708; 37 S.L.R. 503; 7 S.L.T. 420.

4. SEC. 1 (3)—SETTLEMENT OF DISPUTES.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 4, supra.]

(1) AGREEMENTS.

(407)

Enforcement—Ordinary action to enforce agreement to pay compensation.

Action to enforce an alleged agreement to pay compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, not averred to be in writing, dismissed, Lord Justice-Clerk Macdonald and Lord Trayner holding that it was an action to enforce payment of compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and, as such, incompetent; and Lord Young holding that the action was an action for specific implement of an agreement made independently of the Act; that therefore it was not an incompetent action, but that it was irrelevant, in respect that the agreement founded on could be proved only by writ, and no sufficient writ was averred.

Cochrane v Traill & Sons, 1900, 2 F. 794; 37 S.L.R. 662; 7 S.L.T. 459.

(408)

Power of sheriff to decern for arrears.

An arbitrator under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, has no power to enforce an agreement to pay compensation under the Act by decerning for arrears of compensation due under it.

Colville & Sons v Tigue, 1905, 8 F. 179; 43 S.L.R. 129; 13 S.L.T. 571.

(409)

Reduction—Essential error—Mutual error.

An employer tendered £2 7s. 4d. to D, a workman, who had been injured in his employment, as in full satisfaction of any claim he might have against him, stating, as was the fact, that he had obtained a report from a surgeon that D would be fit to return to his work in six weeks from the date of the accident. D accepted the money and granted a discharge in full. The medical opinion on which both parties relied proved to be mistaken, for D was not able for work for more than six months from the date of the accident. Held that the above facts were not sufficient to shew that the parties, in entering into the agreement for settlement of the workman's claim, were under essential error to the effect of rendering the discharge null and void.

Dornan v Allan & Son, 1900, 3 F. 112; 38 S.L.R. 70; 8 S.L.T. 265.

(410)

Minority and lesion.

Held that an agreement between an employer and a workman fixing the amount of compensation to which the latter was entitled under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, was reducible by the workman on the ground of minority and lesion.

Robertson v S. Henderson & Sons, 1904, 6 F. 770; 41 S.L.R. 597; 12 S.L.T. 113.

(411)

Recorded memorandum of agreement—Action of damages for breach of recorded agreement—Competency.

Lawrie v Brown & Co., 1908 S.C. 705; 45 S.L.R. 477; 15 S.L.T. 981, No. 602, infra.

(412)

Action of declarator that no agreement had been concluded, and for reduction of recorded memorandum—Competency.

Hughes v Thistle Chemical Co., 1907 S.C. 607; 44 S.L.R. 476; 14 S.L.T. 916, No. 605, infra.

(2) ARBITRATION.

(413)

Exclusion of arbitration by agreement—Agreement to pay compensation during incapacity.

A workman, who had been injured in the course of his employment, on 15th March, received from his employers a letter in these terms—"We admit liability under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and are prepared to pay compensation at the rate of 12s. 8d. during incapacity in terms thereof." The employers, after paying compensation at the specified rate for some months, discontinued the payments on the ground that the workman had recovered. The workman then applied to the sheriff for arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. Held that the letter of 15th March was an agreement of which a memorandum might have been recorded, and might still be recorded, under sec. (8) of the second schedule of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897; and that the parties having come to an agreement, procedure by arbitration was excluded.

Dunlop v Rankine & Blackmore, 1901, 4 F. 203; 39 S.L.R. 146.

(414)

—No subsisting agreement—Unrecorded agreement not acted on for seven years.

In March, 1899, a miner sustained injuries, by which he was totally incapacitated for his work, and by agreement with his employers he was paid compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, till May, 1900, at the rate of 14s. 4d. per week (the statutory maximum). No memorandum of the agreement was ever recorded, and it was never formally varied or ended under the Act. In May, 1900, the employers ceased the weekly payments, and the workman returned to their service, in which he remained working and earning wages, when he was able, till April, 1907, when, as the result of his injuries in 1899, he became totally incapacitated for work. No compensation was paid to the workman between May, 1900, and April, 1907. In 1907 the workman claimed compensation as from May, 1900, and he instituted arbitration proceedings under the Act. Held that there was no subsisting agreement between the parties, and that consequently arbitration proceedings were competent.

Dempster v Baird & Co., 1903 S.C. 722; 45 S.L.R. 432; 15 S.L.T. 881.

(415)

—Recorded memorandum of agreement.

A workman, who had been injured on 12th October, 1904, received weekly compensation from his employers, under an agreement, until 26th January, 1905, when the employers stopped the payments. Thereafter a memorandum of the agreement was recorded. The employers presented an application, in which they prayed the sheriff to find that their liability to compensate the workman came to an end on 25th January, 1905, and to grant an order declaring his right to compensation to have ended on that date, or alternatively, to ascertain and fix such weekly payments as might be due to the workman under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and to grant an award finding him entitled to such weekly payments, beginning the first payment on 1st February, 1905, for the preceding week. Held that as framed the employers' application was an original application for arbitration and not an application for review of weekly payments under first schedule to the Act, par. (12), and that it was excluded by the agreement of which a memorandum had been recorded.

Lochgelly Iron and Coal Co. v Sinclair, 1907 S.C. 1071; 44 S.L.R. 750; 15 S.L.T. 151.

(416)

Whether question had arisen—Payments being regularly made—No recordable agreement in existence.

An injured workman was regularly paid by his employers the maximum weekly compensation on the footing of total incapacity, until 23rd January, 1906. The employers having on several occasions intimated to the workman that in their opinion he had recovered, and that the weekly payments would in a short time be stopped, the workman on 30th January, 1906, prior to the payment of the weekly sum due on that date presented a petition in the sheriff court for arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act. There was no agreement between the parties as to compensation which could have been recorded. Held that the petition was incompetent in respect (a) that at the date when the petition was presented no question had arisen between the parties as to the duration of the compensation; and (b) that the mere fact that there was no agreement between the parties capable of registration did not show that a question had arisen between them so as to entitle the workman to present a petition for arbitration.

Gourlay Brothers & Co. v Sweeney, 1906, 8 F. 965; 43 S.L.R. 690; 14 S.L.T. 131.

(417)

—Premature application.

A workman who had been injured in the course of his employment presented a petition for arbitration in the sheriff court under the Workmen's Compensation Act two days prior to the date at which he could become entitled to compensation under the Act. Held that as at the date when the petition was presented no dispute had arisen between the parties as to compensation, and as the compensation was not in arrears, the petition for arbitration was incompetent.

Caledon Shipbuilding and Engineering Co. v Kennedy, 1906, 8 F. 960; 43 S.L.R. 687; 14 S.L.T. 133.

(418)

Medical examination of workman—Certificate of recovery by medical practitioner provided by employers—Workman not submitting himself for examination by medical practitioner appointed under the Act—First schedule (11).

A workman who had been receiving compensation under an unrecorded agreement, submitted himself, at his employers' request, for examination by a medical man provided by his employers, in terms of sec. (11) of the first schedule to the Act. The medical man reported that the workman had so far recovered as to be able to do his former work. The workman was dissatisfied with this report but did not apply to be examined by one of the medical practitioners appointed under the Act. The employers discontinued payment and the workman instituted arbitration proceedings to have the amount of compensation fixed. Held that so long as the workman did not submit himself for examination by one of the medical practitioners appointed under the Act, his right to compensation was suspended, and arbitration proceedings were excluded.

Davidson v Summerlee and Mossend Iron and Steel Co., 1903, 5 F. 991; 40 S.L.R. 764; 11 S.L.T. 269.

(419)

The employers of a workman, who had sustained injuries, orally agreed to pay him 13s. 3d. weekly as compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, but no memorandum of the agreement was recorded. The workman, after being in receipt of these weekly payments for nearly a year, on the requisition of the employers submitted himself to examination by a medical practitioner, provided and paid by them. A certificate having been granted by that medical practitioner, the workman was dissatisfied therewith, but did not submit himself for examination to one of the medical practitioners appointed under the Act, whereupon the employers discontinued the weekly payments. The workman then instituted an arbitration under sec. 1 (3) of the Act. Held that he was not precluded from having his claim for compensation dealt with in an arbitration under sec. 1 (3) in respect of his failure to submit himself to one of the medical practitioners appointed under the Act.

Strannigan v Baird & Co., 1904, 6 F. 784; 41 S.L.R. 609; 12 S.L.T. 152.

(420)

Payments ended by arbitrator on ground of recovery—Supervening incapacity—New application for compensation.

Cadenhead v Ailsa Shipbuilding Co., 1910 S.C. 1129; 47 S.L.R. 784; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 65, No. 575, infra.

5. SEC. 1 (4)—ASSESSMENT OF COMPENSATION ON FAILURE OF ACTION OF DAMAGES.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 5, supra.]

(421)

Procedure.

In an action at common law, and under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, the sheriff found the averments of the pursuer to be irrelevant. Held that sec. 1, sub-sec. (4), of the Workmen's Compensation Act applied, and that the sheriff was entitled to proceed as arbitrator to inquire into the facts necessary to establish liability under the Act as well as to assess the compensation should any be found due.

Held, further, that the proper procedure in such circumstances was to dismiss the action, so far as founded on common law and under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, reserving it as an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Henderson v Corporation of Glasgow, 1900, 2 F. 1127; 37 S.L.R. 857; 8 S.L.T. 118.

(422)

An action of damages for personal injuries at common law and under the Employers' Liability Act, 1880, having failed in respect that the pursuer was barred from insisting in it by having accepted payments under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, the Court dismissed it, but, having in view the provisions of sec. 1, sub-sec. (4), of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, remitted to the sheriff to determine the amount of compensation due under that Act.

Little v P. & W. MacLellan, 1900, 2 F. 387; 37 S.L.R. 287; 7 S.L.T. 313.

(423)

"Court in which the action is tried"—Court of Session or sheriff.

In an action of damages for personal injuries raised by a workman at common law or under the Employers' Liability Act against his employers, the sheriff-substitute, after a proof, assailed the defenders. The pursuer appealed to the Second Division. The Division having decided against the pursuer, and being about to dismiss the action, the pursuer, under sec. 1 (4) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, moved the Court to assess compensation under that Act. The Court dismissed the action, and remitted to the sheriff to assess compensation.

Quinn v John Brown & Co., 1906, 8 F. 855; 43 S.L.R. 643; 14 S.L.T. 83.

(424)

Time for making application to assess compensation.

When an action of damages has once been dismissed as irrelevant by the Court of Session, it is too late for the pursuer to move the Court to assess compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Baird v Higginbotham & Co., 1901, 3 F. 673; 38 S.L.R. 479; 8 S.L.T. 497.

McGowan v Smith, 1907 S.C. 548; 44 S.L.R. 384; 14 S.L.T. 766.

(425)

Expenses—Deduction of expenses of unsuccessful action of damages.

Circumstances in which the Court ordered that the expenses of an unsuccessful action of damages (amounting to £187 12s. 11d.), to which the defenders (employers) had been found entitled, should be deducted from compensation of 12s. a week awarded to the pursuer.

McKenna v United Collieries, 1906, 8 F. 969; 43 S.L.R. 713; 14 S.L.T. 150.

(426)

A jury having returned a verdict for the defenders in an action in which a workman sued for damages in respect of personal injuries at common law and under the Employers' Liability Act, the pursuer moved the Court to assess compensation under sec. 1 (4) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and the parties by minute agreed to a weekly payment of 15s. 10d. Held that the defenders were entitled to have the taxed amount of their expenses, for which the pursuer had been found liable, deducted from the compensation to be paid. Quoad ultra, neither party was found entitled to expenses since the date of the application of the verdict.

McGovern v Glasgow Coal Co., (O.H.) 1906, 14 S.L.T. 359.

6. SEC. 2—TIME FOR TAKING PROCEEDINGS.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 6, supra.]

(1) GENERALLY.

(427)

Judicial proceedings for the recovery of compensation need not be instituted within six months of the accident, provided a claim for compensation is made within that time.

Kilpatrick v Wemyss Coal Co., 1907 S.C. 320; 44 S.L.R. 255; 14 S.L.T. 695.

(2) NOTICE OF ACCIDENT.

(428)

Failure to give notice of accident—"Mistake or other reasonable cause"—Ignorance of serious nature of injuries.

A workman who had sustained injury in the course of his employment failed to give notice of the accident until five months thereafter, when he made a claim under the Workmen's Compensation Act. The reasons for his failure to give earlier notice were that at first he did not regard his injury as so serious as his doctor's advice should have led him to suppose, and that he did not intend to make any claim under the Act if his recovery had been as satisfactory as he expected. Held that even if the employers were prejudiced by the workman's failure to give notice timeously, the want of notice was occasioned by mistake for which there was reasonable cause, and that the workman was not barred by the provisions of sec. 2, subsec. (1), of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, from obtaining compensation under the Act.

Rankine v Alloa Coal Co., 1904, 6 F. 375; 41 S.L.R. 306; 11 S.L.T. 670.

(429)

On 20th November, 1905, a workman in the course of his employment fell and racked the muscles on his left side and over his lower ribs. Notwithstanding medical advice to rest, he continued working till February, 1906, when he had to go to a hospital. He designedly did not give notice of his accident at the time, believing that his injuries would not keep him from work. After going to the hospital he realised that his injuries were more serious than he had thought, and on 14th February, 1906, he gave written notice of the accident to his employers. Held that the workman's delay in giving notice was due to mistake or other reasonable cause within the meaning of sec. 2 (1) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and that consequently the delay in giving notice was not a bar to proceedings under the Act.

Brown v Lochgelly Iron and Coal Co., 1907 S.C. 198; 44 S.L.R. 180; 14 S.L.T. 545.

(430)

—Prejudice to employer—Proof—Onus.

Held that the onus lies on a workman of showing that his employer has not been prejudiced by the workman's failure to give due notice of the accident, but observed that the question does not necessarily fall to be disposed of by a preliminary inquiry.

Shearer v Miller & Sons, 1899, 2 F. 114; 37 S.L.R. 80; 7 S.L.T. 231.

(431)

—A workman who had been injured in the course of his employment did not give notice of the accident to his employer until after he had left his employment, and after three weeks had elapsed from the date of the accident. A claim for compensation subsequently made by the workman was dismissed by the sheriff, on the ground that the statutory notice had not been given, and that the defence was necessarily prejudiced by the delay in giving notice. The Court recalled the sheriff's interlocutor, on the ground that it was open to the claimant to prove that his employer was not in fact prejudiced in his defence by the want of notice.

M'Lean v Carse & Holmes, 1899, 1 F. 878; 36 S.L.R. 678; 7 S.L.T. 26.

(3) CLAIM FOR COMPENSATION.

(432)

Requisites of claim.

A "claim for compensation" under sec. 2 (1) of the Act must be a claim for a specific sum, and not merely an intimation of a demand for compensation.

Kilpatrick v Wemyss Coal Co., 1907 S.C. 320; 44 S.L.R. 255; 14 S.L.T. 695.

Bennett v Wordie & Co., 1899, 1 F. 855; 36 S.L.R. 643; 7 S.L.T. 10.

Maver v Park, 1905, 8 F. 250; 43 S.L.R. 191; 13 S.L.T. 618.

(433)

Application to arbitrator without previous claim.

Held that an application to the sheriff as arbitrator under the Act to fix the compensation is itself "a claim for compensation" within the meaning of the above section, and if brought within six months of the accident does not require to be preceded by any other form of claim. Opinion reserved, whether a letter received by the employers within the six months intimating that a claim was to be made under the Act, but not stating the amount claimed, was a sufficient "claim for compensation" under the section.

Fraser v Great North of Scotland Railway Co., 1901, 3 F. 908; 38 S.L.R. 653; 9 S.L.T. 96.

(434)

Failure to make claim within six months—Personal bar—Payment by employers.

A woman, who had been totally incapacitated through an injury received in the course of her employment, received from her employer for a period of about six months thereafter the sum of 10s. a week, which was 9d. a week in excess of the maximum under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

The payments were made without anything being said as to the Act. The employer having proposed to reduce the payments to 5s. a week, the woman, without having made any claim to compensation under the Act within six months of the date of the accident, presented an application for arbitration under the Act, contending that her employer was barred from pleading the omission to make a claim within the six months, in respect that the payment by him of 10s. a week amounted to a representation that he admitted her right to compensation under the Act. Held that there was nothing in the circumstances to take the case out of the strict rule of the statute, and consequently that the application for arbitration was incompetent.

O'Neil v Motherwell, 1907 S.C. 1076; 44 S.L.R. 764; 15 S.L.T. 155.

7. SEC. 4—SUB-CONTRACTING.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 8, supra.]

(1) RELATION OF UNDERTAKER AND CONTRACTOR.

(435)

Who is undertaker — Factory — Carting goods from factory to sale premises—Railway carter injured while carrying goods from factory to lorry.

The firm of C & Co. had a sausage factory in Glasgow and sale premises in London and Leeds. Under a contract with a railway company, the servants of the company called daily with carts at the factory to collect the manufactured goods for transmission by rail to the sale premises, charging for so doing an inclusive rate for collecting, railway carriage, and delivery. A railway carter was accidentally injured while engaged in taking goods from the factory to the railway lorry on the opposite side of the street from the factory, at a point about thirty-two feet distant. Held that C & Co. were the undertakers of the work on which the carter was employed when he was injured.

M'Govern v Cooper & Co., 1901, 4 F. 249; 39 S.L.R. 102; 9 S.L.T. 245.

(436)

Claim against undertakers and employers jointly and severally—Competency.

A workman, while engaged in the employment of a glass merchant in repairing the glass on the roof of a factory occupied by a firm of wool manufacturers, fell from a scaffold on the roof and was killed. In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, his widow and children claimed compensation from the glass merchant and the firm of wool manufacturers, "jointly and severally, or severally, or in such proportions between them as to the Court should seem just." Held that as the Act imposed no joint liability, the application, as directed against the two defenders jointly and severally, was incompetent, and application dismissed.

Herd v Summers, 1905, 7 F. 870; 42 S.L.R. 665; 13 S.L.T. 239.

(2) PART OF OR PROCESS IN UNDERTAKER'S BUSINESS.

(437)

Window cleaning of tailor's shop.

A window cleaner, while engaged, in the employment of a window cleaning company, in cleaning the windows of a workshop belonging to a firm of tailors, fell from one of the windows, and was injured. He claimed compensation from the tailors as being the undertakers within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. Held that the work of window cleaning was not a part of or process in the trade or business carried on by the respondents, and consequently, under sec. 4 of the Act, that they were not liable in compensation.

Dempster v Hunter & Sons, 1902, 4 F. 580; 39 S.L.R. 395; 9 S.L.T. 450.

(3) ANCILLARY OR INCIDENTAL TO UNDERTAKER'S BUSINESS.

(438)

Carting work.

A firm of carting contractors were under contract to do all the carting work in connection with a factory. One of the carters in the employment of the carting contractors was injured within the factory when engaged in carting work under this contract. He claimed compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, against the occupiers of the factory as the undertakers in the sense of the Act. Held that the carting work in which the pursuer was engaged at the time of the accident was not (within the meaning of sec. 4 of the Act) "merely ancillary or incidental to," but "was part of the trade or business carried on" by the defenders in the factory, and that they were liable to him in compensation under sec. 4 of the Act.

Bee v Ovens & Sons, 1900, 2 F. 439; 37 S.L.R. 328; 7 S.L.T. 362.

(439)

—Carter carrying goods from factory to lorry.

The firm of C & Co. had a sausage factory in Glasgow, and sale premises in London and Leeds. Under a contract with a railway company, the servants of the company called daily with carts at the factory to collect the manufactured goods for transmission by rail to the sale premises, charging for so doing an inclusive rate for collecting, transmission by rail, and delivery. A railway carter was accidentally injured while engaged in taking goods from the factory to the railway lorry on the opposite side of the street from the factory, at a point about 32 feet distant. Held that the carting was a part of C & Co.'s business, and not merely ancillary or incidental thereto.

M'Govern v Cooper & Co., 1901, 4 F. 249; 39 S.L.R. 102; 9 S.L.T. 245.

(440)

———Railway—Carting contract for collection and delivery of goods.

A railway company charged a through rate, inclusive of all charges for collection and delivery, for the conveyance of goods by their railway. A firm of carting contractors contracted with the railway company for the collection and delivery from and to the public of goods sent or to be sent by rail, receiving from the railway company, in payment of such collection and delivery, a proportion of the through rates paid by the public. A servant of the contractors, acting in pursuance of the contract between his employees and the railway company, was injured while he was engaged in transferring goods from a lorry to a goods train for transmission by rail, and died from the effects of the injury. Held that the work in which the deceased was engaged at the time of the accident in question was part of the work undertaken by the railway company, and not merely ancillary or incidental thereto, within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, sec. 4, and that the company were liable in compensation.

Greenhill v Caledonian Railway Co., 1900, 2 F. 736; 37 S.L.R. 524; 7 S.L.T. 458.

(441)

Railway—Erection of wall in railway cutting.

A workman when engaged in the employment of a builder in the erection of a stone and lime wall in a railway cutting, was run down and killed by a passing train. The wall, which the builder had contracted to build for the railway company, was intended to prevent earth on the bank of the cutting from falling down and obstructing the access to a signal-cabin belonging to the railway company. The workman's widow claimed compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, from the railway company, as the undertakers within the meaning of the Act. Held that the work on which the deceased was engaged was not part of the business of the railway company, but was merely ancillary or incidental thereto, and that the railway company was not liable.

Dundee and Arbroath Joint Railway Co. v Carlin, 1901, 3 F. 843; 38 S.L.R. 635; 9 S.L.T. 55.

(442)

———Fitting up signals for new siding.

A railway company employed a firm of signal makers to fit up the necessary signals for new sidings which they were constructing in connection with their existing line. While fitting the signal wires, a workman employed by the signal makers was knocked down by a passenger train on the main line and killed. Held that the work on which the deceased was engaged at the time of the accident was part of the business of the railway company, and was not merely ancillary or incidental thereto, and that the company were, in terms of sec. 4 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, liable as undertakers to pay compensation.

Burns v North British Railway Co., 1900, 2 F. 629; 37 S.L.R. 448; 7 S.L.T. 408.

(443)

Shipowner—Supplying coal for bunkering vessels.

Held that the supplying of coal for bunkering the vessels of a steamship company was not part of, but was ancillary to, the business of the company, in the sense of sec. 4 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Stewart v Dublin and Glasgow Steam Packet Co., 1902, 5 F. 57; 40 S.L.R. 41; 10 S.L.T. 343.

8. SEC. 6—REMEDIES AGAINST EMPLOYER AND THIRD PARTIES.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 10, supra.]

(444)

Election to proceed against person other than employer — "Employer" — Workman barred from claiming compensation from the undertaker under the Act.

A workman in the employment of carting contractors was injured while employed under a contract between the contractors and a railway company, who were undertakers in the sense of the Act. The workman, under reservation of all claims he might have for compensation against other parties, asked for and accepted from the contractors a payment in full of all claims against them under any statute or at common law in respect of the injury; and he thereafter presented a petition for compensation under the Act directed against the railway company as undertakers. Held that the word "employer" in the sense of sec. 6 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, meant "undertaker" in the sense of the Act, and consequently that the workman, in respect of the payment by the contractors, was barred by the terms of sec. 6 from thereafter claiming compensation under the Act from the undertakers.

Murray v North British Railway Co., 1904, 6 F. 540; 41 S.L.R. 383; 11 S.L.T. 746.

(445)

Option to workman to proceed against third party—Exercise of option—"Proceed at law."

An injured workman made a claim for damages at common law against a person other than his employers, and, without having taken legal proceedings, received a payment in settlement of his claim. Held, in a claim for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, by the workman against his employers, that he had "proceeded" against a third party in the sense of sec. 6 of the Act, and that, therefore, he had exercised his option and was barred from claiming compensation against his employers; and further, that a clause in the receipt granted by him reserving a right to claim compensation from his employer did not prevent this result.

Mulligan v Dick & Son, 1903, 6 F. 126; 41 S.L.R. 77; 11 S.L.T. 433.

9. SEC. 7 (1)—APPLICATION OF ACT.

(1) UNDERTAKERS.

[See 10 (6), infra.]

(2) ON, IN, OR ABOUT A RAILWAY.

(446)

Carter at goods station.

A, a carter in the employment of a railway company, was waiting with his horse and cart in one of the company's goods stations, when the horse from some unexplained cause started off, and A in endeavouring to stop it received injuries from which he died. Held that the accident arose out of and in the course of the employment of the deceased on, in, or about a railway.

Devine v Caledonian Railway Co., 1899, 1 F. 1105; 36 S.L.R. 877; 7 S.L.T. 99.

(447)

Carter leaving station.

A carter in the employment of contractors, who had a contract with a railway company for the cartage of goods to and from a station of the company, had delivered certain goods at the station. This finished his day's work, and as he was leaving the station with his horse and lorry, on the way to the contractors' stables, the horse took fright and bolted just outside the gate of the station, and, in consequence, the carter was injured by the horse and lorry dashing into a shop 315 yards distant. Held that the carter did not sustain his injuries "on, or in, or about" a railway, within the meaning of sec. 7 (1) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Bathgate v Caledonian Railway Co., 1901, 4 F. 313; 39 S.L.R. 246; 9 S.L.T. 334.

(448)

Siding belonging to trading company—Point three-quarters of a mile distant from junction with railway.

A trading company's premises were connected, by a siding, which was its own property, with a line of railway belonging to a railway company. The siding, which was not constructed or carried on under any Act of Parliament, was used solely for the traffic of the trading company, and for that purpose was used by the railway company by means of its own rolling-stock and servants. A servant of the railway company, while so employed, was accidentally injured at a point on the siding three-quarters of a mile from its junction with the line of railway. Held that the accident had not occurred "on, in, or about" a railway within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Brodie v North British Railway Co., 1900, 3 F. 75; 38 S.L.R. 38; 8 S.L.T. 248.

(449)

Smithy in station—Public traffic—Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, sec. 3.

A smith in the employment of a railway company was injured while shoeing horses belonging to the company. The smithy where the accident occurred, and the stables in which the horses were kept, were both situated in a yard within the area occupied by the railway company as a general station. The yard was separated from the station proper by a fence of sleepers and partly by the stable wall. The horses were used for collecting and delivering goods and for hauling trucks. Held that the smithy was "used for the purposes of public traffic," and formed part of the railway within the meaning of the definition in the Regulation of Railways Act, 1873, sec. 3, and that the company were liable in compensation to the injured workman.

Caledonian Railway Co. v Breslin, 1900, 2 F. 1158; 37 S.L.R. 873; 8 S.L.T. 125.

(3) ON, IN, OR ABOUT A FACTORY.

(450)

Railway carter injured while carrying goods from factory to lorry on opposite side of street.

The firm of C & Co. had a sausage factory in Glasgow and sale premises in London and Leeds. Under a contract with a railway company the servants of the company called daily with carts at the factory to collect the manufactured goods for transmission by rail to the sale premises, charging for so doing an inclusive rate for collecting, railway carriage, and delivery. A railway carter was injured while engaged in taking goods from the factory to the railway lorry on the opposite side of the street from the factory, at a point about 32 feet distant. Held that the accident occurred while the carter was employed in or about the factory.

M'Govern v Cooper & Co., 1901, 4 F. 249; 39 S.L.R. 102; 9 S.L.T. 245.

(451)

Carter injured through horse bolting 800 yards from factory.

A carter, in the employment of a grain merchant whose premises were a factory within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, was driving a horse and cart belonging to his employer, when at a distance of 800 yards from the employer's premises the horse bolted, with the result that the carter was injured.

Held that the accident did not occur in the course of employment "about" a factory within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and that the employer was not liable in compensation.

Kent v Porter, 1901, 38 S.L.R. 482.

(452)

Place 550 yards distant from factory.

A riveter was injured in the employment of a firm of ship-repairers, while repairing a ship in a public dock at a distance from his employers' factory of 550 yards in a direct line and about a mile by road. The employers' factory was not a shipbuilding yard. Held that the riveter was not, when he received the injuries, employed "about" a factory in the sense of the Act.

Barclay, Curle & Co. v M'Kinnon, 1901, 3 F. 436; 38 S.L.R. 321; 8 S.L.T. 404.
Appeal held incompetent, 1901, 3 F. (H.L.) 1; [1901] A.C. 269; 38 S.L.R. 611; 9 S.L.T. 84.

(453)

Shed leased by employers half a mile from factory—Factory and Workshops Act, 1878, sec. 93 (3).

A workman received injuries when he was engaged in the employment of a firm of engineers—whose works were a factory within the meaning of the Act—as one of a squad of men "working at a locomotive engine," the property of the defenders, in a shed belonging to and used by a railway company, of which shed the defenders were tenants under an agreement with the railway company. The shed was situated about half a mile from the defenders' works, and had no direct connection therewith by rail. The shed had previously been used on many occasions by the defenders for "similar purposes." No steam, water, or other mechanical power was used in the shed. Held that the claimant had not been employed "on, or in, or about" the defenders' factory, and was not entitled to compensation.

Ferguson v Barclay, Sons & Co., 1902, 5 F. 105; 40 S.L.R. 58; 10 S.L.T. 350.

(454)

Place 2 miles distant from factory.

A carter in the employment of the owners of a timber-finishing factory was driving a load of timber from the factory to a house in the course of being built, when, at a spot on the public road 2 miles distant from the factory, the cart was upset, and, falling upon the carter, caused his death. Held that the accident did not occur in the course of employment "about" the factory, and that the employers were not liable under the Act.

Bell & Sime v Whittton, 1899, 1 F. 942; 36 S.L.R. 754; 7 S.L.T. 59.

(455)

Wharf—Accident on public street outside wharf.

A labourer employed by a firm of ship-owners as a quay labourer at a wharf occupied by them was assisting in removing girders from the street immediately outside the wharf shed to the side of a steamship belonging to the employers, which was being loaded. The girders were lifted by a hand crane on a hand truck, by which they were conveyed to the ship's side. While removing the hand crane from one pile of girders to another pile, both of which lay in the street immediately outside the wharf shed, the labourer got jammed between the platform of the crane and one of the girders, and sustained injuries. The wharf was a factory within the meaning of the Act of 1897. Held that the fact that the accident happened on a public street immediately outside the wharf shed did not, per se, exclude a claim for compensation.

Strain v Sloan & Co., 1901, 3 F. 663; 38 S.L.R. 475; 8 S.L.T. 498.

(456)

Dock—Ship in dock.

Held (1) that a steamship lying in a dock is not a factory, and (2) that an apprentice boilermaker employed on a ship lying in a dock is not employed on, in, or about a factory even when the dock itself is a factory in the sense of sec. 7 of the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Low v Abernethy & Co., 1900, 2 F. 722; 37 S.L.R. 506; 7 S.L.T. 423.

Cf. Reid v Anchor Line, 1903, 5 F. 435; 40 S.L.R. 352; 10 S.L.T. 591, No. 478, infra.

(457)

Ship berthed in dock—Fireman cleaning and repairing boiler tubes—Factory and Workshops Act, 1901, sec. 104.

Coyne v Glasgow Steam Coasters Co., 1907 S.C. 112; 44 S.L.R. 118; 14 S.L.T. 482, No. 476, infra.

(4) ON, IN, OR ABOUT A MINE.

(458)

Private line of railway occupied by colliery.

A workman employed at a coal mine had finished his day's work and was proceeding home along a private line of railway occupied by the colliery when he was run over and killed at a point 230 yards distant from the place where he worked. Opinion (per Lord Justice-Clerk Macdonald) that the accident did not happen "on, in, or about" a mine in the sense of the Act. Opinion contra (per Lord Young).

Caton v Summerlee and Mossend Iron and Steel Co., 1902, 4 F. 989; 39 S.L.R. 762; 10 S.L.T. 204.

(459)

Siding adjacent to and belonging to mine—Work extraneous to proper business of employer—Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, sec. 75.

A colliery company, owners of a coal mine and siding connecting the mine with a main line of railway, entered into a contract with the owner of a sand-pit situated on the main line to carry sand from the sand-pit in railway wagons to the colliery siding, preparatory to removal by the railway company. The haulage was to be done by an engine belonging to the colliery company, and used in connection with their mine and siding. The siding was about 80 yards in length, and served only the one mine. The sand-pit was 300 or 400 yards from the siding. In the course of executing this contract the brakeman of the engine, who was in the employment of the colliery company, was killed while uncoupling wagons on the main line at or near the extremity of the siding. Held (1) that the employment of the deceased was locally "about" a mine in the sense of sec. 7, sub-sec. (1), of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897; and (2) that a claim for compensation arose although the work upon which the deceased was employed at the time of the accident was not part of the proper business of the colliery.

Monaghan v United Collieries, 1900, 3 F. 149; 38 S.L.R. 92; 8 S.L.T. 261.

(460)

Siding—Private railway from mine to main line—Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, sec. 75.

A mine was connected with a main line of railway by a private line, about a mile and a quarter in length. At a point in this private line, about 800 yards from the mine, there was a drum-house and sidings connected therewith. At this point an engine-driver in the employment of the mine-owners was accidentally killed in the course of his employment. In an application by his mother for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, held that the place where the accident occurred was on, or in, or about a "mine," within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Anderson v Lochgelly Iron and Coal Co., 1904, 7 F. 187; 42 S.L.R. 147; 12 S.L.T. 479.

(461)

Private road to mine—"About" mine—Coal Mines Regulation Act, 1887, sec. 75.

A workman employed as a carter at a coal mine sustained fatal injuries while transferring timber to a colliery cart from a railway wagon at a railway siding belonging to and in the occupation of a railway company. The place where the accident occurred was about 400 yards from the pit, the distance being made up of (1) railway siding (123 yards), (2) the breadth of a public road, and (3) a private cart road leading to the pit (259 yards). Held that the workman was not injured in the course of employment, "on, or in, or about" "a mine" within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, sec. 7.

Coylton Coal Co. v Davidson, 1905, 7 F. 727; 42 S.L.R. 596; 13 S.L.T. 99.

(5) ON, IN, OR ABOUT AN ENGINEERING WORK.

(462)

Repair of road—Steam-roller and water-cart employed in repairing road—Accident to driver of water-cart.

A section of the roads under the control of a district committee was being repaired by means of a steam-roller and water-cart, the water-cart being used to sprinkle the newly-laid surface before it was rolled. The work was stopped for dinner at a place where two roads joined. After the dinner interval the men in charge of the steam-roller proceeded to roll a portion of the road north of the junction for which water was not required, and the driver of the water-cart was directed to water a piece of road about a quarter of a mile south of the junction in order to prepare it for the roller. As the driver was yoking his horse it bolted, with the result that he was run over and killed. Held (1) that as a steam-roller was used for the purpose of repairing the road, the operation was an engineering work in the sense of sub-sec. (2) of sec. 7 of the Workmen's Compensation Act; and (2) that the driver of a water-cart was employed on that work at the time of the accident.

Middlemiss v Middle District Committee of the County Council of Berwickshire, 1900, 2 F. 392; 37 S.L.R. 297; 7 S.L.T. 330.

10. SEC. 7 (2)—DEFINITIONS.

(1) RAILWAY.

[See 9 (2), supra.]

(2) FACTORY.

STATUTES.

Act 1878—Factory and Workshop Act, 1878

—41 & 42 Vict. c. 16.

Act 1895—Factory and Workshop Act, 1895

—58 & 59 Vict. c. 37.

Act 1901—Factory and Workshop Act, 1901

—1 Edw. VII. c. 22.

(a) Generally.

(463)

Bottle-washing works—Act 1901, sec. 149 (1).

A storeman employed in the wine cellars of a hotel was injured by the breaking of a bottle which he was corking with his hand. In the cellars there were two small revolving brushes (worked, when desired, by water power from a tap), for washing the interior of bottles. The cellars were primarily used for storage, and the processes of corking and bottle-washing were ancillary to that object. Held that the cellars were not a "bottle-washing work," and therefore not a factory within the meaning of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, or of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Kavanagh v Caledonian Railway Co., 1903, 5 F. 1128; 40 S.L.R. 812; 11 S.L.T. 281.

(464)

A claim for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, by a spirit salesman against a spirit merchant set forth that the claimant received the injuries on account of which he claimed while engaged, in the respondent's service, washing bottles in a store which "is used for the purpose of bottling beer and washing beer bottles, and is a factory within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897." Held that under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, sec. 7, and the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, sec. 149, the claim was irrelevant, in respect that it did not set forth that steam, water, or other mechanical power was used in the respondent's store.

Campbell v M'Nee, 1903, 5 F. 1151; 40 S.L.R. 824; 11 S.L.T. 277.

(465)

Mechanical power used "in aid of" manufacturing process—Grindstone driven by gas engine—Act 1878, sec. 93, sub-sec. (3).

A workman employed in a stone-dressing yard claimed compensation from his employer under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. The premises occupied by the employer consisted of a yard in which the stones were dressed by manual labour, and included an engine-house where the workmen's tools were sharpened on a grindstone driven by a gas engine. No other mechanical power was used in the premises. The claimant, while dressing stones, was struck in the eye by a piece of metal from a chisel, and thereby sustained the injuries for which he claimed compensation. Held that the premises were premises in which mechanical power was "used in aid of the manufacturing process carried on therein," within the meaning of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1878, sec. 93, sub-sec. (3), and were therefore a factory within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, sec. 7, and that the claimant was entitled to compensation.

Petrie v Weir, 1900, 2 F. 1041; 37 S.L.R. 795; 8 S.L.T. 75.

(466)

Refuse dispatch works—Act 1878, sec. 93 (3).

In the "refuse dispatch works" of the Glasgow Corporation certain saleable parts of the city refuse were separated from the unsaleable part by processes in which steam power was used. The sums realised by the sales were applied in reducing the cost of the disposal of the refuse, which fell on the rates. Held that these works fell within the definition of "non-textile factory" in sec. 93 of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1878, in respect that the material in question was there adapted for sale, and afterwards sold, and that accordingly a workman in the employment of the Corporation was entitled to compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act of 1897 for injuries caused by an accident in the works.

Henderson v Corporation of Glasgow, 1900, 2 F. 1127; 37 S.L.R. 857; 8 S.L.T. 118.

(467)

Threshing machine in transit—Act 1878, sec. 93.

Held that a threshing machine and traction engine in transit to a place where they were to be used for threshing, the engine being connected with the machine for no purpose but that of haulage, did not constitute a "factory" within the meaning of the Factory and Workshops Act, 1878, or the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

George v Macdonald, 1901, 4 F. 190; 39 S.L.R. 136; 9 S.L.T. 267.

(468)

Workshop for repairs merely incidental to non-factory business—Act 1878, sec. 93.

A cable tramway company had a covered shed for their cars 550 feet long and 160 feet wide, and adjoining it a machine-room or workshop 75 feet long and 50 feet wide, which contained lathes, turning-machines, and boring machines, driven by two electric motors. This workshop was used solely for the repair of the grippers and other parts of the cars. The cars were always brought to the shed for repairs, and were repaired in it. No mechanical power was used in the shed except the power employed to move a travelling platform for moving the cars, which was derived from a steam-engine adjoining the shed. A car-driver was injured when employed in oiling his car in the shed at a point 374 feet distant from the machine-room. Held that the machine-room was a factory in the sense of the Act, and that the accident occurred on, in, or about a factory within the meaning of sec. 93, sub-sec. (3) (b), of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1878.

Mooney v Edinburgh and District Tramways Co., 1901, 4 F. 390; 39 S.L.R. 260; 9 S.L.T. 366.

(b) Docks, Wharves, Quays, Warehouses, and Shipbuilding Yards.

(469)

Dock—Dock in which no accident has taken place—Act 1895, secs. 18 and 23.

Question, whether the provisions of sec. 18 of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1895, applied to a dock, in which no accident had yet occurred, so as to make it a factory in the sense of sec. 7 of the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Bruce v Henry & Co., 1900, 2 F. 717; 37 S.L.R. 511; 7 S.L.T. 421.

(470)

Ship in dock.

Held that a steamship lying in a dock is not a factory in the sense of sec. 7 of the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Low v Abernethy & Co., 1900, 2 F. 722; 37 S.L.R. 506; 7 S.L.T. 423.

(471)

Ship in dock—Act 1878, sec. 93—Act 1895.

A, a dock labourer in the employment of a firm of stevedores, was injured while engaged in stowing cargo on board a ship in a public dock. On the occasion in question steam winches on board the ship were used for the purpose of loading her, but steam cranes which were attached to the quays of the dock were not so used. A claimed compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, from the stevedores as being the occupiers of a dock, which was a factory within the meaning of the Act. Held that the dock was not a factory in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Healy v Macgregor & Ferguson, 1900, 2 F. 634; 37 S.L.R. 454; 7 S.L.T. 402.

(472)

Machinery on board ship—Act 1895, sec. 23.

Held that sec. 23 of the Factory and Workshop Act of 1895 did not apply to machinery forming part of the apparatus of a ship lying at a quay, and employed in the process of unloading the ship, and therefore that such machinery so employed was not a "factory" in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Aberdeen Steam Trawling and Fishing Co. v Peters, 1899, 1 F. 786; 36 S.L.R. 573; 6 S.L.T. 378.

(473)

Machinery on board lighter—Act 1895, sec. 23.

A lighter and machinery thereon, the property of and worked by stevedores, was employed in raising goods from the hold to the deck of a vessel moored between the lighter and a quay, the goods being thereafter transferred to the quay, not by the stevedores, but by dock workmen. Held that sec. 23 of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1895, did not apply either to the lighter or to the machinery thereon, and that therefore they did not constitute a "factory" in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897; and further, that the process which was being performed by the lighter and its machinery was not one of unloading to a quay in the sense of the Act of 1895.

Laing v Young & Leslie, 1900, 3 F. 31; 38 S.L.R. 29; 8 S.L.T. 230.

(474)

Shipbuilding yard—Dock—Act 1897, sec. 7—Act 1878, sec. 93—Act 1895, sec. 23.

A case for appeal under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, set forth the following facts:—Rodger & Co., shipbuilders, contracted to build a steamship, including her engines. After she had been launched at Rodger & Co.'s shipbuilding yard she was taken to a public dock to have her engines erected and fitted by Hall & Co., with whom Rodger & Co. had contracted for the engines. While she was lying in the dock having her engines erected and fitted, the claimant, John Jackson, a workman in the employment of Hall & Co., was injured while working in the steamship. It was not stated in the case that the dock in question was one to which any provision of the Factory Acts had been applied, or that any steam, water, or other mechanical power was used within the dock in aid of the work that was being carried out on the steamship. Held that, on the facts stated in the case, the dock in question was not a factory in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. Held also that on the facts stated the dock was not a shipbuilding yard in the sense of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1878.

Jackson v Rodger & Co., 1900, 2 F. 533; 37 S.L.R. 390; 7 S.L.T. 363.

Cf. Reid v Anchor Line, 1903, 5 F. 435; 40 S.L.R. 352; 10 S.L.T. 591, No. 478, infra.

(475)

Ship in dry dock undergoing repair—Act 1895, sec. 23.

Shipowners took a ship into a dry dock, which they had hired for the purpose of repairing the ship. A workman, who had served as ship's carpenter on board the ship during one voyage, and was engaged for her next voyage, in the interval between the voyages was employed by the shipowners in the work of repairing the ship. While engaged in unshackling the ship's cable, in order to turn it end for end, he fell into the dock, and sustained injuries from which he died. Held that when the accident happened he was employed as a workman in the repair of a ship in or about a "factory," in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and that the shipowners were liable to pay compensation.

Cayzer, Irvine & Co. v Dickson, 1905, 7 F. 723; 42 S.L.R. 591; 13 S.L.T. 155.

(476)

Ship berthed in dock—Fireman cleaning and repairing boiler tubes—Act 1901, sec. 104.

A fireman, employed in a steamship, was injured on board the ship while she was berthed in a dock where she had come for the purpose of loading. In a claim against his employers under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, he averred that at the time of the accident he "was engaged in repairing and cleaning the boilers, tubes, engines, and fittings" of the ship, and that while he "was engaged sponging the tubes" he fell and was injured. He further averred that at the time of the accident his employers had the occupation of the dock as a "factory" within the meaning of the Act, and that the work at which he was engaged was an "undertaking" within the meaning of the Act. Held that the claimant had not relevantly averred that the dock had, in the sense of the Act, become a factory, nor that he had been injured while engaged in factory work, the work alleged not being such repairs as required the docking of the ship, but merely the ordinary work of the ship.

Coyne v Glasgow Steam Coasters Co., 1907 S.C. 112; 44 S.L.R. 118; 14 S.L.T. 482.

(477)

Wharf—Act 1895, sec. 23.

A labourer employed by a firm of shipowners as a quay labourer at a wharf occupied by them was injured while assisting in removing girders from the street immediately outside the wharf shed to the side of a steamship belonging to the employers which was being loaded. Held that as one or more of the provisions in sec. 23 of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1895, applied to the wharf, it was a factory within the meaning of the Act of 1897.

Strain v Sloan & Co., 1901, 3 F. 663; 38 S.L.R. 475; 8 S.L.T. 498.

(478)

Quay—Machinery on board ship—Act 1895, sec. 23.

A shipowner was unloading a vessel at a quay, by raising the cargo by means of a steam winch derrick on board the vessel, from the hold to the deck, whence it was wheeled over gangways to the quay. In the course of unloading a workman employed by the shipowner fell from a ladder in the ship and was killed. Held that when the accident happened the workman was employed on, or in, or about a "factory," in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Reid v Anchor Line, 1903, 5 F. 435; 40 S.L.R. 352; 10 S.L.T. 591.

(479)

Shipbuilding yard—Dock—Act 1878, sec. 93—Act 1895, sec. 23.

A case for appeal under the Workmen's Compensation Act set forth that the claimant made the following averments:—Rodger & Co., shipbuilders, contracted to build a steamship, including her engines. After she had been launched at Rodger & Co.'s shipbuilding yard, she was taken to a public dock to have her engines erected and fitted by Hall & Co., with whom Rodger & Co. had contracted for the engines. While she was lying in the dock having her engines erected and fitted, the claimant, who was a workman in the employment of Hall & Co., was injured while working on the ship. It was admitted that no machinery driven by steam, water, or other mechanical power was used in the work on which the workman was engaged at the time of the accident. The question of law was whether, on the assumption that the claimant's averments were true, Rodger & Co. "were, within the meaning of sec. 7 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, the occupiers of the dock as a factory, which is a shipbuilding yard, on the occasion" of the accident. The Court answered the question in the affirmative.

Jackson v Rodger & Co., 1899, 1 F. 1053; 36 S.L.R. 851; 7 S.L.T. 76.

(480)

Act 1878, sec. 93.

Question, whether the definition of shipbuilding yard given in the Factory and Workshop Act, 1878, sec. 93, includes places where ships are repaired but not built.

Low v Abernethy & Co., 1900, 2 F. 722; 37 S.L.R. 506; 7 S.L.T. 423.

(481)

Dock near shipbuilding yard.

Opinions that a public dock, fifteen miles distant from a shipbuilding yard, on the same river, was not near the shipbuilding yard within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, sec. 7, sub-sec. (3).

Jackson v Rodger & Co., 1899, 1 F. 1053; 36 S.L.R. 851; 7 S.L.T. 76.

(482)

Fact or law.

Held that the question whether a dock two miles distant from a shipbuilding yard was near the yard was a question of circumstances, and not a question of law, and was therefore not a question which the Court had jurisdiction to decide on a case stated for appeal under par. 14 (c) of the second schedule of the Act.

M'Millan v Barclay, Curle & Co., 1899, 2 F. 91; 37 S.L.R. 61; 7 S.L.T. 214.

(483)

Warehouse.

A trader carried on the business of a dry-salter in premises consisting of two rooms on the ground floor and two cellars on the basement. The business, to the extent of between 85 and 90 per cent., consisted in retail sales; and in one of the rooms there was a counter over which the goods were sold. In order to meet this trade, goods were stored on the premises, including casks of oil, all of which were open and ready for the delivery of small quantities; casks of white lead, of which there were generally ten or twelve on the premises, four, one of each quality, being open for retail sales; small parcels of saltpetre, soda, and varnish paints, none of which were sold in large quantities, and starch, which was sold in 56-lb. cases. A lorryman was injured while carrying a cask of white lead, weighing 2 cwts., from the premises to his lorry. Held that the premises were not a warehouse within the meaning of sec. 7 (2) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and that the workman was not entitled to compensation.

Colvine v Anderson & Gibb, 1902, 5 F. 255; 40 S.L.R. 231; 10 S.L.T. 482.

(484)

Uncovered yard used for storage of material—Act 1901, sec. 104 (1).

A workman was injured while breaking stones in the employment of the Corporation of Perth by an accident which occurred in a yard in Perth belonging to the Corporation. The yard was uncovered, but at the side of it was a large shed in which implements were kept and work was done in wet weather. The yard was principally used to store materials for the repair of roads and drains and for other works executed by the Corporation either on its own account or to a small extent for private individuals, and it contained bings of stone which the workman was employed in breaking at the time of the accident. No mechanical power was used in the yard. Held that the yard was not a warehouse in the ordinary sense of the word, and therefore not a factory within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Opinions that the reference to warehouses in sec. 104 (1) of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, was not to warehouses in general, but merely to warehouses used in connection with docks.

M'Ewan v Magistrates of Perth, 1905, 7 F. 714; 42 S.L.R. 456; 12 S.L.T. 846.

(3) MINE.

[See 9 (4), supra.]

(4) ENGINEERING WORK.

(485)

Air compressor lifted on to lorry.

An air compressor, which had been used in connection with a new bridge, was sold. The purchaser employed A to lift the compressor, which was lying on a quay at Glasgow, and put it on a lorry. This work was done by means of a hydraulic jack. Held that the lifting of the compressor not being a work of construction, alteration, or repair, was not an engineering work in the sense of the Act.

Rae v Fraser, 1899, 1 F. 1017; 36 S.L.R. 782; 7 S.L.T. 73.

(486)

Haycutter fitted up in customer's premises—Haycutter connected to electrically driven shaft to test working.

A firm of engineers sold a hay-cutting machine to a customer and undertook to fit it up in the customer's premises and test the working. In the process of fitting up the haycutter one of the engineers' workmen, for the purpose of testing its working, connected it with a revolving shaft driven by electricity, forming part of the customer's plant already in the premises, and while doing so was injured. Held that the haycutter was an engineering work in the sense of the Act.

Reid v P. R. Fleming & Co., 1901, 3 F. 1000; 38 S.L.R. 720; 9 S.L.T. 113.

(487)

Repairing boiler in spinning mill—No mechanical power used.

A workman in the employment of a firm of boilermakers was injured in course of repairing a boiler in a spinning mill belonging to a third person. The work in which he was engaged was all done by hand, and no mechanical power was being used, although there was steam power on the premises available for use. Held that the work was not an engineering work in the sense of the Act.

Cooper & Greig v Adam, 1905, 7 F. 681; 42 S.L.R. 562; 13 S.L.T. 86.

(488)

Repair of road—Steam roller employed in repairing road.

Middlemiss v Middle District Committee of the County Council of Berwickshire, 1900, 2 F. 392; 37 S.L.R. 297; 7 S.L.T. 330, No. 462, supra.

v 49

(5) BUILDINGS—CONSTRUCTION, &C., OF.

(489)

Building exceeding thirty feet in height—Part of building below ground—Foundations—Question of fact or law.

A wash-house, built to the order of the police commissioners of a burgh, was 30 feet 5½ inches in height above its foundation. Immediately above the foundation was a basement floor 6 feet below the level of the surrounding ground which contained pipes in connection with the wash-house. The floor of the wash-house was 6 feet 4 inches above the basement floor. Held that the question whether a building exceeded 30 feet in height was, in proceedings under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, one of fact for the determination of the arbitrator. Opinions that the building exceeded 30 feet in height in the sense of sec. 7 (1) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. Question, whether in estimating the height of a building for the purposes of the Act, the foundations are to be taken into account.

Halstead v Alex. Thomson & Sons, 1901, 3 F. 668; 38 S.L.R. 473.

(490)

Building constructed by a scaffolding—Scaffolding not in use nor erected at time of accident—Question of fact or law.

In the construction of a building, scaffolding consisting of trestles and planks was used from time to time from the beginning to the end of the job. During the construction an accident happened to a workman, at a time when the scaffolding, although its component parts were there, was neither in use nor erected. Held that at the time of the accident the building was being constructed by means of a scaffolding in terms of sec. 7 (1) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Opinions that, in proceedings under the Act, the question whether or not at the time of the accident the building was being constructed by means of a scaffolding, was one of fact to be determined by the arbitrator.

Halstead v Alex. Thomson & Sons, 1901, 3 F. 668; 38 S.L.R. 473.

(491)

Demolition of building—Use of machinery driven by steam.

Held that the Act applies to employment about a building on which machinery driven by mechanical power is being used for the purpose of the demolition thereof, although the building does not exceed 30 feet in height.

Murnin v Calderwood, 1899, 1 F. 862; 36 S.L.R. 648; 7 S.L.T. 16.

(492)

Removal of plant from building—Hole made in main wall of building—Scaffolding used in removing plant.

Bell v Adam & Co., 1906, 44 S.L.R. 155; 14 S.L.T. 494, No. 496, infra.

(493)

"Scaffolding"—Painter's ladder.

Held that a ladder used in the ordinary way by a painter in painting beams in a building over 30 feet in height was not a "scaffolding" within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, sec. 7. McDonald v Hobbs & Samuel, 1899, 2 F. 3; 37 S.L.R. 4; 7 S.L.T. 157.

(494)

Ladder.

A workman was killed by falling from a ladder while he was engaged in silicating the wall of a house over 30 feet in height. This work was generally done by slaters by means of a scaffold suspended by a rope from the roof of the house, but where the work was limited (as it was in the case in question) to particular portions of the house it was frequently done by painters by means of ladders, which were in that case much more convenient. Three painters, including the deceased, were engaged in the work in question, and they used three ladders from 16 to 60 feet in length. It did not appear that the ladders were fastened to the wall or to each other, or that they were otherwise than placed against the wall in the usual way. Held that the ladder from which the deceased fell was not a scaffolding within the meaning of the Act.

Campbell v Sellars, 1903, 5 F. 900; 40 S.L.R. 643; 11 S.L.T. 89.

(6) UNDERTAKERS.

(495)

Factory—Occupier—Trial of machinery under control of makers—Act 1878, sec. 93—Act 1895, secs. 4 and 23.

A firm of engineers had erected and practically completed certain ice-making and refrigerating machinery in a building belonging to a cold storage and ice company. While the engineers were making a "preliminary run" for the purpose of testing the machinery, one of their employees engaged in the work was killed. Held that even if the ice company's building, or the refrigerating machinery, was a factory, the engineers were not the occupiers of it, and therefore were not undertakers within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Purves v Sterne & Co., 1900, 2 F. 887; 37 S.L.R. 696.

(496)

Occupier—Contractor removing plant from factory.

A firm of coppersmiths were dismantling and removing a vacuum pan from a building over 30 feet in height which was used as a sugar refinery. In order to facilitate operations a scaffolding had been erected, portions of the floors removed, and an opening made in the main wall of the building. A workman employed by the firm of coppersmiths was injured while lowering a portion of the pan. Held (1) that, assuming the building to be a factory the workman's employers were not occupiers, and, as such,

"undertakers" in the sense of sec. 7 (2); and (2) that the building was not being constructed, or repaired, or demolished with the aid of a scaffolding in the sense of sec. 7 (1).

Bell v Adam & Co., 1906, 44 S.L.R. 155; 14 S.L.T. 494.

(497)

Warehouse—Occupier—Purchaser of goods stored in warehouse.

The owner of 600 bolls of peas lying in bulk in a grain store belonging to a warehouseman sold 200 bolls thereof to a firm, who received a delivery order therefore. The grain store was a "warehouse" within the meaning of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901. Held that the purchasers were not "occupiers" of the store in the sense of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1901, sec. 104, and that the dependants of a carter in their employment, who was killed by the fall of a bag while taking delivery of part of the peas at the store, were not entitled to compensation from his employers under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Ramsay v Mackie, 1904, 7 F. 106; 42 S.L.R. 114; 12 S.L.T. 468.

(498)

Occupier—Workman sent to repair boiler in spinning mill.

A workman in the employment of a firm of boilermakers was injured in the course of repairing a boiler in the spinning mill belonging to a third person. Held that, as the spinning mill was not a factory occupied by the workman's employers, it was not a factory of which they were the undertakers in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Cooper & Greig v Adam, 1905, 7 F. 681; 42 S.L.R. 562; 13 S.L.T. 86.

(499)

Occupier—Workman sent to do work in repair of soap work.

A workman in the employment of the occupier of an ironfoundry was sent, in the course of his employment, to do some work in the repair of a soap work, and while so engaged he fell from a scaffolding and was killed. Held that the ironfounder was not, with respect to the accident in question, an undertaker within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act.

Malcolm v M'Millan, 1900, 2 F. 525; 37 S.L.R. 383; 7 S.L.T. 364.

(500)

Dock—Occupier—Owners of ship lying in dock.

Held that the mere fact of a steamship lying in a dock, while a workman employed by a firm of engineers was engaged in executing repairs on the boiler, did not make the firm occupiers of the dock in such a sense as to make them undertakers within the meaning of sec. 7, sub-sec. (1), of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Low v Abernethy & Co., 1900, 2 F. 722; 37 S.L.R. 506; 7 S.L.T. 423.

(501)

Dock—Occupier—Ship unloading in dock—Shipping agents in charge of unloading.

A workman in the employment of shipping agents, who had contracted with the owners of a vessel lying in a dock to load her, while engaged in removing goods from the quay to the vessel, fell into the hold and was killed. In a claim by the widow of the workman against his employers for compensation, held that the shipping agents were not the occupiers of the dock, and were therefore not undertakers in the sense of sec. 7 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, and that they were not liable for compensation under the Act.

Bruce v Henry & Co., 1900, 2 F. 717; 37 S.L.R. 511; 7 S.L.T. 421.

(502)

Quay—Occupier.

A coal company contracted with a steam packet company to supply the steamers of the packet company with bunker coal free on board at Glasgow harbour. The coal company contracted with a coal porter to put such bunker coal on board at a particular berth of the harbour, and the coal porter employed labourers, for whose wages he alone was responsible, to do the work of loading. One of the labourers so employed by the coal porter, after having been engaged in bringing coal from the coal company's carts and laying it upon the breast of the quay ready to be shipped, was awaiting the arrival of one of the packet company's steamers when he fell into the river and was drowned. Held that assuming the quay to be a factory, the coal company were not (on the occasion in question) the occupiers of the quay, or of any part of it, within the meaning of sec. 23 of the Factory and Workshop Act, 1895; and therefore that they were not the undertakers of the employment at which the labourer met his death.

Stewart v Darnagavil Coal Co., 1902, 4 F. 425; 39 S.L.R. 302; 9 S.L.T. 378.

(503)

Quay — Occupier — Exclusive use of berth.

The D Steamship Co. had a particular berth in a harbour allotted to them for loading and unloading their vessels, and had an office there and a staff of servants and clerks constantly employed in the receipt and discharge of cargo. The same berth was also used by the M Steamship Co., who also had an office there, and when not required by either of these companies the harbour-master allowed occasional vessels to load or discharge at the berth. A firm of coalowners who had the contract for coaling the vessels of the D Co. employed a sub-contractor to trim the coal on the quay opposite the berth, and to put it on board the vessels. While so trimming the coal with a view to putting it on board one of the D Co.'s vessels, which had not yet arrived at the berth, a servant of the sub-contractor fell off the quay and was drowned. The vessel arrived at the berth an hour after the accident. Held that the D Steamship Co. were not the "occupiers" of the quay in the sense of sec. 7 (2) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and consequently were not liable in compensation to the dependants of the deceased as "undertakers" in the sense of the section.

Stewart v Dublin and Glasgow Steam Packet Co., 1902, 5 F. 57; 40 S.L.R. 41; 10 S.L.T. 343.

(504)

Quarry—Landed proprietor working quarry on his own estate for estate purposes.

Question (per Lord M'Laren), whether a landed proprietor who worked a quarry on his estate for estate purposes was an undertaker in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Paterson v Lockhart, 1905, 7 F. 954; 42 S.L.R. 755; 13 S.L.T. 298.

(505)

Engineering work—Haycutter—Fitting up haycutter in customer's premises—Employers of workman sent to fit up haycutter.

A firm of engineers sold a hay-cutting machine to a customer, and undertook to fit it up in the customer's premises, and test its working before delivery. In the process of fitting up the haycutter one of the engineers' workmen, for the purpose of testing its working, connected it with a revolving shaft driven by electricity forming part of the customer's plant already in the premises, and while doing so was injured. Held that the haycutter was an engineering work in the sense of the Act, that the workman's employers were the undertakers for its construction.

Reid v P. R. Fleming & Co., 1901, 3 F. 1000; 38 S.L.R. 720; 9 S.L.T. 113.

(506)

Building—Construction—Owner of building not taking part in work.

Opinions as to whether the owner of a building who contracts with some one to execute repairs on the building, and does not engage in the work himself, is an "undertaker" in the sense of the Act.

McGregor v Dansken, 1899, 1 F. 536; 36 S.L.R. 393; 6 S.L.T. 308.

(507)

Construction—Construction partly by owner—Act 1897, secs. 4 and 7.

Held that a building contractor who was erecting a tenement for himself, doing the work partly by his own workmen and partly by trading firms, with whom he had contracts for particular branches of the work, was the undertaker of the whole building within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and was therefore liable in compensation in respect of injuries to a workman employed in the construction of the building by one of the trading firms.

Stalker v Wallace, 1900, 2 F. 1162; 37 S.L.R. 898; 8 S.L.T. 134.

(508)

Construction — Sub-contractor — Ornamental carving work—Right of principal contractor to indemnity against sub-contractor—Accident due to fault of principal undertaker—Secs. 1, 4, and 7.

Held that a sub-contractor for ornamental carving work, part of the design of a building in course of construction, was an "undertaker" within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, sec. 7, and liable to a workman employed by him, and therefore liable under sec. 4 to indemnify the principal contractor for compensation paid by him to the workman. Question, whether the fact that an accident was due to the fault of a principal contractor would be a good defence to a claim by him for indemnity against a sub-contractor under sec. 4.

Topping v Rhind, 1904, 6 F. 666; 41 S.L.R. 573; 12 S.L.T. 88.

(509)

Construction—Wash-house built to order of police commissioners of burgh—Whether commissioners or tradesmen were undertakers.

A wash-house was built to the order of the police commissioners. Opinion that the undertakers of the building were the police commissioners, not the tradesmen employed by them.

Halstead v Alex. Thomson & Sons, 1901, 3 F. 668; 38 S.L.R. 473.

(7) WORKMAN.

(510)

Contractor.

Held that a "contractor" has no claim to compensation under the Act.

M'Gregor v Dansken, 1899, 1 F. 536; 36 S.L.R. 393; 6 S.L.T. 308.

(511)

Workman or contractor — Piecework—Member of squad.

A firm of shipbuilders entered into an arrangement with a squad of skilled workmen called "platers," under which the latter did certain work in connection with "frames," for which they were paid weekly by the hands of their leader a fixed sum per frame. This sum the squad, after paying the wages of certain helpers or unskilled workmen employed by them, divided among themselves. The squad were bound to work continuously all the working hours recognised in the yard, and when these were exceeded they were paid a certain sum per hour extra. Their work was done in the yard, and was supervised generally by the foreman of the shipbuilders. The necessary plant and materials were supplied by the shipbuilders. The squad were subject to printed rules and regulations "to be observed by the workmen in the employment of" the shipbuilders. Held that a member of the squad was a workman in the employment of the shipbuilders as employers in the sense of the Act.

M'Cready v Dunlop & Co., 1900, 2 F. 1027; 37 S.L.R. 779; 8 S.L.T. 91.

(512)

Piecework.

Hayden and Penman, two labourers, by written offer and acceptance agreed with a quarry master to excavate the "tirr" or surface earth from a new part of the quarry, at the rate of 7½d. per cubic yard. Penman was then working at the quarry, but Hayden had not previously worked there. They were joined by a third man on the footing that he should get an equal share of what they received for the work. The three did the work by their own manual labour, with the assistance of a man whom they engaged at fixed wages. The quarry master supplied the tools and plant, but exercised no control over the method of working, and the men were not tied down to hours. Payments to account were made by the quarry master to Hayden and Penman (the receipts being signed by Hayden) practically weekly, the amount of the payment being calculated on a rough estimate of the work done. Held that Hayden was not a "workman" within the meaning of the Act, but was an independent contractor.

Hayden v Dick, 1902, 5 F. 150; 40 S.L.R. 95; 10 S.L.T. 380.

(513)

An estate owner, through his factor, engaged a man to quarry from a quarry on the estate stone blocks for wire fences and farm buildings to meet estate requirements, in such quantities as the factor should direct. He was to be paid 5s. a day, though in fact he was not paid daily, and might employ assistants to be paid through him at the same rate. The estate forester visited the quarry, and kept a note of the days on which the quarryman worked. The tools were supplied partly by the quarryman and partly by the estate. He was told where he was to work, but was free to choose the part of the quarry where the excavation was to be made. Held that the claimant was a servant or workman in the sense of the Act.

Opinions reserved (per Lord President Dunedin and Lord M'Laren) whether a workman could at the same time be a contractor and a workman in the sense of the Act.

Paterson v Lockhart, 1905, 7 F. 954; 42 S.L.R. 755; 13 S.L.T. 298.

(8) DEPENDANTS.

(a) Persons Entitled to Sue for Solatium.

(514)

Grandchildren.

Held that grandchildren whose father was dead and who were dependent upon the earnings of their paternal grandfather were tion Act, 1897, sec. 7, and compensation refused.

Robert Addie & Sons' Collieries v Trainer, 1904, 7 F. 115; 42 S.L.R. 85; 12 S.L.T. 460.

(523)

Wife—Wife living apart from husband, and not supported by him.

Held that a woman who had been for over thirteen years living apart from her husband, and was supported by an illegitimate son, was not wholly or in part dependent on the earnings of her husband, and was not entitled to compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Turners, Limited v Whitefield, 1904, 6 F. 822; 41 S.L.R. 631; 12 S.L.T. 131.

(524)

Wife living apart from husband and not supported by him—Pupil child living with wife and supported by her.

In 1895 a wife voluntarily left her husband, and a month afterwards gave birth to a child. By means of her earnings as a weaver, and the assistance of the relatives with whom she lived, she supported herself and child, never asking for and never receiving alimony from her husband. In 1907 her husband was killed by accident in the course of his employment as a workman. Held that neither the wife nor the child were either wholly or in part dependent upon the earnings of the workman at the time of his death.

Lindsay v Stewart M'Glashen & Son, 1903 S.C. 762; 45 S.L.R. 559; 15 S.L.T. 1011.

(525)

Wife deserted by husband, and unable to support herself.

In July, 1901, a husband deserted his wife, and thereafter did not contribute anything to her support. She suffered from chronic bronchitis and varicose veins to an extent which incapacitated her from work requiring ordinary exertion, and she became unable to do anything for her own support. Her husband having in 1904, in the course of his employment, sustained injuries from which he died, she claimed compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, from his employers. Held that the claimant was dependent on the earnings of her husband at the time of his death, and was entitled to compensation under the Act.

Sneddon v Addie & Sons' Collieries, 1904, 6 F. 992; 41 S.L.R. 826; 12 S.L.T. 229.

(526)

Whether wife wholly or in part dependent.

A workman had for the three years immediately preceding his death lived separate from his wife. His contribution to her support did not exceed £5 per annum. The wife had no regular means of livelihood. In addition to what she received from her husband she was supported by her earnings from occasional employment, and by contributions from her relatives. Held that the wife was wholly dependent on her husband at the time of his death.

Cunningham v M'Gregor & Co., 1901, 3 F. 775; 38 S.L.R. 574; 9 S.L.T. 36.

(527)

Whether wife wholly or in part dependent—Foreigner.

In December, 1903, a Pole came to Scotland, where he found employment as a miner, and, in the course of that employment, was killed on 15th August, 1904. During that period he remitted £1 to his wife, who remained in Poland, and whose means of livelihood during her husband's absence consisted—in addition to the £1 sent by her husband—of her earnings as an outdoor labourer at a wage of 9d. a day, and of contributions from her father. The sheriff found that the wife was wholly dependent upon her husband. Held (1) that the wife was a "dependant" within the meaning of sec. 7 (2) (b) of the Act; but (2) that she was not wholly dependent upon her husband's earnings at the time of his death, and case remitted to the sheriff.

Baird & Co. v Birsztan, 1906, 8 F. 438; 43 S.L.R. 300; 13 S.L.T. 812.

FIRST SCHEDULE.

11. "WHERE DEATH RESULTS FROM THE INJURY"—First Schedule (1) (a).

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 16, supra.]

(528)

Death from disease—Action of disease accelerated by accident.

On 28th February, 1902, a workman who was affected with nephritis, a disease which was likely to prove fatal to him, though probably not for a few years, received an injury from an accident in the course of his employment which so lowered his system that the disease from which he was suffering was accelerated in its operation, and that in consequence he died on 8th May, 1902. Held that the workman's death resulted from the injury.

Golder v Caledonian Railway Co., 1902, 5 F. 123; 40 S.L.R. 89; 10 S.L.T. 373.

(529)

Suicide—Workman who had become insane in consequence of accident.

The widow of a workman, John Malone, who had committed suicide, brought a claim against his employers for compensation for his death. She averred—The deceased, who had already lost the sight of his left eye in the course of his employment, received an injury to his right eye by a splinter of iron penetrating it. As a result of the injury the sight of that eye began to fail, and eventually he became almost blind. "Owing to the gradual loss of sight in his right eye and consequent blindness, the said John Malone's mind became affected and he became insane, and on 20th August, 1907, he committed suicide in his house at 401 Rutherglen Road. The death of the said John Malone was due to the foresaid accident." Proof allowed.

Malone v Cayzer, Irvine & Co., 1908 S.C. 479; 45 S.L.R. 351; 15 S.L.T. 837.

12. INCAPACITY FOR WORK—First Schedule (1) (b) and (2).

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 17, supra.]

(530)

Wage-earning capacity—Workman earning same wages as before accident.

Held that the test of a workman's right to compensation was the diminution of his earning capacity in the future by reason of the injury received, and that the mere fact that at the date of his claim he earned the same wages as he did before the accident did not necessarily exclude the claim under the Act.

Freeland v Macfarlane, Lang & Co., 1900, 2 F. 832; 37 S.L.R. 599; 7 S.L.T. 456.

(531)

Workman earning same wages as before accident—Partial incapacity.

Opinion that while the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, first schedule (2), requires an arbitrator in fixing the amount of a weekly payment to have regard to the amount of the average weekly earnings of the workman before the accident, and to the average amount he is earning after the accident, the latter is not conclusive as to the workman's wage-earning capacity.

Clelland v Singer Manufacturing Co., 1905, 7 F. 975; 42 S.L.R. 757; 13 S.L.T. 319.

(532)

Amount of compensation.

Held (1) that under sched. 1, sub-sec. (2), of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, an injured workman is not entitled as a matter of right to a weekly payment representing the whole of the difference between his average wage before and his average wage after the accident, such difference being merely one of the elements which the arbitrator is to take into account in fixing the amount of compensation; but (2) that such difference is not subject to the limitation of 50 per cent. imposed by sched. 1, sub-sec. (1) (b), and may therefore be competently awarded in toto by the arbitrator as compensation.

Geary v William Dixon, Limited, 1899, 4 F. 1143; 36 S.L.R. 640; 7 S.L.T. 12.

13. "WHERE . . . INCAPACITY FOR WORK RESULTS FROM THE INJURY"—First Schedule (1) (b).

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 18, supra.]

(533)

Disease contributing to incapacity.

A miner, whose right eye was sound, but whose left eye was affected by disease, was able to work underground. In the course of his employment he met with an accident to his sound eye which so injured it as to render it of little use. Owing to the condition of the diseased eye he was thereafter unable to resume his work underground. It was proved that the condition of the diseased eye was neither caused nor aggravated by the accident. Held that the workman was suffering from incapacity resulting from the accident.

Lee v William Baird & Co., 1908 S.C. 905; 45 S.L.R. 717; 16 S.L.T. 135.

(534)

Deficient natural vigour—Age.

Where it appeared from the certificate of a medical practitioner appointed under the Act that a workman had recovered from injuries, in respect of which weekly payments were being made to him, and that partial disability for work from which he was suffering was not connected with the injuries but was the result of deficient natural vigour of constitution together with advancing years, held that the workman was not entitled to make any further claim for compensation.

M'Avan v Boase Spinning Co., 1901, 3 F. 1048; 38 S.L.R. 772; 9 S.L.T. 152.

(535)

Age—Decrease of wages in trade.

The employers of a miner who had been totally incapacitated for work by an accident voluntarily paid him compensation for nearly two years, at a weekly rate fixed on the footing that he was entitled to half his average weekly earnings before the accident. The employers having refused to continue these payments at the same rate, the workman presented an application to have the weekly payments fixed by arbitration. Held that in fixing the weekly payments it was incompetent for the arbitrator to take into account the facts (1) that the miner had reached an age (sixty-four) when full wages as a miner could not be earned, and (2) that there had been a general fall in the rate of miners' wages subsequent to the accident.

Jamieson v Fife Coal Co., 1903, 5 F. 958; 40 S.L.R. 704; 11 S.L.T. 201.

(536)

General fall of wages—Partial incapacity.

A workman who had lost a hand by an accident received compensation from his employers until he was again taken into their employment at his former wage of 18s. 6d. a week. Subsequently, owing to a general fall in wages and not to any supervening incapacity on the workman's part, his wages were reduced to 16s. 7d. Held that he was not entitled to compensation in respect of the diminution in his earnings.

Black v Merry & Cuninghame, 1909 S.C. 1150; 46 S.L.R. 812; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 16.

(537)

Refusal to submit to treatment.

In a case stated under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, held that an employer was not bound to continue weekly payments to an injured workman when the continuance of his incapacity was due to his neglect to comply with certain simple medical directions which had been given to him.

Dowds v Bennie & Son, 1902, 5 F. 268; 40 S.L.R. 239; 10 S.L.T. 439.

(538)

Refusal to undergo surgical operation.

A workman was totally incapacitated in consequence of an injury to his left hand. In an application for review of weekly payments the arbitrator found in fact that three doctors, who had examined the workman, recommended certain operations which were simple or minor operations, not attended with appreciable risk or serious pain, and were likely to restore to the workman in large measure, or altogether, the use of his hand for the purpose of his former work; that the workman refused to undergo the operations; and that his continued incapacity to use his left hand and any continued pain in his left palm were fairly attributable to the want of such operations. Held (by a majority of seven judges) that the workman by refusing to undergo the operations had precluded himself from any right to receive further compensation.

Donnelly v Baird & Co., 1908 S.C. 536; 45 S.L.R. 394; 15 S.L.T. 799.

(539)

—A workman became entitled to compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, in consequence of an injury to one of his thumbs on 18th April, 1901, and his employers began to pay him such compensation voluntarily. Shortly after the accident part of the thumb was amputated, and in June, 1901, a further operation was performed. The workman having continued to be incapacitated for his ordinary work, was advised to undergo a third operation, but refused. His employers stopped paying compensation. A stated case set forth that the third operation "would in all probability remove the sensitiveness of the injured part and enable" the workman "to earn wages as before, or at least to earn more than he is able to do now"; and "that the operation so advised is a simple operation, not attended with serious risk or pain, and is such as a reasonable man not claiming compensation or damages would for his own advantage and comfort elect to undergo." The Court held that the workman's refusal to undergo the operation was, in the circumstances, such as to disentitle him to a continuance of substantial compensation, and of consent of the employers, remitted to the sheriff to allow the workman a sum of one penny weekly until further orders of the Court.

Anderson v Baird & Co., 1903, 5 F. 373; 40 S.L.R. 263; 10 S.L.T. 525.

(540)

—A workman who had been paid compensation by his employers was examined by two surgeons on their behalf, who advised that he should undergo an operation. The workman refused. In a stated case the sheriff found it proved "that the operation (1) is an important minor operation; (2) is not in the nature of an experiment, but is established in surgical practice; (3) has been attended with complete success in all similar cases (five in number) regarding which evidence was led before me; (4) is not attended by any appreciable risk; (5) will in all probability within two months, or a little longer, restore to the appellant the use of his right arm, and enable him to earn wages as before; and (6) is such as a reasonable man not claiming compensation or damages would, for his own advantage and comfort, elect to undergo." It was stated at the bar, and not disputed, that an eminent surgeon, who had not been a witness before the arbitrator had examined the appellant after (as well as before) the arbitration, and was of opinion that the appellant should not undergo the operation proposed. Held (1) that on the facts stated in the case the appellant was not bound to submit to the operation, (2) that the Court was entitled to take into consideration the facts admitted at the bar, which showed that the appellant's refusal was reasonable, and (3) that his refusal did not disentitle him to compensation.

Sweeney v Pumpherston Oil Co., 1903, 5 F. 972; 40 S.L.R. 721; 11 S.L.T. 279.

14. COMPENSATION.

(1) COMPENSATION IN RESPECT OF WORKMAN'S DEATH—First Schedule (1) (a).

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 19 (1), supra.]

(a) Generally.

(541)

Claim by person in part dependent—Person wholly dependent in existence.

Held on a construction of sched. I. (1) (a) of the Act that there can be no claim under the Act by a person only in part dependent on a workman at the time of his death if there is in existence a person who is wholly dependent.

Fagan v Murdoch, 1899, 1 F. 1179; 36 S.L.R. 921; 7 S.L.T. 113.

(b) Amount.

[See also (2) (a), infra.]

(542)

Minimum of £150—Workman less than three years in employment.

Held that the minimum sum of £150 fixed by sec. (1) (a) (i.) of the first schedule to the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, as the compensation for a deceased workman's dependants applied although the deceased workman had been less than three years in the employment.

Forrester & Co. v McCallum, 1901, 3 F. 650; 38 S.L.R. 448; 8 S.L.T. 486.

(543)

No wages earned.

A miner was killed after he had descended to work in the pit in which he was employed, but before he had actually commenced to work, and before he had earned anything. Held that his widow was entitled to compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and, the average weekly earnings of the deceased being nil, that she was entitled to the alternative sum of £150 under the first schedule of the Act.

Leonard v Baird & Co., 1901, 3 F. 890; 38 S.L.R. 649; 9 S.L.T. 83.

(544)

Partial dependence—Funeral expenses—First schedule (1).

Held that an arbitrator in fixing compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, for the death of a workman in a claim by partial dependants may competently take into account the outlays which the claimants have incurred in medical and funeral expenses.

Hughes v Summerlee and Mossend Iron and Steel Co., 1903, 5 F. 784; 40 S.L.R. 602; 11 S.L.T. 61.

(2) COMPENSATION FOR INJURY.(a) Amount.*(i.) Average Weekly Earnings.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 19

(2) (a) (i.), supra.]

(545)

Broken weeks—Workman working one day in one week and four days in another.

A miner entered the service of a coal company on Friday, 23rd March; he did not work on Saturday, the 24th; he worked on Monday, the 26th, and on every day thereafter until Thursday, the 29th, when he received injuries, on account of which he claimed compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, from his employers. Held that these facts afforded a sufficient basis for calculating the claimant's "average weekly earnings" in terms of the first schedule (1) (b) of the Act.

Cadzow Coal Co. v Gaffney, 1900, 3 F. 72; 38 S.L.R. 40; 8 S.L.T. 224.

(546)

Workman not working full week but only one or more days in week.

In fixing the amount of compensation payable to a workman under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, held (1) that where a workman before his disablement has worked not a full week, but only one or more days in the week, his actual earnings are to be taken as his weekly earnings; (2) that in ascertaining the average of his weekly earnings a fraction of a week counts as a whole week.

McCue v Barclay, Curle & Co., 1902, 4 F. 909; 39 S.L.R. 690; 10 S.L.T. 116.

(547)

Workman working three days in one week, and over four days in another week.

A workman, employed by the day, worked for three days in one week, and for four days and part of a fifth in the following week, in the service of the same employer. He died of injuries sustained on the day last mentioned. Held that these facts afforded a sufficient basis for calculating his "average weekly earnings," and that consequently it was not a valid answer to the claim that the amount of compensation to be awarded could not be ascertained in terms of sec. (1) (a) (i.) of the first schedule to the Act.

Observed that, in calculating the average weekly earnings, the actual earnings for each week should be taken irrespective of the number of working days in that week.

Opinion that the maximum of £300 mentioned in the same section of the schedules as the limit of the compensation applied to cases where the deceased workman had been in the employment for less than three years.

Russell v McCluskey, 1900, 2 F. 1312; 37 S.L.R. 931; 8 S.L.T. 172.

(548)

Workman working and earning wages in week following injury.

A workman, at the end of his first week in an employment, received injuries, arising out of and in the course of the employment, from which he ultimately died, but he continued to work and to earn wages in the employment for the week immediately succeeding that in which he had received the injuries. The employers maintained that no compensation was due, on the ground that it was impossible to ascertain the "average" weekly earnings of the deceased as required by sec. (1) (a) (i.) of the first schedule of the Act, as he had been in the employment for one week only at the date of the injuries. Held that the earnings of the week succeeding that in which the injuries were sustained fell to be taken into computation, and that the widow was entitled to compensation.

Doyle v Beattie & Sons, 1900, 2 F. 1166; 37 S.L.R. 915; 8 S.L.T. 131.

(549)

Week in which workman worked but earned nothing.

Where a workman in the course of his employment had earned 16s. 2d. in the first week, and in the second week had worked for two hours but earned nothing, and was then injured, held that 16s. 2d. represented his average weekly earnings in the sense of sched. I. of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Nelson v Kerr & Mitchell, 1901, 3 F. 893; 38 S.L.R. 645; 9 S.L.T. 83.

(550)

Calendar week or trade week.

Held that in calculating a workman's "average weekly earnings" in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, first schedule, sec. (1), where the employment is by trade weeks, the total earnings of the workman are to be divided by the number of trade weeks in which he has been employed, and not by the number of calendar weeks.

Campbell v Fife Coal Co., 1902, 5 F. 170; 40 S.L.R. 143; 10 S.L.T. 410.

(551)

Held (1) that "average weekly earnings" mean the total amount actually earned by the workman during his employment divided by the number of weeks during which or part of which he was employed, and (2) that the week to be taken as the unit of division was not the calendar week, but the trade or pay week of the particular employment.

Fleming v Lochgelly Iron and Coal Co., 1902, 4 F. 890; 39 S.L.R. 684; 10 S.L.T. 114.

(552)

—No trade week.

In fixing the amount of compensation payable to a workman, held that where there is no trade week the calendar week from Sunday to Saturday is to be taken as the week.

M'Cue v Barclay, Curle & Co., 1902, 4 F. 909; 39 S.L.R. 690; 10 S.L.T. 116.

(553)

Calendar week or week of seven days.

In a question as to the amount of compensation due for the death of a workman, who had been employed by the same employer for three days in one week and during the whole of the next two weeks, and on the Sunday of the fourth week, held that in computing the average weekly earnings of the deceased the total amount of his earnings must be divided by the number of calendar weeks, i.e., four, over which his employment extended.

Peacock v Niddrie and Benhar Coal Co., 1902, 4 F. 443; 39 S.L.R. 317; 9 S.L.T. 379.

(554)

Casual labour.

In a question as to the amount of compensation due for the death of a dock labourer, who had been employed by the same employer for a varying number of hours on seventy-seven given days, at irregular intervals, during a period of 105 weeks, his employment being by the hour, held that in computing the "average weekly earnings" of the deceased, the total amount of his earnings must be divided by the number of weeks, i.e., 105, over which his employment extended, without discarding weeks in which there had been no employment.

Small v M'Cormick & Ewing, 1899, 1 F. 883; 36 S.L.R. 700; 7 S.L.T. 35.

(555)

Continuous employment.

In estimating average weekly earnings for the purpose of assessing compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, only the period of continuous employment prior to the accident in the service of the same employer is to be taken into account, and where that period is only part of a day the actual sum earned is to be taken as the average weekly earnings.

Grewar v Caledonian Railway Co., 1902, 4 F. 895; 39 S.L.R. 687; 10 S.L.T. 111.

(556)

—Interval of two months owing to accident.

A workman was employed by a firm of coalowners for over twelve months prior to 16th August, 1901, the engagement being terminable at the will of either party. On that date he was accidentally injured in the course of his employment; and thereafter, from 31st August, 1901, until his recovery on 15th October, 1901, he was unable to work, and was paid compensation by his employers under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. On 15th October, 1901, having resumed his former employment, he worked for two hours, when he was again accidentally injured. Held that the Act contemplated a substantially continuous employment; that the period during which the workman was unable to work constituted a break in his employment; and that the workman was entitled to compensation under the Act in respect of the second injury, on the footing that he had been in the employment only from the date of his resuming work on 15th October, 1901.

Gibb v Dunlop & Co., 1902, 4 F. 971; 39 S.L.R. 750; 10 S.L.T. 184.

(557)

—Miner employed by contractors passing into employment of mine owners.

A miner employed by a contractor in a coal mine was dismissed from his employment on 7th October. On Friday, 9th October, he got employment from the coal master in the same mine. On Monday, 12th October, he was injured in the course of his employment. In a claim for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, against his employer, held that in estimating his average weekly earnings, his earnings under the contractor could not be taken into account.

Hunter v William Baird & Co., 1904, 7 F. 304; 42 S.L.R. 245; 12 S.L.T. 567.

(558)

Deductions from wages — Payment for gratuitous assistance.

A miner who was paid according to his output employed his son as an assistant in his work, but paid him nothing for his services. The usual wage for such assistance was 2s. 9d. per day. The miner having been injured in the course of his employment, and having claimed compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, held that in estimating his average weekly earnings nothing fell to be deducted in respect of the gratuitous assistance given by the son.

Nelson v Kerr & Mitchell, 1901, 3 F. 893; 38 S.L.R. 645; 9 S.L.T. 83.

(559)

Weekly wages fixed by contract.

A workman was engaged for a fixed weekly wage. He entered upon his work on a Saturday, and worked for the whole of the following calendar week, at the end of which his employment was terminated by his employers in consequence of an injury resulting in total incapacity, and entitling him to compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. Held that the fixed weekly wage was the basis for determining the amount of the weekly payment due to the workman as compensation under the Act.

Brown v J. & J. Cunningham, 1904, 6 F. 997; 41 S.L.R. 835; 12 S.L.T. 231.

(ii.) Compensation in respect of Partial Incapacity—First Schedule (1) (b) and (2).

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 19 (2) (a) (iii.), supra.]

(a) Powers of Arbitrator.

(560)

Held that in fixing the amount of compensation in cases of partial incapacity the arbitrator may, if on the evidence he sees fit, give as compensation the whole amount of the difference between the average earnings of the workman before the injury and the average amount of the earnings after the injury, provided that it does not exceed fifty per cent. of the average earnings before the injury and does not exceed £1 a week.

Geary v William Dixon, Limited, 1899, 4 F. 1143; 36 S.L.R. 640; 7 S.L.T. 12.

Parker v William Dixon, Limited, 1902, 4 F. 1147; 39 S.L.R. 663; 10 S.L.T. 153.

(561)

Observations (per Lord President Dunedin) on the duties and powers of an arbitrator in fixing the amount of the weekly payments under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Bryson v Dunn & Stephen, 1905, 8 F. 226; 43 S.L.R. 236; 13 S.L.T. 697.

(562)

Opinion (per Lord M'Laren) that under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, an arbitrator may not award such a sum as would, when added to the wages being earned, give the workman a larger weekly income than he was earning before the accident.

Bryson v Dunn & Stephen, 1905, 8 F. 226; 43 S.L.R. 236; 13 S.L.T. 697.

(563)

Discretion of arbitrator.

A workman who had been totally incapacitated by an accident, and whose average weekly earnings were 36s. 8d., was awarded a weekly payment of 18s. 4d., being 50 per cent. of his previous wages. His incapacity having partially ceased, he was taken back into his employer's service at a wage of 17s. per week, and his employers, in view of that change of circumstances, applied to the arbitrator to review the weekly payment of 18s. 4d. The arbitrator, in these circumstances, declined to diminish the existing payment. The Court dismissed an appeal on the ground that the arbitrator's award was not disconform to the statute.

Bryson v Dunn & Stephen, 1905, 8 F. 226; 43 S.L.R. 236; 13 S.L.T. 697.

(564)

Award fixed on erroneous construction of the Act.

In a claim by a workman who was partially incapacitated the sheriff found that the workman was entitled to 11s. 8d. per week, "being 50 per cent. of the difference between what he earned before the accident and what he was earning" after the accident. The Court, holding that while the award was within the competency of the arbitrator, it was plain that in making it he had proceeded on an unsound construction of the statute, pronounced an interlocutor finding that in fixing the amount of compensation in cases of partial incapacity the arbitrator may, if on the evidence he sees fit, give as compensation the whole amount of the difference between his average earnings before the injury and the average amount of his earnings after the injury, provided that it does not exceed 50 per cent. of the average earnings before the injury, and does not exceed £1 per week; and remitted to the sheriff-substitute to proceed in terms of the finding.

Corbet v Glasgow Iron and Steel Co., 1903, 5 F. 782; 40 S.L.R. 601; 11 S.L.T. 60.

(b) Wage-earning Capacity.

(565)

Held that the test of a workman's right to compensation was the diminution of his earning capacity in the future by reason of the injury received, and that the mere fact that at the date of his claim he earned the same wages after as he did before the accident did not necessarily exclude the claim under the Act.

Held further, that if a workman has not when he makes his claim suffered any loss, the proper course is not to dismiss his claim, but for the arbitrator to make a declaration of the liability of the employer, leaving the amount and the duration of the compensation to be fixed upon an application under the first schedule (12) to vary the award should the workman at any future time be unable, by reason of the accident, to earn the same wages.

Freeland v Macfarlane, Lang & Co., 1900, 2 F. 832; 37 S.L.R. 599; 7 S.L.T. 456.

(566)

Opinion, that while the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, first schedule, sec. (2), requires an arbitrator in fixing the amount of a weekly payment to have regard to the amount of the average weekly earnings of the workman before the accident, and to the average amount he is earning after the accident, the latter is not conclusive as to the workman's wage-earning capacity.

Clelland v Singer Manufacturing Co., 1905, 7 F. 975; 42 S.L.R. 757; 13 S.L.T. 319.

(567)

Age—Decrease of wages in trade.

The employers of a miner who had been totally incapacitated for work by an injury in their service voluntarily paid him compensation for nearly two years, at a weekly rate fixed on the footing that he was entitled to half his average weekly earnings before the accident. The employers having refused to continue these payments at the same rate, the workman presented an application to have the weekly payments fixed by arbitration. The sheriff, in view of the facts (1) that the applicant had reached an age (sixty-four) when full wages as a miner could not be earned, and (2) that there had been a general fall in the rate of miners' wages subsequent to the accident, awarded a sum less than half the applicant's wages before the accident. Held that it was incompetent for the arbitrator to take these considerations into account in fixing compensation.

Jamieson v Fife Coal Co., 1903, 5 F. 958; 40 S.L.R. 704; 11 S.L.T. 201.

(568)

General fall in wages.

A workman, who had lost a hand by an accident, received compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, from his employers, until he was again taken into their employment at a wage of 18s. 6d. a week, the wage he had received before the accident. Subsequently, owing to a general fall in wages and not to any supervening incapacity upon the part of the workman, his wages were reduced to 16s. 7d. Held that he was not entitled to compensation in respect of the diminution in his earnings.

Black v Merry & Cuninghame, 1909 S.C. 1150; 46 S.L.R. 812; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 16.

(b) Review of Weekly Payments—First Schedule (12).

(i.) Competency.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 19 (2) (b) (i.), supra.]

(569)

Change of circumstances—Inability to find employment.

In an application to the sheriff by a workman under article (12) of the first schedule of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, to review and increase a weekly payment, payable to him, as partially incapacitated, under an agreement with his employers, the workman averred that he was entitled in law to be held as totally incapacitated, in respect that his employers were unable to give him suitable light work, and that he was unable to obtain light employment elsewhere. Held that the application fell to be dismissed in respect that no relevant grounds for reviewing the weekly payments were set forth.

Boag v Lochwood Collieries, 1910 S.C. 51; 47 S.L.R. 47; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 373.

(570)

Payments made under unrecorded verbal agreement.

Opinions (per Lord Adam and Lord M'Laren), that weekly payments made voluntarily may be reviewed in an application for review under par. (12) of the first schedule to the Act.

Jamieson v Fife Coal Co., 1903, 5 F. 958; 40 S.L.R. 704; 11 S.L.T. 201.

(ii.) Date from which Weekly Payments may be Reviewed.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 19 (2) (b) (ii.), supra.]

(571)

Held that when an application under sched. I. (12) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, to review a weekly payment under the Act is brought before an arbitrator, he is bound to treat the agreement for, or award of, the weekly payment, as enforceable up to the date of his decision in the application, and can end, diminish, or increase the payment, as from that date only.

Steel v Oakbank Oil Co., 1902, 5 F. 244; 40 S.L.R. 205; 10 S.L.T. 505.

Pumpherson Oil Co. v Cavaney, 1903, 5 F. 963; 40 S.L.R. 724; 11 S.L.T. 171.

Baird & Co. v Stevenson, 1907 S.C. 1259; 44 S.L.R. 864; 15 S.L.T. 291.

(572)

Ending of compensation—Power of arbitrator to order compensation to end at a future date.

In an application to have compensation, payable to an injured workman, ended or diminished, the arbitrator made a remit to a medical referee, who, on 26th February, 1906, reported that the workman's wage-earning capacity would be fully restored by 31st March. The arbitrator on 27th February ordered compensation to be continued till 31st March, 1906, and to end at that date. Held that the arbitrator had no power to make such an order, in respect that his duty in assessing compensation was to have regard to the workman's present state, and that he was not entitled to pronounce an order the validity of which would depend on the workman's condition at a future date.

Allan v Thomas Spewart & Co., 1906, 8 F. 811; 43 S.L.R. 599; 14 S.L.T. 84.

(573)

Unrecorded agreement.

Question, whether an unrecorded agreement to pay compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, remains in force until formally terminated or modified in terms of the Act Opinion (per Lord Low) that it does not.

Colville & Sons v Tigue, 1905, 8 F. 179; 43 S.L.R. 129; 13 S.L.T. 571.

(574)

——— Unrecorded agreement to pay compensation during incapacity—Stoppage of payments by employer on the ground that incapacity had ceased.

In August, 1903, a firm of employers agreed to pay compensation to A, a workman, at the rate of 12s. 5d. a week "during the period of his incapacity." The agreement was not recorded under the Act. The employers stopped the payments on 14th December, 1903, alleging that A's incapacity had ceased. In arbitration proceedings at the instance of A the sheriff found that A's incapacity had ceased by 14th December, 1903, but ordained the employers to make payment to A, at the rate of 12s. 5d. a week, as from 14th December, 1903, to 12th July, 1905—the date of the award. Held that the sheriff, as arbitrator, had wrongly awarded compensation as from 14th December, 1903, to the date of his award, in respect that (1) if A's application for compensation was made in respect of the agreement the sheriff, as arbitrator, had no power to enforce the agreement by decerning for arrears of compensation due under it; and (2) if the application was for the purpose of settling compensation by arbitration, A was not entitled to the compensation awarded, the sheriff having found in fact that A's incapacity had ceased by 14th December, 1903.

Colville & Sons v Tigue, 1905, 8 F. 179; 43 S.L.R. 129; 13 S.L.T. 571.

(iii.) Method of Obtaining Review.

[See 20, infra.]

(iv.) Recovery of Injured Workman.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 19 (2) (iv.), supra.]

(575)

Payments ended by arbitrator on ground of recovery—Supervening incapacity—New application for compensation—Competency.

The compensation payable under a recorded agreement to a workman by his employers, in respect of injuries received in an accident, was "ended" by an arbitrator on an application for review brought under sec. (12) of the first schedule of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, on the ground that the workman had recovered. Subsequently the workman instituted arbitration proceedings under sec. 1 (3) of the Act, for an award of compensation, averring that incapacity had again supervened. Held that the new application was incompetent, and that the workman could not again obtain compensation in respect of the accident, the payments having been ended by the arbitrator.

Cadenhead v Ailsa Shipbuilding Co., 1910 S.C. 1129; 47 S.L.R. 784; 1910, 2 S.L.T. 65.

(576)

Refusal to allow proof—Remit to medical practitioner appointed by Secretary of State—Second schedule (13).

In an application by an employer for review of a weekly payment made under agreement, in respect that the workman had recovered, and had been certified as recovered by a medical practitioner selected by the employer, the workman moved for a proof, but the sheriff-substitute refused this motion, and remitted to a medical practitioner appointed by the Secretary of State, and thereafter, on a consideration of his report, ended the weekly payment. Held that the sheriff-substitute was not entitled to refuse the allowance of proof asked, and case remitted to him to allow a proof, and to proceed.

Johnstone v Cochran & Co., 1904, 6 F. 854; 41 S.L.R. 644; 12 S.L.T. 175.

(577)

Personal bar—Offer by employer to continue wages previously earned.

Fraser v Great North of Scotland Railway Co., 1901, 3 F. 908; 38 S.L.R. 653; 9 S.L.T. 96, No 637, infra.

(c) Suspensory Orders.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 19 (2) (c), supra.]

(578)

Competency—Earning capacity diminished—Earning same wages as before accident.

Held that if a workman's earning capacity has been diminished as the result of injuries by accident, but he has not, when he makes his claim, suffered any loss, the proper course is not to dismiss his claim, but for the arbiter to make a declaration of the liability of the employer, leaving the amount and the duration of the compensation to be fixed upon an application under the first schedule (12) to vary the award should the workman at any future time be unable, by reason of the accident, to earn the same wages.

Freeland v Macfarlane, Lang & Co., 1900, 2 F. 832; 37 S.L.R. 599; 7 S.L.T. 456.

(579)

——— Nominal award.

In an application by an employer for review of an order for weekly payments to an injured workman, it appeared from a report by the medical practitioner, appointed by the Secretary of State, that the power of vision of the workman's right eye was permanently reduced by one-half, that the left eye was sound, and that in the opinion of the reporter, the workman "will never be able for any work for which unimpaired vision is essential, but he is quite able to undertake his ordinary work as a labourer."

The Court remitted to the arbitrator to make a nominal award of one penny per week until further orders.

Ferrier v Gourlay Brothers, 1902, 4 F. 711; 39 S.L.R. 453; 9 S.L.T. 517.

(580)

A lad of seventeen, who had been temporarily incapacitated by the loss of the third finger of his left hand in consequence of an injury sustained in his employers' factory, for a number of weeks received from his employers 8s. a week, being the full sum which he would have earned had he been working. The employers then offered to receive him back, and as he did not return, ceased the payments. He then took work from a new employer, and thereafter claimed compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, against his former employers, in respect of the loss of his finger, and instituted arbitration proceedings, in which he admitted that he was then able to do all his old work. Held that the claimant was not entitled to such a declaration of the liability of his former employers as would preserve his rights in the event of supervening incapacity.

Husband v Campbell, 1903, 5 F. 1146; 40 S.L.R. 822; 11 S.L.T. 243.

(581)

In an application by an employer to have a weekly payment to an injured workman reviewed and ended, held that it is incompetent for the arbitrator under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, if either party objects, to postpone the determination of the question of compensation by making an interim nominal award of one penny per week.

Clelland v Singer Manufacturing Co., 1905, 7 F. 975; 42 S.L.R. 757; 13 S.L.T. 319.

(582)

In an application by an employer for review of a weekly payment of 18s. to a workman who had been ruptured by an accident, the arbitrator, with consent of parties, remitted to a medical referee, who reported that, while the workman was not incapacitated and was able for his ordinary work, yet the ruptures probably would, in the future, prove detrimental to him. No further evidence was led, and the arbitrator reduced the compensation to 9s. per week. In an appeal by stated case, held (1) that there was no evidence of incapacity for work before the arbitrator to justify his award of compensation; (2) that it was incompetent to give a nominal award for the purpose of keeping open the claim for compensation; and (3) that the compensation should be ended.

Rosie v Mackay, 1910 S.C. 714; 47 S.L.R. 654; 1910, 1 S.L.T. 395.

(d) Miscellaneous Cases.

(583)

Arrears—Award of lump sum—Competency.

In an arbitration under the Workmen's

Compensation Act, 1897, a workman claimed compensation in respect of his partial incapacity during the preceding seven years. Opinion that it was incompetent for the arbitrator to award compensation in the shape of a lump sum. Opinion reserved as to the proper method of ascertaining the amount of compensation, assuming the workman had a good claim.

Dempster v Baird & Co., 1909 S.C. 127; 46 S.L.R. 119; 16 S.L.T. 470.

(584)

Pupils and minors—Appointment of trustees—First schedule (4) and (6).

In a claim under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, at the instance of a pupil, the Court appointed trustees for the pupil, and authorised them to receive and hold for her the compensation to which she was found entitled.

Cooper v Fife Coal Co., 1907 S.C. 564; 44 S.L.R. 402; 14 S.L.T. 796.

(585)

Setting off expenses against weekly payment—First schedule (14).

Held that an employer, who had been found liable in a weekly payment under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, to a workman, could not set off against that payment a sum awarded to him as expenses against the workman in an application for the diminution of the weekly payment.

Rosewell Gas Coal Co. v M'Vicar, 1904, 7 F. 290; 42 S.L.R. 233; 12 S.L.T. 529.

15. MEDICAL EXAMINATION OF WORKMAN DURING PAYMENTS—First Schedule (11).

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 20 (2), supra.]

(586)

Certificate of medical practitioner appointed by Secretary of State.

Held that where a certificate bore that a workman in receipt of weekly payments under the Act had recovered from the injuries in respect of which the payments were made, and that, although the workman was suffering from partial disability for work, such disability was not connected with the injuries, but was "the result of deficient natural vigour of constitution, together with advancing years," it was conclusive against any further claim by the workman for compensation under the Act.

M'Avan v Boase Spinning Co., 1901, 3 F. 1048; 38 S.L.R. 772; 9 S.L.T. 152.

(587)

Review of weekly payments.

Prior to an application by employers to have a weekly payment to a workman who had been totally incapacitated diminished, the workman was examined by one of the medical men appointed by the Secretary of State. The medical certificate bore that the workman's right eye was healthy, and the vision good, but that the left eye was seriously defective. "His disability is, however, at present great enough to unfit him for his usual occupation of a mason's labourer, though I am of opinion he is quite fit for any work where he would not have to exercise for the safety of life or limb that nice discrimination as to distances for which the sight of two eyes is necessary." Neither party moved for proof.

Held (1) that the certificate of the medical practitioner under sec. (11) was conclusive evidence of the workman's condition; and (2) that as the certificate bore that the workman was unfit for his usual occupation, although fit for work of a particular character, and as his employers did not state or offer to prove that he could get such employment, the sheriff was entitled without further evidence to hold that there was no sufficient ground for reducing the weekly payment.

Bryce & Co. v Connor, 1904, 7 F. 193; 42 S.L.R. 154; 12 S.L.T. 539.

(588)

Failure to submit to examination—Suspension of compensation.

A workman who had been receiving compensation under an unrecorded agreement submitted himself, at his employers' request, for examination by a medical man provided by his employers, in terms of sec. (11) of the first schedule. The medical man reported that the workman had so recovered as to be able to do his former work. The workman was dissatisfied with this report, but did not apply to be examined by one of the medical practitioners appointed under the Act. Held that so long as the workman did not submit himself for examination by one of the medical practitioners appointed under the Act, his right to compensation was suspended, and proceedings by way of arbitration were excluded.

Davidson v Summerlee and Mossend Iron and Steel Co., 1903, 5 F. 991; 40 S.L.R. 764; 11 S.L.T. 269.

(589)

A workman, in receipt of a weekly payment under an agreement recorded in terms of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, was examined and certified to be fit for work by a medical practitioner provided by the employers. The workman was dissatisfied with this certificate, but did not submit himself to examination by one of the medical practitioners appointed for the purposes of the Act, owing, as he alleged, to inability to pay the fee. In an application by the employers to review the weekly payment, the employers opposed an allowance of proof on the ground that the right of the workman to the weekly payments had been suspended at the date on which he had been certified to be fit for work. The workman produced a certificate by a medical practitioner certifying that he was unfit for his usual work. The arbitrator diminished the weekly payment. Held that the workman having submitted to an examination by a medical practitioner provided by his employers, his failure to submit to examination by one of the medical practitioners appointed under the Act did not infer a suspension of his right to compensation, and did not disentitle him to a proof.

Niddrie and Benhar Coal Co. v M'Kay, 1903, 5 F. 1121; 40 S.L.R. 798; 11 S.L.T. 275.

(590)

The employers of a workman, who had sustained injuries, orally agreed to pay him a weekly sum under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897. On the requisition of the employers, the workman submitted himself to examination by a medical man provided by them. A certificate having been granted by that medical practitioner, the workman was dissatisfied therewith, but did not submit himself for examination to one of the medical practitioners appointed under the Act. Held that the workman's right to compensation was not suspended in respect of his failure to submit himself to one of the medical practitioners appointed under the Act.

Strannigan v Baird & Co., 1904, 6 F. 784; 41 S.L.R. 609; 12 S.L.T. 152.

(591)

Workman going to Australia.

An injured workman, in receipt of weekly payments under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, went to Australia without intimating to his employers that he was going or leaving his address. In an application by the employers for review of the weekly payments, the Court suspended in hoc statu the workman's right to the weekly payments on the ground that he was obstructing medical examination in the sense of sec. (11) of the first schedule of the Act.

Finnie & Son v Duncan, 1904, 7 F. 254; 42 S.L.R. 192; 12 S.L.T. 557.

(592)

Refusal to submit to examination—Workman in Ireland—Medical practitioner provided by employers in Scotland—Travelling expenses.

A workman who was receiving weekly payments as compensation fixed by agreement under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and who had twice submitted himself for examination by a medical practitioner provided by the employers, and been certified not to have recovered, immediately after the second examination went to Ireland to reside with his father. About two months thereafter he was again required to submit himself at Glasgow for examination by the employers' medical man. He offered to submit himself to a medical man near the place where he was residing in Ireland, but he refused to come to Glasgow for examination unless his expenses were paid. Held that the workman had not refused to submit himself to medical examination or obstructed the same in the sense of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, sched. I., sec. (11), and that the employers were not entitled to suspend payment of his compensation.

William Baird & Co. v Kane, 1905, 7 F. 461; 42 S.L.R. 347; 12 S.L.T. 697.

(593)

Revival of right to compensation.

A workman in receipt of compensation under an unrecorded agreement was examined by the medical adviser of his employers and certified able to resume his former occupation, but declined to submit himself to the medical referee appointed under the Act. The Court having held that he was debarred from arbitration on his claim, and that his compensation fell to be suspended so long as he refused to submit himself to a medical referee, the workman, some months afterwards, submitted himself to a medical referee, who found that he was unfit for his ordinary work, and would not be able to resume it. Thereupon the workman recorded the agreement, and charged his employers for the arrears of compensation, and the employers brought a note of suspension of the charge. The note was refused, on the ground that the workman's delay in submitting himself to the medical referee merely suspended payment of the compensation, and did not entail its forfeiture.

Summerlee and Mossend Iron and Steel Co. v Davidson, (O.H.) 1903, 11 S.L.T. 519.

SECOND SCHEDULE.

16. RECORDING MEMORANDUM OF AGREEMENT—Second Schedule (8) and (14) (b).

(1) COMPETENCY.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 23 (1), supra.]

(594)

Verbal agreement—Proof.

Held that a sheriff may entertain a petition under sched. II., sec. (8) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and relative Act of Sederunt, 3rd June, 1898, sec. 7 (a), for a special warrant to register a memorandum of an oral agreement, and where necessary may allow a proof.

Traill & Sons v Cochrane, 1901, 3 F. 1091; 33 S.L.R. 848; 9 S.L.T. 183.

(595)

Time for recording memorandum.

Opinion (per Lord Justice-Clerk Macdonald and Lord Low, Ordinary) that an agreement to pay compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, though not in writing, might be enforced under the Act by lodging a memorandum of agreement and getting the authority of the sheriff to register it in terms of the Act; and that this might be done although six months had elapsed from the date of the accident.

Cochrane v Traill & Sons, 1900, 2 F. 794; 37 S.L.R. 662; 7 S.L.T. 459.

(2) GENUINENESS.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 23 (3), supra.]

(596)

Agreement alleged to have been made under essential error—Act of Sederunt, 3rd June, 1898, sec. 7 (a).

In answer to a petition by a workman for a special warrant to register a memorandum of a verbal agreement to pay compensation at the rate of 16s. a week under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, the employers, while not denying the agreement, objected that it had been made under essential error as to the rights of parties under the Act, and that the sum agreed to be paid was more than half the workman's average weekly earnings. Held that the employers' objections were irrelevant as answers to a petition for warrant to register an agreement which was not denied.

Macdonald v Fairfield Shipbuilding and Engineering Co., 1905, 8 F. 8; 43 S.L.R. 1; 13 S.L.T. 428.

(3) AGREEMENT NO LONGER SUBSISTING.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 23 (4), supra.]

(597)

Workman recovered and earning full wages—Second schedule, sec. (8)—Act of Sederunt, 3rd June, 1898, sec. 7.

In an application to a sheriff for special warrant to register a memorandum of agreement, the applicant admitted that he had resumed work and was earning higher wages than before the accident, and that nothing was due to him in name of compensation at the date of the application; but he averred that in consequence of his injuries he was liable to be incapacitated from work from time to time. The employers admitted that they and the applicant had come to an agreement as to compensation under the Act, but pleaded that the memorandum ought not to be recorded, in respect that the agreement was at an end owing to the applicant's recovery. Held that the terms of the agreement being admitted, the memorandum fell to be recorded.

Cammick v Glasgow Iron and Steel Co., 1901, 4 F. 198; 39 S.L.R. 138; 9 S.L.T. 255.

(4) APPEAL FROM ORDER GRANTING OR REFUSING WARRANT TO REGISTER.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 23 (6), supra.]

(598)

Finality of sheriff—Act of Sederunt, 3rd June, 1898, sec. 7 (a).

Where a sheriff is applied to under sched. II., sec. (8), of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and relative Act of Sederunt, 3rd June, 1898, sec. 7 (a), for a special warrant to register a memorandum of agreement, the genuineness of which is disputed, he is not acting as arbitrator under the Act, and an appeal by stated case from any order pronounced by him in such an application is incompetent.

Cochrane v Traill & Sons, 1900, 3 F. 27; 38 S.L.R. 18; 8 S.L.T. 228.

(599)

Opinions that an application to a sheriff under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, second schedule, sec. (8), and the Act of Sederunt, 3rd June, 1898, sec. 7, is not an application to the sheriff in the exercise of his ordinary common law jurisdiction, and that an appeal in common form from the determination of the sheriff in such an application is incompetent.

Cammick v Glasgow Iron and Steel Co., 1901, 4 F. 198; 39 S.L.R. 138; 9 S.L.T. 255.

(600)

Ministerial or judicial.

In an appeal against the decision of a sheriff refusing to grant a warrant for the registration of a memorandum of an agreement under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, held, by a majority of seven judges, that neither the statute nor the Act of Sederunt of 3rd June, 1898, authorised the intervention of the sheriff as a judge, and that his granting or refusing to grant a warrant was ministerial, and could not be appealed against.

Binning v Easton & Sons, 1906, 8 F. 407; 43 S.L.R. 312; 13 S.L.T. 783.

Lochelly Iron and Coal Co. v Sinclair, 1907 S.C. 3; 44 S.L.R. 2; 14 S.L.T. 341.

(601)

Observed that in a petition for warrant to register a memorandum of agreement under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, once the alleged agreement is proved to have been in fact concluded, the functions of the sheriff-substitute are the same as those of the sheriff-clerk when the genuineness of the memorandum is not disputed.

Macdonald v Fairfield Shipbuilding and Engineering Co., 1905, 8 F. 8; 43 S.L.R. 1; 13 S.L.T. 428.

(5) SUSPENSION OF CHARGE ON RECORDED AGREEMENT.

[See 20, infra.]

(6) MISCELLANEOUS CASES.

(602)

Action of damages for breach of recorded agreement—Competency.

A memorandum of agreement, recorded under par. (8) of the second schedule of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, bore to be "in the matter of an agreement under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897," between L and B & Co., and set forth that the parties were agreed that the maximum compensation to which L was entitled was 17s. 6d.; and that B & Co.

"agree in lieu of such compensation to give" B "regular employment as a foreman," and "to pay him the fixed weekly wage of 23s. . . . and also to pay him on the date hereof the sum of £90 sterling, and these in full of all his claims for compensation under the said Act." B & Co. paid £90 to L, and they also employed him on the agreed-on terms for about three years. They then dismissed him. L brought a common law action of damages for breach of contract against B & Co. Held that the action was incompetent in respect that the agreement being indivisible and being recorded, only the remedies provided by the Workmen's Compensation Act were available to L.

Lawrie v Brown & Co., 1908 S.C. 705; 45 S.L.R. 477; 15 S.L.T. 981.

(603)

Rectification of register—Recovery of workman before agreement recorded.

Held that the power conferred on the sheriff to "rectify" the special register appointed to be kept by the sheriff-clerk in terms of par. (8) of the second schedule to the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, did not empower the sheriff to expunge a memorandum of agreement between an employer and a workman on the ground that at the date when the memorandum was recorded the workman had completely recovered, and was earning on an average as much wages as he did before the accident.

Baird & Co. v Stevenson, 1907 S.C. 1259; 44 S.L.R. 864; 15 S.L.T. 291.

(604)

Reduction of discharge—Granting of discharge induced by misrepresentation.

A workman who had been injured and was in receipt of compensation under a registered agreement received a call from an officer of the insurance company which was paying the compensation. The officer desired to obtain a final discharge, and in the course of conversation with the workman, who was still very weak, referred to the recent report of their medical man as suggesting that the workman would be well again in some months. He did not read the report or give it to the workman to read. The report stated that the probable duration of disability would be some months, but that progress had been so slow that no prediction could be made. The workman granted a discharge, but did not thereafter recover. In an action of reduction of the discharge on the ground of misrepresentation and essential error, held that the discharge must be reduced.

Crossan v Caledon Shipbuilding and Engineering Co. (H.L.) 1906, 43 S.L.R. 852; 14 S.L.T. 33.

(605)

Reduction of recorded memorandum—Declarator that no agreement as to compensation had been concluded.

In a petition in the sheriff court at the instance of the employer of an injured workman for an order on the sheriff-clerk to record the memorandum of an alleged agreement for compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, the workman lodged defences in which he disputed the genuineness of the memorandum. The sheriff, after proof, ordered the memorandum to be recorded. The workman brought an action in the Court of Session concluding for declarator that no agreement as to compensation had been concluded, and for reduction of the recorded memorandum of agreement. Held (1) that the action for declarator that there was no binding agreement and for reduction of the entry in the register was competent; (2) that although the order of the sheriff for the registration of the memorandum of agreement involved an opinion that the agreement had been proved, the order itself was purely an administrative act, and would not support the plea of res judicata.

Hughes v Thistle Chemical Co., 1907 S.C. 607; 44 S.L.R. 476; 14 S.L.T. 916.

(606)

Charge on memorandum.

A memorandum of agreement under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, was recorded in the special register kept for the purpose under the Act by the sheriff-clerk, and also for preservation and execution in the sheriff court books. Held that a charge was competent on an inducias of six days.

Gavin Paul & Sons v Dickson, (O.H.) 1903, 11 S.L.T. 228.

17. REMIT TO MEDICAL REFEREE— Second Schedule (13).

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 24, supra.]

(607)

Competency.

A workman in receipt of weekly payments under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, was examined on 7th November, 1902, and certified to be fit for work by a medical practitioner provided by the employers. The workman was dissatisfied with this certificate, but did not submit himself to examination by one of the medical practitioners appointed for the purposes of the Act. In an application by the employers for review of the weekly payments the employers opposed an allowance of proof on the ground that the right of the workman to the weekly payments had been suspended at the date on which he had been certified to be fit for work. The workman produced a certificate by a medical practitioner that he was unfit for his usual work. The arbitrator remitted to the statutory medical referee to report, and on his report that the workman was fit for light work, diminished the weekly payments. Held that the remit was competent.

Niddrie and Benhar Coal Co. v M'Kay, 1903, 5 F. 1121; 40 S.L.R. 798; 11 S.L.T. 275.

(608)

Application by employers for review of weekly payments—Motion by workman for proof refused.

Johnstone v Cochran & Co., 1904, 6 F. 854; 41 S.L.R. 644; 12 S.L.T. 175, No. 576, supra.

(609)

Finality of referee's report—Second schedule (13)—Statutory Rules and Orders, 1898, No. 407, rule 2.

Opinion that the report by a medical referee on a remit under rule 2 of the Statutory Rules and Orders, 1898, No. 407, is not to be taken by the arbitrator as final and conclusive, but falls to be considered by him along with the other evidence before him.

Dowds v Bennie & Son, 1902, 5 F. 268; 40 S.L.R. 239; 10 S.L.T. 439.

(610)

In an application by an employer for review of an order for weekly payments to an injured workman, the arbitrator remitted to the medical practitioner appointed by the Secretary of State to report as to the workman's condition. The report bore that the power of vision of the right eye was permanently reduced by one-half, that the left eye was quite sound, and that in the opinion of the reporter "he will never be able for any work for which unimpaired vision is essential, but he is quite able to undertake his ordinary work as a labourer." The arbitrator, without further proof, reduced the compensation to 5s. per week. Held that the report was conclusive evidence that the incapacity of the workman arising from his injuries had ceased to the effect of disentitling him to a continuance of the compensation at the present rate, and case remitted to the arbitrator to reduce the compensation to 1d. per week until further orders.

Ferrier v Gourlay Brothers, 1902, 4 F. 711; 39 S.L.R. 453; 9 S.L.T. 517.

18. PROCEDURE IN ARBITRATIONS— Second Schedule (14).

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 25, supra.]

(611)

Dismissal of claim on relevancy—Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act, 1876, sec. 52.

A sheriff, acting as arbitrator under the Workmen's Compensation Act, may competently dismiss a claim as irrelevant without hearing proof.

Coyne v Glasgow Steam Coasters Co., 1907 S.C. 112; 44 S.L.R. 118; 14 S.L.T. 482.

(612)

Preliminary pleas—Duty of arbitrator to dispose of whole case at once.

Opinion per curiam that even if the sheriff's judgment on preliminary pleas is adverse to the claimant, he should, to avoid multiplying appeals, exhaust the arbitration by pronouncing findings in fact and in law on the merits, and by assessing the compensation due to the claimant on the assumption that he is entitled to compensation.

Rankine v Alloa Coal Co., 1903, 5 F. 1164; 40 S.L.R. 828; 11 S.L.T. 233.

(613)

Decree by default—Second schedule (14) (c) — Sheriff Courts (Scotland) Act, 1876, secs. 20 and 52.

In a suspension held that it was incompetent for a sheriff acting as arbitrator under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, to pronounce a decree by default for the amount of compensation claimed, and decree suspended.

United Collieries v Gavin, 1899, 2 F. 60; 37 S.L.R. 47; 7 S.L.T. 197.

19. APPEALS—Second Schedule (14) (c).

(1) COMPETENCY.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 26 (1), supra.]

(614)

Question of law or question of fact—Accident arising out of and in the course of the employment.

In an arbitration before a sheriff under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, the sheriff held that an accident to the workman was caused by his adopting a dangerous mode of doing a piece of work while a safe course was open to him, and that this was not an accident "arising out of and in the course of the employment" in the sense of the Act. In a case stated for appeal the question was put whether the sheriff "ought upon the facts stated to have found that the injury was caused by an accident arising out of and in the course of the employment" in the sense of sec. 1, sub-sec. (1), of the Act. Held that the appeal was competent, as the case showed that the decision of the sheriff involved the determination of a question of law in the construction of the Act.

Durham v Brown Brothers & Co., 1898, 1 F. 279; 36 S.L.R. 190; 6 S.L.T. 239.

(615)

Whether death resulted from accident.

A miner was on 4th May injured by the fall of a stone on his foot from the roof of the pit in which he was working, and he died on 29th June following. The sheriff-substitute refused compensation, on the ground that it had not been proved that his death resulted from or was accelerated by the injury. A case for appeal set forth that the workman, who was seventy-nine years of age, was off work for some time in consequence of the injury, but had returned to work before his death, and that the proximate cause of his death was apoplexy. The question of law was—"Whether in the circumstances stated the death of the deceased resulted from or was accelerated by an accident within the meaning of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897?" The Court dismissed the appeal, holding that the question was a question of fact and not a question of law.

Warnock v Glasgow Iron and Steel Co., 1904, 6 F. 474; 41 S.L.R. 359; 11 S.L.T. 697.

(616)

Non-compliance with regulations for obtaining stated case—Act of Sederunt, 3rd June, 1898.

On the last day allowed for taking an appeal against an award by a sheriff under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, the claimant's Edinburgh agent telegraphed to the local agent to apply for a case for appeal. The local agent being out of town, his clerk obtained the services of another agent, who went to the sheriff court office and wrote on the interlocutor sheet "The pursuer appeals against the foregoing judgment, and requests a case to be stated." He did not set forth any question of law, and he did not deposit £1, as required by the Act of Sederunt, 3rd June, 1898, sec. 9 (a). He was informed by the clerk in attendance at the sheriff court office that a deposit was not necessary. The sheriff stated a case. At the hearing on the appeal the deposit of £1 had not been made. The Court, on the objection of the respondents, dismissed the appeal in respect of the appellant's failure to comply with the regulations enacted by sec. 9 (a) of the Act of Sederunt, 3rd June, 1898.

Murphy v Blair & White, 1905, 7 F. 863; 42 S.L.R. 655; 13 S.L.T. 196.

(2) FORM OF STATED CASE.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 26 (2), supra.]

(617)

Arbitrator's note.

A case stated by a sheriff under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, should not have any note by the sheriff appended thereto.

Rae v Fraser, 1899, 1 F. 1017; 36 S.L.R. 782; 7 S.L.T. 73.

Cf. Act of Sederunt, 6th July, 1915, sec. (1) (C.A.S., L. xiii. 17 (d)).

(3) REFUSAL OF ARBITRATOR TO STATE A CASE.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 26 (3), supra.]

(618)

Frivolous application—Act of Sederunt, 3rd June, 1898, sec. 9 (c).

In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, the arbitrator refused to state a case for appeal, on the ground that the application for a case was, in his opinion, frivolous, in respect that the questions of law proposed were definitely settled by a judgment of one Division of the Court. The appellant having presented a note, the Court remitted to the arbitrator to state a case.

Pumpherson Oil Co. v Cavaney, 1903, 5 F. 663; 40 S.L.R. 466; 10 S.L.T. 748.

(619)

Question of fact or law—Out of and in the course of the employment.

Circumstances in which held, in an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, that the question whether the accident had arisen "out of and in the course" of the workman's employment was a question of fact and not of law, and that the arbitrator was justified in refusing to state it as a question of law for the Court of Appeal.

Observed (by Lord Kinnear) that such refusal is justified whenever the arbitrator in determining the question has himself dealt with it as a question of fact.

Henderson v Corporation of Glasgow, 1900, 2 F. 1127; 37 S.L.R. 857; 8 S.L.T. 118.

(620)

Serious and wilful misconduct.

Glasgow & South-Western Railway Co. v Laidlaw, 1900, 2 F. 708; 37 S.L.R. 503; 7 S.L.T. 420, No. 406, supra.

(621)

Question not submitted to arbitrator.

In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act the sheriff found in fact that the employers were the contractors for the painting work on a building over 30 feet in height in course of construction, and that the workman had been injured while engaged in this painting work, and awarded compensation. The employers applied to the sheriff to state a case on the question "Whether the work on which the deceased had been engaged at the time of the accident was construction of the building in question in terms of sec. 7 (1) of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897?" The sheriff refused to state a case, on the ground that the proposed question was solely a question of fact. The employers then applied to the Court to direct the sheriff to state a case on the question—"Whether the applicants were 'undertakers' in the sense of sec. 7 (1) of the Act?" The Court refused to direct the sheriff as craved, on the ground that the question proposed had not been submitted to the sheriff for decision, and that he had not been asked to state a case upon it; but directed him to state a case on the question formerly submitted to him, in respect that question was, or might involve, a question of law.

Hobbs & Samuel v Bradley, 1900, 2 F. 744; 37 S.L.R. 532; 7 S.L.T. 433.

(622)

Whether employers prejudiced by want of notice—Whether want of notice occasioned by mistake or other reasonable cause.

In an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, the sheriff, after a proof, found in fact that the claimant was injured on 25th October, 1901, that he did not give notice of the accident until 24th March, 1902, and that thereby the respondents had been prejudiced in their defence. The sheriff thereupon dismissed the application, and refused to state a case on appeal on certain questions of law submitted by the claimant on the ground that they were not raised by the facts found to be proved. The Court, on a note by the claimant, remitted to the sheriff to state a case setting forth the facts bearing (1) on the question of prejudice to the employer; and (2) on the question whether or not the delay in giving notice was occasioned by mistake or other reasonable cause, along with his judgment on these facts on both points.

Rankine v Alloa Coal Co., 1903, 5 F. 1164; 40 S.L.R. 828; 11 S.L.T. 283.

(623)

Question as to competency of application—Whether a question had arisen between the parties.

At the first calling of a petition for arbitration, by a workman, the employers, while admitting liability to pay compensation at the rate claimed, pleaded that the petition was incompetent, in respect that (1) when it was presented no question had arisen between the parties within the meaning of sec. 1 (3) of the Act, and (2) reasonable opportunity had not been given to them to admit liability. The sheriff awarded compensation, and refused to state a case. Circumstances in which the Court remitted to the sheriff to state a case on the questions (1) whether under sec. 1 (3) of the Act a question had arisen as to the liability to pay compensation or as to the amount or duration thereof so as to give the sheriff jurisdiction to entertain the petition, and (2) whether the petition was competent in the circumstances.

Caledon Shipbuilding and Engineering Co. v Kennedy, 1906, 8 F. 597; 43 S.L.R. 430; 13 S.L.T. 901.

(4) REMIT TO ARBITRATOR.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 26 (4), supra.]

(624)

Competency—Remit for question of law not raised before arbitrator.

Held that the Court had no power to send back for amendment a case stated on a specific question, in order to enable the appellant to raise a question which had not been raised before the arbitrator or decided by him.

Rae v Fraser, 1899, 1 F. 1017; 36 S.L.R. 782; 7 S.L.T. 73.

(625)

Remit for additional finding in fact.

Where a case for appeal bore to have been stated "as adjusted by the parties," and put one specific question of law, the Court refused to make a remit to have a finding upon a question of fact not stated in the case.

McDonald v Hobbs & Samuel, 1899, 2 F. 3; 37 S.L.R. 4; 7 S.L.T. 157.

(5) TRANSMISSION OF PROCESS FROM SHERIFF COURT.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 26 (5), supra.]

(626)

In a stated case under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, one of the parties moved for an order on the sheriff-clerk to transmit the process, on the ground that there was a note appended by the sheriff-substitute to his interlocutor which it was advisable that the Court should have before them when the stated case came up for decision. The Court refused the motion.

Singer Manufacturing Co. v Clelland, 1905, 7 F. 654; 42 S.L.R. 536; 13 S.L.T. 48.

(6) APPEAL TO HOUSE OF LORDS.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 26 (6), supra.]

(627)

Held that, in an arbitration under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, the judgment of a Division of the Court of Session upon a case stated by the sheriff cannot be appealed to the House of Lords.

McKinnon v Barclay, Curle & Co., 1901, 3 F. (H.L.) 1; [1901] A.C. 269; 38 S.L.R. 611; 9 S.L.T. 84.

20. SUSPENSION OF CHARGE TO PAY COMPENSATION.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 27, supra.]

(628)

Charge for compensation for period when earning wages—First schedule (12), second schedule (8).

In July, 1906, the employers of an injured workman agreed to pay him 14s. 5d. per week, being half his former wage, as compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and the workman received payment of that sum from July to September, 1906. A memorandum of the agreement was recorded. The agreement did not refer to the workman's total incapacity, but he admitted that he received the weekly payment in respect of total incapacity. In September, 1906, he returned to work with the same employers, and continued in their employment till May, 1907, earning wages which averaged 23s. 2d. per week. In May, 1907, he charged the employers on the recorded memorandum to pay him compensation at the full rate of 14s. 5d. per week for the period from September, 1906, to May, 1907. The sum charged for, with the addition of the wages earned by him during that period, gave an average sum per week considerably in excess of his average weekly earnings before the accident. The employers brought a suspension, and tendered payment of the full difference between his earnings from September, 1906, to May, 1907, and his earnings for a like period before the accident. The Court, in respect of the workman's refusal to accept the sum tendered, suspended the charge.

William Baird & Co. v McWhinnie, 1908 S.C. 440; 45 S.L.R. 338; 15 S.L.T. 745.

(629)

On 19th September the employers of a miner agreed to pay him compensation at the rate of 13s. 3d. per week, being one-half of 26s. 6d.—his average wage before the accident. The agreement was recorded. On 12th January, 1906, the miner returned to work with his former employers, and received 20s. per week of wages. On the employers proposing to reduce the compensation payable, the miner, on 26th April, presented a petition to the sheriff to review the weekly payment. On 3rd May the miner's wages were raised to 27s. 6d. per week. On 18th October the sheriff pronounced an interlocutor in the petition reducing the compensation from that date to 1s. per week. On 10th November the miner charged his employers upon the registered memorandum of agreement for payment of compensation at the rate of 13s. 3d. per week from 17th January to 18th October. In a suspension brought by the employers they tendered payment at the rate of 6s. 6d. per week for the period from 12th January, when the miner returned to work at a wage of £1 per week, to 3rd May, when he received the full wage of 27s. 6d. per week. The Court suspended the charge, holding that the compensation agreed upon was only payable during the workman's incapacity, and that, having regard to the sum offered by the employers and the wages earned by the workman, nothing further was due to him for the period in question.

James Nimmo & Co. v Fisher, 1907 S.C. 890; 44 S.L.R. 641; 15 S.L.T. 14.

(630)

A workman obtained a decree under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, awarding him 17s. per week of compensation against his employers "until further orders of Court." He thereafter accepted employment with the same employers, and was paid 34s. per week, being the same wages as before the accident, and continued to be so employed and paid for a considerable period, during which no payments under the decree were made, and no steps under the Act were taken by the employers to have the decree for weekly payments reviewed or terminated. Having left their employment, the workman charged the employers to pay him the weekly payments decerned for from the date of the decree. In a suspension brought by the employers, in which they offered payment of 17s. per week during the time the workman was off work, the Court suspended the charge, holding that the workman was not entitled to payment under the decree for the time he was earning full wages.

Beath & Keay v Ness, 1903, 6 F. 168; 41 S.L.R. 113; 11 S.L.T. 455.

(631)

Charge for period before and for period after registration of agreement—Acquiescence in discontinuance of compensation—First schedule (12), second schedule (8).

Where under an agreement a workman has received weekly payments of compensation, which have been varied or discontinued by his employers, and he afterwards records a memorandum of that agreement and charges for payment, the Court (1) with regard to payments due for the period subsequent to recording, will not suspend the charge, the employers' remedy lying in an application for review; (2) with regard to payments for the period prior to recording, will allow a proof when the complainant avers that the respondent has acquiesced in either the variation or discontinuance of compensation, and, if that averment is proved, will suspend.

Lochgelly Iron and Coal Co. v Sinclair, 1909 S.C. 922; 46 S.L.R. 665; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 367.

(632)

The employers of an injured workman entered into a verbal agreement to pay him compensation weekly, and paid such compensation till 28th June, 1907, when they ceased doing so, alleging that his incapacity had ceased. On 26th July, 1907, the workman intimated to them that he proposed to record a memorandum of the agreement. A memorandum was recorded on 20th August, 1907, and on 27th November, 1907, the employers were charged to make payment of compensation from 28th June, 1907, the date at which the previous payments had ceased. The employers brought a note of suspension of that charge on the ground that the workman's incapacity had ceased by 28th June, and that accordingly the agreement to pay him compensation had also terminated then. The Court found the charge orderly proceeded, holding that there were no such averments of delay on the part of the workman in recording the agreement, or of other actings on his part, as to entitle the complainers to a proof that the workman had acquiesced in the discontinuance of the compensation.

Archibald Finnie & Son v Fulton, 1909 S.C. 938; 46 S.L.R. 665; 1909, 1 S.L.T. 375.

(633)

Recorded agreement superseded by subsequent unrecorded agreement—Averment that workman's incapacity had ceased.

The employers of an injured workman agreed to pay him 15s. 11d. per week, the statutory maximum, as compensation under the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, and the workman received payment of that sum from February, 1904, to September, 1905. A memorandum of the agreement was recorded under the Act. The workman having partially recovered returned to work, earned wages, and accepted payments first of 7s. 9d. and later of 5s. per week between October and December, 1905. On 10th January, 1906, he left the service of the employers, and thereafter intimated that he was totally incapacitated. The employers having refused to pay more than 5s. per week of compensation, the workman in March, 1906, charged them under the recorded agreement for payment of 15s. 11d. per week from 10th January, 1906. In a suspension the employers averred (1) that the agreement founded on had been superseded by subsequent agreements to accept first 7s. 9d. and then 5s. per week, and (2) that the workman was not incapacitated for work; and asked for a proof of these averments. The Court refused the suspension, upon the ground that it was contrary to the intention of the Act that such questions should be determined by proof in a suspension; and that the employers' remedy was to take proceedings under the Act either to have the payments under the original agreement reviewed, or to have the alleged subsequent agreement recorded.

Fife Coal Co. v Lindsay, 1908 S.C. 431; 45 S.L.R. 317; 15 S.L.T. 742.

(634)

Recorded agreement modified by subsequent unrecorded agreement—Restriction of charge.

An injured workman entered into a verbal agreement with his employers, whereby they agreed to pay him 16s. 6d. per week of compensation, and a memorandum of this agreement was recorded in the special register provided for by the Workmen's Compensation Act, and also in the sheriff court books. Having partially recovered, the workman afterwards entered into another verbal agreement, which was not recorded, whereby it was agreed that the compensation should be reduced to 11s. 6d. per week. On his employers subsequently refusing to continue the compensation he charged them for payment. The charge bore to proceed on the recorded agreement, but it also narrated the unrecorded agreement, and the sum charged for was the sum as modified by the unrecorded agreement, viz., 11s. 6d. per week. The Court refused a suspension of the charge at the instance of the employers, the Court holding (1) that the recorded agreement was not displaced as a ground of charge by the subsequent unrecorded agreement, and (2) that it was competent to restrict the amount charged for to a sum less than that in the agreement founded on.

Fife Coal Co. v Davidson, 1907 S.C. 90; 44 S.L.R. 108; 14 S.L.T. 462.

(635)

Alleged tender of compensation.

In a suspension of a charge for payment of compensation, held that an alleged tender of payment by the employers, which consisted in an intimation to the workman that the money would be paid if called for at their office, was not a good ground of suspension.

Haughhead Coal Co. v Gallocher, (O.H.) 1903, 11 S.L.T. 156.

(636)

Charge given on only six days' induciæ.

A charge was given by a workman on a registered memorandum of agreement on induciæ of six days. The memorandum had been registered in the sheriff court books for preservation and execution. A note of suspension was presented on the ground that seven days' induciæ were necessary. Note refused.

Gavin Paul & Sons v Dickson, (O.H.) 1903, 11 S.L.T. 228.

21. EXPENSES.

[See EXPENSES I. 10 (2).]

22. PERSONAL BAR.

[See also Cases under Act 1906, I. 29, supra.]

(637)

Offer by employer to continue wages previously earned—First schedule (2).

Employers in whose service a workman, earning wages at the rate of 16s. a week, had sustained injuries resulting in the loss of an arm, offered to retain him in the same employment at the same wages. This offer was declined by the workman. The arbitrator in an application to fix compensation found that the loss of his arm diminished the applicant's capacity to earn wages in the employment in question and awarded compensation at the rate of 6s. a week. Held that the refusal of the workman to accept the offer of employment did not exclude his right to compensation, if otherwise well founded, and award sustained.

Fraser v Great North of Scotland Railway Co., 1901, 3 F. 908; 38 S.L.R. 653; 9 S.L.T. 96.

III. WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT, 1900.

(63 & 64 Vict. c. 22.)

(638)

Agriculture—Workman mainly employed in agricultural, but occasionally in other work—Employment on traction engine and threshing-mill—Sec. 1, sub-sec. (3).

A workman in the employment of the owner of a portable threshing-mill, driven by a traction-engine, in the capacities of assistant thresher and traction-engine driver, was injured while the threshing-mill was being drawn by the traction-engine from a farm on which threshing had been finished to another farm where his employer had contracted to thresh on the following day. Held that the workman was entitled to compensation from his employer, in respect that he was a person employed mainly in agricultural work, i.e., threshing, and partly or occasionally in other work, within the meaning of sub-sec. (3) of sec. 1 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1900. Opinion (per Lord Trayner) that, apart from sub-sec. (3) the workman was entitled to compensation in respect that he was injured in the course of his employment as a thresher, the transit between one farm and another not forming any break in the course of that employment.

Proctor v Cumisky, 1904, 6 F. 832; 41 S.L.R. 636; 12 S.L.T. 172.

(639)

Forestry—Sec. 1 (3).

Sec. 1 of the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1900, makes the Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897, apply to employment of workmen in "agriculture," which, by sub-sec. (3) includes "forestry." A workman in the employment of a sawmiller was employed to cut down growing trees, which had been purchased by his employer, and cart them to the sawmill, and, while so employed, was killed by being crushed between a standing tree and the trunk of a tree which he was removing on a cart. The cutting down and removing of the trees was an ordinary part of the employer's business. Held that the employment in which the deceased was killed was not "forestry" in the sense of the Act of 1900, and consequently that his representatives were not entitled to compensation under the Acts.

Meally v McGowan, 1902, 4 F. 883; 39 S.L.R. 662; 10 S.L.T. 145.

IV. WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION (WAR ADDITION) ACTS, 1917 and 1919.

(7 & 8 Geo. V. c. 42 and 9 & 10 Geo. V. c. 83.)

(640)

Recorded memorandum not bearing that incapacity total—Charge thereon to pay war additions—Suspension of charge.

A workman was receiving compensation in accordance with a memorandum recorded under the Act of 1897. That memorandum did not disclose ex facie that the workman's incapacity was total. The workman charged his employers on the memorandum requiring them to pay the additional compensation due under the Workmen's Compensation (War Addition) Acts, 1917 and 1919. Charge suspended on the ground that the memorandum did not disclose that the workman had an indisputable right to the additional payments.

William Baird & Co. v Diamond, (O.H.) 1921, 2 S.L.T. 77.

WRECK. See HERITABLE PROPERTY.

WRIT.

	COL.
I. WHAT IS WRIT, - - - - -	1583
II. AUTHENTICATION—
1. Subscription before Witnesses, - - - - -	1585
(1) Signature, - - - - -	1585
(2) Writer's Designation, - - - - -	1588
(3) Witnesses, - - - - -	1588
See also (4), infra .
(a) Capacity, - - - - -	1588
(b) Execution, - - - - -	1589
(i) Essential to see Signature or hear
Acknowledgment, - - - - -	1589
(ii) Subscription ex Intervallo , - - - - -	1591
(iii) Acknowledgment, - - - - -	1593
(iv) Absence of Witness's Signature, - - - - -	1594
(4) Testing Clause, - - - - -	1594
(a) Added ex Intervallo , - - - - -	1594
(b) Designation of Witness, - - - - -	1595
(c) Provisions in Testing Clause, - - - - -	1596
(5) Proof of Improbative Writs under Conveyancing
(Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 39, - - - - -	1596
2. Subscription by Notaries, - - - - -	1600
3. Holograph, - - - - -	1602
(1) What is Holograph, - - - - -	1602
(2) Granter's Signature, - - - - -	1604
(3) Adoption as Holograph, - - - - -	1607
(4) Whether Writing Deliberative or Final, - - - - -	1611
See also 5 (1) infra , and SUCCESSION V. 1 (6).
4. Privileged Writs, - - - - -	1613
(1) In Re Mercatoria , - - - - -	1613
(2) Crown Writs, - - - - -	1617
5. Alterations, - - - - -	1617
(1) Deletions and Marginal or other Additions, - - - - -	1617
(a) Deletions, - - - - -	1617
(b) Deletions and Substituted Words, - - - - -	1619
(c) Marginal Additions, Interlineations, and other
Alterations in Writing, - - - - -	1621
(2) Erasures, - - - - -	1622
III. DELIVERY—
1. What amounts to Delivery, - - - - -	1625
2. Equivalent of Delivery—Registration, &c., - - - - -	1627
3. Effect of Delivery of Improbative Writing, - - - - -	1628
IV. CONSTRUCTION, - - - - -	1629
See also CONTRACT II. 7 (2).
V. WRIT OF AGENT, - - - - -	1630

I. WHAT IS WRIT.

(3)

—Loan—Proof.

The authenticity of pencil entries in a ledger as proof by writ recognised.

Hope v Derwent Rolling Mills Co., 1905,
7 F. 837; 42 S.L.R. 794; 13 S.L.T. 364.

(4)

Typewriting — Title to heritage — Type-written instrument forming part of title—
Sale — Sale of heritage — Objections to title—Act 1593, c. 179—Act 1681, c. 5—
Titles to Land Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1868, sec. 149—Conveyancing (Scotland)

Pencil—Testament—Codicil.

Held that a codicil written in pencil is effectual, if it be clear that it is a testamentary writing, and not merely a jotting.
Muir's Trustees, 1869, 8 M. 53; 42 J. 25;
7 S.L.R. 24.

(2)

A testamentary deed is not invalid because it is written in pencil.
Simson v Simson, 1883, 10 R. 1247; 20 S.L.R. 831.

Act, 1874, sec. 38—Interpretation Act, 1889, sec. 20.

A trustee left a trust disposition and settlement duly subscribed by him and by the instrumentary witnesses, but wholly typewritten, and two codicils relative thereto, the earlier in date being typewritten and the later in date being written by hand, both referring in gremio to the settlement. The trustees acting thereunder having sold certain property, which formed part of the trust estate, the purchaser refused to accept the title to the property tendered by the trustees, on the ground that the trust disposition and settlement forming part of the title was typewritten.

In an action by the trustees for implement of the sale, held that the title tendered was valid.

Simpson's Trustees v Macharg & Son, (O.H.) 1902, 39 S.L.R. 562; 9 S.L.T. 398.

(5)
Execution—Power of appointment by writing to be executed with certain formalities—Failure to observe formalities.

When a contract or will confers a power to appoint to certain funds by a writing to be executed in a manner prescribed, the power cannot be exercised by a writing not so executed.

Question (per Lord M'Laren), whether—except in the case of a will—it is competent for a person to say that he will be bound by any future deed, although neither holograph nor tested.

Campbell's Trustees v Campbell, 1903, 5 F. 366; 40 S.L.R. 335; 10 S.L.T. 589.

II. AUTHENTICATION.

1. SUBSCRIPTION BEFORE WITNESSES.

(1) SIGNATURE.

(6) Signature by stamp.

Held that a codicil signed by means of a stamp was invalid.

Stirling Stuart v Stirling Crawford's Trustees, 1885, 12 R. 610; 22 S.L.R. 391.

(7) Signature impressed by "cyclostyle"—Probative deed—Election law.

A voter, objecting to a certain person's name being retained on the register of voters, instead of signing the notice of objection in the ordinary way, stencilled his name upon it through a perforated signature he had made on a waxed skin. Held that the notice was "signed by the person objecting" in the sense of sec. 4 of the Burgh Voters Act, 1856.

Observed that the signature would not satisfy the conditions of the statutes regulating the subscription and attestation of probative deeds.

Whyte v Watt, 1893, 21 R. 165; 31 S.L.R. 127; 1 S.L.T. 342.

(8)

Granter's hand supported.

Held that it did not invalidate the subscription of the maker of a deed that he was assisted by having his hand held about the wrist, the hand not having been led in the formation of the letters.

Noble v Noble, 1875, 3 R. 74; 13 S.L.R. 58.

(9)

Deed written bookwise—Signed on last page—Initialed on others—Act 1696, c. 15.

A deed dated prior to 1874, consisting of seven pages, written bookwise on two sheets of paper, was signed by the granters on the seventh page only, the other pages being initialed by them. Held that the deed was not probative under the Act 1696, in respect that each page was not signed by the granters.

Observed that the provisions of the Act 1696, c. 15, with regard to the executions of deeds written bookwise were the conditions on which alone validity was conferred upon such deeds.

Gardner v Lucas, 1878, 5 R. (H.L.) 105; 3 App.Cas. 582; 15 S.L.R. 740.

(10)

Deed consisting of more than one sheet subscribed on last page only—Whether deed instrument or writing subscribed by the granter or maker within the meaning of the 39th section of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874.

M'Laren v Menzies, 1876, 3 R. 1151; 13 S.L.R. 703.

Inglis' Trustees v Inglis, 1901, 4 F. 365; 39 S.L.R. 253, Nos. 66 and 67, infra.

(11)

Codicil written partly on probative will and partly on separate paper and subscribed on latter only—Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 39.

Brown, 1883, 11 R. 400; 21 S.L.R. 267, No. 68, infra.

(12)

Unsigned Scots settlement admitted to probate in England and acted on for fifty years—Effect in Scotland—English case for opinion of Court.

A case settled by the High Court of Justice in England for the opinion of the Court of Session related to a trust disposition and settlement in Scots form, prepared by a writer to the signet, but undated and unsigned. The Court held that as the words of residuary bequest occurred in an unsigned writing, they were by the law of Scotland worthless to affect the succession or estate of a domiciled Scotsman, and that, although the unsigned writing had been admitted to probate in England, and was a good testamentary disposition according to English law, no Court administering the law of Scotland, or acting according to that law, as governing the case before it, could give any effect to such a writing.

Bradford v Young, &c., 1884, 11 R. 1135; 21 S.L.R. 772.

(13)

Illegibility—Retouching—Added initials.

In an action of reduction of a codicil, it was maintained that the codicil was invalid in respect that the signature was no more than a mark, and that it showed signs of having been retouched, and that certain initials had been added after the rest of the signature was written and witnessed, and outwith the presence of the witnesses. Held, after a proof, that the codicil bore the signature of the testator, and that it was immaterial whether it was legible or not, and that the original signature and the retouching had taken place at the same time, or, at all events, that the original untouched signature was sufficient.

Stirling Stuart v Stirling Crawford's Trustees, 1885, 12 R. 610; 22 S.L.R. 391.

(14)

Allegation that deed not signed by granter—Proof—Onus—Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, secs. 38 and 39.

Where a person alleged that a deed without a testing clause bearing to be signed by him and by attesting witnesses had not been signed by him, and it was proved that the witnesses had signed, but had not seen the alleged granter sign, or heard him acknowledge the subscription, and where the person founding on the deed did not prove that the granter had signed it, held that the deed could not receive effect.

Geddes v Reid, 1891, 18 R. 1186; 28 S.L.R. 879.

(15)

Ex facie mutual deed, but really conveyance signed by first party only—Formal completion after her death—Competency.

Objection that a deed, in form a mutual deed, though really a conveyance of heritage to trustees for a congregational chapel, having been given out as complete so far as the real granter was concerned, could not be completed after her death by the signatures of the other parties to it, the trustees, repelled.

Tener's Trustees v Tener's Trustees, 1879, 6 R. 1111; 16 S.L.R. 672.

See also Walker v Whitwell, 1916 S.C. (H.L.) 75; 53 S.L.R. 129; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 2, No. 37, infra.

(16)

Signature on erasure—Proof—Onus.

Brown v Duncan, 1888, 15 R. 511; 25 S.L.R. 369, No. 177, infra.

(17)

Signature on blank sheet—Will subsequently dictated by testator and written over signature.

A testator signed his name on a blank sheet of paper, and thereafter dictated the will, which overlapped the signature, but not the names and designations of the witnesses. Before they subscribed he acknowledged the authenticity of the will. Held that the will was valid.

Carsewell's Trustees v Carsewell, (O.H.) 1895, 3 S.L.T. 218.

(18)

Signature by mark—"Writing under his hand"—Friendly Societies Act, 1896, sec. 56 (1).

Held that a nomination authenticated by the mark of a member of a friendly society (she being unable to write) and by the signatures of two instrumental witnesses, was not a writing under her hand within the meaning of the above enactment, and that being of a testamentary character and unsigned it was of no force or effect in law.

Morton v French, 1908 S.C. 171; 45 S.L.R. 126; 15 S.L.T. 517.

(2) WRITER'S DESIGNATION.

(19)

Acts 1593, c. 179, and 1681, c. 5.

In an offer to sell heritable subjects, which was not holograph, the writer was mentioned in the body of the writing as "Mr. John Smith, who will prepare the disposition," and was only designed in the testing clause as "the said John Smith." Held that the writer of the offer was not duly designed, and that the offer was therefore improbativ, although in the acceptance, which was written on the same paper as the offer, allusion was made to "the said John Smith as agent for both parties."

Mitchell v Scott's Trustees, 1874, 2 R. 162; 12 S.L.R. 108. But see the Conveyancing Act, 1874, sec. 38.

(3) WITNESSES.

[See also (4), infra.]

(a) Capacity.

(20)

Women.

Sec. 139 of the Titles to Land Act, 1868, authorising women to act as instrumental witnesses, is not limited to deeds regarding heritage.

Hannay, 1873, 1 R. 246; 11 S.L.R. 106.

(21)

Witness interested in deed.

The attestation of a testamentary deed is not invalidated by the fact that an attesting witness takes benefit under it.

Simson v Simson, 1883, 10 R. 1247; 20 S.L.R. 831.

(22)

Knowledge of granter—Act 1681, c. 5.

Held that a codicil was validly executed where one of the witnesses had not previously known the granter, but was introduced to him at the time of the execution by the other witness, who was an acquaintance, and whom he knew to be a law agent.

Brock v Brock, 1908 S.C. 964; 45 S.L.R. 888; 16 S.L.T. 124.

(b) Execution.

(i) Essential to See Signature or Hear Acknowledgment.

(23)

"Informality of execution"—Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 39.

Where a person alleged that a deed without a testing clause, bearing to be signed by him and by attesting witnesses, had not been signed by him, and it was proved that the witnesses had signed, but had not seen, the alleged grantor sign or heard him acknowledge the subscription, and where the person founding on the deed did not prove that the grantor had signed it, held that the deed could not receive effect.

Opinion (per Lord Young) that when a deed is irregularly executed by reason of the persons signing as witnesses not having seen the grantor subscribe or heard him acknowledge his subscription, the deed will be effectual if it is proved that the grantor signed it.

Geddes v Reid, 1891, 18 R. 1186; 28 S.L.R. 879.

(24)

Opinion that the fact that the signature to a deed was neither adhibited nor acknowledged in the presence of one of the attesting witnesses is a fatal defect, and not a mere "informality of execution" in the sense of sec. 39 of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874.

Forrests v Low's Trustees, 1907 S.C. 1240; 44 S.L.R. 925; 15 S.L.T. 330.

(25)

The Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 39, does not apply to a case where the signatures of witnesses bearing to attest the subscription of the grantor of a deed were adhibited before the subscription of the grantor, and where the witnesses neither saw the grantor sign nor heard him acknowledge his subscription.

Smyth v Smyth, 1876, 3 R. 573; 13 S.L.R. 356.

(26)

Mutual settlement—One party's signature not witnessed.

A deed bearing to be a mutual settlement by a husband and wife contained a conveyance by the husband of his whole estate in favour of his wife in life and his children in fee, and a corresponding conveyance by the wife of her estate in favour of her husband and children. The deed was signed by the husband before witnesses, and by the wife, but not before witnesses. Held that it was effectual as a testamentary settlement of the husband's estate.

Millar v Birrell, 1876, 4 R. 87; 14 S.L.R. 58.

(27)

Reduction of invalid deed—Form of issue.

Form of issue adjusted in a reduction of a deed, on the ground that the grantor had neither signed the deed in the presence of the persons whose names appeared as witnesses nor acknowledged his subscription to them.

Cumming v Skeoch's Trustees, 1879, 6 R. 540; 16 S.L.R. 268.

(28)

Denial by attesting witness that signature adhibited or acknowledged in her presence.

Circumstances where the Court refused to set aside a will on the unsupported evidence of one of the attesting witnesses that the testator's signature had not been adhibited or acknowledged in her presence.

Observed, "When a deed is ex facie perfectly regular and duly tested, it cannot be set aside on the sole and unsupported statement of one of the witnesses that she did not really attest what her signature bears that she did attest. It can only be set aside on the clearest possible evidence."

Forrests v Low's Trustees, 1907 S.C. 1240; 44 S.L.R. 925; 15 S.L.T. 330.

(29)

Witnesses neither seeing signature adhibited nor hearing acknowledgment—Proof—Act 1681, c. 5.

A bond and disposition in security bore to be subscribed by a husband and wife at Glasgow on 4th June, 1907, before two witnesses, clerks to the law agent who prepared it. In an action for reduction of the deed at the wife's instance, the witnesses, while not professing to recollect witnessing the deed, deposed that their signatures were genuine, and that they never had signed as witnesses without either seeing the parties subscribe or hearing them acknowledge their subscriptions. It was proved that on 4th June the husband and wife were not in Glasgow, that on that day the law agent brought the deed from Glasgow to Thorntonhall (half an hour's journey by rail), and there obtained the signatures of both spouses, and that neither of the witnesses was at Thorntonhall upon that day. The Court, while not doubting the honesty of the instrumentary witnesses, held that the other evidence was sufficient to prove that the deed was not duly and validly executed.

Young v Paton, 1910 S.C. 63; 47 S.L.R. 78; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 340.

(30)

Objection by granters that witnesses not present—Onerous deed—Objection latent and technical—Personal bar.

The granters of an onerous deed ex facie probative, and delivered to the grantee, challenged it on the ground that one of the instrumentary witnesses had neither seen them sign nor heard them acknowledge their signatures. Held (1) on the evidence that this allegation had not been proved; and (2) that, even if it had, the granters of the deed were barred from bringing a challenge of it on such a latent and technical ground.

Baird's Trustee v Murray, 1883, 11 R. 153; 21 S.L.R. 109.

(31)

Rei interventus—Cautioner.

A bank agreed to make advances to A on his obtaining B's guarantee. A formal letter of guarantee, ending with the words "in witness whereof," was then prepared by the bank and handed to A for execution by B. A obtained B's signature, and afterwards got two persons to sign as witnesses who had not seen B subscribe nor heard him acknowledge his subscription. A returned the document to the bank with the names and designations of the witnesses, the testing clause was filled up by the bank, and the bank made an advance to A on the faith of the guarantee. In an action by the bank on the letter of guarantee against B, the defender pleaded that he was not bound, as the deed was not tested. These facts were admitted on proof. Held that the defender having signed the deed and delivered it to A, who was in hac re the bank's agent, he had delivered it to the bank as a guarantee for advances to A, and that the bank having made advances on the faith of it, the defender's imperfect obligation had been validated by rei interventus.

National Bank of Scotland v Campbell, 1892, 19 R. 885; 29 S.L.R. 757.

(32)

A lady granted a bond in favour of a bank. The bond was ex facie well executed, and the bank, in perfect good faith, gave onerous consideration in return for it. The deed was not in fact duly attested, the lady not having subscribed in presence of the attesting witnesses or acknowledged her signature to them. In an action by the lady against the bank for reduction of the deed, held that the pursuer could not plead against the defenders the informality of execution of the deed.

MacLeish v British Linen Bank, (O.H.) 1911, 2 S.L.T. 168.

(ii) Subscription ex Intervallo.

(33)

After granter's death.

In a reduction of a testament, ex facie probative, on the ground that it had been signed by the witnesses ex intervallo and after the testator's death, held, after a proof, that the deed was not intended by the granter to be completed, and had not been completed. Question, whether a deed can be subscribed by the instrumentary witnesses after the death of the granter.

Arnott v Burt, 1872, 11 M. 62; 45 J. 46; 10 S.L.R. 51.

(34)

A deed was subscribed by the granter in presence of two persons, one of whom only at the time adhibited his signature as an instrumentary witness, the parties being under the impression that this was enough. Some time after the death of the granter the other added his signature as an attesting witness to the granter's signature. Held that the deed must receive effect.

Tener's Trustees v Tener's Trustees, 1879, 6 R. 1111; 16 S.L.R. 672.

(35)

One of the two witnesses to the signature of the granter of a document signed it as a witness after the death of the granter. It was proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the signature of the witness was her own signature, that the document was the one signed by the granter, and that the witness saw him sign it. Held that the document was probative.

Beattie v Bain's Trustees, (O.H.) 1899, 6 S.L.T. 277.

(36)

J R died, leaving a will which was subscribed by himself and by one witness. After his death his widow, who was a beneficiary under the will, and who had been present when it was subscribed, added her subscription as a witness. Held (by Lord Johnston, Ordinary) and opinion (per Lord M'Laren), that the will had not been validly executed.

Brownlee v Robb, 1907 S.C. 1302; 44 S.L.R. 876; 15 S.L.T. 261.

(37)

In a petition under sec. 39 of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, to have it declared that a testamentary writing, to which the signature of one of the two attesting witnesses had been adhibited after the death of the testator, was duly subscribed, held that an attesting witness cannot adhibit his signature after the death of the granter of the deed, and, accordingly, that the testamentary writing was invalid. Rules and principles regulating the attestation of deeds discussed and explained.

Walker v Whitwell, 1916 S.C. (H.L.) 75; 53 S.L.R. 129; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 2.

(38)

Duplicate missives of sale of heritage were written out by a third party and subscribed by the seller and purchaser in presence of other persons not specially called as witnesses. The purchaser, four months afterwards, repudiated the bargain, and the seller then caused the persons who had been present to subscribe the missive in her possession as instrumentary witnesses, and had a testing clause added. Held that the subscription of the witnesses and the testing clause had been competently added, and that the missive was a probative writ.

Stewart v Burnas, 1877, 4 R. 427; 14 S.L.R. 292.

(39)

After acknowledgment—Act 1681, c. 5.

Held that it was not a good objection under the Act 1681, c. 5, to the validity of a deed, that the attesting witnesses had not subscribed in the presence of the granter after hearing her acknowledge her signature, but had taken the deed away and appended their signatures in another house within three quarters of an hour thereafter.

Thomson v Clarkson's Trustees, 1892, 20 R. 59; 30 S.L.R. 93.

(40)

After lodging for recording.

Circumstances in which the Court authorised a testamentary deed (not bearing the signatures of the instrumentary witnesses) which had been lodged with the Keeper of the Register of Deeds, &c., for the purpose of being recorded for preservation in the Books of Council and Session, but which had not yet been recorded, to be signed by the instrumentary witnesses in presence of the Keeper of the Register, on condition that an extract which had been issued before recording be returned to the keeper, and that a copy of the deliverance should be added to future extracts, and authenticated by the Keeper as part of the extract and decree.

Murray, 1904, 6 F. 840; 41 S.L.R. 640; 12 S.L.T. 156.

(iii) Acknowledgment.

(41)

Form of acknowledgment—Authority to attest acknowledgment of signature—Act 1681, c. 5.

Where a person, who was not present at the time when the granter of a deed signed it, afterwards subscribes as a witness to the signature, it is sufficient compliance with the statute 1681, c. 5, if he receive from the granter a sufficient acknowledgment of his signature, in whatever form that acknowledgment may be made.

Cumming v Skeoch's Trustees, 1879, 6 R. 963; 16 S.L.R. 574.

(42)

—Res gestæ.

In an action of reduction of a will an issue was sent to trial, "Whether the alleged witnesses did not see A B subscribe the same, and did not hear him acknowledge his subscription?" The presiding judge directed the jury that "If there be, at the time of the witnesses subscribing, any sufficient acknowledgment by the party of his signature, in whatever form that acknowledgment may have been made, that is all which is required," and refused to give the direction demanded by the pursuers' counsel "that the witnesses must have heard the party acknowledge by his own spoken words the subscription." Bill of exceptions, on the grounds (1) that the ruling was bad in law; and (2) that even if it was good law in the abstract it was inappropriate to the issue and misleading; disallowed.

Res gestæ which held to amount to a virtual acknowledgment by the testator of his signature to one of the witnesses who did not see him sign, and to justify the verdict.

Cumming v Skeoch's Trustees, 1879, 6 R. 963; 16 S.L.R. 574.

(43)

Circumstances tantamount to acknowledgment in which the execution of a deed was held good when it was alleged that an instrumentary witness had neither seen the deed signed nor heard the granters acknowledge their signature.

Sutherland v W. M. Low & Co., (O.H.) 1901, 8 S.L.T. 395; affirmed on another ground, 1901, 3 F. 972; 38 S.L.R. 720; 9 S.L.T. 91. FRAUD, No. 43.

(iv) Absence of Witness's Signature.

(44)

One of the instrumentary witnesses never signed the minute of enactment in favour of the purchaser at a sale of heritage by auction. Held (by Lord Kyllachy, Ordinary) that a valid contract of sale had not been completed.

Moncrieff v Lawrie, 1896, 23 R. 577; 33 S.L.R. 452; 3 S.L.T. 298.

(4) TESTING CLAUSE.

(a) Added ex Intervallo.

(45)

Supplemented after granter's death.

In a case in which a testator, who died in March, 1874, had left a codicil with a defective testing clause, which had been supplemented after his death, held that the deed was probative.

Question how far the provisions of secs. 38 and 39 of the Conveyancing Act, 1874, as to authentication of deeds, have a retrospective effect.

Veasey v Malcolm's Trustees, 1875, 2 R. 748; 12 S.L.R. 479.

(46)

Mutual deed—Added after repudiation by one of the parties.

Duplicate missives of sale were signed but not tested. Four months afterwards the purchaser repudiated. The seller then caused parties present at the signing, though not called as instrumentary witnesses, to sign as such the missive in her possession, and added a testing clause.

Held that the missive was probative.

Stewart v Burns, 1877, 4 R. 427; 14 S.L.R. 292.

(47)

Deed produced in judgment.

Some years after a person's death an action was raised against his executor-dative for payment of an alleged legacy. The will founded on, when produced in process, was held by the sheriff-substitute not to be regularly tested, as the testing clause did not mention the name of the writer of the deed; but before answer he allowed an addition to be made to the testing clause. Held that the deed was null under the Act 1681, c. 5, and that the testing clause could not be completed after the will had been produced in judgment.

Hill v Arthur, 1870, 9 M. 223; 43 J. 171; 8 S.L.R. 176.

(48)

Deed produced in process but not founded on.

Where a deed with an incomplete testing clause was produced in process by one of the parties, who did not found on it, held that the opposite party was entitled to have the testing clause completed and effect given to the deed in the process.

Millar v Birrell, 1876, 4 R. 87; 14 S.L.R. 58.

(b) Designation of Witness.

(49)

Discrepancy between signature of witness and name in testing clause—Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 39.

The testing clause of a recorded disposition of heritage bore, inter alia, that the disposition had been subscribed by Hugh James Rollo (one of the granters) "before these witnesses, William Robertson, apprentice, and John Alexander James, clerk, both to me, the said Hugh James Rollo." The subscription of one of the witnesses to what bore to be Rollo's subscription was "William Robertson, witness." A proof, allowed in a petition under the 39th section of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, established that William Robertson, apprentice to Rollo, had attested Rollo's subscription by subscribing the words "William Robertson, witness," appearing on the disposition in question. Held that the discrepancy between "Robertson" and "Roberton" was an informality of execution within the meaning of the 39th section of the Act, that that section therefore applied, and, looking to the proof, that the petition fell to be granted.

Richardson's Trustees, 1891, 18 R. 1131; 28 S.L.R. 889.

(50)

How to be designed.

Held that the Act 1681, c. 5, did not require the insertion in the testing clause of probative deeds of the names of the subscribing witnesses, but only of such a designation as along with their subscriptions was sufficient for identification.

M'Dougall v M'Dougall, 1875, 2 R. 814; 12 S.L.R. 502.

(51)

Subscribing witness not designed—Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, secs. 38 and 39.

Thomson's Trustees v Easson, 1878, 6 R. 141; 16 S.L.R. 67, No. 60, infra.

(52)

Erroneous designation.

In the testing clause of a deed of entail granted by two sisters, their servant, who signed as witness to their signatures, was designed as "their" servant instead of "our" servant. Held that as the meaning was plain from the context the mistake did not invalidate the deed.

Speirs v Speirs' Trustees, 1878, 5 R. 923; 15 S.L.R. 649.

(c) Provisions in Testing Clause.

(53)

Held that words inserted in the testing clause of a deed can have no effect in altering or adding to its provisions.

Blair v Assets Co., 1896, 23 R. (H.L.) 36; [1896] A.C. 409; 33 S.L.R. 539; 4 S.L.T. 13.

(54)

The testing clause of a trust settlement bore that the deed was subscribed "under the express provision and declaration, viz., that the whole of the legacies, &c., shall be strictly alimentary, and shall not be arrestable or attachable for the debts" of the beneficiaries. Question, whether a judgment of the First Division (1877, 5 R. 97), holding that the restriction was ineffectual, because it occurred only in the testing clause, was sound. Opinion (per Lord Gordon) that the decision was not consistent with the principle laid down by the House in Dunlop v Greenlees, 1865, 3 M. (H.L.) 46.

Chambers' Trustees v Smith, 1878, 5 R. (H.L.) 151; 3 App.Cas. 795; 15 S.L.R. 541.

(5) PROOF OF IMPROBATIVE WRITS UNDER CONVEYANCING (SCOTLAND) ACT, 1874, SEC. 39.

(55)

Whether retrospective.

Question, how far the provisions of sec. 39 of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, have a retrospective effect.

Veasey v Malcolm's Trustees, 1875, 2 R. 748; 12 S.L.R. 479.

(56)

Held that this enactment did not apply to deeds executed prior to 1st October, 1874, the date when the Act came into operation.

Gardner v Lucas, 1878, 5 R. (H.L.) 105; 3 App.Cas. 582; 15 S.L.R. 740.

(57)

Informality of execution—Witnesses.

Opinion that the fact that the signature to a deed was neither adhibited nor acknowledged in the presence of one of the attesting witnesses is a fatal defect, and not a mere informality of execution in the sense of sec. 39 of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874.

Forrests v Low's Trustees, 1907 S.C. 1240; 44 S.L.R. 925; 15 S.L.T. 330.

(58)

Witnesses—Necessity for attestation.

Held that the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 39, did not apply to a case where the signatures of witnesses bearing to attest the subscription of the granter of a deed were adhibited before the subscription of the granter, and where the witnesses neither saw the granter sign nor heard him acknowledge his subscription.

Smyth v Smyth, 1876, 3 R. 573; 13 S.L.R. 356.

[Cf. Stewart v Burns, 1877, 4 R. 427; 14 S.L.R. 292, No. 38, supra.]

(59)

Witnesses—Proof.

A person died leaving a trust disposition bearing to be subscribed by himself and attested by two witnesses, but without a testing clause. His representatives presented a petition under sec. 39 of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, craving a proof, and thereafter to have it declared that the deed was subscribed by the granter and witnesses. The Court allowed a proof by commission, and thereafter found and declared as craved.

Addison, 1875, 2 R. 457; 12 S.L.R. 334.

(60)

Witnesses — Designation — Competence.

In a petition under the 39th section of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, to have it declared that a testamentary writing was subscribed by the granter and witnesses by whom it bore to be subscribed, held that it was no objection to the competency of the petition that the particular informality sought to be cured was the want of the designations of the subscribing witnesses, which, by the 38th section of the statute, might have been appended before the writing was founded on in any Court, but which remedy was no longer applicable.

Thomson's Trustees v Easson, 1878, 6 R. 141; 16 S.L.R. 67.

(61)

Witnesses' designations.

The executors-nominate under a last will and testament recorded in the books of a sheriff court, presented a petition under sec. 39 of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, to set up the deed. The informality of execution was that the designation of the attesting witnesses was wanting. The petitioners moved the Court to grant warrant for the delivery of the deed to them for the purpose of exhibition to one of the witnesses resident in India. The Court granted the motion on the petitioners finding caution for the return of the deed quam primum, an extract duly authenticated being previously lodged in its stead.

Garrett, 1883, 20 S.L.R. 756.

(62)

Witnesses—Designation—Proof.

A person died leaving a will and codicil partly written and partly printed, bearing to be subscribed by herself and attested by two witnesses, but the witnesses' designations were neither contained in the deeds nor appended to their signatures. Her executor presented a petition under sec. 39 of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, stating that the will and codicil were subscribed and witnessed by the persons whom he mentioned in the petition, and craving a proof, and thereafter to have it declared that the deeds were subscribed by the granter and by the persons by whom the deeds bore to be attested. The Court allowed a proof by commission, and thereafter found and declared as craved.

Nisbet, 1897, 24 R. 411; 34 S.L.R. 301; 4 S.L.T. 279.

(63)

Discrepancy between signature of witness and name in testing clause.

Richardson's Trustees, 1891, 18 R. 1131; 28 S.L.R. 889, No. 49, supra.

(64)

Discrepancy between signature of granter and name of granter in body of deed and testing clause—Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 39.

A disposition of heritable subjects was subscribed "Isabella C. Moncur," whereas the body of the deed bore that it was granted by, and the testing clause that it was subscribed by, "Mrs. Isabella Williamson or Moncur." Another disposition of heritage was subscribed "Joan Colville Brown," whereas the body of the deed bore that the granter was Mrs. Joan Colville or Brown, and the testing clause made no reference to the discrepancy. In a petition under the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 39, for declarator that the deeds were duly subscribed by the granters thereof, held that the petition was unnecessary and must be dismissed.

Grieve's Trustees v Japp's Trustees, 1916, 54 S.L.R. 176; 1917, 1 S.L.T. 70.

(65)

Where one of the witnesses is subscribing ex intervallo, and after granter's death.

A will was subscribed by the granter in presence of two persons, one of whom only at the time adhibited his signature as an instrumentary witness, the parties being under the impression that this was enough. Some time after the death of the granter, the other added his signature as an attesting witness to the granter's signature. Held that subscription by a witness after the granter's death was a fatal defect, and not a mere informality of execution in the sense of the 39th section of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, and that the will was accordingly invalid.

Walker v Whitwell, 1916 S.C. (H.L.) 75; 53 S.L.R. 129; 1916, 1 S.L.T. 2.

(66)

Subscription of granter—Deed consisting of more than one sheet subscribed on last page only.

Held that a writing in the form of a deed consisting of more than one sheet, and bearing the name of the alleged granter by way of subscription on the last page only, along with the names, also by way of subscription, of two attesting witnesses, may be proved by evidence prout de jure to be a "deed, instrument, or writing subscribed by the grantor or maker" within the meaning of the 39th section of the Conveyancing Act, 1874.

M'Laren v Menzies, 1876, 3 R. 1151; 13 S.L.R. 703.

(67)

—Proof of signature.

A draft trust disposition and settlement, prepared by a law agent on the instructions of a client, was written on eight pages of two sheets of paper folded bookwise, and sent to the client, who, after the lapse of five years, took it to his bank, where he signed it on the last page only before two of the bank clerks, who subscribed as witnesses. There was no testing clause. The deed was found in the client's repositories at his death. In a petition to the Court under sec. 39 of the Conveyancing Act, 1874, for declarator that the deed was subscribed by the client as the maker thereof, and by the witnesses, the above facts were proved. Held that the deed had been signed by the client as the maker thereof, and by the witnesses, and that it was a valid testamentary writing.

Inglis' Trustees v Inglis, 1901, 4 F. 365; 39 S.L.R. 253.

(68)

—Codicil written partly on probative will, partly on separate paper, and subscribed on latter only.

A codicil relative to a properly signed and attested will was written partly on a blank space at the end of the last sheet of the will, and partly on a separate sheet. The latter part of the codicil was duly signed and tested, but the former part was unsubscribed. Held that the codicil was a "deed, instrument, or writing" which might be proved by evidence prout de jure to have been "subscribed by the grantor or maker," within the meaning of the 39th section of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874.

Brown, 1883, 11 R. 400; 21 S.L.R. 267.

(69)

Foreign—Will made according to law of New Zealand—Titles to Land Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1868, sec. 20.

A person died domiciled in New Zealand possessed of heritable estate situated in Scotland, and leaving a trust disposition and settlement, good according to the law of New Zealand, but not probative according to Scots law. The trustees, in order to entitle them to make up a title to the heritable estate in Scotland, presented a petition under sec. 39 of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, for declarator that the settlement was duly subscribed. The Court granted the petition, but held that the deed was already valid under sec. 20 of the Titles to Land Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1868.

Browne, 1882, 20 S.L.R. 76.

2. SUBSCRIPTION BY NOTARIES.

(70)

Personal objection—Mutual deed—Same notary for different parties.

Held that it was not a nullity under the statute that the same two notaries had subscribed for each of the two parties to a mutual settlement, revocable by either.

Grame v Grame's Trustees, 1868, 7 M. 14; 41 J. 15; 6 S.L.R. 7.

(71)

—Marriage contract—Notary signing for wife—Husband's law agent.

A widow brought an action of reduction of her antenuptial marriage contract against her husband's trustees on the ground that the notary public who executed the deed on her behalf, she being unable to write, was at the time acting as her husband's law agent in the matter. Question, whether the execution was invalid.

Lang v Lang's Trustees, 1889, 16 R. 590; 26 S.L.R. 466.

(72)

—Notary sole executor and intromitter.

A person who is nominated sole executor and intromitter under a settlement cannot competently act as notary in the execution of that settlement.

Chisholm v Macrae, (O.H.) 1903, 41 S.L.R. 300; 11 S.L.T. 416.

(73)

—Notary appointed trust agent.

A will was held to be invalid on the ground that the notary signing it was appointed law agent on the trust estate.

Newstead v Dansken, (O.H.) 1918, 1 S.L.T. 136.

(74)

Necessary formalities—Application of Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 39.

In an action of reduction of an alleged will purporting to be notarially executed, the pursuer averred that the notary (1) neither wrote his docquet (2) nor adhibited his signature in presence of the granter. The Lord Ordinary allowed issues, holding that the statutory requirements were that the notary must read the deed over; that he must subscribe it in presence of the granter and by his authority and also in the presence of the witnesses; that the witnesses must see or hear the authority given; and that there must be a docquet in a certain form, which must be adhibited in presence of the granter as well as of the witnesses. If the witnesses signed outwith the presence of the granter, this also would be a grave irregularity. Sec. 39 of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, did not apply to notarial execution.

Kissack v Webster's Trustees, (O.H.) 1894, 2 S.L.T. 172.

(75)

—Signature and docquet—Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 41.

A deed written upon one page had appendent to it on the same page a docquet by a notary public, stating, inter alia, that, by the authority of the granter, he subscribed these presents for him. The docquet was signed by the notary and witnesses, but the notary did not add a separate signature to the deed. Held that the execution was valid.

Mathieson v Hawthorns & Co., 1899, 1 F. 468; 36 S.L.R. 356; 6 S.L.T. 311.

(76)

—Whether deed “read over” to granter—Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 41.

A docquet appended to a deed, which had been executed notarially under the 41st section of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, bore that the deed had “been previously gone over and explained” to the granter, but not that it had been “read over” to him. In a reduction of the deed, the pursuers averred that the deed had not been read over to the granter. The defenders averred that it had been twice read over to him before subscription, the first time verbatim, and the second time, if not verbatim, at all events substantially, no material word being omitted. The Court allowed parties a proof of their averments before answer.

Watson v Beveridge, 1883, 11 R. 40; 21 S.L.R. 31.

(77)

Requisites of docquet—Holograph.

Held that a testament signed for a blind man by one notary and two witnesses was invalid, in respect that the notary’s docquet was not holograph. Observed that the legal equivalent for the signature of a person who cannot write is not merely the notary’s signature, but also the docquet attesting the facts of the inability of the granter of the deed to write, and of his having conferred authority on the notary to subscribe for him.

Henry v Reid, 1871, 9 M. 503; 43 J. 237; 8 S.L.R. 356.

(78)

Held (1) that a testament bearing to be signed for the granter by a justice of the peace was invalid, in respect that the docquet signed by the latter was not holograph; and (2) that the defect could not be remedied after the testator’s death.

Campbell v Purdie, 1895, 22 R. 443; 32 S.L.R. 316; 2 S.L.T. 547.

(79)

—Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 41.

Held that the necessity for a notarial docquet being holograph was not removed by the provisions of the 41st section of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, and that a deed bearing to be signed for the granter by a justice of the peace was invalid in respect that the docquet signed by the latter was not holograph.

Irvine v M’Hardy, 1892, 19 R. 458; 29 S.L.R. 361.

v 51

(80)

—Form—Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, sec. 41.

Held that the 41st section of the Conveyancing (Scotland) Act, 1874, does not prescribe the use of the form in sched. (I.), but merely suggests it as a good form, and that therefore a notarial docquet which was otherwise sufficient was not rendered invalid by its disconformity to the schedule.

Atchison’s Trustees v Atchison, 1876, 3 R. 388.

3. HOLOGRAPH.

(1) WHAT IS HOLOGRAPH.

(81)

Document partly holograph.

A document partly holograph, partly not, but signed by granter, held sufficient proof of loan.

Christie’s Trustees v Muirhead, 1870, 8 M. 461; 42 J. 215; 7 S.L.R. 273.

(82)

—Will—Lithograph.

Opinion (by Lord Gifford, Ordinary) that a will of which the formal clauses were lithographed, but the names of the testator and trustees and the effective words disposing of the estate were in the handwriting of the testator, was holograph of the testator.

A’s Executors v B, (O.H.) 1874, 11 S.L.R. 259.

(83)

—Will—Print.

A B, a domiciled Scotsman, resident in Shanghai, filled up, dated, and signed a printed form of a will drawn in English style, but left the annexed attestation schedule blank, there being no subscribing witnesses. The form contained blanks (1) for the name of the testator; (2) for the names of the legatees; and (3) for the name of an executor. In the first A B inserted his own name and designation, in the second the names of his two brothers, and the words “equally and jointly, if one deceased to the survivor only,” and in the third the name of a friend. The words of bequest and the description of the subjects were in print. The whole document, with the manuscript insertions, read as a bequest by A B of his whole heritable and moveable property to his two brothers. The execution of the will was defective according to the law of England, the lex loci actus, but it was founded on as a valid will by the law of Scotland. Held that the document could not receive effect as a holograph will.

Macdonald v Cuthbertson, 1890, 18 R. 101; 28 S.L.R. 92.

(84)

—Will—Partly written by law agent.

A lady filled up a sketch of provisions of a will which had been prepared by her law agent and signed it. Held that it was a valid will.

Murdoch's Judicial Factor v Thomson, (O.H.) 1896, 4 S.L.T. 155.

(85)

Terms of a signed but unattested testamentary writing, partly holograph and partly printed, which were held to constitute a valid will, in respect that the holograph portions expressed the testamentary intentions of the writer.

Carmichael's Executors v Carmichael, 1909 S.C. 1387; 46 S.L.R. 807; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 4.

(86)

"Before these witnesses."

A testator wrote the words "before these witnesses" above his signature to a holograph will. Held that by these words he had not prescribed attestation before witnesses as a necessary solemnity to his signature.

Gunnell's Trustees v Jones, (O.H.) 1915, 1 S.L.T. 166.

(87)

Unauthenticated marginal addition.

Brown v Maxwell's Executors, 1884, 11 R. 821; 21 S.L.R. 549, No. 170, infra.

(88)

Unauthenticated pencil indorsation on outside of holograph testament.

Petticrew's Trustees v Pettigrew, &c., 1884, 12 R. 249; 22 S.L.R. 171, No. 171, infra.

(89)

Pencil alterations on holograph will written in ink.

Currie's Trustees v Currie, 1904, 7 F. 364; 42 S.L.R. 297; 12 S.L.T. 613, No. 172, infra.

(90)

Holograph of a firm.

Held that a letter written and signed by one of the partners of a company in the firm name was holograph of the firm.

Nisbet v Neil's Trustee, 1869, 7 M. 1097; 41 J. 637; 6 S.L.R. 691.

(91)

An offer for the purchase of heritage belonging to a charitable corporation was made in the handwriting of one member of a firm, and signed with the company signature by another, but the acceptance was in the handwriting of a clerk, and though signed by the acceptor was not tested. Held that the offer was holograph of the firm, but the acceptance improbative, and that therefore there was no contract of sale.

McLaren v Law, (O.H.) 1871, 44 J. 17.

(92)

Authentication by signature—Granter unable to read—Document acknowledging indebtedness—Document neither holograph nor tested—Evidence to prove document grantor's writ—Proof.

In support of a claim due as wages by the father, a daughter, after her father's death, produced a document acknowledging his indebtedness to the extent claimed. This document was signed by the father, but was neither holograph nor tested, and except the signature was written by the daughter. The father could not read writing. Held that the daughter must prove that the document produced had been read over and explained to her father, and that he understood what he was signing, and evidence upon which held that she had failed to do so.

Macnaughton v Finlayson's Trustees, 1902, 40 S.L.R. 645; 10 S.L.T. 322.

(93)

Telegram.

The manager of a bank sent to a builder an improbative letter offering to sell a distillery which belonged to the bank. The builder sent a written acceptance of the offer to the bank manager. The bank manager then sent a telegram to the builder, which, the builder alleged, recognised or homologated the offer to sell the distillery contained in the improbative letter. Question (per Lord Kincairney, Ordinary), whether a telegram could be holograph of the sender of it.

Mowat v Caledonian Banking Co., (O.H.) 1895, 3 S.L.T. 108. Judgment affirmed, 1895, 23 R. 270; 33 S.L.R. 203; 3 S.L.T. 186.

(94)

Pencil entries in defender's ledger—Loan—Proof—Writ sufficient to prove loan.

Hope v Derwent Rolling Mills Co., 1905, 7 F. 837; 42 S.L.R. 794; 13 S.L.T. 364. Loan, No. 31.

(2) GRANTER'S SIGNATURE.

(95)

Unauthenticated holograph writing accompanied by letter subscribed with Christian name only.

A lady, two years before her death, delivered to her nephew a sealed-up packet, bearing on the outside her signature and the nephew's name. Attached to the packet by a string was an envelope addressed to the nephew as from her, these names also being in her writing. When delivering the packet she stated that it contained her will, and was not to be opened till her death. When the packet was opened after her death it was found to contain a holograph writing commencing with the words—"I, A B, do hereby make my last will and testament," but the writing itself was not subscribed. In a holograph letter which was in the envelope attached to the packet she referred to having made her will; and gave directions as to her burial. This letter was only signed with her Christian name. Held that in the circumstances of the case the presumption that an unsigned holograph will was incomplete had been displaced, and that the writing was a valid testament.

Russell's Trustees v Henderson, 1883, 11 R. 283; 21 S.L.R. 204.

(96)

Unauthenticated holograph writing accompanied by writing subscribed by initials.

After the death of H S there was found in a locked desk, of which she kept the key, two holograph writings, one on a sheet of paper, and the other on a smaller piece of paper, the sheet being within an envelope, and the smaller paper partly pushed into the same envelope. The sheet was dated, and commenced as follows:—"Wishing to make some little changes in my settlements, I, Helen Speirs," &c. It was not subscribed. The smaller paper began with "Also," and was initialed "H S." It was admitted that H S was in the habit of subscribing letters and documents with initials only, and that she had frequently referred to her will in conversation, and specially mentioned certain bequests which appeared in the holograph writings. Held that the two writings formed a probative and valid last will and testament.

Speirs v Home Speirs, 1879, 6 R. 1359; 16 S.L.R. 784.

(97)

Unauthenticated holograph writing subscribed "your loving mother"—Clause validating informal writings.

A testatrix by her settlement directed her trustees to "give effect to any wishes which I may hereafter express in writing, however informal." She subsequently executed an unsigned holograph writing in favour of certain of her children which she subscribed "Your loving mother." The writing was found in her repositories after her death enclosed in a sealed envelope on which she had indorsed the words "Not to be opened until." Held that the document was a valid testamentary writing.

Pentland v Pentland's Trustees, (O.H.) 1908, 46 S.L.R. 291; 16 S.L.T. 480.

(98)

Superscription—Name in gremio.

A writing, in the form of an unsigned will, holograph of a person deceased, was found in his repositories. The writing commenced thus—"I, Alexander Skinner." It then proceeded to dispose of the whole property of the deceased, and it ended thus—"And this written at Newton of Abbots-hall, by my own hand, this 17th day of July, 1882." Held that, as the document was not subscribed, it could not receive effect as a valid testamentary writing.

Skinner v Forbes, 1883, 11 R. 88; 21 S.L.R. 81.

(99)

Held that an unsigned holograph document commencing, I, A B, and purporting to be the writer's will, was not a valid settlement, though it was backed with "Disposition and settlement by A B, 1908."

Shiell v Shiell, (O.H.) 1913, 1 S.L.T. 62.

(100)

Held that an unsubscribed holograph document in these terms—"Mr. Lewis Shedden I leave this to my sister Janet Shedden," written on the back of a bank deposit receipt, belonging to Lewis Shedden, could not receive effect as a testamentary writing, and that it was incompetent to prove by parole evidence that it was the intention of the writer that it should receive effect after his death.

Goldie v Shedden, 1885, 13 R. 138; 23 S.L.R. 87.

(101)

A document was found in the repositories of the deceased Miss Jessie Taylor enclosed in an unsealed envelope on which was written "My will." The document, which was holograph of the deceased, was written on one side of a sheet of paper and contained a list of bequests which disposed of the whole of her estate. It was headed, "Sunnybank Alford My last Will Jessie Taylor," but was not signed by her at the end. Held that, in the absence of subscription, the document could not receive effect as a valid testamentary writing.

Taylor's Executrices v Thom, 1914 S.C. 79; 51 S.L.R. 55; 1913, 2 S.L.T. 337.

(102)

Unsubscribed holograph document—Adoption—Writing on closed envelope containing document—Subscription or docquet.

In the repositories of the deceased Joseph Stenhouse was found a closed envelope, upon which he had written the words—"Will & testimony off Joseph Stenhouse for Mr. Sturrock, S S C, Dalkeith." The envelope contained a document, holograph of the deceased, but not subscribed, headed, "18 Westfield Park, Dalkeith. Will & testimony of Joseph Stenhouse. April, 1915," and purporting to dispose of his whole estate. Held that the writing on the envelope was a docquet or backing, and not a subscribed writ adopting as a will the document therein contained; and, accordingly, that the document, not being itself subscribed, was invalid as a testamentary writing.

Stenhouse v Stenhouse, 1922 S.C. 370; 59 S.L.R. 297; 1922 S.L.T. 259.

(103)

—Name in gremio—Delivery.

Held that an unsubscribed holograph offer regarding heritage, containing the writer's name as granter in gremio, delivered for the purpose of being acted on, was binding on the writer when accepted.

Weir v Robertson, 1872, 10 M. 438; 44 J. 238.

(104)

Unsubscribed holograph writing underneath subscribed holograph settlement.

A holograph writing, occurring below the subscription to a holograph trust settlement, and containing bequests of specific articles held to be effectual, as part of the trust settlement, although not itself subscribed.

Burnie's Trustees v Lawrie, 1894, 21 R. 1015; 31 S.L.R. 841; 2 S.L.T. 153.

(105)

Extrinsic evidence to set up will in absence of subscription.

An unsubscribed writing in the form of a will, holograph of a person deceased, commenced thus—"I, Ethel F. Costello," these words being underlined, and proceeded thereunder, "I will all the money I have" in certain legacies. Held that as the document was not subscribed it could not receive effect as a valid testamentary writing, and that no evidence was admissible to set it up.

Foley v Costello, 1904, 6 F. 365; 41 S.L.R. 286; 11 S.L.T. 660.

(106)

Grantor's signature on covering envelope.

An unsigned testamentary writing was placed by A B, the writer of it, in an envelope bearing the inscription, "The will of A B." He closed the envelope and kept it in a locked box with valuable papers, which he instructed his sister to hand to his agent after his death. The inscription on the envelope and the enclosed writing were both holograph of the writer. On the death of the writer, held that the writing was the valid and effectual will of the deceased.

Murray v Kuffel, (O.H.) 1910, 2 S.L.T. 388.

(107)

A testator left an unsigned holograph will enclosed in an envelope. On the envelope was docqueted "my holograph will, &c." This docquet was signed. Held that the envelope was not part of the will and therefore the will was not a valid testament.

France's Judicial Factor v France's Trustees, (O.H.) 1916, 1 S.L.T. 126.

(108)

—Unsigned holograph testamentary writing in sealed packet bearing grantor's signature and name of nephew — Packet attached by string to envelope addressed to nephew and containing holograph testamentary writing superscribed only.

Russell's Trustees v Henderson, 1883, 11 R. 283; 21 S.L.R. 204, No. 95, supra.

(109)

Subscription on last page of several sheets —Holograph will—Confirmation.

Held (1) that in respect of the long-continued practice of the Commissary Court, when an untested writing bearing to be the holograph will of a person deceased is produced by the person therein named as executor to the commissary for confirmation, he should grant it de plano if there be no opposition; and (2) that the rule applies where the writing is in several separate sheets, and is signed only on the last page.

Cranston, 1890, 17 R. 410; 27 S.L.R. 305.

(3) ADOPTION AS HOLOGRAPH.

(110)

Grantor's understanding of words of adoption.

An offer to purchase heritable property written by the seller's law agent was signed by the offerer, and contained above the offerer's signature and in his handwriting the words "adopted as holograph." The offer was accepted by the seller. Circumstances in which held that the missives were not binding on the offerer—an illiterate man who had not been advised by a separate agent—the Court not being satisfied on the evidence that he understood the effect of the words "adopted as holograph," or meant by adding them to his signature to make the document irrevocably binding on him.

Harvey v Smith, 1904, 6 F. 511; 41 S.L.R. 292; 11 S.L.T. 667.

(111)

Adoption below signature.

A missive offer to take a building feu was neither holograph nor tested, but below the offerer's signature were the words, in his handwriting, "adopted as holograph." Held that the missive was to be regarded as holograph.

Gavine's Trustee v Lee, 1883, 10 R. 448; 20 S.L.R. 303.

(112)

Documents of debt pinned together with holograph writing importing legatum liberationis.

In the repositories of a deceased four I O U's and a letter from the borrower, acknowledging the sum for which one of them had been granted, were found pinned together and folded so that the back of the letter was outermost; and on the back of the letter there was a holograph note signed by the truster, "I don't want this money paid up." Held that the writing constituted a valid bequest in cancellation of the debts contained in the I O U's.

Mitchell's Trustees v Pride, 1912 S.C. 600; 49 S.L.R. 452; 1912, 1 S.L.T. 302.

(113)

Holograph repetition of substance of non-holograph writing—Loan—Acknowledgment.

In an action for repetition of an alleged loan of £50, the pursuer founded on a document bearing the defender's signature in the following terms:—"I acknowledge having received the sum of £50 sterling from my sister, A M. Should it ever be in my power to repay her this sum, I will do so if required. Received the sum of £50 stg.—James Muirhead." It was proved that the words in italics and the signature were holograph of the defender, and had been added by him to the other portion which was not holograph. Held that the loan had been proved.

Christie's Trustees v Muirhead, 1870, 8 M. 461; 42 J. 215; 7 S.L.R. 273.

(114)

Adoption of improbativ will by holograph codicil—Adoption of improbativ codicil by holograph postscript to letter.

A testator dictated his will to his wife, and signed the will. He then wrote and signed a holograph codicil, in which he conferred certain powers and immunities on his trustees. The testator's wife wrote out a second codicil, which the testator signed. She also wrote a letter to the testator's law agent requesting him to put the will into legal shape. To this letter the testator added a holograph and signed postscript to the effect that all this had been done by his wife at his request. Held (1) that the first codicil was a sufficient adoption of the improbativ will, notwithstanding evidence to the effect that the testator knew that the will required to be witnessed; and (2) that the postscript was not a testamentary document, and did not validate the second codicil.

Cross's Trustees v Cross, (O.H.) 1921, 1 S.L.T. 244.

(115)

Unsubscribed holograph document—Adoption—Writing on closed envelope containing document—Subscribed writ or docquet.

Stenhouse v Stenhouse, 1922 S.C. 370; 59 S.L.R. 297; 1922 S.L.T. 259, No. 102, supra.

(116)

Writing partly holograph—Receipt—Partly holograph and signed.

In the repositories of Thomas Maitland, deceased, there was found a deposit receipt for £900 enclosed in an envelope, on the back of which were these words—"To my executors. —Miss Margaret Maitland.—This nine hundred pounds belongs to her,—five hundred to be sunk for her, and the remaining four to be given her. Thomas Maitland." Only the words, "To my executors" and the signature were in the handwriting of the deceased. Held that the words which were holograph were not sufficient to infer adoption of the part of the writing which was not holograph, and that the bequest, being neither tested nor holograph, was not effectual.

Maitland's Trustees v Maitland, 1871, 10 M. 79; 44 J. 48; 9 S.L.R. 51.

(117)

Unauthenticated holograph writing accompanied by writing subscribed by initials.

Speirs v Home Speirs, 1879, 6 R. 1359; 16 S.L.R. 784, No. 96, supra.

(118)

Unauthenticated holograph writing accompanied by letter subscribed with Christian name only.

Russell's Trustees v Henderson, 1883, 11 R. 283; 21 S.L.R. 204, No. 95, supra.

(119)

Unsigned testamentary writing in envelope bearing holograph inscription, "The will of" A B.

Murray v Kuffel, (O.H.) 1910, 2 S.L.T. 388, No. 106, supra.

(120)

Backing on unsubscribed will.

In an action to establish the validity of a holograph, but unsubscribed will, on a sheet of draft paper, which was folded and backed "Disposition and settlement by John Shiel, 1908," the words being in the handwriting of the testator, held that the writing was not a valid will.

Shiell v Shiell, (O.H.) 1913, 1 S.L.T. 62.

(121)

Altered and mutilated will.

An altered and mutilated will was found in the repositories of a deceased person. Part of the testing clause was scored out, and the lower part of the page on which the latter part of the testing clause had probably been written, and which presumably contained the signatures of the testator and of the witnesses, was cut away altogether. Written in red ink on the margin and holograph of the writer were the words "codicil," and "this clause to read my mother, Mrs. A B," and again "the name," C D, "to be revoked in favour of my mother, Mrs. A B, who shall receive all the benefits of this my will—George Liddle (signature of writer)." Held that the document was a valid testamentary writing, the body of the writing being adopted as holograph by the writing on the margin.

Liddle v Liddle, (O.H.) 1898, 6 S.L.T. 218.

(122)

Any writing under my hand or signed by me.

A trustor in his trust deed directed his trustees to give effect to "any codicil or separate writing under my hand or signed by me from which my trustees may be satisfied as to my wishes and intentions, notwithstanding the same may be defective in the solemnities required by law." Question, whether a holograph writing, undated and unsigned, found in his repositories headed "Notes as to settlement and alterations," and stating that he had "now meantime cancelled" a bequest owing to losses on investments, was a valid testamentary writing.

Lamont v Magistrates of Glasgow, 1887, 14 R. 603; 24 S.L.R. 426.

(123)

Any writing under my hand clearly expressive of my wishes.

A testatrix by a formal trust disposition directed her trustees "to pay any legacies and to carry out any instructions I may give by any writing under my hand clearly expressive of my wishes, although the same may not be formal." An informal writing bearing a subsequent date, neither holograph nor tested, but admittedly bearing the signature of the testatrix, and containing certain bequests, was found in her repositories. Held that the informal writing was a testamentary writing of the nature contemplated by the trust disposition, and must receive effect.

Fraser v Forbes's Trustees, 1899, 1 F. 513; 36 S.L.R. 469; 6 S.L.T. 310.

(124)

Clause validating informal writings.

A testator by his settlement directed payment and fulfilment of all legacies and bequests left and bequeathed by, inter alia, "any writing under my hand (however informally executed or defective), showing my wishes and intentions." He left an unsigned and undated holograph memorandum apporportioning certain articles of furniture among certain persons. This memorandum he had handed to his law agents to be put up with his settlement. Held that the memorandum was not an operative testamentary writing. Hamilton's Trustees v Hamilton, 1901, 4 F. 266; 39 S.L.R. 159.

[See also Morton v French, 1908 S.C. 171; 45 S.L.R. 126; 15 S.L.T. 517, No. 153, infra.]

(125)

—A testator by his will directed his trustees to make payment of "such legacies as I shall bequeath to any person by any codicil hereto, or any memorandum clearly expressive of my will although not formally executed." Held that these words did not dispense with the necessity of signatures to the validity of any testamentary writing, and that, accordingly, an unsigned holograph codicil was invalid.

Parker v Matheson, (O.H.) 1876, 13 S.L.R. 405.

(4) WHETHER WRITING DELIBERATIVE OR FINAL.

[See also 5 (1), infra, and SUCCESSION V. 1 (6).]

(126)

Holograph memorandum.

In the repositories of a person deceased was found a pencil writing consisting of a list of names and figures, and having written at one side of it the words "Will of John Brennan." These figures and words were not in themselves intelligible without extrinsic evidence of their meaning. Held, after a proof, that while it is not necessary that a document relied on as a will take the form of a proposition or completed sentence, the document in question was, by its own appearance and also by the parole proof, shown to be only a memorandum and not to have been intended as a completed will.

Brennan's Executor v Turner, 1885, 22 S.L.R. 632.

(127)

Holograph signed document headed "draft of codicil."

After the death of a person whose settlement by two codicils thereto, had been prepared by law agents and formally executed, there was found in an open drawer, where no important papers were kept, a writing of later date, holograph of and signed by the deceased, headed "draft of codicil," containing a new disposition of his property in favour of his children, but with a blank in the ultimate destination of the estate failing children and their issue. He survived the date of this document for several months, and there was nothing to show that it had been signed subsequent to the date it bore.

Held that the writing was a mere draft, and inoperative as a testamentary writing.

Forsyth's Trustees v Forsyth, 1872, 10 M. 616; 44 J. 353; 9 S.L.R. 367.

(128)

Holograph writing headed "Notes of intended settlement."

In the repositories of a person who died leaving no other testamentary writing, the following holograph document was found bearing a date seven years before his death—"Bankhead, 19th June, 1873.—Notes of intended settlement by Walter Whyte of Bankhead. First, I liferent my wife, Mrs. Margaret Pollok or Whyte, in my whole estate both heritable and moveable, burdened with an annuity of £300 stg., three hundred pounds sterling, a year to," &c. After various bequests expressed in the same full and careful manner, the writer's signature was appended. In an action of declarator that the writing was testamentary (in which a proof was led without throwing any additional light on the question), held that the document was testamentary.

Hamilton v White, 1882, 9 R. (H.L.) 53; 7 App.Cas. 400; 19 S.L.R. 688.

(129)

"Sketch of provisions"—Words of gift.

A law agent sent to a lady client a paper entitled "Sketch of provisions of proposed will." The lady not merely filled in blanks in the "sketch," but wrote words, which were capable of being read by themselves without aid from the context, and which imported de presenti gifts of a testamentary character, and she dated and signed the document. Held that the document was a valid and effectual will.

Murdoch's Judicial Factor v Thomson, (O.H.) 1896, 4 S.L.T. 155.

(130)

Testamentary writing headed "Rough."

Circumstances in which held that a holograph testamentary writing headed "Rough" was not intended by the deceased to receive testamentary effect.

Sprot's Trustees v Sprot, 1909 S.C. 272; 46 S.L.R. 161; 16 S.L.T. 497.

(131)

Pencil codicil.

Held that a codicil written in pencil is effectual if it be clear that it is a testamentary writing and not merely a jotting.

Muir's Trustees, 1869, 8 M. 53; 42 J. 25; 7 S.L.R. 24.

(132)

Pencil alterations — Holograph unsigned document.

Lamont v Magistrates of Glasgow, 1887, 14 R. 603; 24 S.L.R. 426, No. 158, infra.

(133)

Holograph pencil memorandum containing list of legacies.

Circumstances where held that a holograph pencil memorandum headed "Legacies," and containing a list of names with sums of money appended to each, which was found tied up with a testator's will, was a valid testamentary document.

Tait's Trustees v Chiene, 1911 S.C. 743; 48 S.L.R. 609; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 360.

(134)

Undated letter cancelling last will and confirming prior will.

Circumstances in which the last will of a testator was held cancelled and a prior will confirmed in accordance with an implied direction to that effect contained in an undated letter which was found along with the two wills in the repositories of the deceased, and which declared that the later will was to take effect only in a certain event which did not occur.

Blackwood v Beveridge, 1875, 12 S.L.R. 384.

(135)

Deletions and pencil alterations.

MacKinnon's Trustees v MacKinnon, (O.H.) 1896, 3 S.L.T. 284, No. 164, infra.

(136)

Settlement revoked under conditio si testator sine liberis decesserit—Whether pencil alterations on deed revived settlement.

A solicitor, on 5th February, 1884, made a holograph will in favour of his parents should they survive him, and failing them in favour of his nephew. A year afterwards he married, executing a marriage contract in which he settled part of his estate upon his wife and children. He died in 1889, leaving a widow and children. After his death the will was found in his repositories with some words deleted and altered in pencil in favour of his wife and daughter. The alterations were in his handwriting, but were neither initialed nor signed, and had no date attached to them. Held (1) that the will as it originally stood became inoperative by reason of the conditio si testator sine liberis decesserit; and (2) that the pencil alterations were to be regarded merely as converting the will into a draft for another will to be afterwards made.

Munro's Executors v Munro, 1890, 18 R. 122; 28 S.L.R. 104.

4. PRIVILEGED WRITS.

(1) IN RE MERCATORIA.

(137)

General rule.

Opinion (per Lord Neaves) that as a general rule no document of importance, except in re mercatoria, is binding unless probative.

M'Laren v Howie, 1869, 8 M. 106; 42 J. 52; 7 S.L.R. 56.

(138)

I O U.

Opinion (per Lord Deas) that an I O U should be holograph.

Bowe & Christie v Hutchison, 1868, 6 M. 642; 40 J. 326; 5 S.L.R. 380.

(139)

I O U—Loan.

An I O U signed by the debtor, though not holograph or tested, is competent evidence to prove loan.

Nicholson v Stuart's Executor, (O.H.) 1896, 3 S.L.T. 233.

(139a)

Opinion (per Lord Kyllachy) that an I O U should be holograph or tested.

Opinion contra (per Lord Young).

Paterson v Paterson, 1897, 25 R. 144; 35 S.L.R. 150; 5 S.L.T. 209.

(140)

Acknowledgment of sum due on account signed by debtor, but written by creditor's shopman and not tested.

G sued the executrix of his deceased brother J for £950, the amount of an account alleged to be due by J to him. The account was for shop furnishings, cash disbursements, and loans of cash above and below £100 Scots, and extended over twelve years. In support of his claim G produced a document written by one of G's shopmen, and signed by J, in which the amount of the account was admitted by J to be due by him. It appeared that this document had been signed by J with a view to enabling G to borrow money, but it had never been used for that purpose. Held that the document was not probative in law, nor such as to exclude inquiry into the accuracy of the account, or to obviate the necessity of regular vouchers for the cash advances charged.

M'Adie v M'Adie's Executrix, 1883, 10 R. 741; 20 S.L.R. 476.

(141)

Holograph acknowledgment of loan—Proof of date.

Held that a holograph writing acknowledging receipt of £500 in loan was not a writ in re mercatoria, and did not prove its date.

Purvis v Dowie, 1869, 7 M. 764; 41 J. 396; 6 S.L.R. 492.

(142)

Letter of obligation.

Per Lord Salvesen—"A letter by a bank with which a customer had deposited bonds, written at the request of that customer and addressed to a third party, to the effect that the bank held the bonds for account of the third party, is a writ in re mercatoria."

Stuart v Potter, Choate & Prentice, 1911, 48 S.L.R. 657; 1911, 1 S.L.T. 377.

(143)

Letter not holograph of even date with bill.

A letter not holograph granted of even date with a promissory note and explanatory of it held competent evidence of the facts stated in it. Opinion (per Lord Neaves) that it was entitled to the privileges of a writ in re mercatoria.

Thoms v Thoms, 1867, 6 M. 174; 40 J. 99; 5 S.L.R. 131.

(144)

Cautionary obligation.

Question, whether a letter of guarantee is a writing in re mercatoria.

National Bank of Scotland v Campbell, 1892, 19 R. 885; 29 S.L.R. 757.

(145)

—Necessity for probative writ—Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856, sec. 6.

Question, whether under the Mercantile Law Amendment Act, 1856, sec. 6, bonds of guarantee are valid if subscribed by the granter although without witnesses.

Snaddon v London, Edinburgh, and Glasgow Assurance Co., 1902, 5 F. 182; 40 S.L.R. 164; 10 S.L.T. 410.

(146)

—For executor—1681, c. 5.

An "act of caution," signed by the cautioner, but without the solemnities required by the Act 1681, c. 5, and engrossed in the books of the Commissary Court, held to bind the subscriber as cautioner for an executor.

Smith v Kerr and Smith, 1868, 7 M. 42; 41 J. 18.

(147)

Award in submission.

An informal and improbable award in a submission sustained where the submission itself was informal and in re mercatoria.

Dykes v Roy, 1869, 7 M. 357; 41 J. 208.

(148)

Account between landlord and tenant —
Holograph of landlord.

In an action by a landlord against his tenant, held that a document in the landlord's handwriting, bearing to be an account between him and his tenant, and having a docket subscribed by both parties, was entitled to the privilege of a writing in re mercatoria.

Fell v Ratray, 1869, 41 J. 236.

(149)

Contract of service.

Held that a contract of service for two years is not a writing in re mercatoria.

Stewart v M'Call, 1869, 7 M. 544; 41 J. 287; 6 S.L.R. 332.

(150)

Agreement to take over lease and shop fittings.

In an action of damages for breach of contract, the pursuer averred that he offered orally to purchase from the defender, at the price of £15, an engine and fittings in the premises occupied by the latter, and to take over the remaining one and a half years of his lease of the premises, which offer the defender accepted orally. The defender denied that there was any completed contract. The pursuer produced, inter alia, a writing in the defender's handwriting, signed by the pursuer—"I hereby agree to take these premises . . . from this date, and to relieve" the defender "of rent from November 11, 1891, till the expiry of his lease, and to pay him for fittings, £15." The defender pleaded that there was no binding contract, in respect that the pursuer's letter was neither holograph nor tested, and had not been accepted in writing. Held that a valid contract had been instructed, in respect that the letter from the defender to the pursuer was, so far as respected the fittings, a writing in re mercatoria, and as regarded the premises was not a contract relating to heritage, but merely a bargain that the pursuer should relieve the defender of his liability for rent, and that the defender should aid in getting the landlord's consent to a transfer of the lease, and therefore that the defender was liable in damages.

Kinninmont v Paxton, 1892, 20 R. 128; 30 S.L.R. 178.

(151)

Ship—Bill of lading—Omission to fill in quantity of cargo before signature by master.

The master of a ship, before the cargo was all on board, signed a bill of lading, which was blank, as to the amount of goods shipped. After the loading was completed the shipper filled in the correct amount of cargo, and indorsed and delivered the bill of lading to a bank in security of an advance. The shipper having become bankrupt, in a question between his creditors held that the validity of the bill of lading as a negotiable instrument was not affected by its having been signed by the master blank as to the amount of cargo.

Cowdenbeath Coal Co. v Clydesdale Bank, 1895, 22 R. 682; 32 S.L.R. 549; 3 S.L.T. 41.

(152)

Authentication mark — Sale — Written warranty.

Question, as to how far and in what circumstances a written warranty, to which a seller who cannot write has adhibited his mark, is binding on him.

Rose v Johnston, 1878, 5 R. 600; 15 S.L.R. 325.

(153)

—“Writing under his hand” — Friendly Societies Act, 1896, sec. 56 (1).

The Friendly Societies Act, 1896, enacts, sec. 56—“(1) A member of a registered society . . . may, by writing under his hand . . . nominate a person to whom any sum of money payable by the society or branch on the death of that member, not exceeding £100, shall be paid at his decease.” Held that a nomination authenticated by the member's mark only (she being unable to write) and by the signatures of two instrumentary witnesses, was not a writing under her hand within the meaning of the above enactment, and that being of a testamentary character and unsigned it was of no force or effect in law.

Morton v French, 1908 S.C. 171; 45 S.L.R. 126; 15 S.L.T. 517.

(2) CROWN WRITS.

(154)

Observed that the statutes applicable to the testing of deeds were not applicable to Crown writs.

Catton v Mackenzie, 1874, 1 R. 488; 11 S.L.R. 278.

5. ALTERATIONS.

(1) DELETIONS AND MARGINAL OR OTHER ADDITIONS.

(a) Deletions.

(155)

General rules—Testamentary writing.

(Per Lord McLaren, Ordinary)—“(1) If a will or codicil is found with the signature cancelled, or lines drawn through the dispositive or other essential clause of the instrument, then on proof that the cancellation was done by the testator himself, or by his order, with the intention of revoking the will, the will is to be held as revoked; otherwise it is to be treated as a subsisting will. (2) If a will or codicil is found with one or more of the legacies or particular provisions scored out, that raises no case for inquiry as to the testator's intention to revoke the instrument in whole; a question is raised only as to his intention to revoke the particular provision, which will not be held to have been revoked unless upon evidence that the scoring was done by the testator himself or by his direction with the intention of revoking the clause, and the authentication of the deletion by the testator's initials is sufficient evidence of such intention.”

Pattison's Trustees v University of Edinburgh, 1888, 16 R. 73.

Contract.

(156)

In the construction of a contract embodied in a formal deed the Court is not entitled to look at words in the deed which have been deleted before signature, but which happen to remain legible.

Inglis v Buttery & Co., 1878, 5 R. (H.L.) 87; 3 App.Cas. 552; 15 S.L.R. 462.

(157)

Superimposition of one document on another.

A document cannot be legally deleted by merely pasting another on the top of it.

Dunsire v Bell, 1909 S.C. (J.) 5; 5 Adam, 625; 46 S.L.R. 236; 16 S.L.T. 631.

(158)

Authenticity of deletions — Testament — Holograph unsigned document—Pencil markings.

Unsigned pencil alterations made by a testator on his testament written in ink will be presumed to be deliberative merely, but if there is evidence, parole or otherwise, to show that he intended them to be final they will receive effect. A truster in his trust deed directed his trustees to give effect to “any codicil or separate writing under my hand or signed by me from which my trustees may be satisfied as to my wishes and intentions, notwithstanding the same may be defective in the solemnities required by law.” By holograph codicil written in ink and signed he bequeathed £10,000 to the magistrates of Glasgow, with directions how it was to be applied in charity. In his repositories these documents were found along with two other holograph pencil documents, which were both undated and unsigned. In one of these, headed “Notes as to settlement and alterations,” he stated that he had “now meantime cancelled” his bequest to the magistrates of Glasgow, “owing to losses on investments.” The other was a list of charities to which he had left bequests, but that to the magistrates was not mentioned. Through the bequest and instructions relative thereto in the holograph codicil were drawn perpendicular pencil lines, and along its margin was drawn in ink a bracket. It was admitted that a few months before his death the testator had called upon his law agents and informed them that, having lost £30,000, he had resolved to make some alterations on his settlement and codicil, and that he got possession of the documents, which were at that time free from deletions and interlineations. Held that it had been proved that the bequest had been effectually cancelled by the truster.

Lamont v Magistrates of Glasgow, 1887, 14 R. 603; 24 S.L.R. 426.

(159)

Holograph testament.

A testatrix left certain holograph testamentary writings which were found in a locked desk in a chest of drawers in her house. The writings were contained in a closed envelope, which was addressed in the testatrix's handwriting to her brother, whom she appointed her executor. The writings contained a number of bequests, some of which had been scored through in ink. Held that the bequests deleted had been duly revoked, in respect that the inference to be drawn from the deletions themselves, and from the circumstances in which the writings were found, was that the deletions had been made by the testatrix herself with the intention of revoking the bequests.

Milne's Executor v Waugh, 1913 S.C. 203; 50 S.L.R. 102; 1912, 2 S.L.T. 379.

(160)

Holograph testament.

A blacksmith left a holograph will which was found after his death in a locked writing desk belonging to him. The will was enclosed in an unsealed envelope, on which was written his name and the word “Private.” The will contained a number of bequests, many of which had been scored through in ink. The deletions were not authenticated by the testator's initials or otherwise. With one exception, all the beneficiaries whose names had been deleted had predeceased the testator. In a special case, in which it was not maintained that the will as a whole had been revoked, held that the bequests deleted had been duly revoked, in respect that the inference to be drawn from the circumstances was that the deletions had been made by the testator himself with the intention of revoking the bequests.

Allan's Executrix v Allan, 1920 S.C. 732; 57 S.L.R. 614; 1920, 2 S.L.T. 248.

(161)

Debt—Acknowledgment of debt in envelope—Directions that envelope to be burned unopened—Cancellation of directions.

Among the repositories of a deceased person were found in an envelope two documents, which were acknowledgments of debt by the testator's sons, the first being for a loan given to one son, the amount of which was to be deducted from that son's share of the deceased's estate, and the other for the sum due by each of two other sons for the price of their father's business, which they had taken over from the testator without any price paid. On the back of the envelope there were written directions in pencil that it should not be opened, but burned. Across this writing there were a number of pencil scorings, which the pursuers maintained showed that the writing had been cancelled and the directions to the trustees revoked. The envelope when found was open, though it bore signs of having previously been sealed. Some years later the testator made a new will, in which no reference was made to the sums contained in the documents which had been found, but owing to depreciation of shares held by the deceased the value of his estate had considerably diminished. Held that the testator had cancelled the directions to the trustees to burn the envelope and its contents, and that the sums fell to be debited against the son's shares.

Lennie v Lennie's Trustees, (O.H.) 1914, 1 S.L.T. 258.

(b) Deletions and Substituted Words.

(162)

General rule—Testamentary writing.

Per Lord McLaren, Ordinary—"When a will or codicil contains words scored out and others inserted in their place the cancellation is conditional on the substituted words taking effect, so that if the substituted words are rejected for want of authentication, the will is to be read as if there had been no deletion."

Pattison's Trustees v University of Edinburgh, 1888, 16 R. 73.

(163)

Deletion of bequests in settlement—Other provisions made for same persons in subsequent unsigned codicil.

A testator deleted from his settlement certain provisions which he had made in favour of the family of one of his sons, but the deletions left the original wording still visible and legible. He afterwards prepared a codicil, in which he made certain other provisions for his sons, but this codicil was left unsigned by him at the time of his death. Held in an action of multiplicity brought to ascertain the rights of various parties interested in his succession (1) that the settlement contained a valid deed notwithstanding the clauses which had been deleted, as the deletions could only have the effect of a partial revocation; (2) that no effect could be given to the unsigned codicil; but (3) that as the deletion of part of the deed and the making of the codicil must be regarded as one continuous act for one object, and as the testator had failed to complete the act by making an effectual codicil, the settlement must receive effect in the same way as if no part had been deleted.

Parker v Matheson, (O.H.) 1876, 13 S.L.R. 405.

(164)

Deletions and pencil alterations.

A testator had in his possession a copy of his settlement, the principal being in the custody of his law agent. Upon his copy he made certain pencil alterations, some of them being dated and initialed, some of them dated but not initialed, and some neither dated nor initialed. Some words of the copy were deleted in pencil, the deletions not being in any way authenticated, and the jottings were curiously and elliptically expressed, and not worded so as to form proper grammatical additions to the will. Held that the jottings did not constitute additions to the will.

MacKinnon's Trustees v MacKinnon, (O.H.) 1896, 3 S.L.T. 284.

(165)

Altered and mutilated will.

An altered and mutilated will was found in the repositories of a deceased person. Part of the testing clause was scored out and the lower part of the page on which the latter part of the testing clause had probably been written and which presumably contained the signatures of the testator and of the witnesses was cut away altogether. Written in red ink on the margin, and holograph of the writer, were the words "codicil" and "this clause to read my mother, Mrs. 'A B,'" and again, "the name 'C D' to be revoked in favour of my mother, Mrs. A B, who shall receive all the benefits of this, my will.—George Liddle (signature of writer)." Held that the document was a valid testamentary writing, the body of the writing being adopted as holograph by the writing on the margin.

Liddle v Liddle, (O.H.) 1898, 6 S.L.T. 218.

(166)

Erasure, deletion, and substitution of other words.

Where in a regularly attested will the terms of certain bequests were altered by erasure, deletion, and the substitution of other words, held that the bequests were ineffectual, because the circumstances of the case and the methods of deletion sufficiently proved the intention of the testator to revoke them.

Watson's Factor v Watson, (O.H.) 1899, 7 S.L.T. 238.

(167)

Substituted word.

The amount of a legacy in a will was changed by the alteration of the word "four" to "two," but no reference to the alteration was made in the testing clause. Held that the original word "four" must receive effect and the alteration be disregarded, because the will was a regularly tested deed and the presumption of law was that erasures in such a deed were made after execution.

Drummond v Peddie, (O.H.) 1893, 1 S.L.T. 189.

(c) Marginal Additions, Interlineations, and Other Alterations in Writing.

(168)

General rule—Testamentary writing.

(Per Lord M'Laren, Ordinary)—"Marginal or interlineal additions, apparently in the testator's writing, will not be held part of the instrument unless authenticated by his signature or initials, for until such authentication he cannot be supposed to have finally resolved to make the addition."

Pattison's Trustees v University of Edinburgh, 1888, 16 R. 73.

(169)

Holograph signed marginal addition.

A father took the disposition to certain subjects purchased by him to himself and his wife in conjunct fee and liferent allenerly, and after their deaths to his daughters in liferent allenerly, and their children in fee, with a clause of reservation allowing him during his life to sell or dispose the subjects gratuitously. At his death the disposition was found in his repositories with a holograph signed marginal addition admitting children of deceased daughters to a share of the rents. Held that this was an effectual alteration on the destination.

Caledonian Banking Co. v Fraser, 1874, 11 S.L.R. 345.

(170)

Unauthenticated marginal addition.

Opinion (per Lord Young and Lord Craighill) that an unauthenticated holograph marginal addition cannot competently be admitted to qualify the terms of a holograph document.

Brown v Maxwell's Executors, 1884, 11 R. 821; 21 S.L.R. 549.

(171)

Unauthenticated pencil indorsation on holograph testament.

On the outside of a trust disposition and settlement which was found in the repositories of the truster after her decease, were the following holograph words written in pencil: "Residue of estate to be given to Jane Fraser, draper, and her sister, Helen Fraser, or survivor, Christain Porter or Rodger deleted, deleted also the names of Isabela Petticrew and Bessie Thom, daughters, Alex. Thom, Edinr." The writing was not signed. Held that these words did not form part of the testamentary writings of the deceased.

Petticrew's Trustees v Pettigrew, 1884, 12 R. 249; 22 S.L.R. 171.

(172)

Pencil alterations on holograph will.

Held that unauthenticated holograph pencil alterations on a holograph will which was written in ink had no effect.

Currie's Trustees v Currie, 1904, 7 F. 364; 42 S.L.R. 297; 12 S.L.T. 613.

(173)

Holograph addition.

A man executed a will, written for him by another person, by subscribing it before two instrumentary witnesses. Some time afterwards the testator inserted in a space which had been left between the end of the will and his subscription and those of the witnesses a holograph addition which began "Codicil," and made provision for the disposal of an annuity which had lapsed through the death of the annuitant since the execution of the will. Held that the holograph addition was a valid part of the testamentary writings of the deceased.

Gray's Trustees v Dow, 1900, 3 F. 79; 38 S.L.R. 56.

(174)

Interlineation—Entail.

Held that the interpolation of the word "not" in a deed of entail between the words "shall" and "be lawful" in the clause prohibiting an alteration of the order of succession, which was not noticed in the testing clause, invalidated the entail.

Munro v Butler Johnstone, 1868, 7 M. 250; 41 J. 153; 6 S.L.R. 208.

(175)

Sequestration—Affidavit of claim—Interlineation not authenticated.

In a petition for sequestration the affidavit of claim stated "compeared James Drew," &c. Between the words "compeared" and "James" were interlined the words "Verney Drew, a partner in the firm of" and the interlineation was not initialed. There was no partner called James Drew. Held that the affidavit, without the interlined words, was clearly bad, an unauthenticated interlineation being presumed to be ex post facto, and petition dismissed.

Drew v Richard, (O.H.) 1904, 11 S.L.T. 646.

(2) ERASURES.

(176)

Whether erasure or not—Irritant clause of entail.

The irritant clause in a deed of entail bore

"If C P" (the institute), "or any of the said heirs of tailzie, shall contravene," &c. The validity of the entail was challenged, on the ground that the word "or," and the letters "an" in the word "any," were written on an erasure. The fact of erasure having been disputed, a proof was led, in which the evidence of experts was conflicting. The Lord Ordinary (Barcaple), being of opinion that the balance of evidence turned in favour of there being an erasure, held the erasure proved, and declared the entail invalid. The Inner House reversed the Lord Ordinary's judgment, on the ground that the fact of erasure had not been clearly established.

Hamilton v Lindsey-Bucknall, &c., 1869, 8 M. 323; 42 J. 152; 7 S.L.R. 205.

(177)

Signature on erasure—Onus.

Where in a testamentary deed the signature bearing to be that of the testator was written on an erasure, but was otherwise ex facie duly tested, and the deed was challenged as vitiated in essentialibus, held that the deed was ex facie probative, and that the onus was consequently on the party challenging it to prove either that the signature was not genuine, or, if genuine, that it had not been duly tested. The proof on these points having failed, deed sustained.

Brown v Duncan, 1888, 15 R. 511; 25 S.L.R. 369.

(178)

Erasure not in essentialibus.

A marriage contract bore that the spouses reserved power to sell "at any time during their joint lives." The letters "li" of the word "lives" were written on an erasure, which was not mentioned in the testing clause, and the Register of Sasines showed that the word had been "leaves" when the deed was recorded. Held that the clause of the deed was not vitiated by the alteration.

Wilson v Taylor & Son, 1869, 7 M. 773; 41 J. 400; 6 S.L.R. 502.

(179)

—Date of decree.

Objection to the validity of a decree of the Commissary Court, on the ground that its date was written on an erasure, repelled.

Dowie v Barclay, 1871, 9 M. 726; 43 J. 364; 8 S.L.R. 445.

(180)

—Erasures in Crown charter on precept in which institute of entail expedite infestment.

M executed an entail in the form of a procuratory of resignation for new infestment, to be granted to his eldest son H and the heirs whomsoever of his body, whom failing, &c. In the lifetime of the entailor the deed was recorded in the Register of Tailzies, and a crown charter of resignation was expedite. Upon the death of the entailor, H expedite infestment on the precept in the Crown charter. The deed of entail was itself unobjectionable, but the Crown charter contained various erasures, interpolations, and superinductions, and, in particular, several lines of the destination following the name of the institute in the dispositive clause were written on an erasure, and in the prohibitory clause the word "directe" had in one instance been converted into "indirecte" by the interpolation of the letters "in." The Crown charter was written to the Seal in the usual style, without a testing clause. The words on erasure in the destination were authenticated according to the customary practice by the initials of the Director of Chancery. The interpolation in the prohibitory clause was not authenticated in any way. The signature, the Chancery copy of the signature, the signet precept, and the copy of the charter recorded in Chancery, as also the instrument of sasine expedite by H upon the Crown charter, were all perfect, the words in question being correctly and distinctly written, without any vitiation, as they finally appeared in the charter. Held that the vitiations in the Crown charter had not the effect of invalidating the entail, nor of freeing H as institute of tailzie from the fetters of the entail.

Catton v Mackenzie, 1874, 1 R. 488; 11 S.L.R. 278.

(181)

—Testing clause—Erased portion held pro non scripto.

A deed contained the following testing clause:—"In witness whereof . . . before these witnesses, John M'Corquodale, schoolmaster in the Island of Seil, and Alexr. Dow, Residenter in Carbane, tutor or guardian to the children of John M'Dougall, tacksman of Carbane. (Signed) John M'Dougall. John M'Corquodale, witness; Alex. Dow, witness." The letters printed in italics were written on erased portions of the deed. Held, in an action raised before 1st October, 1874, the date when the Conveyancing Act, 1874, came into operation, that what was written on erasure must be regarded pro non scripto, but that the person whose Christian name was given as "Alex," and who was designed as "residentifier in Carbane, tutor or guardian to the children of John M'Dougall, tacksman of Carbane," was shown without going beyond the deed to be the subscribing witness Alex. Dow, and therefore that the deed was duly tested.

M'Dougall v M'Dougall, 1875, 2 R. 814; 12 S.L.R. 502.

(182)

—Description by reference — False authentication in testing clause.

A bond and disposition in security, after sufficiently describing the subjects conveyed, further bore—"being the subjects and others particularly described in the disposition" granted by A B to the granter, "dated the twenty-seventh September, and recorded the twelfth day of November, 1880." The testing clause of the bond set forth that it had been signed on 5th October, 1880, and that the words "the twenty-seventh September," "twelfth," and "November," above quoted had been written on an erasure before signing. Held that, as the statement in the testing clause regarding the words written on erasure was manifestly false, the words written on erasure must be held pro non scriptis, but that as the description of the subjects was otherwise sufficient, the deed was not vitiated in essentialibus, and was valid.

Cattanach's Trustee v Jamieson, 1884, 11 R. 972; 21 S.L.R. 661.

(183)

———Date.

The date of a document embodying a promise that the grantee should receive a sum of money out of the grantor's estate after his decease in return for valued services rendered was written upon an erasure which was unauthenticated. Held that this did not vitiate the deed, as the erasure was not in essentialibus.

Cairney v Macgregor's Trustees, (O.H.) 1916, 1 S.L.T. 357.

(184)

———Date—Mandate.

Held that mandates bearing to be for a meeting to be held on August 16th were valid, although the figure 6 was printed on an erasure from which the figure 5 had been removed.

Muir v Thompson, 1876, 3 R. (H.L.) 1; 13 S.L.R. 739.

(185)

Erasure, deletion, and substitution of other words—Will regularly attested—Intention to revoke.

Watson's Factor v Watson, (O.H.) 1899, 7 S.L.T. 288, No. 166, supra.

III. DELIVERY.

1. WHAT AMOUNTS TO DELIVERY.

(186)

Deeds inter virum et uxorem.

Observations (per Lord Deas) on the delivery necessary in the case of gratuitous inter vivos deeds granted by a wife in favour of her husband.

Kirkpatrick v Kirkpatrick's Trustees, 1873, 11 M. 551; 45 J. 353; 10 S.L.R. 363.

[Judgment reversed, 1874, 1 R. (H.L.) 37; L.R., 2 H.L. Sc. 397; 11 S.L.R. 717.]

(187)

———Donation.

Money was advanced by a husband and security taken in the name of himself and his wife "equally between them and to the survivor of them, and to the heirs, executors, &c., of the survivor." The security deed was kept by the husband in a drawer accessible both to him and his wife. After the husband's death, held that the deed was undelivered, and therefore testamentary merely.

Walker's Executor v Walker, 1878, 5 R. 965; 15 S.L.R. 636.

(188)

Trust—Policy of insurance in favour of wife and children.

Held that a policy of insurance taken by a husband in favour of trustees for behoof of his wife and the children of the marriage did not confer a vested right in the beneficiaries without delivery, actual or constructive, of the policy.

Circumstances which were held not to amount to delivery of a policy of insurance taken by a husband in favour of trustees for behoof of his wife and children.

Jarvie's Trustee v Jarvie's Trustees, 1887, 14 R. 411; sub nom. Scottish Provident Institution v Fleming, 24 S.L.R. 299.

(189)

Mutual deeds in duplicate.

The rule that a mutual deed requires no delivery applies to mutual deeds executed in duplicate.

Robertson's Trustees v Lindsay, 1873, 1 R. 323; 11 S.L.R. 113.

(190)

Mandate to deliver—Death of mandant.

One of a number of persons who were to grant a bond as co-obligants signed it, and returned it to the agent for himself and his co-obligants. Before all had signed it or any money had been advanced, and while the bond was yet in the hands of the agent, the person who had signed it died. Held that the implied mandate to deliver the deed after the other signatures had been obtained had fallen by the mandant's death, and the deed being in fact undelivered, his executors were not liable.

Life Association of Scotland v Douglas, 1886, 13 R. 910; 23 S.L.R. 632.

(191)

Mandate to burn will—Death of mandant.

A testator wrote a letter to her law agent stating that she had written a holograph will, and instructing him "to burn the preceding ones." She did not deliver the letter to her law agent. Held that the letter did not revoke the prior wills.

France's Judicial Factor v France's Trustees, (O.H.) 1916, 1 S.L.T. 126.

(192)

Sale of heritage—Posting of conveyance.

In a petitory action in the Court of Session against a domiciled American, whom the pursuers averred to be the proprietor of heritage in Scotland, the defender pleaded no jurisdiction, averring that although he had been at one time the proprietor of such heritage he had sold it before the raising of the action. It appeared that in October, 1889, the defender became proprietor of certain heritable subjects in Scotland; that by improbativ missives, dated November and December, 1890, he sold these subjects; that on 9th January, 1891, he executed and on 12th January despatched by post from America a conveyance of the subjects in favour of the purchaser; and that this conveyance did not reach the purchaser till after the service of the summons, which took place on 21st January. Held that as the transference of the subjects had not been completed until after the service of the summons the plea of no jurisdiction fell to be repelled.

Dowie & Co. v Tennant, 1891, 18 R. 986; 28 S.L.R. 758.

2. EQUIVALENT OF DELIVERY— REGISTRATION, &c.

(193)

Constructive delivery.

Terms of a disposition which were held to constitute a father trustee for his children, though it remained with him undelivered till his death.

Gilpin v Martin, 1869, 7 M. 807; 41 J. 430; 6 S.L.R. 518.

(194)

Registration—Inter vivos trust deed ex facie irrevocable—Stamped, registered, and extract delivered.

Held that an ex facie absolute and irrevocable trust-conveyance of heritage inter vivos, properly stamped as such, and of which an extract, after registration in the Books of Council and Session, had been transmitted by the grantor to a trustee, with writs and securities affecting the property, was a delivered and irrevocable deed, although the grantor afterwards executed a revocation thereof expressly declaring that it had not been intended to be irrevocable, and had been registered for preservation merely.

Tennent v Tennent's Trustees, 1869, 7 M. 936; 41 J. 530; 6 S.L.R. 629.

(195)

Recording in Register of Sasines.

A lent money belonging to himself upon a bond and disposition in security taking the bond in favour of himself as trustee for his daughter nominatim and recorded the bond in the Register of Sasines for behoof of himself as trustee for his daughter. The bond bore that the money had been lent by A from funds held by him in trust for his daughter. A retained the bond in his own custody till his death and his daughter did not know of its existence until after his death. Held that the recording of the bond in the Register of Sasines did not operate delivery of the bond to the daughter so as to create an effectual trust in her favour.

Cameron's Trustees v Cameron, 1907 S.C. 407; 44 S.L.R. 354; 14 S.L.T. 719.

(196)

Gratuitous deed.

The grantor of a gratuitous deed wrote to the law agent who had prepared it, requesting him "by way of delivering" the deed to the grantee, to register it in the Books of Council and Session. Held that the registration of the deed was equivalent to delivery.

Obers v Paton's Trustees, 1897, 24 R. 719; 34 S.L.R. 538; 4 S.L.T. 350.

(197)

Entry in valuation roll.

Circumstances in which held (1) that an assignation of a long lease by an insolvent to his son, who was a boy at school, had not been delivered, and (2) that an assignation in favour of his daughters, which was published by entering them as proprietors of the house in the valuation roll, had been delivered.

Hodge v Morrison, 1883, 21 S.L.R. 40.

3. EFFECT OF DELIVERY OF IMPROBATIVE WRITING.

(198)

Offer as to heritage.

A holograph offer regarding heritage unsubscribed, but bearing the grantor's name in gremio, having been delivered for the purpose of being acted on, held binding on the grantor.

Weir v Robertson, 1872, 10 M. 438; 44 J. 238.

(199)

Deed granted for onerous causes—Personal bar—Reduction.

A bond and disposition in security bore to be subscribed before two witnesses. In an action for reduction of the deed on the ground that the witnesses had neither seen the parties subscribe nor heard them acknowledge their subscriptions, the Court held that the evidence was sufficient to prove that the deed was not duly and validly executed; but that, as there was an averment that the bond had been delivered for onerous causes, it did not necessarily follow that the bond fell to be reduced, and cause remitted to the Lord Ordinary for further procedure.

Young v Paton, 1910 S.C. 63; 47 S.L.R. 78; 1909, 2 S.L.T. 340.

(200)

Informal letter of guarantee — Rei interventus.

A bank agreed to make advances to A on his obtaining B's guarantee. A formal letter of guarantee, ending with the words "In witness whereof," was then prepared by the bank and handed to A for execution by B. A obtained B's signature and afterwards got two persons to sign as witnesses who had not seen B subscribe nor heard him acknowledge his subscription. A returned the document to the bank with the names and designations of the witnesses, the testing clause was filled up by the bank, and the bank made an advance to A upon the faith of the guarantee. In an action by the bank upon the letter of guarantee against B the defender pleaded that he was not bound, as the deed was not tested. The above facts were admitted or proved. Held that the defender having signed the deed and delivered it to A, who was in hac re the bank's agent, he had delivered it to the bank as a guarantee for advances to be made to A, and that the bank having made advances upon the faith of it, the defender's imperfect obligation had been validated by rei interventus.

National Bank of Scotland v Campbell, 1892, 19 R. 885; 29 S.L.R. 757.

IV. CONSTRUCTION.

[See also CONTRACT II. 7 (2).]

(201)

Punctuation.

The punctuation of a deed may be looked at for the purpose of aiding its construction. Turnbull's Trustees v Lord Advocate, 1918 S.C. (H.L.) 88; [1918] A.C. 337; 55 S.L.R. 208; 1918, 1 S.L.T. 112.

(202)

Grammatical error—Correction of error by Court.

In construing a deed the Court corrected a grammatical error which, if allowed to stand, would have had the effect of nullifying the obvious intention of the granters.

Glen's Trustees v Lancashire and Yorkshire Accident Insurance Co., 1906, 8 F. 915; 43 S.L.R. 684; 14 S.L.T. 168.

(203)

Clerical error.

Clerical error in testing clause of deed given in for registration in the Books of Council and Session allowed to be corrected, the Court pronouncing no judgment as to the effect of the proposed amendment.

Caldwell, 1871, 10 M. 99; 44 J. 70; 9 S.L.R. 89.

(204)

Erroneous designation of witness — "Their" servant instead of "our" servant — Deed of entail granted by two sisters.

Speirs v Speirs' Trustees, 1878, 5 R. 923; 15 S.L.R. 649, No. 52, supra.

(205)

Blank in description in feu charter.

Question as to the competency of filling in by inference from the context a blank in the description of the subjects disposed under a feu charter.

Magistrates of Musselburgh v Musselburgh Real Estate Co., 1904, 7 F. 308; 42 S.L.R. 247; 12 S.L.T. 636.

(206)

Onerous inter vivos trust deed — Contemporaneous correspondence.

Opinion that it was not competent for the purpose of construing an onerous inter vivos deed to look at contemporaneous correspondence passing between the parties concerned.

Davidson v Davidson, (O.H.) 1906, 14 S.L.T. 337.

(207)

Fortius contra proferentem—Marine insurance.

Observations on the maxim fortius contra proferentem in its application to the construction of policies of marine insurance.

Birrell v Dryer, 1884, 11 R. (H.L.) 41; 9 App.Cas. 345; 21 S.L.R. 590.

V. WRIT OF AGENT.

(208)

Agreement regarding heritage—Holograph of agent.

Acceptance holograph of authorised agent of the seller held to complete binding contract.

Whyte v Lee, 1879, 6 R. 699; 16 S.L.R. 376.

(209)

Written by factor to landlord's dictation, but unsigned by either factor or landlord.

Where a proposed additional agreement between a landlord and tenant was dictated by the landlord to his factor in the tenant's presence and handed to the tenant unsigned, and subsequently accepted by the tenant in writing, held that the writings did not constitute a completed contract, the first writing being neither holograph of the landlord nor the writ of his factor, and that the tenant was therefore entitled to rescind.

Sinclair v Caithness Flagstone Quarrying Co., 1881, 8 R. (H.L.) 78; 6 App.Cas. 340; 18 S.L.R. 466.

(210)

Loan—Agent and client.

Opinion (per Lord Justice-Clerk Moncreiff) that a loan may be proved by the writ of the authorised agent of the debtor.

Laidlaw v Shaw, 1886, 13 R. 724; 23 S.L.R. 593.

(211)

Partnership—Power of partner to borrow money—Writ signed by cashier.

A partner of a mercantile firm borrowed, as for his firm, a sum of £100 from his wife. She requested an acknowledgment from the firm, and, in compliance with that request, he handed her an acknowledgment which bore that the money had been received from her by the hands of her husband "on temporary loan." The acknowledgment was written by a clerk of the firm and was signed by their cashier pp. of the firm. It was proved that the cashier had so signed on the verbal instructions of the husband; that the money was paid to the cashier and put to the credit of the husband in the books of the firm. In an action by the wife against the firm for the repayment of the loan, held (1) that the husband, as partner of a mercantile firm, had power to borrow money and to bind the firm for the debt; (2) that the writ, having been signed by the cashier on the instruction of such a partner, was writ of the firm; and (3) that it might be used in modum probationis, although it was neither holograph nor tested; and that therefore the loan to the firm had been established.

Bryan v Butters Brothers & Co., 1892, 19 R. 490; 29 S.L.R. 415.

(212)

Accession to composition agreement.

Held that the accession by a creditor to a composition agreement may be proved by the writ of his duly authorised agent.

Henry v Strachan & Spence, 1897, 24 R. 1045; 34 S.L.R. 790; 5 S.L.T. 94.

(213)

Amanuensis signing principal's name.

An offer holograph of the authorised amanuensis of the offerer, and subscribed by him, not with his own, but with the offerer's name, held not to make a binding contract.

Scottish Lands and Buildings Co. v Shaw, 1880, 7 R. 756; 17 S.L.R. 543.

(214)

Bank current account—Initialing of entries by bank agent.

Entries in a customer's bank pass-book of sums paid into the bank, duly initialed by a bank official, are prima facie evidence against the bank that the money has been paid in.

Couper's Trustees v National Bank of Scotland, 1889, 16 R. 412; 26 S.L.R. 320.

(215)

Payer signing for illiterate payee—Discharge—Claim under Workmen's Compensation Act, 1897.

Circumstances in which held that a discharge signed bona fide by the payer on behalf of and in the presence of an illiterate payee was void.

Gilmour, Morton & Co. v Bolland, (O.H.) 1906, 14 S.L.T. 583.

(216)

Signature of claim for another by person having no mandate—Burgh Voters Act, 1856, sec. 36.

Held that a claim to be enrolled on the register of voters, which was signed on behalf of the claimant by a person who held no mandate, written or oral, from the claimant, was not valid.

Burns v Cassells, 1891, 19 R. 287; 29 S.L.R. 141.

(217)

Building society—"Signature" of members—The Building Societies Act, 1874, sec. 32, sub-sec. (2).

Held that the word "signatures" in sec. 32, sub-sec. (2), of the Building Societies Act, 1874, means signatures of the members themselves, and that signatures adhibited to an instrument of dissolution by the mandatories of members cannot be reckoned in calculating whether the instrument was signed by the requisite number of members.

Second Edinburgh and Leith Building Society v Aitken, 1892, 19 R. 603; 29 S.L.R. 456.

